

1/185

5187-153-LPS

INDIAN CASES

[STARTED IN 1909]

CONTAINING

Full Reports of Decisions

OF

The PRIVY COUNCIL, the FEDERAL COURT, the High Courts of ALLAHABAD, BOMBAY, CALCUTTA, LAHORE, MADRAS, NAGPUR, PATNA and RANGOON, the Chief Court of ODDH, and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of PESHAWAR and SIND

153

Many of which are not reported elsewhere.

VOLUME 185, 1940

Founded by Sir S. D. Chaudhri, Kt., K. B., B. A., LL.B., Speaker, Legislative Assembly, Punjab.

EDITORS ... { A. K. CHAUDHRI, B.A., Bar.-at-Law, Lahore.
V. M. KULKARNI, B.A., LL.B.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY S. ALI BAKSH FOR THE INDIAN CASES, LTD., AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," BAZAR 'JUDGH MUHAMMAD LATIF', LAHORE.

LP 2079

REPORTERS.

1. K. J. RUSTOMJI, BAR.-AT-LAW, LONDON.
2. TARACHAND BRIJMOHANLAL, B.A., LL.B., Advocate Lahore High Court, Agent Federal Court of India, DELHI.
3. M. A. AZIZ, M.A., (Cantab), LL.B., Advocate of the High Court at ALLAHABAD.
4. B. S. KALELKAR, M. A., LL. B., Advocate, High Court (O. S.), BOMBAY.
5. M. M. MALHOTRA, B.SC., B.L., Advocate of the High Court at CALCUTTA.
6. JITENDRA MOHAN BANERJEE, M.A., B.L., Advocate of the High Court at CALCUTTA.
7. MALIK RAM LAL ANAND, B.A., LL.B., Advocate of the High Court at LAHORE.
8. V. N. VENKATAVARADACHARI, B.A., B.L., Advocate of the High Court at MADRAS.
9. N. KASTURI RANGA IYENGAR, B.A., B.L., Advocate of the High Court at MADRAS.
10. BRIJ KISHORE PRASAD, B. A., B.L., Advocate of the High Court at PATNA.
11. SYDNEY LOO-NEE, BAR.-AT-LAW, RANGOON.
12. ABUL HASSAN SYED ALLI, Vakil, State High Court, HYDERABAD (DECCAN).
13. S. R. KAGALKAR, B.A., LL.B., (BOM.), Vakil, State High Court, HYDERABAD (DECCAN).
14. A. L. HALVE, B.A., LL.B., Advocate of the High Court, NAGPUR (C. P.).
15. M. GHULAM HASAN, B.A., LL.B., Advocate of the Chief Court at LUCKNOW.
16. P. B. ADVANI, M.A., LL.B., Advocate of the Judicial Commissioner's Court at KARACHI (SIND).
17. R. B. DIWAN CHAND OBHRAI, B.A., LL.B., Advocate, PESHAWAR.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR BINDER.

Labels for this Volume should be as below:—

UPPER LABEL
(Red.)

LOWER LABEL
(Black.)

INDIAN CASES

1940

Vol. 185 COMPARATIVE TABLES

FOR

I. L. R. (1939) Madras.
(1939) 1 Madras Law Journal.
(1939) 2 Madras Law Journal.
49 Madras Law Weekly.
50 Madras Law Weekly.
(1939) Madras Weekly Notes.

CONSOLIDATED

Comparative Tables showing serially the Volumes and Pages of the following Indian Law Journals and Reports for the year 1939 with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

This volume contains the Comparative Tables only for—

I. L. R. (1939) Madras
(1939) 1 Madras Law Journal.
(1939) 2 Madras Law Journal.

49 Madras Law Weekly.
50 Madras Law Weekly.
(1939) Madras Weekly Notes.

I. L. R. (1939), MADRAS, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER.

Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and Page of Ind. Cas.	Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and Page of Ind. Cas.
1	An Advocate, In re ...	179 204	45	Appa Rao v. Seetharamayya ...	181 950
7	Venkataramaswami v. Imperial Bank of India ...	178 220	54	A. Subramania v. K. S. Venkatarama Iyer ...	185 326
19	Official Assignee, Madras v. Suryakanthammal ...	181 288	63	Nagayya v. Narasayya ...	179 201
21	Kumarappa Chettiar v. Chidambaram Chettiar ...	178 737	70	Muniyandia v. Muthusami ...	183 643
30	Desikachari v. Mahant Paryag Dasji Varu ...	181 278	73	Sankaralingam v. Arumugam ...	177 331
36	Ebrahim Sait v. South India Industrials, Ltd ...	181 349	78	Vedakannu v. Gnanayya ...	178 503
			81	Ramanatha v. Arumachalam ...	179 504
			87	Arunagirinatha, In re ...	179 605
			121	Nagappa Chettiar v. O. R. M. O. M. S. P. Firm ...	182 673

I. L. R. (1939) MADRAS, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—contd.

135	Ramanathan v. Viswanathan	180	85	458	K. V. Krishna v. K. G. Subra-
140	Edangapurandar v. Narasimha-				mania	180 855
	chariar	180	49	466	Tulajarama Rao v. Sir James
144	Chockalingam v. A. R. P. L. S.				Taylor	181 451
	P. Muthiah	182	660	480	M. S. S. Chidambaram v. Com-
151	Nagaratnam v. Seshayya	180	994		missioner of Income-tax, Madras	180 133
178	Commissioner of Income-tax,			483	Maduranayakam v. Secretary of
	Madras v. S. L. Mathias	178	906		State for India in Council	185 476
194	Seshavatharam & Co. v. Bapa-			496	Mohideen v. Nagu Bai	186 279
	nayya	185	154	507	Nataraj v. Subbaroya	185 677
199	Viswanadham v. Menon	183	639	520	Ganga Raju v. Ramayya	183 596
203	Hanumantha Rao v. Sithara-			525	Mottai Meera v. Abdul Kadir	186 214
	mayya	182	639	530	Gopi Reddi v. Rami Reddi	1 865
213	S. P. Perumal v. M. K. Kondal	183	494	532	Raja Vyricherla Narayana Gaja-
216	Jalamanna v. Rama Rao	183	508		patiraju v. Revenue Divisional
218	Perianna v. Sellappa	182	879	566	Officer, Vizagapatam	1 1 230
223	Nilakanta v. Appa Naika	180	236		Panchayat Board; Thiruvotthiyur
226	Viraraju v. Venkataratnam	183	518		v. Western India Matches Com-
234	Veerayya v. Chellamma	182	306		pany	182 474
242	Sankaramurthy v. Subbamma	179	121	585	Rm. Ar. Ar. Rm. Arunachalam v.
248	Venkata Reddi v. Venkatarat-				Sabaratanam	185 159
	nam and Sons	180	44	593	Balanagayya v. Varadarajulu	184 832
252	Sriramechandra v. Venkates-			597	Gopalaswami v. Swaminatha	184 261
	wara	181	491	600	Mahalakshmi v. Somaraju	189 17
259	Venkatadrjahnama Naidu v. Na-			611	Kalyanasundaram v. Vaithirayanasami Iyer		396		linga	183 337
269	Commissioner of Income-tax,	180		622	Maharaja of Venkatagiri v.
	Madras v. P. R. A. I. M. Muthu-				Raja Rajeswara Rao	189 123
	karuppan Ohettiar	181	525	708	District Magistrate, Trivandrum
278	S. N. Narayanan v. Commissioner				v. Mammen Mappillai	180 216
	of Income-tax, Madras	179	652	728	O. P. Matthen, In the matter of	181 502
282	Shamsuddin Ravuthar v. Shaw			744	Matthen v. District Magistrate,
	Wallace & Co.	184	153		Trivandrum	182 551
290	Paramasivam v. Ramasami	180	406	764	Kutumba Sastri v. Sundaram-
296	P. R. Govindaswami v. O. Javam-				ma	183 95
	mull	183	418	770	Commissioner of Income-tax,
301	Gopala Rao v. Lakshminara-				Madras v. Sreeramulu	185 465
	samma	181	388	776	Ramanathan v. Palaniappa	189 98
306	Palghat Coimbatore Transport			794	Ankamma v. Venkata Subbayya	182 833
	Co., Ltd. v. Narayanan	183	279	803	Dharapuram Janopekara Nidhi,
311	Seshayya v. Arundhatamma	183	511		Ltd. v. Lakshminarayana	182 999
317	Venkayya v. Venkata Rao	179	983	820	Meenakshi v. Ramaswami	184 183
324	Ayya Pattar v. Krishnan	182	351	828	A. Veeran v. P. P. Koya	185 578
328	Mahadevi v. Veerarayan	179	421	833	Dodda Khaji v. Nanjappa	185 554
333	Narasimham v. Babu Rao	183	751	838	Guruvappa v. Mounaguruswami	187 731
338	Veerammani v. Chikka Royal	185	500	843	Etti v. Secretary of State for
343	Balarani Reddi v. Official Recei-				India in Council	184 887
	ver, Nellore	183	441	853	Diraviyam v. Veeranan	185 562
349	Marudamuthu v. Venkatrama	184	60	870	Munusami v. Kappasami	186 208
353	G. J. Joseph, In re	182	228	877	Lakshmiddevamma v. Veera
358	Sreeramulu v. Commissioner of				Reddi	188 696
	Income-tax, Madras	184	268	886	Kumaraswami v. Thiruvenga-
367	Suryanarayana v. Narasimha-				datha	186 379
	swami	180	640	891	Annamalal v. Muthuswami	189 364
374	Ayyappa v. Kasiperumal	180	267	904	Emberumanar, Jeer Swamigal v.
384	Skinner v. Arunachalam	180	651		Hindu Religious Endowments
388	Commissioner of Income-tax,				Board, Madras	185 77
	Madras v. Valliammai	180	270	909	Thayarammal v. Junus Ohettiar	186 460
393	E. M. Muthappa v. Commissioner			913	Natesa v. Krishna	184 641
	of Income-tax, Madras	180	825	917	Krishnamurthy v. Satyanarayana	188 751
397	Muthukaruppan v. Commis-			928	Madura Municipality v. Alagi-
	sioner of Income-tax, Madras	181	97		risami	187 780
404	Subbayya v. Commissioner of			943	Ponnambalam v. Raman	188 895
	Income-tax, Madras	181	514	947	Subbiah Tevar, In re	184 593
415	Lakshmikutty v. Nambisan	185	173	951	Trichinopoly Varthaga Sangam,
422	Nachimuthu v. Balasubrama-				Ltd. v. Shanmugasundaram	184 387
	nia	187	735	967	Ramanuja Pedda Jiyangarlu v.
439	D. S. Raju Gupta, In re	189	25		Venkatacharlu	188 41
443	Perumal v. Subbulakshmi	180	773	971	Ramappa v. Thirumalappa	188 831

I. L. R. (1939) MADRAS, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—concl'd.

977	Zamindar of Udayam v. Sudai Udayan ...	186	350	1004	Minakshi Iyer v. Noor Muham-mad ...	183	699
980	A. P. M. Ibrahim Sahib & Brother v. Gurulinga ...	188	727	1017	Secretary of State for India in Council v. M. A. O. Aruna-chalam ...	189	228
986	Sundaresa v. Sarvajana Sow-kiabi Virdhi Nidhi, Ltd. ...	189	429	1030	Govinda v. Ayi ...	183	567
995	Sreedevi v. Kurikkal ...	188	823	1035	Venkataramayya, In re ...	187	103

(1939) 1 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO JUNE.

1	Kamalaranjan Roy v. Secretary of State ...	178	472	134	Board of Commissioners for the Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Pidugu Narasimham ...	179	1003
9	Venkatasubbu Mudaliar v. Narayanaswami Chetty ...	184	378	137	Gopala Rao v. Lakshminara-samma ...	181	388
23	Viraraju v. Venkataratnam ...	183	518	140	Venkataramangam Naidu v. Jagan-nadha ...	183	377
31	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Valliammai Achi ...	180	270	143	Palghat Coimbatore Transport Co. Ltd. v. Narayanan ...	183	279
35	Narayanan Chettiar v. Commis-sioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	179	652	147	Raja Shyam Sunder Singh v. Kaluram Agarwala ...	176	2
38	Ialamenna v. Ramarao ...	183	508	152	Ponnuswa i Chettiar v. Obul Reddi ...	181	57
39	Veerammani v. Rajaveerasasava Chikka Royal ...	185	500	154	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palani-appa Chettiar ...	180	246
43	Chidambaram Chettiar v. Com-missioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	180	133	158	Thimmiah v. Official Receiver of Bellary ...	183	693
45	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Mathias ...	178	908	163	Ayyappa Naicker v. Kasiperu-mal Nayakar ...	180	267
56	Firm of Gokal Chand-Jagan Nath v. Firm Nand Ram Das-Atma Ram ...	178	425	170	Kadiyala Nagabhushanam v. Movva Anandayya ...	183	503
64	Perumal Naicken v. Kondama Naicken ...	185	217	176	Maduranayakam Pillai v. Secre-tary of State for India in Council ...	185	776
68	Somasundara Edangapurandar v. Narasimhachariar ...	180	49	185	Tenneti Viswanadham v. M. S. Menon ...	183	639
70	Seshayya Rao v. Arundhat-amma ...	183	511	192	Sooniram Ramniranjandas v. Alagu Nachiyar Koil ...	176	906
74	Perumal Mooppan v. Subramania Mudaliar ...	185	768	199	Narayana Mudali v. Periya Kalathi Mudali ...	185	239
75	Narasaraju v. Satyavatamma ...	182	715	205	Balarami Reddi v. Official Re-ceiver, Nellore ...	183	441
80	Perumal Chettiar v. Kondal Chetty ...	183	491	209	Gopalakrishnan v. Official Liqui-dators, T. N. and Quillon Bank, Ltd. ...	183	203
82	Venkata Seshayya v. District Board, East Godavari ...	184	465	227	Obendikamba v. Viswanatha-mayya ...	189	325
87	Municipal Council, Tanjore v. Sundaresan ...	185	412	235	Chokka Dhanamma v. Corom-andal Co. Ltd., Cocanada ...	185	16
88	Gopu China Jogayya v. Manepalli Bapanayya ...	185	154	237	Venkataramnam v. Sambasiva Rao ...	188	815
91	Madhavi Amma v. Nagappan Nair ...	182	75	245	Radharani Dassya v. Brinda-rani ...	179	615
93	Kodandarama Reddiar v. Par-thasarathi Aiyangar ...	180	549	255	Joseph, In re ...	182	228
96	Chidambaram v. Na'araja Mudaliar ...	17	802	259	Avanashi Goundan v. Palani Madari ...	184	134(2)
98	Premila Devi v. Peoples Bank of Northern India, Ltd. ...	178	659	261	Lakshmikutty Kettillamma v. Vishnu Nambisan ...	185	173
111	Sivagami Ammal v. Muthu Aiyar ...	180	902(1)	266	Krishna Aiyar, In re ...	185	3
112	Pabbati Venkata Reddi v. Doredia Venkataratnam & Sons ...	180	44	268	Suryanarayanacharyulu v. Nara-simhaswamy ...	180	640
114	Parandhamayya v. Veerayya ...	183	617	272	Mada Nagaratnam v. Puvvada Seshayya ...	180	991
117	Co-operative Society, Virapandy v. Lakshmanan Chettiar ...	179	820	301	Sankaramurthi v. Sub-amma ...	179	121
120	Venkatarayulu Naidu Bahadur v. Venkata Rattamma ...	189	320	306	Swaminatha Aiyar v. Kuppu-swami Aiyar ...	179	446
123	Kottangodan Alavi, In re ...	179	962	308	Puthiamatathummam Peringadi Assankutti v. Peedikayilakath Mammad ...	186	302
124	Appadorai Aiyangar v. Annan-garachariar ...	183	258
131	Public Prosecutor v. Natesa Pillai ...	184	370

(1939) 1 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO JUNE—contd.

317	Manaithunainatha Desikar v. Gopala Chettiar ...	186	153	509	Mohammad Shamsudin Ravuthar v. Messrs. Shaw, Wallace and Co ...	184	153
321	Jambulingam Pillai v. Ponnuswami Pillai ...	182	327	518	Duraisami Raju, In re ...	182	415
329	Rentala Ganga Raju v. Bikkina Bulli Ramayya ...	183	596	520	Venkataraman v. Janaki ...	188	826
332	Ambi Aiyar, In re ...	181	51	528	Mottai Meera v. Chinna Sheik Abdul Kadir Rowther ...	186	214
337	Papathi Ammal v. Doraiswamy Naicker ...	183	631	531	Kamakshi Aiyar v. Namberumal Aiyangar ...	185	459
340	Tile Beharani v. Raghubehara ...	184	86	534	Synemodelux Ltd. v. Vannamuthu Pillai ...	185	712
344	Krishnaswami Mudaliar v. Vijiaraghava Pillai ...	189	156	536	Subramania Aiyar v. Venkatarama Aiyar ...	185	328
350	Samuel Koilpillai Skinner v. Arunachalam Pandaram ...	180	651	544	Ram Kinkar Banerjee v. Satya Charan Srimani ...	179	328
352	Nachimuthu Goundan v. Balasubramania Goundan ...	187	735	557	Paramasivam Pillai v. Ramasami Chettiar ...	180	406
365	Prahladrai Chooreewalla v. Commissioners for Port of Calcutta ...	179	321	561	Govindaraja Pillai v. Vanchinatham Pillai ...	184	465
371	Muthappa Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	180	825	564	An Advocate, In the matter of ...	179	204
379	Minakshi Aiyar v. Noor Muhammad Rowther ...	183	699	568	Kesavan Nambudiri v. Lakshmi Varasyar ...	183	582
392	Munusami Chetti v. Kuppusami Chetti ...	186	1208	573	Veerappa Moopan, In re ...	183	240
396	Corporation of Calcutta v. Moti Chand Chowdhury ...	179	324	575	Official Receiver, West Tanjore v. Samundravijayan Chettiar ...	185	288
402	Muthukaruppan Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	181	97	579	Perumal Reddiar, In re ...	183	571
412	Shanmugasundaram Pillai v. Manicka Mudaliar ...	181	86	582	Vijiaraghavalu Naidu v. Arunachalam Chettiar ...	183	537
414	Pothuraju Setty v. Padda Poliah ...	180	473	588	Pauchayat Board, Thiruvothiyur v. Western India Matches Co. ...	182	474
416	Vythilingam Pillai v. Pankajathammal ...	185	850	602	Rajah of Bobbili v. Venkata Suryanarayana ...	186	255
420	Athikesavalu Naidu v. Ekambara Mudaliar ...	186	150	604	Koran v. Govindan Nambiar ...	184	672
426	Lakshmiipathi Naick, In re ...	180	106	608	Govindasami Chetti, In re ...	184	166
429	Annamalai Chettiar v. Lakshmanan Chettiar ...	189	336	610	Balanagayya Chetti v. Varadarajulu Chetti ...	184	832
436	Ramakrishnayya v. Sreeramulu ...	188	691	614	Ganapathi Asari v. Kuppuswamy Asari ...	183	179(1)
444	Karuppiiah Thevan v. Krishna Pillai ...	181	254	615	Lakshminarayana Deo v. Imperial Bank of India, Guntur ...	183	896
445	Narasimha Rao v. Ayyanna Rao ...	184	654	620	Lakshamma v. Subramanyan ...	184	812
451	Gunda Subbayya v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	181	514	625	Nagappa Chettiar v. O. R. M. O. M. S. P. Firm ...	182	673
456	Sitharatnamma v. Seshamma ...	185	30	635	Asiatic Government Society Life Assurance Co. Ltd. v. New Asiatic Life Insurance Co., Ltd. ...	184	537
463	Krishna Aiyar v. Subramania Aiyar ...	180	855	646	Govindan Nambudiri v. Soopahett Amad ...	186	249
473	Madhava Sahu v. Satrugghana Sahu ...	186	606	649	Govinda Goundan v. Aiy Goundan ...	183	567
476	Hussain Batcha Sahib v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	185	343	652	Oudh Commercial Bank, Ltd., Fyzabad v. Thakurain Bind Basni Kuer ...	180	378
480	Raju Gupta, In re ...	189	25	664	Margaret Lornie v. Abu Backer Sait ...	184	735
482	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Muthukaruppan Chettiar ...	181	525	678	Veeranna v. Lakshmiipathi Somayajulu ...	186	470
487	Madhavi Ammal v. Subramanian Nambudripad ...	188	852	680	Varadarajam Pillai v. Krishnamurthi Pillai ...	189	390
491	Ramamurti v. Subbarao ...	185	419(2)	683	Oherutty v. Nagamparambil Rara ...	185	26
493	Venkateswara Rao v. Ammayya ...	186	200	687	Ohidambaram Chettiar v. Ramaswami Chettiar ...	184	83
499	Nataraja Pillai v. Subbaroya Chettiar ...	185	677	692	Satyanarayanamurthy v. Gaggayya ...	189	54

(1939) 1 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JANUARY TO JUNE—concl'd.

695	Subba Rao v. Calicut Co-operative Urban Bank, Ltd. ...	185	230	812	Ulagalum Perumal Sethurayar v. Rani Subbulakshmi Nachiar ...	180	773
700	Kava, In re ...	183	784	820	Ohandra Kesavalu Chetty v. Perumal Chettiar ...	189	316
702	Kutumba Saastri v. Lakkaraju Bala Tripura Sundaramma ...	183	95	825	Kannayya Reddi v. Muthu Reddi ...	185	62
705	Venkata Sivayya v. Suryanarayana ...	182	888	827	Santhappa v. Siddalingayya Eswarappa Bulla ...	186	449
712	Gopalaswami Odayar v. Swaminatha Odayar ...	184	861	830	Subbayya v. Venkata Narasayya ...	183	743
715	Bannerjee v. Kuchwar Lime and Stone Co., Ltd. ...	178	490	831	Maharajah of Venkatagiri v. Raja Rajeswara Rao ...	189	123
724	Venkayya v. Rattayya ...	184	12	886	Nataraja Goundan, In re ...	183	602(1)
729	Subramania Pillai v. Ponniiah ...	183	560	888	Gopi Reddi v. Rami Reddi ...	183	665
730	Khadar Mohideen Sahib v. Nagu Bai ...	186	279	829	Arunachalam Chettiar v. Sabaratnam Chettiar ...	185	159
742	Seshiah v. Ramiah ...	184	843	894	Natesa Padayachi v. Krishna Padayachi ...	184	641
745	Sithalingachetti v. Ardhanari Chetti ...	189	170	897	Balakrishnan Nambiar v. Ohathu ...	188	183
751	Kalandar Rowther v. Sivapunyam Chettiar ...	188	843	900	Jaggu Naidu, In re ...	183	581
756	Narayana Swami v. King-Emperor ...	180	1	901	Sri Emberumanar Jeer Swamikal v. Board of Commissioner for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras ...	185	77
770	Krishna Aiyar v. Subba Reddiar ...	189	200	905	Venkatachala Chetty v. Natesa Chetty ...	188	857
775	Venkata Narasimham v. Satyanarayanarao ...	183	595	909	Khaji Dodda Khaji Sahib v. Chigamalla Nanjappa ...	185	554
776	Sadaiammal v. Angammai ...	184	516
784	Etti v. Secretary of State for India ...	184	887
791	Varadarajan Chetty v. Kanaiah ...	186	7
792	Annamalai Chetty v. Muthuswami Maniagaram ...	189	364
802	Dharapurama Janopakara Nidhi, Ltd. v. Lakshinarayana Chettiar ...	182	999	1	Central Provinces and Berar Sales of Motor, Spirit and Lubricants Taxation Act, 1938, In the matter of ...	180	161

(1939) 2 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER.

1	Ankamma, v. Venkata Subbayya ...	182	833	72	Mahalakshmi v. Somaraju ...	189	17
6	Duraswami Reddiar v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	189	280	80	United Motor Finance Company v. Fiat Motors Eastern India Agency ...	189	294
11	Ponnuman Dikshitar v. Board of Commissioners for the Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras ...	188	889	86	Veeran Kutti v. Koya Kutti ...	185	578
23	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Arunachala Mudaliar ...	189	228	97	Karumuthu Thiagarajan, In re ...	183	762
33	Ranganadham Chetty v. Corporation of Madras ...	184	490	98	Bhagwati v. Ram Kali ...	181	211
36 (1)	Mekraj Alli Sahib, In re ...	184	452	109	Vyapuri Kevandan, In re ...	184	613
36 (2)	Guruvappa Naicker v. Mounaguruswami Naicker ...	187	731	111	Balakrishna Reddiar v. Syed Jalaluddin Sahib ...	184	451(1)
39	Muthuswami Pillai, In re ...	184	471(1)	112	Vedavalli Thayarammal v. Junus Chettiar ...	186	460
40	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar ...	188	892	114	Raja of Vizianagaram v. Sanyasiraju ...	185	42
44	Manickavachakam Chettiar v. Official Receiver, East Tanjore at Negapatam ...	186	720	117	Subbiah v. Ramacharlu ...	184	112
45	Sri Raja Vyricherla Narayana Gajapatiraju Bahadur Garu v. Revenue Divisional Officer, Vizagapatam ...	181	230	122	Garland Petroleum Co., (Mad), Ltd., In re ...	189	209
68	Sreeramulu Chetty v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	184	268	132	Marudamuthu Mudaliar v. Venkatarama Aiyar ...	184	60
				135	District Magistrate, Trivandrum v. Mammen Mapillai ...	180	216
				169	O. F. Mathen, In the matter of ...	181	502
				181	Bhaya Mohammad Azim Khan v. Raja Saadat Ali Khan ...	180	1001
				195	Hanumantha Rao v. Sitharamayya ...	182	639
				202	Velu Naicken, In re ...	184	302

(1939) 2 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER—contd.

208	Kathoom Bi v. Abdul Wahab Sahib ...	183	289	437	Zamindar of Udayarpalayam v. Sudai Udayam ...	186	350
214	Bapanna v. Jaggiah ...	188	710	444	Trustees of Tribune Press, Lahore v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Punjab, Lahore ...	182	882
226	Karuppana Nadar v. Karuppa Nadar ...	189	289	455	Subbiah Tevar, In re ...	184	593
233	Ponnambalam Chetti v. Ambalam Raman Chetti ...	188	895	460	Kameswaramma v. Thammanna	187	602
236	Appaswammal Pillai v. Thaymal ...	189	215	463	Kunhibi v. Kalliani Amma ...	189	476
253	Mahanth Singh v. U Ba Yi ...	181	1	469	Krishnamachari v. Ohengalraya Naidu ...	189	185
271	Sooranna v. Venkanna ...	189	348	479	Bhupendra Mohan Roy v. Srimati Purna Sashi Debi ...	183	199
279	Satyanarayanamurthi v. Gopalan ...	186	57	487	Veerana Kone, In re ...	184	99
282	Veerasingam v. Subbarayudu	186	316	489	Syed Ibrahim Sahib v. Gurulinga Aiyar ...	188	727
287	Kunbilakshmi Amma v. Krishna Menon ...	186	599	493	Ramakrishna v. Narasimha Kamath ...	187	426
294	Jeeva Ammal v. Ranganatha Mudaliar ...	186	444	495	Swaminatha Odayar v. Srinivasa Aiyar ...	186	424
296	Narayana Mudali v. Kalathi Mudali ...	188	101	499	Lakshminarasimhamurti v. Venkata Jogisomayajulu ...	187	661
304	Chairman, Municipal Council, Anakapalli v. Narayana Gajapatiraju Bahadur Garu ...	189	50	501	Sinnachami Chettiar v. Ramasami Chettiar ...	188	48
308	Kumaraswami Pillai v. Thiruvengadatha Aiyangar ...	186	379	506	Sankara Varma Raja v. Oheria Rama Varma Raja ...	185	628
316	Subramania Chettiar v. Felix Joseph Sarprasadam ...	187	467	509	Sitaramayya v. Venkanna ...	187	30
320	Ramanujachariar, In the matter of ...	184	606	515	Sivasankara Mudaliar v. Radhabai Ammal ...	185	647
325	Travancore National Bank Subsidiary Co., Ltd. Sundaravardan v. Mani Aiyar ...	186	297	518	Public Prosecutor v. N. S. Sharma ...	184	51
329	Satyanarayanamurthy v. Maharajah of Pithapur ...	189	204	522	Sir Hari Sankar Paul v. Kedar Nath Saha ...	181	935
310	Lakshmiddevamma v. Veera Reddi ...	188	696	531	Vira Raghavulu Naidu v. Rajalingam ...	186	327
345	Trichinopoly Varthaga Sangam v. Shanmugasundaram ...	184	387	533	Subbarayudu v. Lakshminarasamma ...	189	435
353	Ramaswami Chettiar v. Meyyappan Servai ...	188	187	551	Vanjiappa Goundan v. Annamalai Chettiar ...	188	379
362	Muthuvasu Chettiar v. Velumruga Nadar ...	188	283	555	Seetha Ramappa v. G. C. Ramappa ...	186	231
366	Monghibai v. Ooverji Umersey	182	1	557	Saminatha Aiyar v. Vageesan ...	185	37
378	Tiruvengada Ramanuja Pedda Jiyangaru Varlu v. Prathivadi Bayankaram Venkatacharlu ...	188	41	568	Natesa Aiyar v. Venkalashmi Ammal ...	189	704
380	Rathnammal v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	189	490	569	Ram Narain Sahu v. Makhna ...	181	929
388	Gopala Krishnamurthy v. Satyanarayana ...	188	751	579	Sayid Muhammad Jiffri Attakoya Thangal v. Sayid Muhammad Bin Alabi A. K. Thangal ...	188	13
395	Board of Commissioners for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras v. Trustee of Sri Virupakshaswaraswami ...	185	544	585	Chockalingam Chettiar v. Chinayya Servai ...	189	241
399	Narayana v. Lakshmayya ...	185	421	596	Kannappa Mudali v. Varadachariar ...	188	204
400	Vellayya Konar v. Kamaswami Konar ...	189	301	600	Seethayamma v. Vullipalam ...	188	534
406	O. P. Matthen v. District Magistrate of Trivandrum ...	182	551	604	Subbayya v. Thippa Reddi ...	188	200
414	Venkatayya v. Official Receiver Anantapur ...	186	634	609 (3)	Ramaswami Chettiar, In re ...	186	722
415	Padalinga Mudaliar v. Arumugha Mudaliar ...	189	305	611	Venkateswara Rao v. Subbrahmanyam ...	186	455
420	Kamaswami Goundan v. Lakshmana Reddi ...	186	437	614	Sundaresivudu v. Adinarayana Sastri ...	189	303
423	Krishna Mudaliar v. Marimuthu Mudaliar ...	189	495	618	Kanniah Maistry, In re ...	185	385
435	Seenai Madar Sahib v. Abdul Rahman Sahib ...	186	348	619	Kunhi Kannan v. Kottiath Vazhayil Devaki ...	189	17
				624	Sundaresa Aiyar v. Sarvajana Sowkiabivirdhi Nidhi, Ltd. ...	189	429
				630	Sundaram, In re ...	185	417
				632	Jagannatha Aiyar, In re ...	185	257
				634	Public Prosecutor Madras v. M. S. Menoki of Oalcut ...	185	419
				635	Morranna, In re ...	188	311

(1939) 2 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER—concl'd.

639	Ramayya Goundan v. Kolanda Goundan ...	189	259	793	Jugal Kishore Narain Singh v. Charoo Chandra Sur ...	181	341
645	Karuppan v. Ambalam v. Sundara Raja Aiyar ...	190	167	801	Thyagarajan Chettiar v. Secretary to Government of Madras ...	186	440
649	Ramappa v. Thirumalappa ...	183	831	805	Byra Gouda v. Muniammal ...	187	745
653	Meenakshi Achi v. Ramaswami Chettiar ...	184	163	809	Govinda Chettiar v. Varadappa Chettiar ...	188	263
658	Anandam v. Muthukumaraswami Mudali ...	186	458	812	Veeraraghavaswami v. Mangamma ...	189	685
667	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Sreeramulu Chetty ...	185	465	814	Thanammal v. Alamelu Ammal ...	187	82
671	Chidambaram Chettiar v. Murugesam Pillai ...	189	411	816	Mahammad Sheriff Sahib v. Hussain Ghouse ...	188	416
680	Sreedevi v. Korikkal ...	188	823	818	District Board of West Tanjore v. Ponnuswami Pallavarayar ...	188	640
686	Krushnacharana Padhi v. Gourochandro Dyano Sumanto ...	189	795	822	Diravyam Pillai v. Veeranan Ambalam ...	185	562
697	Seetha Neithyar v. Kelu Menon ...	188	571	841	Abdul Khadir Saheb v. Pachaiyappa Chetti ...	188	680
708	Viswanathan Chettiar v. Official Receiver of Coimbatore ...	189	681	813	Tulajarama Rao v. Sir James Taylor ...	181	451
714	Bower v. Heesterlow ...	189	96	851	Muhammad Ibrahim v. Kamal Saheb ...	188	145
718	Krishnan v. P. R. N. Ramanatha Aiyar & Co. ...	189	727	853	Jami Venkatappadu v. Kanepalli Ramamurthi ...	186	862
722	Hari Chand v. Secretary of State Coimbatore Venkataramana Vilas Co., Ltd. v. Official Receiver, Coimbatore ...	183	378	859	Veeranna Sha v. Official Receiver of Secunderabad ...	190	172
731	Tan Ma Shwe Zin v. Koo Soo Ohong ...	182	993	864	G. R. Naidu v. Venkataswami Naidu ...	189	822
750	Subba Rao, In re ...	185	753	878	Venkataramayya, In re ...	187	103
751	Thirugnanavilli Ammal v. Venugopala Pillai ...	186	468	882	Mondan Shetti v. Thimmi Avva ...	186	832
757	Kunhi Raman Kitavu v. Kunhi Karnavan Kitavu ...	185	755	884	Chennappa v. Onkarappa ...	185	749
758	Narayanan Chetti v. Panchanathan Chettiar ...	187	252	893	Keshardeo Chamria v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bengal ...	182	5
759	Sivaswami Chettiar v. Marudaiya Goundan ...	186	632	901	Narayanaraju v. Suryanarayudu ...	184	1
762	Surendra Bahadur Singh v. Thakur Behari Singh ...	181	216	911	Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Company, Limited v. P. Ranga Rao ...	189	164
773	Dorakannu Ammal v. Ramaswami Mudaliar ...	186	90	920	Sri Veerabhadraswami v. Maya Kone ...	189	749
776	Public Prosecutor v. Amirtham Servai ...	186	103	923	Venkata Rayaniam Varu v. China Bapanna ...	189	695
778	Kondayya Rao v. Naganna ...	188	318	1	United Provinces v. Governor-General in Council ...	180	863
782	Namasivaya Mudaliar v. Srinivasa Aiyangar ...	189	732	23	Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. The Crown ...	181	317
789	Ramaswami Chetti v. Ramachandra Rao ...	188	617	45	Shyamakant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh ...	182	161

49 LAW WEEKLY FROM JANUARY TO JUNE, 1939.

1	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. S. L. Mathias ...	178	906	103	V. V. Vythilingam Pillai v. Seshai ...	185	850
10	S. N. Bannerjee v. Kuchwar Lime & Stone Co., Ltd. ...	178	490	106	V. Subbaramayya v. Yerri Irangam Reddi ...	184	103
17	Pasupati Bharati v. Secretary of State ...	180	547	110	Ayyappa Naicker v. Kasiperumal Naicker ...	180	267
21	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Velliammal Achi ...	180	270	115	Veerammami v. Rajaveerabasa ...	185	600
23	Jogayya v. Bapanayya ...	185	151	118	S. P. Perumal Chettiar v. M. K. Kondal Chetty ...	183	494
29	P. S. Tuljaram Rao v. Sir James Taylor ...	181	451	120	Khader Mohideen Sahib v. O. Nagu Bai ...	186	279
36	Central Provinces and Berar Sales of Motor Spirit and Lubricants Taxation Act, 1938, In the matter of ...	180	161	126	Nand Kishore v. Official Receiver, Delhi ...	178	406
102	T. S. Shanmugasundaram Pillai v. A. Manicka Mudaliar ...	181	86	132	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar ...	189	98
				143	S. V. Subba Rao v. Calicut Co-operative Urban Bank Ltd. ...	185	230

49 LAW WEEKLY, FROM JANUARY TO JUNE, 1932—contd.

147	Vekatarayulu Naidu v. Rattamma Garu ...	189	320	319	T. M. Athikesavalu Naidu v. S. Ekambara Mudaliar ...	186	150
150	Public Prosecutor v. Meenakshi ...	183	232	330	D. S. Raju Gupta, In re ...	189	25
151	Maduranayakam Pillai v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	185	476	332	Jambulingam Pillai v. Ponnuswami Pillai ...	182	327
158	Marudamuthu Mudaliar v. N. K. Venkatram Ayyar ...	184	60	334	Munusami Chetti v. Kuppasami Chetti ...	186	208
160	G. J. Joseph, In re ...	182	228	338	Beharani v. Raghubebara ...	184	86
163	Avanashi Goundhan v. Palani Madari ...	184	134 (2)	341	Dhanamma v. Ooromandel Company Limited, Oocanada ...	185	16
167	Hanibabeebi Ammal v. Munurdeen Sahib ...	182	22	343	Muhammad Shamsudin Ravuthar v. Shaw Wallace and Company ...	184	153
170	C. Venkatarangam Naidu v. B. Jagannadha Doss ...	183	377	319	Narayana Swami v. The King-Emperor ...	180	1
172	R. D. K. Ohinna Venkatappa Nayanim v. Sundararajulu Naidu ...	185	427	360	Madhava Sahu v. Satrugana Sahu ...	186	606
173	Municipal Council, Tanjore v. Sundaresan ...	185	412	362	Remakrishnayya v. Sreeramulu Subbayya v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	188	691
175	Venkadu, In re ...	181	933	369	Perumal Naicken v. Kondama Naicken ...	181	514
178	Hirannayya v. Thippeswami ...	180	783	372	Govardhandas Jamnadas v. Friedmans Diamond Trading Company Limited ...	185	247
181	Travancore National & Quilon Bank Limited, In re ...	183	203	375	Public Prosecutor v. Natasa Pillai ...	188	878
196	Suryanarayanacharyulu v. Narasimhaswamy ...	180	640	381	Annamalai Chettiar v. Lakshmanan Chettiar ...	184	370
199	Lakshmikutty Kethilamma v. Vishnu Nambisan ...	185	173	383	Marud Pillai v. Narayana-swami Pillai ...	189	386
202	K. S. Ambi Iyer, In re ...	181	51	387	Mottai Meera v. Shaik Abdul Kadir Rowther ...	181	557
201	Karupiah Thevan v. N. Krishna Pillai ...	181	264	391	Sitharathamma v. Seshamma ...	186	214
205	Krishna Iyer, In re ...	185	3	393	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. P. R. A. L. M. Muthukaruppan Chettiar ...	185	30
207	Margaret Lornie v. Abu Backer Sait ...	184	735	399	P. S. Venkataraman v. A. C. Janaki ...	181	525
222	Radharani v. Brindarani ...	179	615	403	Rajah of Bobbili v. Venkata Suryanarayana ...	188	826
229	Ram Kinkar Banerjee v. Satya Charan ...	179	328	409	Varadarajam Pillai v. Krishnamurthi Pillai ...	186	255
241	Pattumadammal v. Nanjappa ...	184	824	411	K. P. Madhavi Ammal v. M. Subramaniam Nambudripad ...	189	390
243	K. V. Krishna Iyer v. K. G. Subramania Iyer ...	180	835	413	A. Subramania Iyer v. K. S. Venkatarama Iyer ...	188	852
248	Gokal Chand Jagau Nath Firm v. Nand Ram Das Atma Ram Firm ...	178	425	416	Sundaramma v. Venkatachela-mayya ...	185	326
253	Samuel Koilpillai Skinner v. Arunachalam Pandaram ...	180	651	422	Balarami Reddi v. Official Receiver, Nellore ...	189	335
255	E. M. Muthappa Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	180	825	427	Garland Petroleum Company (Madras) Ltd, In the matter of Premila Devi v. Peoples Bank of Northern India Limited ...	183	441
257	Nagaratnam v. Seshayya ...	180	994	431	Basappa, In re ...	189	309
268	Pothuraju Setty v. Padda Poliah ...	180	473	444	Ganapathi Asari v. Kuppaswamy Asari ...	178	659
270	K. Manaihunainatha Desikar v. Gopal Chettiar ...	186	153	455	Govindaswami Chetty, In re ...	184	353
273	Chendikamba v. Viswanathamayya ...	189	325	456	Diravyam Pillai v. Veeranan Ambalam ...	183, 179(1)
280	Mahalakshmi v. Somaraju ...	189	17	458	O. R. Balanagayya Chetti v. Varadarajulu Chetti ...	184	166
287	G. S. Nataraja Pillai v. O. S. Subbaroya Chettiar ...	185	677	460	Veerappa Moopan, In re ...	183	240
295	Narayana Mudali v. Kalathi Mudali ...	185	239	475	Abdul Sattar Sahib, In re ...	183	257
298	Narasimha Rao v. V. Ayyanna Rao ...	184	654	476	Govinda Goundan v. Ayi Goundan ...	183	567
303	Ganga Raju v. Ramayya ...	183	596	478	Perumal Reddiar, In re ...	183	571
305	Pr. Al. M. Muthukaruppan Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	181	97	481	Kamakshi Ayyar v. Namburamal Ayyangar ...	185	459
309	Nachimuthu v. Balasubramania ...	187	735

49 LAW WEEKLY, FROM JANUARY TO JUNE, 1939—concl.

483	Sooranna v. Venkanna ...	189	348	597	Krishnaswami Mudaliar v. Vijia- raghava Pillai ...	189	158
491	Cherutty v. Nagamparambil Ravu ...	185	26	602	Natesa Padayachi v. Krishna Padayachi ...	184	611
494	A. T. Kava, In re ...	183	784	605	Ohandra Kesavalu Chetty v. S. P. Perumal Chettiar ...	189	316
496	Lakshamma v. P. S. Subra- manyam ...	184	812	608	P. P. Palaniappa Chettiar v. S. A. Ramanathan Chettiar ...	189	31
500	Lakshmiopathi Naick, In re ...	180	106	620	Gopi Reddi v. Rami Reddi ...	183	865
502	Jalamenna v. Rama Rao ...	183	508	621	Ulagalam Perumal Sethurayar v. Subbulakshmi Nachiar ...	180	773
503	Panchayat Board, Thiruvot- tiyur v. Western India Matches Company ...	182	474	632	Emberumanar Jeer Swamigal v. Board of Commissioners for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras ...	185	77
514	Lakshminarayana Deo v. Im- perial Bank of India, Guntur ...	183	896	635	P. E. R. M. Annamalai Chetty v. Muthuswami Maniagarar ...	189	334
515	Rm. Ar. Ar. Rm. Arunachalam Chettiar v. Sabaratnam Chet- tiar ...	185	159	644	Sithalinga Chetty v. Ardhanari Chetty ...	189	170
520	Subbanna, In re ...	183	564	651	Sri Minakshi Mills Ltd., Madura, In re ...	183	762
522	Sathalavadan, In re ...	183	561	656	Subba Rao v. Kamaraju ...	183	768
525	Ohidambaram Chettiar, v. R. A. S. Ramaswami Chettiar ...	184	83	657	Krishna Aiyar v. Subba Reddiar ...	189	200
529	Venkateswara Rao v. Ammayya ...	186	300	662	Rajah of Vizianagaram v. San- yasiraju ...	185	42
534	Ramamurti v. Subbarao ...	185	40(2)	681	Narayana Mudali v. Peria Kalathi ...	188	801
536	Duraiswami Raju, In re ...	182	415	671	Dharapuram Janopakara Nidhi Ltd v. K. Lakshminarayana Chettiar ...	182	999
537	Synemodellux Limited v. K. Vannamuthu Pillai ...	185	712	679	Etti v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	184	887
538	T. S. Gopalaswami Odayar v. T. S. Swaminatha Odayar ...	184	861	684	Ramaswami v. Rudrappa ...	187	328
540	Govindaraja Pillai v. Vanchina- tham Pillai ...	184	485	685	Khaji Dodda Khaji Sahib v. Nanjappa ...	185	554
544 (1)	Pappa, In re ...	183	112	688	N. M. Muthu Vasu Chettiar v. Velu Muruga Nadar ...	188	283
544 (2)	Rangayya, In re ...	183	603	696	United Motor Finance Company v. Fiat Motors Eastern India Agency ...	189	294
545	Parandhamayya v. Nagabhushan- nam ...	183	268	701	A. L. Meenakshi Achi v. L. R. M. Ramaswami Chettiar ...	184	183
546	S. V. Subramanla Pillai v. G. J. Ponnliah ...	183	580	70	K. M. Venkatachala Chetty v. N. D. Natesa Chetty ...	188	857
547 (1)	Venkata Narasimham v. Satya- narayana Rao ...	183	595	707	A. Veeran Kutti v. P. P. Koya Kutti ...	185	578
547 (2)	Kannayya Reddi v. Muthu Raddi ...	185	62	713	S. A. Ramanathan Chettiar v. P. P. Palaniappa Chettiar ...	188	892
549	Venkayya v. Rattayya ...	184	12	717	Maharajah of Venkatagiri v. Rajeswara Rao ...	189	123
552	Jaggu Naidu, In re ...	183	531	782	Kumaraswami Pillai v. Thiru- vengadatha ...	186	379
553	Nataraja Goundan, In re ...	182	602(1)	788	Krishnamachari v. Chengalraya Naidu ...	189	185
554	V. Seetharama Chettiar, In re ...	183	740(1)	773	K. M. Duraiswami Reddiar v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	189	280
555	Subbayya v. Narasayya ...	183	743	777	Ankamma v. Venkata Subbayya ...	182	833
556	Asiatic Government Security Life Assurance Co., Ltd. v. New Asiatic Assurance Co., Ltd. ...	184	537	781	M. Subbiah v. T. Ramachariu ...	184	112
566	Kutumba Sastri v. Sundaramma ...	183	95	784	Vedavalli Thayarammal v. Junus Chettiar ...	186	460
569	Veeranna v. Lakshmiatisomaya- julu ...	186	470	786	Guruvappa Naicker v. M. Mouna- guruswami Naicker ...	187	731
570	Lakshpat Ram v. Behari Lal Misir ...	180	550
572	Seshiah v. Ramiah ...	184	843
576	Govinda Nambudiri v. Sooppia- tath Amad ...	186	249
578	Satyanarayanamurthy v. Gan- gayya ...	189	54
581	Machingal Potte Veettu v. Ma- chingal Potte Veettu ...	188	571
591	Official Receiver, West Tanjore v. Simudravijayan Chettiar ...	185	238
595	Hussain Batcha Sahib v. Secre- tary of State for India in Council ...	186	313

50 LAW WEEKLY, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER, 1939.

1	Gajapatiraju v. Revenue Divi- sional Officer, Vizagapatam ...	181	230	23	Surender Singh v. Ghulam Mohammad ...	181	308
19	Lachmeshwar Sahai v. Moti Rani Kunwar ...	181	359	27	Mahanth Singh v. U Ba Yi ...	181	1

50 LAW WEEKLY, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER, 1939—contd.

33	Hari Sankar Paul v. Kedar Nath Saha ...	181	935	260	Krishnamurthy v. Satyanarayana ...	188	751
39	Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Bind Basni Kuer ...	180	378	270	Saminatha Iyer v. Vagesan ...	185	37
48	Matthen v. District Magistrate of Trivandrum ...	182	551	277	Zamindar of Kirlampudi v. Suryaprakasa Rao ...	189	245
58	Surendra Bahadur Singh v. Behari Singh ...	181	216	232	Krishna Mudaliar v. Marimuthu Mudaliar ...	189	495
66	Bhagwati v. Ram Kali ...	181	211	291	Syed Ibrahim Sahib v. Gurulunga Aiyar ...	188	727
75	Ram Narain Sahu v. Makhna ...	181	929	300	Rathnammal v. Secretary of State ...	189	490
81	Richard Gillie v. Posho Ltd. ...	182	27	306	Sundaravaradan v. Mani Iyer ...	186	297
87	Simon Christopher v. Alfred Christy ...	182	770	309	Zamindar of Udayarpalayam v. Sudai Udayan ...	186	650
95	Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. Emperor ...	181	317	311	Ohidambaram Ohettiar v. Murugesam Pillai ...	189	411
119	Commissioner of Income-tax, Bengal v. Himalaya Assurance Co., Ltd. ...	182	179	318	Subbiah Tevar, In re ...	184	593
126	Ponnuman Dikshitar v. Hindu Religious Endowment Board, Madras ...	188	689	323	Rajarathna Ohettiar v. Shalek Mahboob Sahib ...	190	101
130	Ranganadham Ohetty v. Corporation of Madras ...	184	490	331	Ramappa v. Thirumalappa ...	188	831
133	Sadaiammal v. Angammal ...	184	516	336	Viraraghavulu Naidu v. Rajalingam ...	186	327
136	Sreeramulu Ohetty v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	184	263	338	Balakrishna Reddier v. Jalaluddin Sahib ...	184	451(1)
139	Satyanarayanamurthy v. Maharajah of Pithapur ...	189	201	339	Tribune Press v. Commissioner of Income-tax ...	182	882
151	Satyanarayanamurthi v. Gopalan ...	186	57	347	Ramakrishna v. Narasimha Kamath ...	187	426
154	Karuppanna Nadar v. Karuppa Nadar ...	189	289	349	Narayanaraja v. Suryanarayudu ...	184	1
159	Ramaswami Ohettiar v. Meyyappan Servai ...	188	187	357	Sinnachami Ohettiar v. Ramaswami Ohettiar ...	188	48
164	Kunhilakshmi Amma v. Krishnan Menon ...	186	599	360	Anakapalli Municipal Council v. Gajapathiraju ...	189	50
166	Appasami Pillai v. Thayammal ...	189	215	364	Subbayya v. Thippa Reddi ...	188	200
181	Ponnambalam Ohetti v. Ramiah Ohetti ...	188	895	368	Chockalingam Ohettiar v. Ohinnayya Servai ...	189	241
183	Bapanna v. Jaggiah ...	188	710	375	Sankara Varma Raja v. Ramavarma Raja ...	185	628
192	Seethayamma v. Vullipalem ...	188	531	377	Bhupendra Mohan Roy v. Purna Sashi Debi ...	183	199
195	Kameswaramma v. Thammanna ...	187	602	339	Mian Feroz Shah v. Mohammad Akbar Khan ...	182	548
198	Veeresalingam v. Subbarayudu ...	186	316	344	Dawson's Bank Limited v. Maung Mya Thwin ...	182	892
200	Jeeva Ammal v. Ranganatha Mudaliar ...	186	444	400	Kunhibi v. Kalliani Amma ...	189	476
202	Venkatayya v. Official Receiver, Anantapur ...	186	634	404	Lakshminarasimhamurti v. Jogisomayajulu ...	187	851
203	Subramania Ohettiar v. Sarprasadam ...	187	467	406	Hari Ohand v. Secretary of State ...	183	328
206	Ramaswami Goundan v. Lakshmana Keddi ...	186	437	411	Swaminatha Odayar v. Srinivasa Iyer ...	186	421
209	United Provinces v. Governor-General ...	180	863	414	Mauji Ram v. Ohaturbhaj ...	183	196
234	Sri P. Ramanujachariar, In the matter of ...	184	606	418	Sreedevi v. Kurikkul ...	188	822
237	Seeni Madar Sahib v. Abdul Rahman Sahib ...	186	348	423	Kapa Moranna, In re ...	188	311
239	Lakshmiddevamma v. Veera Reddi ...	188	696	426	Mahammad Sheriff Sahib v. Hussain Ghouse ...	188	416
243	Sundaresa Iyer v. Sarvajana Sowkiabivirdhi Nidhi Ltd. ...	189	429	428	Public Prosecutor, Madras v. Menoki of Calicut ...	185	419
248	Vellaya Konar v. Ramaswami Konar ...	189	301	429	Sivaswami Ohettiar v. Marudaiya Goundan ...	186	632
252	Podda Jiyungarlu v. Venkatacharlu ...	188	41	430	Venkateswara Rao v. Subrahmanyam ...	186	455
254	Trichinopoly Varthaga Sangam Ltd. v. T. N. Shanmugasundaram ...	184	387	432	Sitaramayya v. Venkanna ...	187	30
				435	Emperor v. Poligadu ...	185	829
				440	Madura Municipality v. K. Alagirisami Naidu ...	187	780
				448	Haji Maula Bux v. Abdul Latif ...	183	321
				452	Kanakasabal Pillai v. Emperor ...	186	704
				458	Venkatachalam Ohettiar, In re ...	189	811

50 LAW WEEKLY, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER, 1939—contd.

459	Manickavachakam Chettiar v. Official Receiver ...	186	120	640	Palanisami Goundar v. Kaliappa Goundar ...	190	887
466	Jiffiri Attakoya v. Ayidross Kunhikoya ...	188	13	645	Rukmini Ammal v. Subramania Sastrigal ...	190	19
472	Lakshmadu v. Ramudu ...	187	816	651	R. V. and Co v. Hindu Religious Endowments Board ...	186	868
486	Secretary of State v. Arunachalam Mudaliar ...	189	228	654	Narayana v. Lakshmayya ...	185	421
494	Vanjiappa Goundan v. Annamalai Chettiar ...	188	379	655	Nambar v. Chandukutty ...	186	323
497	Moidin Kutti v. Subramanya Iyer ...	187	591	658	Sri Veerabhadraswami v. Maya Kone ...	189	749
500	Sundar ivudu v. Adinarayana Sastri ...	189	303	667	Vyapuri Kavandan, In re ...	184	613
503	District Board of West Tan re v. Ponnuswami ...	188	640	676	Kunbi Ramen Kitavu v. Kunbi Karnavan Kitavu ...	185	755
507	Kannappa Mudali v. Varadachariar ...	188	204	677	Chinnappayan v. Narayana Pattar ...	187	852
511 (1)	Subba Rao, In re ...	185	753	699	Soundararajan v. Khaka Mahmed Ismail Saheb ...	186	118
511 (2)	Krishnan v. Ramanatha Iyer ...	189	727	701	Veeranna Sha v. Official Receiver of Secunderabad ...	190	172
515 (1)	Natesa Ayyar v. Venkalakshmi Ammal ...	189	704	705	Doraikannu Ammal v. Ramaswami Mudaliar ...	186	90
515 (2)	Public Prosecutor v. N. S. Sharma ...	184	51	708	Nitya Nand v. Lala Karam Chand ...	181	471
518	Veerana Kone, In re ...	184	99	719	Thirugnnavalli Ammal v. Venugopala Pillai ...	186	468
520	T. Sivasankara Mudaliar v. Radhabai Ammal ...	185	617	721	Ramaachandra Deo v. Balaji ...	190	42
523	Ramaswami Chettiar, In re ...	186	722	729	Ammannamma v. Venkata Kodanda Rao ...	190	190
529	Ramayya Goundan v. Kolanda Goundan ...	189	259	734	Khaji Muhammad Hussain Sahib v. Mahmood Jamait ...	189	860
534	Edward H. M. Bower v. Hesterlow ...	189	96	743	Chinna Papiah, In re ...	186	484
538	Thyagarajan Chettiar v. Government of Madras ...	186	440	746	Krushnacharana v. Gourochandro ...	189	795
541	Nandesam v. Balakrishnamma ...	189	484	754	Abdul Hameed v. Mohammad Yoonus ...	187	414
548	Jagannatha Ayyar, In re ...	185	257	759	Anantaraman v. Official Liquidators Travancore National & Quilon Bank Ltd. ...	187	531
550	Dinshaw Dadabhai v. Mohamad Mohamood ...	189	505	763	Public Prosecutor v. Amirtham Sarvai ...	186	103
557	Mohideen Pichai Rowther v. Emperor ...	186	525	764	Venkatratnam v. Chennayya ...	187	753
562	Kunhi Kannan v. Devaki ...	189	167	766	Corporation of Calcutta v. Moti Chand Choudhary ...	179	324
566	Sundaram, In re ...	185	417	769	Kanniah Maistry, In re ...	185	355
568	Govinda Chettiar v. Varadappa Chettiar ...	188	263	771	Krishnan Chettiar v. Devarayan Chettiar ...	188	203
571	Alagiri Chetty v. Muthuswami Chetty ...	187	376	782	Lakshmana Rao v. Emperor ...	186	472
576	Namasivaya Mudaliar v. Srinivasa Iyengar ...	189	732	784	Nainamuthu v. Emperor ...	186	479
581	Coimbatore Venkatarama Vilas Co., Ltd. v. Official Receiver, Coimbatore ...	186	123	787	Sreeramulu v. Emperor ...	187	632
587	Anandam v. Muthukumarawami Mudali ...	186	458	790	Public Prosecutor v. Narayana Ayyar ...	186	785
590	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Sreeramulu Chetty ...	185	455	791	Latchmakka v. Emperor ...	183	332
593	Muthu Goundan, In re ...	186	898	793	G. R. Naidu v. Venkataswami Naidu ...	189	822
594	Byre Gowdu v. Muniammal ...	187	745	796 (1)	Venkanna v. Emperor ...	189	816
597	Ahmad Bux Alla Jovaya v. Fazal Karim ...	190	154	796 (2)	Muhammad Ibrahim v. Kamal Saheb ...	188	145
602	Kondayyarao v. v. Naganna ...	188	318	797	Kalliana Thevan v. Muthuswami Goundan ...	189	775
605	Narayanan Chetti v. Panchanathan Chettiar ...	187	352	799	Perianna Pillai, In re ...	187	92
606	Pitchamma v. Venkataramayya ...	186	714	800	Thegnammal v. Alamelu Ammal ...	187	82
611	Karuppanan Ambalam v. Sundara Raja Ayyar ...	190	161	802	Muthuswami Chettiar, In re ...	185	824
614	Venkataramayya, In re ...	187	103	813	Ramaswamy Chetty v. Rama-chandra Rao ...	188	617
618	Subbarayudu v. Lakshminarasamma ...	189	455	815	Mythili Ammal v. Janaki Ammal ...	189	722
632	Seetha Ramappa v. Ramappa ...	186	231	824	Ramasubbaraya v. Appalana-simharaju ...	188	700
634	Abdul Khader Saheb v. Pachaiyappa Chetti ...	188	680

50 LAW WEEKLY, FROM JULY TO DECEMBER, 1939—concl'd.

833	Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Co., Ltd. v. Ranga Rao	190	164	896	Chennappa v. Onkarappa	185	749
837	Mandan Shetti v. Thimmi Avva	186	832	908	Gopal Rao v. Lakshminarasamma	181	388
839	Viswanathan Chettiar v. Official Receiver of Coimbatore	189	881	910	Venkatakrishna Naidu v. Narayanaswami Aiyar	180	396
844	Shiva Rao v. Shanmugasundaraswami	187	243	917	Veeraraghavaswami v. Mangamma	189	685
851	Venkatappadu v. Ramamurthi	186	862	918	Alli Sahib, In re	184	452
867	Natesa Pillai v. Venkatarama Ayyar	188	472	919	Muthuswami Pillai, In re	184	471(1)
872	Shanmugha Nadar v. Shanmughavel Nadar	190	24	920	Velu Naicken, In re	184	302
879	Rowthmall Neopani v. Nagar-mall	190	67	926	Monghi Bai v. Cooverji Umersey	182	1
886	Manickavasaka Thevar v. Chidambaram Pillai	189	829	933	Ramasubramanya Pattar v. Karimbil Pati	186	474
893	Ammanan v. Raja Reddi	188	171	938	Venkata Rayanim Varu v. Chinna Papanna	189	695
				944	Nayar Modern Bank v. Official Liquidators	189	824

(1939) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER.

1	Firm of Gokal Chand-Jagan Nath v. Firm Nand Ram Das-Atma Ram	178	425	113	Tuljaram Rao v. Sir James Taylor	181	451
4	Assankutti v. Mammad	186	302	117	Aranashi Goundan v. Palani Madari	184	134(2)
9	Veerammanni v. Chikka Royal	185	500	118	Yogambamma v. Emperor	181	569
11	Senthappa v. Eswarappa	186	449	119	Marudai Pillai v. Narayanaswami Pillai	181	557
13	Narasaraju v. Satyavatamma	182	715	121	Narasimha Rao v. Ayyanna Rao	184	654
15	Mahbub Singh v. Haji Abdul Aziz Khan	178	386	124	Public Prosecutor v. Natesa Pillai	184	370
18	S. N. Bannerjee v. Kuchwar Lime and Stone Co. Ltd.	178	490	125	Public Prosecutor v. Meenakshi	183	282
24	Mohammad Ismail v. Hanuman Parshad	178	476	126	Joseph v. Emperor	182	228
25	O. P. & Berar Motor Spirit & Lubricants Taxation Act, 1938, In re	180	161	127	Komari Pothuraju Setty v. Krishnapatnam Padda Polish	180	473
67	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniyappa Chettiar	180	246	129	Perumal Chettiar v. Kondal Chetty	183	494
69	Ponnuswamy Chettiar v. Obul Reddy	181	67	130	Jogayya v. Rapanayya	185	154
70	Nagabhushanam v. Anandayya	183	503	131	Ayyappa Naicker v. Kasiperumal Naykar	180	267
73	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Seshavataaram	184	447	134	Venkatakrishna Naidu v. Narayanaswami Ayyar	180	396
76	Bala Chengiah v. Subbayya	183	871	138	Khader Mohideen Sahib v. Nagu Bai	186	279
78	Premila Devi v. Peoples Bank of Northern India	178	659	142	Attorney General of Alberta v. Attorney General of Canada	180	807
85	Martin Cashin v. Peter J. Cashin	182	419	148	Kamalaranjan Roy v. Secretary of State	178	472
93	Lala Nand Kishore v. Azmat Ulla	178	406	152	Suryanarayanacharyulu v. Narasimhaswamy	180	640
95	Subbanagalu Naidu v. Balanagamayya Chettiar	180	340	154	Marudamuthu Mudaliar v. Venkatrama Ayyar	184	60
98	Narayana Swami Naidu v. Lakshmi Narasimha Rao	183	587	155	Muthukaruppa Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	181	37
102	Chidambaram Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	180	133	157	Muthappa Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	180	825
103	Narayanan Chettiar of Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras	179	652	159	Mahalakshmi v. Somaraju	189	17
104	Hejmady Co-operative Society v. Veeraiya Naik	181	425	164	Ganga Raju v. Ramayya	183	596
106	Perianna Goundan v. Sellappa Goundan	182	879	165	Venkata Seshayya v. District Board, East Godavari	184	465
107	Thimmiah v. Official Receiver of Bellary	183	693	168	Balarami Reddi v. Official Receiver, Nellore	183	441
110	Perumal Naicken v. Kondamma Naicken	185	247	170	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar	189	98
112	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Ramaswami Chettiar	180	370	180	Nataraja Pillai v. Subbaroya Chettiar	185	677
				185	Narayana Swami v. King-Emperor	180	1

(1939) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—contd.

192(1)	Shanmugasundaram Pillai v. Manicka Mudaliar ...	181	89	300	Madhavi Ammal v. Subramanian Nambudripad ...	188	852
192(2)	Mada Nagaratnam v. Puvvada Seshayya ...	180	994	302	Varadarajam Pillai v. Krishna-murthi Pillai ...	189	390
200	Maduranayakam Pillai v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	185	478	303	Kamakshi Ayyar v. Namberumal Ayyangar ...	185	459
205	Maniithunainatha Desikar v. Gopala Chettiar ...	186	153	305	Sooranna v. Venkanna ...	189	348
209	Muhammad Shamsudin Ravuthar & Bros v. Shaw Wallace & Co. ...	184	153	309	Gopalaswami Odayar v. Swaminatha Odayar ...	184	861
214	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Muthukaruppan Chettiar ...	181	525	311	Pattumadammal v. Nanjappa ...	184	824
216	Dhanamma v. Coromandel Company Limited ...	185	16	313	Perumal Reddiar v. Emperor ...	183	571
217	Raja Ajai Verma v. Vijai Kumari ...	179	620	315	Jambulingam Pillai v. Ponnu-swami Pillai ...	182	327
223	Prahladrai Chooreewalla v. Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta ...	179	321	316	Subbanna v. Emperor ...	183	564
226	Ghinna Venkatappa Nayanim v. Sundarajulu Naidu ...	185	427	318	Govindaraja Pillai v. Vanchinatham Pillai ...	184	485
228	Lakshmikutty Kettilamma v. Vishnu Nabisan ...	185	173	319	Basappa v. Emperor ...	184	353
233	Chung Chi Cheung v. The King ...	180	20	320	Ganapathi Asari v. Kuppusewamy Asari ...	183	179(1)
239	Ambi Ayyar v. Emperor ...	181	51	321	Lakshammamma v. Subramanyam ...	184	812
240	Karuppiah Thevan v. Krishna Pillai ...	181	254	323	Ramamurti v. Subbarau ...	185	440(2)
241	Michael Burns v. Mabel Burns ...	181	993	324	Synemodelux Ltd. v. Vannamuthu Pillai ...	185	712
243	Raju Gupta v. Emperor ...	189	25	325	Rajah of Bobbili v. Venkata Suryanarayana ...	186	255
244	Krishna Ayyar v. Emperor ...	185	3	326	Venkateswara Rao v. Ammayya ...	186	200
245	Venkatathnam v. Sambesiva Rao ...	188	815	329	Diraviyam Pillai v. Veeranan Ambalam ...	185	562
249	Radharani Dassya v. Brindarani ...	179	615	338	Kava v. Emperor ...	183	783
256	Skinner v. Arunachalam Pandaram ...	180	651	339	Abdul Sattar Sahib v. Emperor ...	183	257
257	Athikesavalu Naidu v. Ekambaram Mudaliar ...	186	150	340	Emperor v. Veerappa Mooppin ...	183	240
259	Munusami Chetti v. Kuppusemi Chetti ...	186	208	341	Sethalavadan v. Emperor ...	183	561
262	Venkataraman v. Janaki ...	188	826	343	Duraiswami Bajju v. Emperor ...	182	415
263	Subbaya v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras ...	181	514	344	Nagaratnam Pillai v. Ramaswami Iyer ...	180	674
268	Beharani v. Raghubehara ...	184	86	346	Khatoun Bi Bi v. Abdul Wahab Sahib ...	184	778
270	Sundaramma v. Venkatachelayya ...	189	335	353	Balanaggayya Chetti v. Varadarajulu Chetti ...	184	832
273	Narayana Mudali v. Kalathi Mudali ...	185	239	354	Cherutty v. Nangamparambil Raru ...	185	26
275	Ohendikamba v. Viswanathamayya ...	189	325	356	Pashupati Bharti v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	180	547
279	Mottai Meera v. Abdul Kadir Rowther ...	186	214	359	Lakshpat Ram v. Behari Lal Misir ...	180	550
284	Krishnaswami Mudaliar v. Vijayaraghava Pillai ...	189	158	360	Palaniappa Chettiar v. Ramannathan Chettiar ...	189	31
288	Chidambaram Chettiar v. Ramaswami Chettiar ...	184	83	367	Arunachalam Chettiar v. Subarattnam Chettiar ...	185	159
290	Govardhandas Jamnadas v. Friedmans Diamond Trading Co. Ltd. ...	188	878	370	Panchayat Board, Thiruvorthiyur v. Western India Matches Co. ...	182	474
295	Vythilingam Pillai v. Pankajathammal ...	185	850	377	Varadarajam Chetty v. Kanakiah ...	186	7
297	Govindasami Chetti, In re ...	184	166	378	Official Receiver, West Tanjore v. Samudravijian ...	185	288
298	Hussain Batocha Sahib v. Secretary of State for India ...	186	343	380	Lakshminarayana Deo v. Imperial Bank of India, Guntur ...	183	896
				381	Koran v. Govindan Nambiar ...	184	672
				383	Satyanarayanamurthy v. Gangayya ...	189	54

(1939) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—contd.

385	Seetha v. Kelu Menon	188	571	473	Khaji Dodda Khaji Sahib v. Nanjappa	185	554
391	Govindan Nambudiri v. Soopiatath Amad	186	249	480	Venkatachela Chetty v. Natesa Chetty	188	857
392	Subbaramayya v. Iragam Reddi	184	108	481	Surayya v. Krishnamurthi	185	434
397	Subba Rao v. Calicut Co-operative Urban Bank Ltd.	185	230	483	Sivasankara Mulaliar v. Radhabai Ammal	185	647
401	Kannayya Reddi v. Muthu Reddi	185	62	488	Dharapuram Janopakara Nidhi Ltd. v. Lakshminarayana Chettiar	182	999
403	Venkayya v. Rattayya	184	12		Meenakshi Achi v. Ramaswami Chettiar	184	183
405	Seshiah v. Ramiah	184	843	493	Balakrishnan Nambiar v. Chatha	188	183
407	Kutumba Sastri v. Sundaramma	183	95	496	Hori Ram Singh v. Crown	181	317
409	Govinda Goundan v. Ayi Goundan	183	567	497	Gurusami Tevan v. Emperor	184	336
410	Pappa v. Emperor	183	112	513	Vira Reddy v. Emperor	184	460
411	Jaggu Naidu v. Emperor	183	581		Veerana Kone v. Emperor	184	99
412	Subbayya v. Venkata Narasayya	183	743	514	Kumaraswami Pillai v. Thiruvengadatha Ayyangar	186	379
413	Rangayya v. Emperor	183	603	519	Maharaja of Venkatagiri v. Raja Rajeswara Rao	189	123
414	Nataraja Goundan v. Emperor	183	602(1)	521	Pestonjee Bhicajee Firm v. Anderson	179	995
415	Venkata Narasimham v. Satyanarayana Rao	183	595	551	Margaret Lornie v. Abu Backer Sait	184	735
416	Seetharama Chettiar v. Emperor	183	740(1)	555	Veeran Kutti v. Koya Kutty	185	578
417	Veeranna v. Lakshmiopathi Somayajulu	186	470	563	Sithalinga Chetty v. Ardhanari Chetty	189	170
418	Aiyanaachariar v. Sadagopachariar	189	190	564	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Mathias	178	906
426	Municipal Council, Tanjore v. Sundaresan	185	412	567	Balusami v. Official Assignee of Madras	189	406
427	Krishna Iyer v. Subramania Iyer	180	855	573	Utagalum Perumal Sethurayar v. Subbulakshmi Nachiar	180	773
430	Subramania Iyer v. Venkatarama Iyer	185	326	576	Sadaiammal v. Angammal	184	516
433	Jalamanna v. Ramarao	183	508	582	Etti v. Secretary of State for India in Council	184	887
436	Natesa Padayachi v. Krishna Padayachi	184	641	585	Raja of Vizianagaram v. Sanyasiraju	185	42
437	Kesavalu Chetty v. Perumal Chettiar	189	316	598	Krishna Ayyar v. Subba Reddiar	189	200
441	Gopi Reddi v. Rami Reddi	183	865		Narayana Mudali v. Kalathi Mudali	188	801
442	Emberumanar Jeer Swamigal v. Board of Commissioners, for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras	185	77	593	Ramanathan Chettiar v. Palaniappa Chettiar	188	892
443	Venkatarayulu Naidu v. Venkatta Ratamma	189	320	597	Ankamma v. Venkata Subbayya	182	833
445	Annamalai Chettiar v. Lakshmanan Chettiar	189	386	601	Ram Kinkar Banerjee v. Satya Charan Srimani	179	328
447	Madhava Sahu v. Satrugana Sahu	186	606	607	Guruswami Naicker v. Mounaguruswami Naicker	187	731
451	Ramakrishnayya v. Sreeramulu	188	691	608	Manickavachakam Chettiar v. Official Receiver, Negapatam	186	120
458	Manavedan v. Veerayian Unni	189	66	609	Mekraj Alli Sahib v. Emperor	184	452
464	Ramaswami v. Rudrappa	187	338		Hajee Mahomed Kadir Sheriff v. Rahimatullah	188	327
465	Seetha Rami Reddi v. Emperor	184	327	610	Emperor v. Velu Naicken	184	302
468	Public Prosecutor v. N. S. Sharma	184	51	611	Muthusamy Pillai v. Emperor	184	471(1)
469	Subramania Pillai v. Pon-niah	183	560	615	Hori Ram Singh v. Crown	181	947
470	Ohittiboyina v. Danduboyina Narappa	184	280	616	Thayarammal v. Junus Chettiar	186	460
471	Appaji Goundan v. Emperor	184	188	617	Duraiswamy Reddiar v. Secretary of State for India in Council	189	280
472	Vyapuri Kavandan v. Emperor	184	613	618	Kalandar Rowther v. Sivapunyam Chettiar	188	813
473	Annamalai Chetty v. Muthuswami Maniagaran	189	364	622

(1939) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—contd.

624	Krishnamachari v. Chengalva- raya Naidu	189	185	775	Hindu Religious Endowments, Board v. Trustee of Sri Virupa- kataswami	185	544
627	United Motor Finance Co. v. Flat Motors Eastern India Agency	189	294	778	Vellaya Konar v. Ramaswami Konar	189	301
633	Muthuvasu Chettiar v. Velumu- ruga Nadar	188	283	80	Lakshmiddevamma v. Veera Reddi	188	696
639	Basappa v. Rudrappa	180	126(2)	784	Zamindar of Kirlampudi v. Sur- yaprakasarao Garu	189	245
640	Sitharathnamma v. Seshamma	185	30	787	Sandaresa Ayyar v. Sarvajana Sowkiabivirthi Nidhi	189	429
643	Ponnuman Dikshtar v. Board of Commissioner Hindu Religious Endowment, Madras	188	889	790	Kameswaramma v. Tham- manna	187	602
646	Secretary of State for India v. Arunachala Mudaliar	189	223	792	Ramaswami Goundan v. Laksh- mana Reddi	186	437
668	Balarama Reddi v. Viswana- than	189	309	794	Rathnammal v. Secretary of State for India	189	490
671	Lachhmeshwar Sahai v. Moti Rani Kunwar	181	359	798	Rajaratna Chettiar v. Shari Shaick Mahboob	190	101
674	Shyamakant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh	182	161	803	Krishna Mudaliar v. Marimuthu Mudaliar	189	495
686	Asiatic Government Security Life Assurance Co. v. New Asiatic Assurance Co.	184	537	809	Kunhilakshmi Amma v. Krishna Menon	186	599
692	Oudh Commercial Bank v. Bind Bansi Kuer	180	378	810	Seethayamma v. Vullipalam	188	534
698	Sreeramulu Chetty v. Commis- sioner of Income-tax, Madras	184	268	812	Trichinopoly Varthaga Sangam v. Shanmugasundaram	184	387
700	Ramaswami Chettiar v. May- yappan Servai	188	187	816	Pedda Jiyangarlu v. Venkata- charlu	188	41
702	Venkatasubbu Mudaliar v. Nara- yanaswami Chetty	184	378	817	Seeni Madar Sahib v. Abdul Rahman Sahib	186	348
708	Narayana Gajapathiraja v. Reve- nue Divisional Officer, Vizaga- patam	181	230	818	Veeresalingam v. Subbarayudu	186	316
720	Karuppanna Nadar v. Karuppa Nadar	189	289	819	Chairman Municipal Council v. Narayana Gajapathiraja	189	50
725	Satyanarayanamurthi v. Go- palan	186	57	821	Madura Municipality v. Alagi- risami Naidu	187	780
727	Mahanth Singh v. U Ba Yi	181	1	827	Saminatha Ayyar v. Vagesan	185	37
731	Ponnambalam Chetti v. Raman- chetti	188	895	831	Jeeva Ammal v. Ranganatha Mudaliar	186	444
733	Subramania Chettiar v. Sarprasa- dam	187	467	832	Sankara Varma Raja v. Rama Varma Raja	185	628
734	Venkatayya v. Official Receiver, Anantapur	186	634	834	Sinnachami Chettiar v. Rama- sami Chettiar	188	48
735(1)	Gooru Narayana v. Vaikuntam Chinna Lakshmayya	185	421	835	Zamindar of Udayarpalam v. Sudi Udayan	186	350
736(2)	Hanumanthappa v. Goolappa	179	894	848	Krishnamurthy v. Satya- narayana	188	751
737(1)	Balakrishna Reddiar v. Jalalud- din Sahib	184	451(1)	857	Padalinga Mudaliar v. Arumugha Mudaliar	189	305
737(2)	Ranganatham Chetty v. Corpora- tion of Madras	184	490	860	Bapanna v. Jaggiiah	188	710
739(1)	Doraswami Naidu v. Em- peror	184	609(1)	866	Ramappa v. Thirumalappa	188	851
739(2)	Paidi Subbaya v. Emperor	185	440(1)	867	Surendra Bahadur Singh v. Behari Singh	181	216
740	Rama Krishna v. Sest- hamma	186	224	873	Emperor v. Taduturu Poli- gadu	185	829
741	Subbiah v. Ramacharu	184	112	876	Public Prosecutor v. Appala- narasayya	187	118
742	Subba Rao v. Kamaraju	183	708	877	Morranna v. Emperor	188	311
743	Thiagarajan v. Emperor	183	762	879	Mohideen Pichai Rowther v. Emperor	186	525
744	Matthen v. District Magistrate, Thivandrum	182	551	883	Kanakasabai Pillai v. Em- peror	186	704
750	United Provinces v. Governor- General-in Council	180	883	888(1)	Banalamudu Parandhamayya v. Nagabhushanam	183	268
766	Ramanujachariar, In re	184	606	888(2)	Venkatachalam Chettiar v. Em- peror	189	811
769	Chidambaram Chettiar v. Muru- gesam Pillai	189	411	889	Ramakrishna v. Narasimha Kamath	187	426
774	Vira Raghavulu Naidu v. Chinna Rajalingam	186	337	890	Viyathan Sreedevi v. Aydroos Kpurikkal	188	822

(193) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—contd.

892	Syed Ibrahim Sahib v. Gurulinga Ayyar	188 727	1046(2)	Vasanth Rao Ananda Rao v. Gopal Rao Sethu Rao	188 626
894	Bhagwati v. Ram Kali	181 211	1066	Nayar Modern Bank v. Official Liquidators Travancore National & Quilon Bank	189 824
900	Kunhibi v. Kalliani Amma	189 476		Secretary All India Spinners Association v. Official Liquidators Travancore National & Quilon Bank	186 773
903	Ramayya v. Satyenarayana Jagapathi Raju	188 881	1071	New Field & Co. v. Official Liquidators Travancore National & Quilon Bank	189 801
907	Subbayya v. Thippa Reddi	188 200		Govinda Chettiar v. Varadappa Chettyar	188 263
910	Swaminathar Odayar v. Srinivasa Iyer	186 424		Abdul Khadir Sahib v. Pachiyappa Chetti	188 620
911	Chockalingam Chettiar v. Ohinnayya Servai	189 241	1072	Palanisami Goundar v. Kaliappa Goundar	189 887
917	Lakshminarasimhamurti v. Venkata Jogisomayajulu	187 861	1080	Krishnan v. Ramanatha Ayyar	189 727
918	Lakshmadu v. Ramudu	187 816		Kondayyarao v. Naganna	188 318
947	Natesa Ayyar v. Venkalakshmi Ammal	189 704	1082	Ramayya Goundan v. Kolanda Goundan	189 259
948	Vanjiappa Goundan v. Annamalai Chettiar	188 379	1084	Venkataramana Vilas Co. v. Official Receiver, Coimbatore	186 125
950	Mahommad Sheriff Sahib v. Hussain Ghouse	188 416	1087	Anantaraman v. Official Liquidators Travancore National & Quilon Bank	187 531
951	Venkateswara Rao v. Subrahmanyam	186 455	1090	Sundararajan v. Mahomed Ismail Sahib	186 118
952	Subbarayudu v. Lakshminarasamma	189 435	1092	Perumal Moopan v. Subramania Mudaliar	185 768
961	Sitaramayya v. Venkanna	187 30	1094	Bhupendra Mohan Roy v. Purna Sashi Debi	183 199
962	Sivaswami Chettiar v. Marudaiya Goundan	186 632	1096	Nandesam Chowdari v. Balakrishnama Chowdari	189 484
963	Judgal Kishore Narain Singh v. Charoo Chandra Sur	181 341	1115(1)	J. S. Dhass v. Emperor	187 33
967	Trustees of Tribune Press v. Commissioner of Income-tax	182 882	1115(2)	Public Prosecutor v. Mooki	185 419
972	District Board, West Tanjore v. Ponnuswami Pallavarayar	188 640	1116	Public Prosecutor v. Narayana Ayyar	186 785
975	Seetha Ramappa v. Ramappa	186 231	1118	Addagalla Venkanna v. Emperor	189 816
984	Kunhi Kannan v. Devaki	189 167	1121	Sreeramulu v. Emperor	187 632
986	Kannappa Mudali v. Varadachariar	188 204	1125	Latchmakka v. Emperor	188 332
988	Jhorama v. Latchanna Dora	187 334	1127	Lakshmana Rao v. Emperor	186 472
990	Ramaswami Chettiar, In re	186 722	1132	Nainamuthu v. Emperor	186 479
991	Dawson's Bank Ltd. v. Maung Mya Thwin	182 892	1124	Papiiah v. Emperor	186 484
994	Sundarasivudu v. Adinarayana Sastri	189 303	1136	Kunhi Raman Kitavu v. Kunhi Kanaran	185 755
996	Moidin Kutti v. Subramanya Ayyar	187 591	1137	Sri Veerabhadraswami v. Maya Kone	189 749
998	Corporation of Calcutta v. Moti Chand Choudhury	179 324	1145	Ohinnappayyan v. Narayana Patter	187 852
1000	Subbiah Tevar v. Emperor	184 593	1148	Namasivaya Mudaliar v. Srinivasa Ayyangar	189 732
1003	Kanniah Maistry v. Emperor	185 385	1150	Dinshaw Dadabhai Italia v. Mohammad Mohamood	189 505
1004	Public Prosecutor v. Amirtham Servai	186 103	1154	Rukmani Ammal v. Subramania Sastrigal	190 19
1005	Tubal Uraih, Butler v. The King	185 461	1160(2)	Abdul Hameed v. Mohammed Yoonus	187 414
1012	Subba Rao v. Emperor	185 753	1163	Doraikannu Ammal v. Ramaswami Mudaliar	186 90
1013	Thyagaraja Chettiar v. Secretary to Government of Madras	186 440	1165	Thirugnanavalli Ammal v. Venugopala	186 468
1015	Edward H. M. Bower v. Hesterlow	189 96	1166	Hari Sankar Paul v. Kedar Nath Sahu	181 935
1017	Pitchamma v. Venkataramayya	186 714	1170	Byre Gowdu v. Muniammal	187 745
1037	Sundaram, In re	185 417	1171	Alla Jovaya v. Fazal Karim	190 154
1038	Jagannatha Ayyar, In re	185 257
1039	Venkataramanayya v. Emperor	187 103
1041	Nambar v. Chandukutty	186 323
1042	R. V. & Co. v. Hindu Religious Endowments Board	186 868
1044	Anandam v. Muthukumaraewami Mudali	186 458
1046(1)	Narayanan Chetti v. Panchanathan Chettiar	187 352

(1939) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FROM JANUARY TO DECEMBER—concl'd.

1174	Nayar Modern Bank v. Official Liquidators Travancore National & Quilon Bank ...	188	583	1213	King-Emperor v. Krishnan ...	190	123
1177	Surendar Singh v. Ghulam Mohammad ...	181	308	1223	Perianna Pillai v. Emperor ...	187	92
1179	Karuppanna Ambalam v. Sundara Raja Ayyar ...	190	161	1224(1)	Appanna v. Emperor ...	188	195
1181	Ammanamma v. Kodanda Rao Panthulu ...	190	190	1224(2)	Delhi Bather v. Corporation of Madras ...	188	150
1185	Jiffiri Attakoya Thangal v. Ayidross Kunhikoya ...	188	13	1225	Alagiri Chetty v. Muthusami Chetty ...	187	376
1183	Narayanaraju v. Suryanarayudu ...	184	1	1237	Mythili Ammal v. Janaki Ammal ...	189	722
1193	Mani Iyer v. Official Liquidators Travancore National Bank Subsidiary Co. ...	186	297	1243	Kaliana Thevan v. Muthuswami Goundan ...	189	775
1195	Ammanamma v. Raja Reddi ...	188	171	1244	Venkatratnam v. Chennayya ...	187	758
1196	Ramaswamy Chetty v. Ramchandra Rao ...	188	617	1245	Krishan Chettiar v. Devarayan Chettiar ...	188	208
1197	Venkata Rayanim Varu v. Ohiona Bapanna ...	189	695	1248	Crown Prosecutor v. Sellamuthu ...	187	122
1198	Mandan Shetti v. Thimmi Ayva ...	186	832	1250	Sanyasiraju v. Emperor ...	189	779
1199	Ram Narain Sahu v. Makha ...	181	929	1251	Shanbagaperumal Naicker v. Emperor ...	186	601
1205	Muhammad Ibrahim v. Kamal Saheb ...	188	145	1252	Satyanarayanamurthy v. Manikyala Rao ...	187	126
1206	G. R. Naidu v. Venkataswami Naidu ...	189	822	1254	Suryanarayanamurti v. Emperor ...	189	827
1207	Veeraraghaswami v. Mangamma ...	189	685	1255	Sundarammal v. Palaniandi Mudali ...	188	32
1209	Muthuswami Chettiar v. Emperor ...	185	824	1256	Venkatratnam v. Ramasastrulu ...	190	366
				1259	Muthu Goundar v. Emperor ...	186	896
				1260	Veeraswami v. Emperor ...	187	120

NOTES:—Page of (1939) M. W. N. which do not appear in the above Comparative Table belong to cases which are either not sanctioned by the High Court or considered not reportable—[Ed.]

Alphabetical List of Cases reported in Volume 135 of Indian Cases (1940) with references to the Volumes and Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

Names of cases reported.	Parallel references.	Page.
A. James v. Achaibar Singh ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 119; 6 B R 150; 21 P L T 416; 12 R P 346 ...	297
A. Ranganatham Ohetti v. M. Ethirajulu Nayudu ..	A I R 1940 P O 17; 6 B R 268; 12 R P O 107; (1940) 1 M L J 24; 51 L W 96; 1940 O L R 53; (1940) M W N 107; 70 O L J 507; I L R (1940) Mad. 172; (1940) Kar. (P O) 43 Sup.; 67 I A 25 P C	571
A. Subramania Iyer v. K. S. Venkatarama Iyer ..	A I R 1939 Mad. 599; 49 L W 416; I L R (1939) Mad. 54; (1939) 1 M L J 536; (1939) M W N 430; 12 R M 530	326
A. Veeran Kutti v. P. P. Koya Kutti ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 735; 49 L W 707; (1939) M W N 563; (1939) 2 M L J 86; I L R (1939) Mad. 828; 12 R M 561	578
Abdul Latif v. Abdul Gani Serang ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 730; 43 O W N 1221; 12 R O 358; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 133	393
Abdul Latif v. Habibulla ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 351; 69 O L J 28; 12 R O 401	714
Abdul Sattar v. Dinaipur Trading and Bakning Co., Ltd. ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 490; 69 O L J 229; 42 O W N 1153; 12 R O 343	145
Ah Li v. U San Baw ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 446; 1939 Rang. 581; 12 R Rang. 232	802
Ah Phut v. The King ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 402; 1940 Rang. 104; 41 Or. L J 129; 12 R Rang. 185	205
Ahmad Hussain v. Amir Bano ...	A I R 1940 All. 63; 12 R A 356	837
Ahmed Ibrahim Singapori v. Collector of Surat ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 447; I L R (1939) Bom. 611; 41 Bom. L R 934; 12 R B 278	870
Aisha Bibi v. Begum Bibi ...	A I R 1939 Sind 263; (1939) Kar. 475; 12 R S 143	87
Ajam Ibram Modan v. Bai Hava Bibi ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 485; I L R (1939) Bom. 472; 41 Bom. L R 892; 12 R B 266	813
Akbar Hussain Khan v. Emperor ...	A I R 1940 All. 7; (1939) A L J 962; 41 Or. L J 227; 12 R A 371; I L R (1939) All. 975	700
Akella Surayya v. Thummalapalli Krishna-murthi ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 583; (1939) M W N 481; 12 R M 510	431
Akoojee Jadwet and Co. v. A. V. and Son ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 423; 12 R Rang. 219	705
Amar Nath Khosla v. M. C Mohan ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 433; 41 P L R 879; 12 R L 265	65
Ambica Prosad Sanyal v. Messrs. Soorajmull Naga-rmull Firm ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 620; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 291; 43 O W N 999; 12 R O 378	523
Ambika Prasad v. Maqbulunnissa ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 207; 1940 O W N 129; 1940 R D 66; 1940 O L R 39; 12 R O 255	728
Ambika Thakur v. Emperor ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 611; 18 Pat. 544; 6 B R 203; 41 Or. L J 191; 12 R P 389; 21 P L T 45	529
Anand Behari Lal Khandelwal v. Deputy Com-missioner, Bara Banki ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 107; 1939 O W N 1145; 12 R O 212; 1939 O L R 723 (2); 1939 R D 635	290
Anandi Prasad v. Dulhin Kishori Kuer ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 251; 6 B R 224; 12 R P 401	626
Angelo v. Kandan Manjhi ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 316; 6 B R 241; 41 Or. L J 221; 12 R P 440	738
Arunachalam Chettyar v. Sabaratnam Chettiar..	A I R 1939 Mad. 572; (1939) M W N 367; 49 L W 515; (1939) 1 M L J 839; I L R (1939) Mad. 585; 12 R M 520	159
Asian Assurance Co., Ltd. v. Asa Ram ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 212; 1940 O W N 149; 1940 O L R 62; 12 R O 266	793
Ayancheri Kovilakath Sanakra Varma Raja v. Ayancheri Kovilakath Oheria Rama Varma Raja ..	A I R 1939 Mad. 902; (1939) M W N 832; 50 L W 375; (1939) 2 M L J 506; 12 R M 566	628

B. L. Chouda v. B. K. Rai	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 274; 1939 N L J 421; 12 R N 141	210
Babu v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 241; 1940 O L R 43; 41 Cr. L J 228; 1940 O W N 118; 12 R O 278	745
Babu Govind Das v. Indrawati	...	A I R 1940 All. 38; (1939) A L J 919; 12 R A 359; I L R (1940) All 11	854
Baburali Sardar v. Kala Chand Bepari	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 728; I L R (1939) 1 Cal. 567; 41 Cr. L J 125; 12 R O 347 (2)	177
Bachai v. Hayat Mohammad	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 119; 1939 O W N 1118; 12 R O 219; 1939 O L R 728; 15 Luck 265	337
Bachan Lal v. Gobardhan	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 118; 1940 R D 13; 1939 O L R 749; 1940 O W N 13; 12 R O 227; 15 Luck. 288	373 (1)
Bai Hakimbu v. Dayabhai Rugnath	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 508; 41 Bom. L R 1104; 12 R B 258	655
Baker Ali v. Amir Ali Meah	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 396; 12 R Rang. 216	641
Baldev Singh v. Sher Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 556; 41 P L R 524; 12 R L 306	609
Bansidhar v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 All. 18; (1939) A L J 671; 41 Cr. L J 220; 12 R A 368; I L R (1939) All 865	689
Banwari Lal v. Hussaini	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 455; 41 P L R 457; 12 R L 326	858
Baptist De Souza v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 465; 41 Bom. L R 974; 41 Cr. L J 127; 12 R B 229	203
Barq Raza v. Akbari	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 152; 1940 O L R 3; 12 R O 229	441
Basant Kaur v. Ram Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 544; 41 P L R 657; 12 R L 279	343
Basappa Chanbasappa Chekki v. Hanmappa Ramappa Manaur	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 492; 41 Bom. L R 943; 12 R B 235	225
Behari Lal Sud v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 529; 41 P L R 652; 41 Cr. L J 204; 12 R L 313	588
Benares Bank Ltd., Benares, In the matter of	...	A I R 1939 All. 726; (1939) A L J 1009; 12 R A 317 (2); I L R (1939) All. 938	398
Bepin Chandra Gorain v. Hem Chandra Mukherjee	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 709; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 63; 43 O W N 692; 12 R O 368	424
Bhagwan Das v. Muhammad Nawaz Shah	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 349; I L R (1939) Lah. 408; 41 P L R 765; 12 R L 295	489
Bhagwan Din v. Gir Har Saroop	...	A I R 1940 P O 7; 1939 O W N 1078; 6 B R 179; 12 R P O 89; 1939 O L R 729; (1940) 1 M L J 1; 51 L W 4; (1940) M W N 3; 42 Bom. L R 190; 44 C W N 294; 71 O L J 199; 15 Luck. 1; (1940) Kar. (F O, 25 Sup.; 67 I A 1; 42 P L R 457 P C	305
Bhairo Dutt Bhandari, an Advocate, Ranikhet, In the matter of	...	A I R 1940 All. 1; (1939) A L J 957; 41 Cr. L J 211; I L R (1940) All. 60; 12 R A 367 S B	611
Bhairo Kumar v. Markande Gir	...	A I R 1939 All. 679; (1939) A L J 820; 1939 R D 444; 12 R A 347; I L R (1939) All 822	767
Bhawani Shankar v. Mohammad Hasan	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 182; 1940 O W N 167; 1940 O L R 79; 12 R O 269	895
Bhudeo Prasad v. Sri Nath	...	A I R 1939 All 657; 12 R A 343	660
Bibhabati Devi v. Kumar Ramendra Narayan Roy	...	A I R 1939 Cal 672; I L R (1939) 1 Cal. 399; 43 O W N 333; 12 R O 354; 41 Cr. L J 148	286
Bishan Lal v. Banwari Lal	...	A I R 1939 All. 713; (1939) A L J 943; 12 R A 327	487
Bishun Singh v. Palakdhari Singh	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 592; 6 B R 109; 12 R P 304	129
Board of Commissioners for H. R. E., Madras v. Trustee of Sri Virupakshaswami Swami	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 801; (1939) M W N 775; (1939) 2 M L J 325; 12 R M 551	544
Boomiah v. R. M. N. R. M. Chettyar Firm	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 406; 1939 Rang. 508; 12 R Rang. 205	552
Brij Raj Kumari v. Subh Karan Das	...	A I R 1940 F O 5; 6 B R 333; (1939) Kar. (F O) 190; 1940 O L R 97; 71 O L J 86; 12 R F O 21 F C	804
Bulak Ram v. Ganga Bishun Chaudhuri	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 133; 6 B R 104; 12 R P 301	123
Buxar Central Co-operative Bank, Ltd. v. Akhouri Bindhyachal Prasad Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 261; 6 B R 222; 12 R P 387; 21 P L T 173	608
C. Fleming v. Official Receiver, Ferozepore District	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 183; I L R (1939) Lah. 499; 41 P L R 78; 12 R L 801	571

O. Kanniah Maistry, In re	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 976; (1939) M W N 1023; (1939) 2 M L J 618; 50 L W 769; 41 Cr. L J 181; 12 R M 565	385
C. N. Maduranayakam Pillai v. Secretary of State	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 386; 49 L W 151; (1939) M W N 200; I L R (1939) Mad. 483; (1939) 1 M L J 176; 12 R M 546	476
O. S. Nataraja Pillai v. C. S. Subbaroya Chettyar	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 693; (1939) M W N 180; 49 L W 287; (1939) 1 M L J 499; I L R (1939) Mad. 507; 12 R M 509	677
Central Talkies Circuit v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 448; I L R (1939) Bom. 574; 41 Bom. L R 919; 12 R B 257	556
Chandan Mull Indra Kumar v. Chiman Lal Girdhar Das Parekh	..	A I R 1940 P O 3; 1939 O W N 1086; 6 B R 189; 12 R P O 94; 1939 O L R 741; 21 P L T 1; 44 O W N 205; (1940) A L J 70; 42 P L R 81; 51 L W 135; 42 Bom. L R 367; (1940) Kar P O 15 Sup P C	219
Chandrika Prasad v. Bhagwan Das	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 93; 1939 O W N 1028; 1939 O W N 1028; 1939 O L R 692; 12 R O 180; 15 Luck 167	105
Chekka Dhanamma v. Caramandel Company Limited, Cocanada	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 401; (1939) 1 M L J 235; (1939) M W N 216; 49 L W 341; 12 R M 517	16
Cherutty v. Nagamparambil Ravu	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 513; (1939) M W N 354; 49 L W 491; (1939) 1 M L J 683; 12 R M 504	22
Chhotelal v. Gopaldas	..	A I R 1940 Nag. 78; 12 R M 168; I L R (1940) Nag. 130	624
Chiranji Lal v. Chheda Lal	...	A I R 1940 All. 8; (1939) A L J 1040; 12 R A 362	661
Chiranji Lal v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 734; (1939) A L J 990; 41 Cr. L J 141; 12 R A 312 (1)	256 (2)
Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa v. Jug Sah Muni Lal Sah	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 239; 6 B R 101; 12 R P 297	83
Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Sind and Aden v. Central Popular Assurance Co. Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Sind 364; (1940) Kar 130; 12 R S 172	683
Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Sind and Baluchistan v. Ahmedabad Advance Mills Ltd.	...	A I R 1940 P O 36; 51 L W 61; (1940) A L J 63; 6 B R 334; 12 R P O 124; 1940 O L R 98; (1940) 1 M L J 137; (1940) M W N 115; 44 O W N 379; 21 P L T 177; 42 Bom. L R 318; 71 O L J 156; (1940) Kar (P O) 97 Sup; 67 I A 115; I L R (1940) Bom. 332; 42 P L R 464 P C	821
Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency Sind and Baluchistan v. Karachi Chamber of Commerce	...	A I R 1939 Sind 308; (1940) Kar 140; 12 R S 157	323
Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Voodra Sreeramulu Chetty	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 903; 50 L W 590; (1939) 2 M L J 667; I L R (1939) Mad. 770; 12 R M 544 S B	465
Commissioner of Waqf, Bengal v. Narsinsingh Chandra Daw & Co.	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 648; I L R (1939) 1 Cal. 462; 43 O W N 415; 12 R O 366	438
Dalmia Cement Ltd. v. Narsindas Anandji Bechar	...	A I R 1939 Sind 256; 12 R S 139	57
Dattatraya Vishnu Dabholkar v. Sadashiv Shivram Nisal	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 513; 41 Bom. L R 882; 12 R B 271	839
Debendra Chandra De v. Jamini Kumar Dey	...	A I R 1939 Cal 744; 43 O W N 1209; 12 R C 402; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 153	704
Deputy Commissioner, Theri, Manager, Court of Wards, Mahewa Estate v. Kr. Khushwaqt Rai	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 180; 1940 O W N 22; 1940 O L R 31; 12 R O 253; 1940 R D 26; 15 Luck 298	731

Dharmon v. Ran Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 563; 41 P L R 620; 12 R L 323	828
Dhirendra Nath Das v. Indra Chandra Kisriwala	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 578; 12 R O 418	871
Digambar Ponda v. Satish Chandra Das	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 717; 43 O W N 1108; 12 R O 357	368
Diravyam Pillai v. Veeranan Ambalam	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 702; I L R (1939) Mad. 853; 49 L W 460; (1939) M W N 329; (1939) 2 M L J 822; 12 R M 551	562
District Magistrate, Kheri v. M. Hamid Ali Gardish	--	A I R 1940 Oudh 137; 1939 O W N 1132; 12 R O 242; 1939 O L R 734; 41 Cr L J 169; 15 Luck 268	342
District Magistrate, Sultanpur v. Mr. Ramjas Yadava	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 178; 1940 O L R 40; 41 Cr L J 233; 12 R O 280	754
Dolaram Aretmal v. Mulomal Radhakishindas	..	A I R 1939 Sind 272; 12 R S 181	835
Doman Sahu v. Gangu Nayek	..	A I R 1940 Pat. 300; 6 B R 229; 21 P L T 165; 12 R P 404	638
Dulhin v. Harihar Gir	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 607; 18 Pat. 395; 20 P L T 932; 6 B R 172 (2); 12 R P 364	372 (2)
Durga Das v. Hanifa Begam	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 104; 1939 O W N 1010; 1939 O L R 746; 12 R O 221	369
Durga Prasad v. Seetta Prasad Tewari	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 80; 1939 O W N 1107; 1939 O L R 727; 12 R O 209 (1); 15 Luck 287	301
Durga Singh v. Kesho Lal	..	A I R 1940 Pat 170; 18 Pat. 839; 6 B R 195; 12 R P 376	514
E. M. Joseph v. Official Assignee	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 401; 12 R Rang. 191	352
Emperor v. Abdullah Karim	...	A I R 1939 Sind 335; (1940) Kar 83; 41 Cr. L J 143; 12 R S 161	266
----- v. Jiwan Das Milawa Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 521; I L R (1939) Lah. 305; 12 R L 293; 41 Cr. L J 174	380
----- v. Jhina Soma	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 457; 41 Bom. L R 965; I L R (1939) Bom. 648; 41 Cr. L J 176; 12 R B 248	382
----- v. Kallappa Gurappa Kotagumshi	..	A I R 1939 Bom. 481; 41 Bom. L R 970; 12 R B 231; I L R (1939) Bom. 679; 41 Cr. L J 157	315
----- v. Karbalai Huseain	--	A I R 1940 Nag. 75; 1939 N L J 537; 12 R N 149; 41 Cr. L J 155; I L R (1940) Nag. 61; ...	318
----- v. Lavji Mandan	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 452; 41 Bom. L R 980; 41 Cr. L J 183; 12 R B 253	413 (2)
----- v. Miro Ghulam Hussain	..	A I R 1939 Sind 339; (1940) Kar 88; 41 Cr. L J 187; 12 R S 168	428
----- v. Mahanand Kherajmal	...	A I R 1939 Sind 341; (1940) Kar 123; 41 Cr. L J 190; 12 R S 189	543
----- v. Qudrat	...	A I R 1939 All. 708; (1939) A L J 980; 41 Cr. L J 142; 12 R A 310; I L R (1939) All. 871	271
----- v. Taduturu Poligadu	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 12; (1939) M W N 873; 50 L W 437; 41 Cr L J 242; 12 R M 612	829
Errol Mackay v. Oswald Forbes	...	A I R 1940 P C 16; 1940 O L R 47; 6 B R 265; 1940 O W N 32; 12 R P O 103; (1940) 1 M L J 64; 51 L W 93; (1940) A L J 60; (1940) M W N 114; 21 P L T 199; 42 P L R 117; 44 O W N 317; 42 Bom. L R 315; 70 O L J 566; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 286; (1940) Kar. (P U) 72 Sup; 67 I A 61 P C	549
Farok Ahmed Meah v. Lalit Mohan Choudhury	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 582; 69 O L J 335; 12 R O 329	94
Fatmabi, In re	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 65; 1939 N L J 563; 12 R N 154	372
Firm Harchandrai Anandram v. Firm Kedarnath Nirmal Chandra Guha	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 353; 6 B R 259; 12 R P 418	796
Firm Jethu Mal-Hari Parshad v. Telu	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 510; 41 P L R 596; 12 R L 283 (1)	233
Firm Ruldu Ram-Daulat Ram v. Basant Ram	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 356; 41 P L R 809; 12 R L 321	805
Ganesh Datta v. Model Town Society Ltd.	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 508; 12 R L 268	125
Ganesh Mahto v. Bhawan Mahto	..	A I R 1940 Pat. 151; 6 B R 96; 12 R P 293	73
Gangubai Pandurang Domba v. Pagubai Narayan Kore	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 403; 41 Bom. L R 815; 12 R B 220	81
Ghulam Hussain v. Secretary of State	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 510; 12 R L 270	137 (1)

Ghulam Mohammad v. Allah Rakhi	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 533; 41 P L R 605; 41 Cr. L J. 107; 13 R L 273 (1)	69
Giani Meher Singh v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 714; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 42; 43 O W N 639; 41 Cr. L J 138; 12 R O 349	249
Gobind Ram v. Kaju Ram	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 504; 42 P L R 232; 12 R L 310	652
Gokaran Singh v. Brij Bhukan Singh	...	A I R 1939 All. 717; (1939) A L J 928; 1939 R D 516; 12 R A 319; I L R (1939) All. 892	402
Golab Daye, In the goods of	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 718; 43 O W N 1193; 12 R O 358	341
Gomti v. Jugal Kishore	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 84; 1939 O W N 1134; 12 R O 204; 1939 O L R 715; 1939 R D 628; 15 Luck 270	280
Gooru Narayana v. Vaikuntam Ohinna Lakshmayya	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 927; (1939) M W N 735 (1); (1939) 2 M L J 399; 50 L W 654; 12 R M 543	421
Gopu China Jogayya v. Manapalli Bapanayya	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 374; 49 L W 23; (1939) 1 M L J 88; (1939) M W N 130; I L R (1939) Mad. 194; 12 R M 518	154
Government of Bengal v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 708; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 23; 43 O W N 789; 12 R O 381	546
Government of Burma v. Arunachallam	..	A I R 1939 Rang. 408; 12 R Rang 203	526
Govind Ram v. A. U. John	..	A I R 1939 All. 668; (1939) A L J 675; 1939 R D 372; 12 R A 353	791
Gul Zaman Mir Zaman v. Emperor	..	A I R 1939 Pesh. 47; 41 Cr. L J 132; 12 R Pesh 33	208
Gurappa Bhimanna Ohidguppi v. Madwalappa Ramchandrapa Dumane	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 392; 41 Bom. L R 832; 12 R B 239	429
Haliman Bibi v. Muhammad Tajamul Hussain	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 504; 6 B R 141; 12 R P 332	250
Hans Hotz v. Emperor	..	A I R 1940 All. 5; (1939) A L J 1032; 41 Cr. L J 230; 12 R A 370; I L R (1940) All. 67	709
Hans Raj Gupta v. Ram Lal Baldeo Parshad	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 498; 12 R L 317	711
Har Govind Prasad v. Mahraj Kunwar	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 234; 1940 O W N 123; 1940 O L R 50; 1940 R D 62; 12 R O 263	774
Har Narain Lal v. Udan Singh	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 83; 1939 O W N 1109; 1939 O L R 735 (1); 12 R O 220; 15 Luck 285 S B	347
Harballav Prasad Chowdhury v. Jagballav Prasad Chowdhury	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 7; 18 Pat. 777; 20 P L T 859; 6 B R 248; 12 R P 416	769
Hardwari Lal v. Ohhotey Lal	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 205; 1940 O L R 48; 1940 O W N 146; 12 R O 262	771
Hari Ram v. Munshi Singh	...	A I R 1939 All. 660; (1939) A L J 559; 12 R A 301	126
Harihar Dora v. Upendra Fati	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 497; 6 B R 218; 12 R P 384	602
Hassan Bi v. Nek Alam	...	A I R 1940 Lah. 9; 41 P L R 678; 12 R L 320	809
Himayatullah v. Parbhoo Dayal	...	12 R O 228; 1940 O L R 2; 1940 O W N 18 S B	401
Hussainbi v. Khairuddin Kutubuddin	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 487; 41 Bom. L R 875; 12 R B 265	675
Indu Proya Debi v. Durga Charan Mitra	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 40; 20 P L T 757; 18 Pat. 828; 6 B R 274; 12 R P 436	865
Ismail Piperdi v. Momin Bi Bi	...	A I R 1940 Rang. 12; 1939 Rang. 668; 12 R Rang. 234 F B	819
Iasar Husain v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 730; (1939) A L J 895; 12 R A 314; 41 Cr. L J 152; I L R (1940) All. 23	302
Jadunandan Das v. Maho	..	A I R 1939 Pat. 428; 6 B R 148; 12 R P 337	284
Jadunath Roy v. Parameswar Mullick	...	A I R 1940 P O 11; 21 P L T 237; 6 B R 251; 1940 O L R 26; 1940 O W N 96; 12 R P O 98; 44 O W N 233; (1940) 1 M L J 97; 42 Bom. L R 331; 70 O L J 546; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 255; (1940) Kar (P O) 33 Sup; 67 I A 11 P C	231
Jagan Nath v. Allah Dad	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 539; 41 P L R 631; 12 R L 273 (2)	317
Jagdish Jha v. Aman Khan	...	A I R 1940 F O 3; 6 B R 194; 12 R F O 16; 1940 O L R 1; 21 P L T 142; 71 O L J 55; 1939 F L J 7 F C	294
Jai Mangal Tewari v. Bindeshuri Singh	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 134; 1939 O W N 1005; 1940 O L R 36; 12 R O 257; 15 Luck 157	736

Jaimal Singh v. Emperor	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 523; I L R (1939) Lah. 307; 41 P L R 763; 12 R L 275; 41 Cr L J 146	266
Janak Dulari v. Sri Gopal	..	A I R 1939 All. 706; (1939) A L J 875; 12 R A 328; I L R (1939) All. 912	420
Janba v. Manno	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 312; 1939 N L J 488; 12 R N 177	888
Jannatun-Nissa Begam v. Parshadi	...	A I R 1940 All. 28; (1939) A L J 1014; 12 R A 355	808
Jarnail Singh v. Bahadur Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 581; 41 P L R 593; 12 R L 315	701
Jehangir Oursetji Mistri v. Kastur Pannaji Oswal	..	A I R 1939 Bom. 344; I L R (1939) Bom. 493; 41 Bom. L R 583; 12 R B 245	542
Jnanada Govinda Chaudhury v. Birendra Nath Goswami	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 595; 69 O L J 34; 12 R O 387	631
K. J., a Vakil, Madras, In the matter of	..	A I R 1939 Mad. 906, 50 L W 548; (1939) M W N 1038; (1939) 2 M L J 632; 12 R M 527; 41 Cr. L J 163; I L R (1940) Mad. 81 S B	257
K. K. N. K. A. R. Ohettyar Firm v. Aga M. Shreerazee	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 436; 1939 Rang. 606; 12 R Rang. 211	663
Kala Mohammad Akbar v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 534; 12 R L 277; 41 Cr. L J 150; I L R (1940) Lah. 217	274
Kaluwanti v. Udhavdas Girdharidas	...	A I R 1939 Sind. 305; (1940) Kar. 1; 12 R S 154	244
Kamakshi Ayyar v. Namberumal Ayyangar	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 506; (1939) M W N 303; (1939) 1 M L J 531; 49 L W 481; 12 R M 542	459
Kanayalal Mohanlal Gujar v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 455; 41 Bom. L R 977; 41 Cr. L J 172; 12 R B 241	228
Kanhai Singh v. Basdeo Sahai	..	A I R 1939 All. 387; (1939) A L J 391; 12 R A 312 (2)	334
Kanhaiya Lal v. Hamid Ali	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 181; 12 R O 243; 1940 O L R 16; (1940) O W N 462	467
Kannayya Reddi v. Muthu Reddi	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 508, 49 L W 547 (2); (1939) M W N 401; (1939) 1 M L J 825; 12 R M 515	62
Kanshi Ram v. Mrs. Owen Roberts	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 585; 12 R L 302; I L R (1940) Lah. 135	599
Kanti Chandra Ghosal v. Suchitra Sundari Dassi	..	A I R 1939 Cal. 606; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 285; 43 O W N 855; 12 R O 385	560
Karangiseti Onkarappa v. Karingiseti Ohennappa	..	A I R 1940 Mad. 33; 50 L W 896; (1939) 2 M L J 884; 12 R M 575; (1940) M W N 9; I L R (1940) Mad. 358 F B	749
Karbalai Gulam v. Ebrahim Busheri & Co.	..	A I R 1939 Bom. 342; 41 Bom. L R 518; 12 R B 225	149
Kauleshar Shukul v. Ram Kishore Lal	...	A I R 1939 All. 699; 12 R A 339	644
Kedar Nath Tushnial v. Raj Kumar Das	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 674; 69 O L J 394; 12 R O 321	17
Keshav Ramkrishna Bhatt Phadke v. Subba Manga Naik	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 490; 41 Bom. L R 994; 12 R B 263	669
Khaji Dodda Khaji Sahib v. Chigamalla Nanjappa	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 642; I L R (1939) Mad. 633, 49 L W 635; (1939) M W N 478; (1939) 1 M L J 909; 12 R M 553	554
Knanchand Mayaram v. Pessumal Lakhumal	...	A I R 1939 Sind. 360; (1939) Kar. 312; 12 R S 165	486
Khedu Mahto v. Khonka Mahto	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 591; 6 B R 142; 20 P L T 929; 12 R P 330	214
Khemchand Ramdas Wadhwa v. Mathradas Girdharidas	...	A I R 1939 Sind. 289; (1940) Kar. 41; 12 R S 179	845
Khirode O. Ghose v. Narendra N. Sanyal	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 599; 12 R O 347 (1); 44 O W N 485 S B	256 (1)
Khodromal Jeramdas v. Menghomal Jessomal	...	A I R 1939 Sind. 303; (1939) Kar. 428; 12 R S 141	67
Kishen Gopal v. Abdul Latif Khan	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 97; 1939 O W N 1045; 1939 O L R 694; 12 R O 185; 15 Luck. 175	114

Kishori Lal v. Governor-in-Council, Punjab	...	A I R 1940 F O 4; (1939) Kar. F O 191; 6 BR 336; 1940 O L R 100; (1940) M W N 180; 71 O L J 108; 12 R F O 17 F C	801
Kitab Ali v. Anil Behary Dutta	...	A I R 1939 Cal 723; 70 C L J 93; 43 O W N 877; 12 R O 361	408
Krishna Chandra Sharma v. Rishabha Kumar	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 265; 1939 N L J 324; 12 R N 136; I L R (1940) Nag. 55	156
Krishna Iyer, In re	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 384; 49 L W 205; (1939) 1 M L J 266; (1939) M N W 244; 41 Cr. L J 106; 12 R M 524	3
Krishna Vitnak Mahar v. Shankar Krishna Gandhi	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 419; 41 Bom. L R 863; 12 R B 269	607
Kumar Raghava Surendra Sahi v. Babui Lachmi Koar	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 636; 18 Pat. 590; 6 B R 117; 12 R P 307	179
Kumtrapran v. The King	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 427; 41 Cr. L J 216; 12 R Rang. 240	614
Kurella Ramamurti v. Nalam Subbarao	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 481; (1939) 1 M L J 491; (1939) M W N 323; 49 L W 534; 12 R M 539	440 (2)
Lachmi Narain v. Musaheb Ali	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 214; 1940 O L R 42; 1940 O W N 80; 1940 R D 60; 12 R O 259	758
Lachmeshwar Prasad Shukul v. Girdhari Lal Chaudhuri	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 667; 20 P L T 905; 6 B R 159; 19 Pat. 123; 12 R P 353 F B	353
Ladli Parshad v. Chaman Lal	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 473; 41 P L R 632; 12 R L 324; I L R (1940) Lah. 231	843
Lal Din v. Official Receiver, Lyallpur	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 536; I L R (1939) Lah. 275; 41 P L R 741; 12 R L 300	520
Lal Tirathnath Sahi Deo v. Lal Mirtunjaya Nath Sahi Deo	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 153; 21 P L T 645; 6 B R 98; 12 R P 295	79
Lalumal Dholumal v. Harumal Lalsing	...	A I R 1939 Sind 332; 12 R S 153	155
Laxman v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 281; 1939 N L J 455; 12 R N 156; 41 Cr. L J 168	348
Laxman Manjunathaya Balwalli v. Venkatrao Mangeshrao	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 386; 41 Bom. L R 836; 12 R B 222	13
Lee Shi v. Consolidated Tin Mines of Burma Ltd., Lokmanya Mills Ltd., Barsi v. Municipal Borough, Barsi	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 428; 12 R Rang. 237	847
Lyallpur Bank, Ltd. v. Ramji Das	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 477; I L R (1939) Bom. 571; 41 Bom. L R 937; 12 R B 247	519
M. A. Bhagvati v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 237; 1940 O W N 132; 1940 O L R 75; 12 R O 270	889
Maddukuri Subba Rao, In re	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 460; I L R (1939) Bom. 496; 41 Bom. L R 878; 41 Cr. L J 188; 12 R B 251	506
Mahadeo Prasad v. Jagannath Kuar	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 55; 50 L W 511 (1); (1939) M W N 1012; (1939) 2 M L J 750; 41 Cr. L J 225; 12 R M 593	753
Mammili Kunhi Raman Kitavu, Karnavan and Manager of Thavazhi v. Vengilethi Thanancheri Kunhi Karanavan Kitavu	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 67; 1939 O W N 1087; 1939 O L R 704; 12 R O 194; 1939 R D 616; 15 Luok 209 F B	258
Man Singh v. Baij Nath Sahai	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 80; 50 L W 676; (1939) M W N 1136; (1939) 2 M L J 757; 12 R M 579	755
Mandir Gita Bhawan, Shiri Kurukhsetra Jiran Uddar Kurukhsetra v. Sadhu Ram	...	A I R 1939 All 694; (1939) A L J 830; 1939 R D 513; 12 R A 341; I L R (1939) All. 888	668
Mangalmal Aganmal v. Muhammad Usif Bhoro	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 554; 12 R L 291	422
Manghanmal Gianchand v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Sind 315; (1939) Kar. 597; 12 R S 151	11
Mariam Bibi v. Cassim Ebrahim Malin	...	A I R 1939 Sind 310; (1940) Kar. 102; 41 Cr. L J 179; 12 R S 170	392
Maung Aye Maung v. A Scott & Co.	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 375; 1939 Rang. 474; 12 R Rang. 210	623
Maung Kan v. Maung Po Tok	...	A I R 1940 Rang. 1; 1939 Rang. 649; 12 R Rang. 225 F B	757
Maung Maung v. V. V. R. Chettyar Firm	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 388; 1940 Rang. 157; 41 Cr. L J 123; 12 R Rang. 183	119
Meghji Hirjee & Co. v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Company, Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 296; 1940 Rang. 82; 12 R Rang. 178	70
	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 141; 1939 N L J 124; 12 R N 145	241

Mishrilal v. Barik	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 305; 1939 N L J 487; 12 R N 169; I L R (1939) Nag. 665	727
Mo Maung U v. Ma Bla On	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 399; 1939 Rang. 543; 12 R Rang. 222	733
Mohammad Abdul Sattar v. Rahimuddin	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 87; 12 R N 158	545
Mohammad Murtaza v. Cyril Indernath Dey	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 432; 6 B R 232; 19 Pat. 111; 12 R P 407	671
Mohiuddin v. Khatijabi	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 469; 41 Bom. L R 1020; 12 R B 236	390
Mon Mohan Bhattacharjee v. Bidhu Bhusan Dutta	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 460; 69 O L J 188; 43 O W N 295; 12 R O 334	8
Motilal v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 66; 12 R N 150; 41 Or. L J 158	310
Mrs. N. A. Alexander v. M. S. Jalil	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 279; 12 R O 274; 1940 O L R 71; 1940 O W N 139	684
Mrs. Violet Peterson v. Mrs. Adelaide Elizabeth Forbes	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 113; 12 R O 224; 1939 O L R 750; 1940 O W N 1; 15 Luck. 290	377
Mukhan Singh v. Chandrika Prasad Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 371; 6 B R 115; 19 Pat. 269; 12 R P 333	278
Mul Raj v. Tulsi Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 542; 12 R L 309; I L R (1939) Lah. 541	632
Mulchand Jivraj v. D. Low	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 350; 41 Bom. L R 521; 12 R B 226	252
Municipal Corporation of Rangoon v. Ram Behari	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 432; 1939 Rang. 504; 12 R Rang. 191	460
Municipal Council, Tanjore v. Sundaresan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 499; (1939) 1 M L J 87; 49 L W 173; (1939) M W N 426; 12 R M 538	412
Murari Lal v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 All. 3; (1939) A L J 1037; 41 Or. L J 236; 12 R A 372	799
Muslim Bank of India, Ltd., In the matter of	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 515; 41 P L R 739; I L R (1939) Lah. 299; 12 R L 371	176
Muthuswami Chettiar, In re	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 23; 50 L W 802; (1939) M W N 1209; 41 Or. L J 238; (1940) 1 M L J 11; 12 R M 584; I L R (1940) Mad. 335 F B	824
Muzafferpur Municipality v. Tara Prasad	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 313; 6 B R 226; 41 Cr. L J 217; 12 R P 433	630
Nand Kishore v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 710; (1939) A L J 911; 41 Or. L J 111; 12 R A 304	151
Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Central and United Provinces	...	A I R 1939 All. 593; (1939) A L J 631; 12 R A 294; I L R (1939) All. 832	99
Nandlal Rampratap v. Deorao	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 94; 12 R N 178	881
Nani Gopal Mukherjee v. Srish Chandra Nandy	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 600; 1 L R (1939) 1 Cal. 233; 12 R O 353	300
Nani Lal Das, In the goods of	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 737; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 1; 12 R O 364	431
Narayana Mudali v. Peria Kalathi Mudali	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 494; (1939) 1 M L J 199; 49 L W 295; (1939) M W N 273; 12 R M 534	239
Narhar Sonajee Jahagirdar v. Trimbak Shri-dhar Jahagirdar	...	A I R 1940 Bom. 12; 41 Bom. L R 1174; 12 R B 255	608
Nariman Edulji Contractor v. Pirojbai Nariman Contractor	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 367; 41 Bom. L R 625; 12 R B 219	56
Narsidasji Balmukunddasji v. Pai Jamna	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 354; 41 Bom. L R 787; 12 R B 211	44
Narsingh Singh v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 659; 20 P L T 655; 6 B R 215; 41 Or. L J 279; 12 R P 431	594
Nabhandas Hollaram v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Sind. 337; (1940) Kar. 91; 41 Or. L J 240; 12 R S 192	832
Nga Sar Kee v. The King	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 390; 1940 Rang. 203; 41 Or. L J 153; 12 R Rang. 189	303
Ninkileri Lakshmi Kutty Kettillamma v. Thekka Madathil Vishnu Nambisan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 411; 49 L W 199; (1939) 1 M L J 261; (1939) M W N 228; I L R (1939) Mad. 415; 12 R M 522	173
Noor Ahmad v. Mahmud Ali	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 531; I L R (1939) Lah. 201; 41 P L R 713; 12 R L 282 (2)	227
Noor Bibi v. Municipal Committee, Ambala City	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 453; 12 R L 319; 42 P L R 109	772
Nripendra Nath Chatterji v. Arun Chandra Chatterji	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 129; 6 B R 153; 12 R P 351	339

Nripendra Nath Chatteeji v Jugal Prasad Mandal Official Assignee, Karachi v. Dhanoomal Mohan- lal	A I R 1939 Pat. 396; 6 B R 108; 12 R P 308 ..	144
Official Receiver, West Tanjore v. Samudra- vijayan Chettiar	A I R 1939 Sind 361; (1940) Kar. 235; 12 R S 177	778
Paidi Subbayya, In re	A I R 1939 Mad. 509; (1939) M W N 378; (1939) 1 M L J 575; 49 L W 591; 12 R M 528 ..	288
Pancham Singh v Deb Ram	A I R 1939 Mad. 905; (1939) W N 739 (2); 41 Cr. L J 203; 12 R M 573	440 (1)
Pannalal v. Sumaranlal	A I R 1939 All. 751; (1939) A L J 1053; 12 R A 333; 1939 R D 579	521
Paragji Bhulabhai v. Bhagwaji Bawabhai	A I R 1939 Nag. 260; 1939 N L J 391; I L R (1939) Nag. 624; 12 R N 133	108
Parbhu Dayal v. Bisheeshwar Nath	A I R 1940 Bom. 14; 41 Bom. L R 1231; 41 Cr. L J 245; 12 R B 311	795
Patipal Singh v. Rampal Singh	A I R 1940 Oudh. 117; 1939 O W N 1111; 12 R O 203; 1939 O L R 713 (1)	272
Pattu Kumari Bibi v. Nirmal Kumar Singh Nawlakha	A I R 1940 Oudh. 63; 1939 O W N 997; 1939 O L R 695; 12 R O 190; 15 Luck 112	137 (2)
People Bank of Northern India Ltd., Lahore, In the matter of	A I R 1939 Cal. 569; 70 C L J 5; 43 C W N 907; 12 R O 332	691
Peoples Bank of Northern India Ltd. v Nanikram Charatsing	A I R 1939 Lah. 497; 12 R L 274; I L R (1939) Lah. 324; 41 P L R 737	314
Perumal Mooppan v. Subramania Mudaliar	A I R 1939 Sind 270; (1939) Kar. 401; 12 R S 166	573
Perumal Naicken v. Kondama Naicken	A I R 1939 Mad. 299; (1939) 1 M L J 74; (1939) M W N 1115 (2); 12 R M 588	768
Pitambar Ramchandra Paliye v. "Saheb Chand Harakchand Shop"	A I R 1939 Mad. 385; (1939) 1 M L J 64; (1939) M W N 110; 49 L W 372; 12 R M 525	247
Prabhavati Devi v. Mrs. Lila Singh	A I R 1939 Nag. 277; 1939 N L J 472; 12 R N 155; I L R (1939) Nag. 697	418
Prafulla Kumar Maity v. Uday Chandra Pradhan	A I R 1940 Pat. 75; 20 P L T 796; 6 B R 267; 12 R P 428	652
Prahlad Chandra Singh v. Bhim Mahato	A I R 1939 Cal. 736; 43 C W N 1192; 12 R O 391	587
Prem Parkash Sharma v. Federal India Assurance Co., Ltd.	A I R 1940 Pat. 341; 6 B R 336; 19 Pat. 172; 12 R P 411	685
Prebodb Kumar Das v. The Dantmara Tea Co. Ltd.	A I R 1939 Lah. 509; 41 P L R 569; 12 R O 269	122
Public Prosecutor, Madras v. M S. Menoki	A I R 1940 P O 1; 1939 O W N 1075; 12 R P O 87; 6 R B 176; 70 C L J 483; 44 C W N 145; (1939) O L R 739; (1940) 1 M L J 75; 51 L W 1; (1940) M W N 1; 42 Bom. L R 199; 42 P L R 156; 1940 A L J 226; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 250, 66 I A 293, (1940) Kar. P O 11 Sup P C	211
Pulin Ohandra Chattapadhyaya v. Khatra Mohan Ghose	A I R 1939 Mad. 914; 50 L W 428; (1939) 2 M L J 631; (1939) M W N 1127; 41 Cr. L J 156; 12 R M 563	419
Purushottam Damodar Raichurkar v. Gangadhar Kashinath Sakhare	A I R 1939 Cal. 748; 70 C L J 4; 12 R O 363 ..	413 (1)
R. D. K. Chinna Venkatappa Nayanam Bahadur Varu v. Gubba Sundararajulu Naidu	A I R 1939 Bom. 415; I L R (1939) Bom. 560, 41 Bom. L R 931; 12 R B 256	560
R. Ezekiel v. The Province of Bengal	A I R 1939 Mad. 431; 49 L W 172; (1939) M W N 226; 12 R M 541	427
Radhey Lal v. Kanhaj Lal	A I R 1939 Cal. 746; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 52, 41 Cr. L J 134; 12 R O 350	211
Rai Indra Narsin v. Mohammad Ismail	A I R 1939 Pat. 526; 18 Pat. 193; 6 B R 88, 12 R P 287	52
Rai Kissenji v. Sri Kissen Mackar	A I R 1939 All. 687; (1939) A L J 849; 12 R A 337; I L R (1939) All. 885	597
Rai Sri Krishna Mohan Ji v. Purshotam Das	A I R 1940 Cal. 26; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 370; 12 R O 415	811
Raichand Gulabchand Aocha v. Secretary of State	A I R 1939 All. 695; (1939) A L J 751; 12 R A 346	690
	A I R 1939 Bom. 505; 41 Bom. L R 1077; 12 R B 242	495

Raja of Vizianagaram v. Mudumooru Sanyasiraju ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 653; 49 L W 662; (1939) M W N 588; (1939) 2 M L J 114; 12 R M 510 ...	42
Raja Ram v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd. ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 79; 41 P L R 26; I L R (1939) Lah. 313; 12 R L 263 (3) ...	75
Raja Singh v. Chaichoo Singh ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 201; 6 B R 262; 20 P L T 957; 12 R P 423 ...	816
Ram Bilas Sharma v. Emperor ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 375; 21 P L T 194; 6 B R 221; 41 Or. L J 214; 12 R P 429 ...	598
Ram Chander v. Rure Kunwar ...	A I R 1939 All. 738; (1939) A L J 961; 12 R A 316 ...	233
Ram Chandra Singh v. Baldeo Singh ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 184; 6 B R 217; 41 Or. L J 232; 12 R P 446 ...	748
Ram Kailash Kunwari v. Ishwar Saran ...	A I R 1939 All. 715; (1939) A L J 996; 12 R A 321; I L R (1939) All. 917 ...	406
Ram Kishan Ram Bhakat v. Satya Narain Bhakat...	A I R 1939 Cal. 741; 69 O L J 52; 43 O W N 185; 12 R O 359 ...	441
Ram Kumar Lal v. Bam Charittar Lal ...	A I R 1939 All. 725; (1939) A L J 803; 1939 R D 491; 12 R A 315 ...	338
Ram Kumar Ram Saraff v. Mohan Lal Maharaj ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 270; 6 B R 256; 21 P L T 383; 12 R P 421 ...	788
Ram Oudh v. Government of Burma ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 448; 1939 Rang. 591; 12 R Rang. 207 ...	574
Ram Pershad v. Dhanna ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 513; 41 P L R 198; 41 Or. L J 184; 12 R L 308 ...	415
Ram Pratapji v. Hari Kishan Dass ...	6 B R 172 (1); 12 R F O 15; 1939 O L R 723 (1); 71 O L J 84 F C ...	4
Ram Ran Bijaya Prasad Singh v. Abdul Ghani Khan ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 682; 20 P L T 771; 6 B R 157; 12 R P 349 (2) ...	350
Ram Ranbijay Prasad Singh v. Bachia Kuari ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 683; 20 P L T 777; 6 B R 152; 12 R P 349 (1) ...	336
Ram Ranbijaya Prasad Singh v. Madho Turha ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 623; 20 P L T 715; 6 B R 187; 12 R P 375 ...	498
Ram Rattan v. Gobind Ram ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 501; 12 R L 289; I L R (1940) Lah. 84; 42 P L R 366 ...	426
Ram Rattan v. Municipal Committee, Amritsar ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 511; 12 R L 316; I L R (1940) Lah. 392 ...	713
Ram Sarup v. Court of Wards ...	A I R 1940 P C 16; 6 B R 278; 1940 O W N 66; 12 R P O 109; 51 L W 86; (1940) A L J 54; 1940 O L R 58; I L R (1940) Lah. 1; (1940) 1 M L J 278; 42 P L R 174; 44 O W N 345; 42 Bom. L R 307; (1940) M W N 278; 71 O L J 134; (1940) Kar. (P O) 63 sup; 67 I A 50 P C ...	590
Ram Sarup Singh v. Mohan Singh ...	A I R 1939 All. 672; I L R (1939) All. 713; (1939) A L J 678; 1939 R D 485; 12 R A 348 ...	783
Ram Sarup Singh v. Sarju Ahir ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 88; 1939 O W N 1036; 1939 O L R 689; 12 R O 178; 1940 R D 34 ...	111
Rambriohh Singh v. Emperor ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 365; 6 B R 110; 41 Or. L J 114; 12 R P 539 ...	162
Ramchand Kimatrai v. Udhalmal Dwarkadas ...	A I R 1939 Sind 279; (1939) Kar. 469; 12 R S 163 ...	384
Ramchand Virmal v. Lilaram ...	A I R 1939 Sind 291; 12 R S 175 ...	765
Ramdeyal Babu Lal Firm v. Lakhu Sao ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 53; 20 P L T 768; 6 B R 270; 12 R P 427 ...	857
Ramji Lal v. Mandai ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 226; 1940 O W N 15; 1940 O L R 25; 12 R O 252 ...	650
Ramkhalawan Singh v. Monilal Sahu ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 678; 20 P L T 833; 6 B R 184; 19 Pat. 159; 12 R P 371 F B ...	480
Ramuandan Prasad Narain Singh v. Goshwami Madhwanand Ramji ...	A I R 1940 F O 1; 1939 O L R 721; 6 B R 170; 12 R F O 13; 21 P L T 24; (1940) M W N 7; 71 O L J 49 F C ...	1
Ramsagar Yadav v. M. Yunus ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 32; 20 P L T 712; 6 B R 250; 41 Or. L J 234; 12 R P 451 ...	773
Rani Dhandei Kuer v. Fatma Zuhra ...	A I R 1939 All. 698; (1939) A L J 897; 12 R A 312; I L R (1939) All. 921 ...	649
Ranjit Singh y. Nawab Khan ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 548; 41 P L R 826; 12 R L 284 ...	395
Rauf Ahmad v. Fahmida Begum ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 116; 1939 O W N 1129; 12 R O 307; 1939 O L R 718 (2); 15 Luck 261 ...	277
Razaar Rahman v. Udit Singh ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 570; 20 P L T 492; 18 Pat. 694; 6 B R 108; 12 R P 303 ...	135

Razia Begum v. Kashimund...	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 286; 6 B R 177; 21 P L T 541; 12 R P 387	404
Renukabai v. Bheosan...	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 132; 1939 N L J 129; 12 R N 129	33
Rewashankar Moolchand...	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 72; 1939 N L J 562; 41 Or. L J 182; 12 R N 167	400
Roshan N M A. Karim Omer & Co. v. Mohamed Ebrahim	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 315; 1939 Rang. 194; 12 R Rang. 198	508
S., an Advocate, In re	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 917; 50 L W 566; (1939) M W N 1037; (1939) 2 M L J 630; I L R (1940) Mad. 84; 41 Or. L J 185; 12 R M 564 S B	417
S. T. R. M. Chettyar Firm v. Andathal	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 434; 1939 Rang. 594; 12 R Rang. 192 S B	386
S. V. Subba Rao v. Calicut Co-operative Bank Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 304; 49 L W 143; (1939) M W N 397; (1939) 1 M L J 695; 12 R M 536	220
Saheb Din v. Gauri Shankar	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 92; 1939 O W N 980; 1939 O L R 683; 12 R O 177; 15 Luck 92	25
Sahibzadi v. Abdul Ghafoor	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 454; 41 P L R 887; 12 R L 318	744
Sakina Begum v. Durga Sahai	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 132; 1939 O W N 1141; 12 R O 209 (2); 1939 O L R 718; 1939 R D 632 (2); 15 Luck 279	295
Salig Ram v. Oharan Dass	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 492; 41 P L R 610; 12 R L 329	877
Saminatha Iyer v. Vageesan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 849; 50 L W 270; (1939) M W N 827; (1939) 2 M L J 557; 12 R M 511; I L R (1940) Mad. 98	37
Sarat Chandra Roy Chaudhury Bahadur v. Arjun Mandal	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 742; 43 O W N 1191; 12 R O 360	416
Sardar Khan v. Mohammad Akram Khan	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 560; 12 R L 336	894
Sarju Prasad v. Deoki Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 147; 6 B R 94; 12 R P 284	59
Sat Narain v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 746; (1939) A L J 1011; 41 Or L J 121; 12 R A 307; I L R (1939) All. 934	172
Satish Chandra Giri v. Dharanidhar Singha Roy	...	A I R 1940 P O 24; 44 O W N 177; 6 B R 291; 51 L W 49; 21 P L T 91; 1940 O W N 104; 42 R P 117; 1940 O L R 64; (1940) M W N 172 (2); 43 P L R 158; 71 O L J 1; 42 Bom. L R 295; (1940) 1 M L J 371; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 266; (1940) A L J 409; (1940) Kar. P O 47 Sup; 67 I A 32 P C	616
Secretary, Municipal Committee, Nagpur v. Ram-chandra	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 174; 12 R N 179	893
Secretary of State v. District Board, Rangpur	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 758; 70 O L J 126; 12 R O 373	454
_____ v. Sadho Lal Jaiswal	...	A I R 1939 All. 748; (1939) A L J 905; 12 R A 323	435
Shaban Ali v. Mohammad Ishaq	...	A I R 1939 All. 724; (1939) A L J 800; 12 R A 317 (1)	391
Shambhoo Dayal v. Kundan Lal	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 87; 1939 O W N 1034; 1939 O L R 688; 12 R O 183; 1940 R D 33; 15 Luck 188	5
Shankar Dyamangonda Patil v. Puttabai Gurusathgonda K. Patil	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 483; I L R (1939) Bom. 556; 41 Bom. L R 247; 12 R B 237	410
Shantranji Ji v. Deputy Commissioner, Manager, Court of Wards, Mahewa Estate, Kheri	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 183; 1940 O W N 26; 1940 O L R 46; 1940 R D 26; 12 R O 261	766
Sheo Prasad v. Kalka Prasad Dhawan	...	A I R 1939 All. 617; (1939) A L J 544; 1939 R D 405; 12 R A 293	41
Sheonarain Prasad Singh v. Ganga Prasad Sahu	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 155; 6 B R 92; 12 R P 291	63
Shib Lal v. Gobindi	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 562; 41 P L R 513; 12 R L 305	613
Shibba Mal v. Gulab Rai	...	A I R 1939 All. 735; (1939) A L J 964; 12 R A 299; I L R (1940) All. 26 S B	113
Shobhalal v. Sidhalal	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 210; 1939 N L J 252; I L R (1939) Nag. 636; 12 R N 139	169
Singaram v. S. P. R. Somasundaram	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 444; 12 R Rang. 241	883
Sitla Sahai v. Sri Ram	...	1939 O W N 1026; 1939 O L R 694; 12 R O 184	10
Sohan Lal v. Mubarak Ali Khan	...	A I R 1939 All. 705; (1939) A L J 540; 41 Cr. L J 137; 12 R A 309; I L R (1939) All. 863	224

Sri Emberumanar Jeer Swamigal v. Board of Commissioners for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 511; 49 L W 632; (1939) M W N 442; (1939) 1 M L J 901; 12 R M 516; 1 L R (1939) Mad 904	77
Sri Narain Khanna v. Secretary of State	...	A I R 1939 All. 723; (1939) A L J 736; 12 R A 334	513
Sripat Singh Dugar v. Mohini Sundari	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 626; 1 L R (1939) 2 Cal. 440; 12 R O 420	880
Star Trading and Investment, Ltd v. Ashutosh Mukherjee	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 627; 70 C L J 158; 43 C W N 1116; 12 R O 401	648
Sukhdeo Pandey v. Rameshwar Prasad Agarwala	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 522; 6 B R 200; 12 R P 381	557
Sunil Kumar Kerr v. Sisir Kumar Kerr	...	A I R 1940 P O 30; 6 B R 271; 1940; O W N 35; 12 R P O 105; 51 L W 44; (1940) A L J 66; 1940 O L R 55; 21 P L T 133; (1940) M W N 137; 42 P L R 120; 44 C W N 289; 42 Bom. L R 394; (1940) 1 M L J 795; (1940) Kar. (P O) 76 Sup; 67 1 A 102 P C	575
Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. L. N. Birla	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 724; 43 C W N 1223; 70 C L J 463; 12 R O 389; 41 Or. L J 164; 1 L R (1940) 1 Cal. 121	319
Surat Borough Municipality v. Sarifa Karunissa	...	A I R 1939 Bom 494; 41 Bom. L R 1002; 12 R B 233; 1 L R (1939) Bom. 685	366
Surathu Sitharathnamma v. Pillarisetti Seshamma	...	A I R 1939 Mad 586; 49 L W 393; (1939) 1 M L J 456; (1939) M W N 640; 12 R M 506	30
Synemodelux, Ltd., Tinnevely v. K. Vannamuthu Pillai	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 498; (1939) 1 M L J 534; (1939) M W N 324; 49 L W 537; 12 R M 574	712
T. H. Chandler v. Mrs. A. Chandler	...	A I R 1939 All. 696; (1939) A L J 572; 12 R A 358; 1 L R (1939) All. 819	834
T. Sivasankara Mudaliar v. Radhabai Ammal	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 611; (1939) M W N 483; (1939) 2 M L J 515; 50 L W 520; 12 R M 567	647
Tan Sit Shan v. U Po Nyun	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 421; 1940 Rang. 93; 12 R Rang. 208	605
Tarabai Shriniwas Naick Guttal v. Murtacharya Anantacharya	...	A I R 1939 Bom 414; 1 L R (1939) Bom. 576; 41 Bom L R 924; 12 R B 275	874
Tarak Nath Kundu v. Panchanon Dutt	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 164; 69 C L J 530; 43 C W N 886; 12 R O 338; 1 L R (1939) 2 Cal. 381	131
Tejpal Marwari v. Kedarnath Himatsingka	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 597; 20 P L T 700; 6 B R 144; 12 R P 336	273
Thakur Prasad Saksena v. Firm Sadiq Husain Mehdi Husain	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 129; 12 R O 215; 1940 O W N 7; 1939 O L R 735 (2); 15 Luck 253	330
The King v. Nga Ba Saing	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 392; 1940 Rang. 145; 41 Or. L J 108; 12 R Rang. 181	142
Tikamdas Hotumal v. Kishnomal Jessomal	...	A I R 1939 Sind 367; (1940) Kar 36; 12 R S 174	702
Trimbak v. Bhagu Bai	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 249; 1939 N L J 409; 12 R N 159	580
Tubal Uriah Butler v. The King	...	(1939) M W N 1005; 43 C W N 1121; 41 Or. L J 206; 1940 O L R 33; 6 B R 287; 12 R P O 113 P C	461
U Thiseitta v. U Eindawuntha	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 385; 1940 Rang. 97; 12 R Rang. 196	483
V. V. Vythilingam Pillai v. Seshan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 477; 49 L W 103; (1939) 1 M L J 416; (1939) M W N 295; 12 R M 580	850
Veerammanni v. Veerabasava Chikka Royal	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 278; 1 L R (1939) Mad. 338; (1939) 1 M L J 39; (1939) M W N 9; 49 L W 115; 12 R M 550	500
Virbhandas Shamsing v. Dasumal Keshowdas	...	A I R 1939 Sind 288; (1939) Kar. 314; 12 R S 135	28
Vishwanath Prasad Jallan v. Holyland Cinetone, Ltd., Benares	...	A I R 1939 All. 739; (1939) A L J 950; 12 R A 330	501
Zafar Ahsan v. Jugeshwar Bux Roy	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 135; 6 B R 155; 41 Or. L J 171; 12 R P 369	346
Zalliram v. Mangalsingh	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 302; 1939 N L J 477; 12 R N 173	760

Table showing serially the Pages of Volume 185 of Indian Cases (1940) and the corresponding pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

Page.	Names of cases reported.	Parallel references.
1	Ramnandan Prasad Narain Singh v. Goshwami Madhwanand Ramji ...	A I R 1940 F O 1; 1939 O L R 721; 6 B R 170; 12 R F O 13; 21 P L T 24; (1910) M W N 7; 71 O L J 49 F C.
3	Krishna Iyer, In re ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 384; 49 L W 205; (1939) 1 M L J 266; (1939) M N W 244; 41 Cr. L J 106; 12 R M 521.
4	Ram Pratapji v. Hari Kishan Dass ...	6 B R 172 (1); 12 R F O 15; 1939 O L R 723 (1); 71 O L J 84 F C.
5	Shambhoo Dayal v. Kundan Lal ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 87; 1939 O W N 1034; 1939 O L R 688; 12 R O 183; 1940 R D 33; 15 Luck. 188.
6	Mon Mohan Bhattacharjee v. Bidhu Bhusan Dutta ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 460; 69 O L J 188; 43 O W N 295; 12 R O 334
10	Sitla Sahai v. Sri Ram ...	1939 O W N 1028; 1939 O L R 691; 12 R O 184.
11	Mangalmal Aganmal v. Muhammad Usif Bhoro ...	A I R 1939 Sind 815; (1939) Kar. 597; 12 R S 151
13	Laxman Manjunathaya Balwalli v. Venkatrao Mangeshrao ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 386; 41 Bom. L R 836; 12 R B 223.
16	Chekkha Dhanamma v. Coromandel Company Limit- ed, Cocanada ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 401; (1939) 1 M L J 235; (1939) M W N 216; 49 L W 341; 12 R M 517.
17	Kedar Nath Tushnial v. Raj Kumar Das ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 674; 69 O L J 394; 12 R O 321.
25	Seheb Din v. Gauri Shankar ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 92; 1939 O W N 980; 1939 O L R 683; 12 R O 177; 15 Luck 92.
26	Oherutty v. Nagamparambil Ravu ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 513; (1939) M W N 354; 49 L W 491; (1939) 1 M L J 633; 12 R M 504.
28	Virbhandas Shamsing v. Dasumal Keshowdas ...	A I R 1939 Sind 288; (1939) Kar. 344; 12 R S 134.
30	Surathu Sitharathnamma v. Pillarisetti Seshamma ...	A I R 1939 Mad 586; 49 L W 393; (1939) 1 M L J 456; (1939) M W N 640; 12 R M 506.
33	Renukabai v. Bheosan Hapsaji Junghare ...	A I R 1939 Nag. 132; 1939 N L J 129; 12 R N 129.
37	Saminatha Iyer v. Vageesan ...	A I R 1939 Mad 849; 50 L W 270; (1939) M W N 827; (1939) 2 M L J 557; 12 R M 511; 1 L R (1940) Mad. 98.
41	Sheo Prasad v. Kalka Prasad Dhawan ...	A I R 1939 All. 617; (1939) A L J 541; 1939 R D 405; 12 R A 293.
42	Raja of Vizianagaram v. Mudumooru Sanyasiraju ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 653; 49 L W 662; (1939) M W N 568; (1939) 2 M L J 114; 12 R M 510
44	Narsidasji Balmukunddasji v. Bai Jamna ...	A I R 1939 Bom 354; 41 Bom. L R 787; 12 R B 211.
52	Radhey Lal v. Kanhai Lal ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 526; 18 Pat. 193; 6 B R 88, 12 R P 287.
56	Nariman Edulji Contractor v. Pirojbai Nariman Contractor ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 367; 41 Bom. L R 625; 12 R B 219.
57	Dalmia Cement Ltd. v. Naraindas Anandji Bechar ...	A I R 1939 Sind 256; 12 R S 139.
59	Sarju Prasad v. Deoki Singh ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 147; 6 B R 94; 12 R P 284.
62	Kannayya Reddi v. Muthu Reddi ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 508 49 L W 547 (2); (1939) M W N 401; (1939) 1 M L J 825; 12 R M 515.
63	Sheonarain Prasad Singh v. Ganga Prasad Sahu ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 155; 6 B R 92, 12 R P 291.
65	Amar Nath Khosla v. M. O. Mohan ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 433; 41 P L R 879; 12 R L 265.
67	Khodromal Jeramdas v. Menghomal Jessomal ...	A I R 1939 Sind 303; (1939) Kar. 423; 12 R S 141.
69	Ghulam Mohammad v. Allah Rakhi ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 533; 41 P L R 605; 41 Cr. L J. 107; 12 R L 273 (1).

70	Maung Maung v. V. V. R. Chettyar Firm ..	A I R 1939 Rang. 298; 1940 Rang. 82; 12 R Rang. 178.
73	Ganesh Mahto v. Bhawan Mahto ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 151; 6 B R 98; 12 R P 293
75	Raja Ram v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd. ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 79; 41 P L R 26; I L R (1939) Lah. 313; 12 R L 263 (2).
77	Sri Emberumanar Jeer Swamigal v. Board of Commissioners for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 511; 49 L W 632; (1939) M W N 442; (1939) 1 M L J 901; 12 R M 516; I L R (1939) Mad. 904.
79	Lal Tirathnath Sahi Deo v. Lal Mirtunjoya Nath Sahi Deo ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 153; 21 P L T 645; 6 B R 98; 12 R P 295.
81	Gangubai Pandurang Dombé v. Pagubai Narayan Kore ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 403; 41 Bom. L R 815; 12 R B 220.
83	Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa v. Jug Sah Muni Lal Sah	A I R 1940 Pat. 239; 6 B R 101; 12 R P 297.
87	Aisha Bibi v. Begum Bibi ...	A I R 1939 Sind 263; (1939) Kar. 475; 12 R S 113.
94	Farok Ahmed Meah v. Lalit Mohan Choudhury ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 582; 69 O L J 335; 12 R O 323.
99	Nandal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Central and United Provinces ...	A I R 1939 All. 593; (1939) A L J 631; 12 R A 294; I L R (1939) All. 832.
105	Chandrika Prasad v. Bhagwan Das ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 93; 1939 O W N 1028; 1939 O W N 1028; 1939 O L R 692; 12 R O 180; 15 Luck 167.
108	Pannalal v. Sumranlal ...	A I R 1939 Nag. 260; 1939 N L J 391; I L R (1939) Nag. 624; 12 R N 133.
111	Ram Sarup Singh v. Sarju Ahir ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 88; 1939 O W N 1038; 1939 O L R 689; 12 R O 175; 1940 R D 34.
113	Shibba Mal v. Galab Rai ...	A I R 1939 All. 735; (1939) A L J 984; 12 R A 299; I L R (1940) All. 26 S B.
114	Kishen Gopal v. Abdul Latif Khan ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 97; 1939 O W N 1045; 1939 O L R 692; 12 R O 185; 15 Luck. 175.
119	Maung Kan v. Maung Po Tok ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 388; 1940 Rang. 157; 41 Cr. L J 123; 12 R Rang. 183.
122	Prem Parkash Sharma v. Federal India Assurance Co., Ltd. ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 509; 41 P L R 569; 12 R O 269.
123	Bulak Ram v. Ganga Bishun Chaudhuri ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 133; 6 B R 104; 12 R P 301.
125	Ganesh Datta v. Model Town Society Ltd ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 508; 12 R L 288.
126	Hari Ram v. Munshi Singh ...	A I R 1939 All. 660; (1939) A L J 559; 12 R A 301.
129	Bishun Singh v. Palakdhari Singh ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 592; 6 B R 109; 12 R P 304.
131	Tarak Nath Kundu v. Panchanon Dutt ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 564; 69 O L J 530; 43 O W N 886; 12 R O 338; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 381.
135	Razaur Rahman v. Udit Singh ...	A I R 1939 Pat 570; 20 P L T 492; 18 Pat. 694; 6 B R 106; 12 R P 303.
137 (1)	Ghulam Hussain v. Secretary of State ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 510; 12 R L 270.
137 (2)	Patipal Singh v. Rampal Singh ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 63; 1939 O W N 997; 1939 O L R 695; 12 R O 190; 15 Luck 113.
142	The King v. Nga Ba Saing ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 392; 1940 Rang. 145; 41 Cr. L J 108; 12 R Rang. 181.
144	Nripendra Nath Chatterji v. Jugal Prasad Mandal	A I R 1939 Pat. 386; 6 B R 108; 12 R P 306.
145	Abdul Sattar v. Dinajpur Trading and Banking Co., Ltd. ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 490; 69 O L J 229; 42 O W N 1153; 12 R O 343.
149	Karbalai Gulam v. Ebrahim Busheri & Co. ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 342; 41 Bom. L R 518; 12 R B 225.
151	Nand Kishore v. Emperor ...	A I R 1939 All. 710; (1939) A L J 941; 41 Cr. L J 111; 12 R A 304.
154	Gopu China Jogayya v. Manapalli Rapanayya ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 374; 49 L W 23; (1939) 1 M L J 88; (1939) M W N 130; I L R (1939) Mad. 194; 12 R M 518.
155	Lalumal Dholumal v. Harumal Lalsing ...	A I R 1939 Sind 332; 12 R S 153.
156	Krishna Chandra Sharma v. Rishabha Kumar ...	A I R 1939 Nag. 265; 1939 N L J 324; 12 R N 136; I L R (1940) Nag. 55.
159	Arunachalam Chettyar v. Sabaratnam Chettiar ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 572; (1939) M W N 367; 49 L W 515; (1939) 1 M L J 889; I L R (1939) Mad. 585; 12 R M 520.

162	Rambrichh Singh v Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 365; 6 B R 110; 41 Cr. L J 114; 12 R P 339.
169	Shobhalal v. Sidhalal	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 210; 1939 N L J 252; I L R (1939) Nag. 636; 12 R N 139.
172	Sat Narain v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 746; (1939) A L J 1011; 41 Cr. L J 121; 12 R A 307; I L R (1939) All. 934.
173	Ninkileri Lakshmikutty Kettilamma v. Thekka Madathil Vishnu Nambisan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 411; 49 L W 199; (1939) 1 M L J 261; (1939) M W N 228; I L R (1939) Mad. 415; 12 R M 522.
176	Muslim Bank of India, Ltd., In the matter of	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 515; 41 P L R 739; I L R (1939) Lah. 299; 12 R L 271.
177	Baburahi Sardar v. Kala Chand Bepari	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 728; I L R (1939) 1 Cal. 567; 41 Cr. L J 125; 12 R O 347 (2).
179	Kumar Raghava Surendra Sahi v. Babui Lachmi Koer	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 636; 18 Pat. 590; 6 B R 117; 12 R P 307.
203	Baptist De Souza v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 465; 41 Bom. L R 974; 41 Cr. L J 127; 12 R B 229.
205	Ah Phut v. The King	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 402; 1940 Rang. 104; 41 Cr. L J 129; 12 R Rang. 185.
208	Gul Zaman Mir Zaman v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Pesh. 47; 41 Cr. L J 132; 12 R Pesh. 33.
210	B. L. Chouda v. B. K. Rai	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 274; 1939 N L J 421; 12 R N 141.
214	R. Ezekiel v. The Province of Bengal	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 746; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 52; 41 Cr. L J 134; 12 R O 350.
217	Probdh Kumar Das v. The Dantmara Tea Co. Ltd.	...	A I R 1940 P O 1; 1939 O W N 1075; 12 R P O 87; 6 R B 176; 70 O L J 483; 44 O W N 145; (1939) O L R 739; (1940) 1 M L J 75; 51 L W 1; (1940) M W N 1; 42 Bom. L R 199; 42 P L R 156; 1940 A L J 226; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 250; 66 I A 293; (1940) Kar. P O 11 Sup P C.
219	Ohandan Mull Indra Kumar v. Ohiman Lal Girdhar Das Parekh	...	A I R 1940 P O 3; 1939 O W N 1086; 6 B R 189; 12 R P O 84; 1939 O L R 741; 21 P L T 1; 44 O W N 205; (1940) A L J 70; 42 P L R 81; 51 L W 135; 42 Bom. L R 387; (1940) Kar. P O 15 Sup P C.
224	Sohan Lal v. Mubarak Ali Khan	...	A I R 1939 All. 705; (1939) A L J 640; 41 Cr. L J 137; 12 R A 309; I L R (1939) All. 868.
225	Basappa Chanbasappa Ohekki v. Hanmappa Ramappa Manaur	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 492; 41 Bom. L R 943; 12 R B 235.
227	Noor Ahmad v. Mahmud Ali	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 531; I L R (1939) Lah. 201; 41 P L R 713; 12 R L 282 (2);
228	Kanayalal Mohanlal Gujar v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 455; 41 Bom. L R 977; 41 Cr. L J 172; 12 R B 241.
230	S. V. Subba Rao v. Calicut Co-operative Bank Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 304; 49 L W 143; (1939) M W N 397; (1939) 1 M L J 695; 12 R M 536.
232	Firm Jethu Mal-Hari Parshad v. Telu	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 510; 41 P L R 526; 12 R L 282 (1).
233	Ram Chander v. Rure Kunwar	...	A I R 1939 All. 738; (1939) A L J 961; 12 R A 316.
234	Jadunath Roy v. Parameswar Mullick	...	A I R 1940 P O 11; 21 P L T 237; 6 B R 251; 1940 O L R 26; 1940 O W N 96; 12 R P O 98; 44 O W N 233; (1940) 1 M L J 97; 42 Bom. L R 331; 70 O L J 546; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 255; (1940) Kar. (P O) 33 Sup; 67 I A 11 P C.
239	Narayana Mudali v. Peria Kalathi Mudali	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 494; (1939) 1 M L J 199; 49 L W 295; (1939) M W N 273; 12 R M 534.
241	Meghji Hirjee & Co. v. Bengal Nagpur Railway Company, Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 141; 1939 N L J 124; 12 R N 145.
244	Kalawanti v. Udhavdas Girdharidas	...	A I R 1939 Sind 305; (1940) Kar. 1; 12 R S 154.
247	Perumal Naicken v. Kondama Naicken	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 385; (1939) 1 M L J 64; (1939) M W N 110; 49 L W 372; 12 R M 525.
249	Giani Meher Singh v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 714; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 42; 43 O W N 639; 41 Cr. L J 138; 12 R O 349.

250	Haliman Bibi v. Muhammad Tajamul Hussain	..	A I R 1939 Pat. 504; 6 B R 141; 12 R P 332.
252	Mulchand Jivraj v. D. Low	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 350; 41 Bom. L R 521; 12 R B 226,
254	Khedu Mahto v. Khonka Mahto	...	A I R 1939 Pat 591; 6 B R 142; 20 P L T 929; 12 R P 330.
256 (1)	Khirode C. Ghose v. Narendra N. Sanyal	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 599; 12 R O 347 (1); 44 O W N 485 S B.
256 (2)	Chiranjil Lal v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 734; (1939) A L J 990; 41 Cr. L J 141; 12 R A 312 (1).
257	K. J., a Vakil, Madras, In the matter of	...	A I R 1939 Mad 906; 50 L W 548; (1939) M W N 1038; (1939) 2 M L J 632; 12 R M 527; 41 Cr. L J 163; I L R (1940) Mad. 81 S B.
258	Mahadeo Prasad v. Jagannath Kuvar	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 67; 1939 O W N 1087; 1939 O L R 704; 12 R O 194; 1939 R D 616; 15 Luck 209 F B
266	Jaimal Singh v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Lah 523; I L R (1939) Lah. 307; 41 P L R 763; 12 R L 275; 41 Cr L J 146.
266	Emperor v. Abdullah Karim	...	A I R 1939 Sind 335; (1940) Kar 83; 41 Cr. L J 143; 12 R S 161.
271	Emperor v. Qudrat	...	A I R 1939 All 708; (1939) A L J 980; 41 Cr. L J 142; 12 R A 310; I L R (1939) All 871.
272	Parbhu Dayal v. Bisheshwar Nath	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 117; 1939 O W N 1111; 12 R O 203; 1939 O L R 713 (1).
273	Tejpal Marwari v. Kedarnath Himatsingka	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 597; 20 P L T 700; 6 B R 144; 12 R P 336.
274	Kala Mohammad Akbar v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Lah 534; 12 R L 277; 41 Cr. L J 150; I L R (1940) Lah 217.
277	Rauf Ahmad v. Fahmida Begum		A I R 1940 Oudh 116; 1939 O W N 1129; 12 R O 207; 1939 O L R 713 (2); 15 Luck 261
278	Mukhan Singh v. Chandrika Prasad Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 371; 6 B R 145; 19 Pat. 269; 12 R P 333.
280	Gomti v. Jugal Kishore	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 84; 1939 O W N 1134; 12 R O 201; 1939 O L R 715; 1939 R D 628; 15 Luck 270.
281	Jadunandan Das v. Maho	..	A I R 1939 Pat 428; 6 B R 148; 12 R P 337.
286	Bibhabati Devi v. Kumar Ramendra Narayan Roy	..	A I R 1939 Cal. 672; I L R (1939) 1 Cal. 399; 43 O W N 333; 12 R O 354; 41 Cr. L J 148.
288	Official Receiver, West Tanjore v. Samudra-vijayan Ohettiar	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 509; (1939) M W N 378; (1939) 1 M L J 575; 49 L W 591; 12 R M 538.
290	Anand Bahari Lal Khandelwal v. Deputy Commissioner, Bara Banki	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 107; 1939 O W N 1145; 12 R O 212; 1939 O L R 723 (2); 1939 R D 635.
294	Jagdish Jha v. Aman Khan	...	A I R 1940 F O 3; 6 B R 194; 12 R F O 16; 1940 O L R 1; 21 P L T 142; 71 O L J 55; 1939 F L J 7 F C
295	Sakina Begum v. Durga Sahai	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 132; 1939 O W N 1141; 12 R O 203 (2); 1939 O L R 718; 1939 R D 632 (2); 15 Luck 279.
297	A. James v. Achaibar Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat 119; 6 B R 150; 21 P L T 416; 12 R P 346.
300	Nani Gopal Mukherjee v. Srish Chandra Nandy	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 600; 1 L R (1939) 1 Cal. 233; 12 R O 353
301	Durga Prasad v. Seetta Prasad Tewari	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 80; 1939 O W N 1107; 1939 O L R 727; 12 R O 209 (1); 15 Luck 287.
302	Israr Husain v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 All. 730; (1939) A L J 895; 12 R A 314; 41 Cr L J 152; I L R (1940) All. 23.
303	Nga Sar Kee v. The King	..	A I R 1939 Rang. 330; 1940 Rang. 203; 41 Cr. L J 153; 12 R Rang. 189.
305	Bhagwan Din v. Gir Har Saroop	...	A I R 1940 P O 7; 1939 O W N 1078; 6 B R 179; 12 R P O 89; 1939 O L R 729; (1940) 1 M L J 1; 51 L W 4; (1940) M W N 3; 42 Bom. L R 140; 44 C W N 294; 71 O L J 189; 15 Luck. 1; (1940) Kar. (F O, 25 Sup.; 67 I A 1; 42 P L R 457 P C.
310	Motilal v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 68; 12 R N 150; 41 Cr. L J 158
314	People Bank of Northern India Ltd., Lahore, In the matter of	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 497; 12 R L 274; I L R (1939) Lah 324; 41 P L R 737.
315	Emperor v. Kallappa Gurappa Kotagunshi	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 481; 41 Bom. L R 970; 12 R B 231; I L R (1939) Bom. 679; 41 Cr. L J 157.

317	Jagan Nath v. Allah Dad	..	A I R 1939 Lah. 539; 41 P L R 631; 12 R L 273 (2).
318	Emperor v. Karbalai Hussain	..	A I R 1940 Nag. 75; 1939 N L J 537; 12 R N 149; 41 Cr. L J 155; I L R (1940) Nag. 61.
319	Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. L. N. Birla	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 724; 43 O W N 1223; 70 O L J 463; 12 R O 369; 41 Cr. L J 164; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 121.
323	Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency Sind and Baluchistan v. Karachi Chamber of Commerce	...	A I R 1939 Sind 308; (1940) Kar 140; 12 R S 157.
326	A. Subramania Iyer v. K. S. Venkatarama Iyer	..	A I R 1939 Mad. 599; 49 L W 416; I L R (1939) Mad. 54; (1939) 1 M L J 536; (1939) M W N 430; 12 R M 530.
330	Thakur Prasad Saksena v. Firm Sadiq Husain Mehdi Husain	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 129; 12 R O 215; 1940 O W N 7; 1939 O L R 735 (2); 15 Luck 253.
334	Kanhai Singh v. Basdeo Sahai	..	A I R 1939 All. 387; (1939) A L J 391; 12 R A 312 (2).
336	Ram Ranbijay Prasad Singh v. Baohia Kuari	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 688; 20 P L T 777; 6 B R 152; 12 R P 349 (1).
337	Bachai v. Hayat Mohammad	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 119; 1939 O W N 1112; 12 R O 219; 1939 O L R 728; 15 Luck 265.
338	Ram Kumar Lal v. Bam Charittar Lal	...	A I R 1939 All. 725; (1939) A L J 803; 1939 R D 491; 12 R A 315.
339	Nripendra Nath Chatterji v. Arun Chandra Chatterji	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 129; 6 B R 153; 12 R P 351.
341	Golab Daye, In the goods of	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 718; 43 O W N 1193; 12 R O 356.
342	District Magistrate, Kheri v. M. Hamid Ali Gardish	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 137; 1939 O W N 1132; 12 R O 242; 1939 O L R 734; 41 Cr. L J 169; 15 Luck 268.
343	Basant Kaur v. Ram Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 544; 41 P L R 657; 12 R L 279.
346	Zafar Ahsan v. Jugeshwar Bux Roy	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 135; 6 B R 155; 41 Cr. L J 171; 12 R P 369.
347	Har Narain Lal v. Udan Singh	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 63; 1939 O W N 1109; 1939 O L R 735 (1); 12 R O 220; 15 Luck 235 S B.
348	Laxman v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 281; 1939 N L J 455; 12 R N 156; 41 Cr. L J 168.
350	Ram Ran Bijaya Prasad Singh v. Abdul Ghani Khan	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 682; 20 P L T 771; 6 B R 157; 12 R P 349 (2).
352	E. M. Joseph v. Official Assignee	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 401; 12 R Rang. 191.
353	Lachmeshwar Prasad Shukul v. Girdhari Lal Chaudhuri	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 667; 20 P L T 905; 6 B R 159; 19 Pat. 123; 12 R P 353 F B.
364	Ramchand Kimatrai v. Udhalmal Dwarkadas	...	A I R 1939 Sind 279; (1939) Kar. 469; 12 R S 163.
366	Surat Borough Municipality v. Sarifa Karunissa	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 49; 41 Bom. L R 1002; 12 R B 233; I L R (1939) Bom. 685.
368	Digambar Ponda v. Satish Chandra Das	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 717; 43 O W N 1103; 12 R O 357.
369	Durga Das v. Hanifa Begam	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 104; 1939 O W N 1010; 1939 O L R 746; 12 R O 221.
372	Fatmabi, In re	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 65; 1939 N L J 563; 12 R N 154.
373 (1)	Bachan Lal v. Gobardhan	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 118; 1940 R D 13; 1939 O L R 749; 1940 O W N 13; 12 R O 227; 15 Luck. 288.
373 (2)	Dulhin v. Harihar Gir	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 607; 18 Pat. 395; 20 P L T 932; 6 B R 172 (2); 12 R P 384.
377	Mrs. Violet Peterson v. Mrs. Adelaide Elizabeth Forbes	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 113; 12 R O 224; 1939 O L R 750; 1940 O W N 1; 15 Luck. 290.
380	Emperor v. Jiwan Das Milawa Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 521; I L R (1939) Lah. 305; 12 R L 293; 41 Cr. L J 174.
382	— v. Jhina Soma	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 457; 41 Bom. L R 965; I L R (1939) Bom. 648; 41 Cr. L J 176; 12 R B 248.

385	O. Kanniah Maistry, In re	—	A I R 1939 Mad. 976; (1939) M W N 1003; (1939) 2 M L J 618; 50 L W 769; 41 Cr. L J 181; 12 R M 565
386	S. T. R. M. Chettyar Firm v. Andathal	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 434; 1939 Rang. 594; 12 R Rang. 192 S B.
389	Benares Bank Ltd., Benares, In the matter of	...	A I R 1939 All. 726; (1939) A L J 1009; 12 R A 317 (2); I L R (1939) All. 938.
390	Mohiuddin v. Khatijabi	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 489; 41 Bom. L R 1020; 12 R B 236.
391	Shaban Ali v. Mohammad Ishaq	...	A I R 1939 All. 724; (1939) A L J 800; 12 R A 317 (1).
392	Maughanmal Gianchand v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Sind 340; (1940) Kar. 102; 41 Cr. L J 179; 12 R S 170
393	Abdul Latif v. Abdul Gani Serang	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 730; 43 C W N 1221; 12 R O 358; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 133.
395	Ranjit Singh v. Nawab Khan	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 518; 41 P L R 826; 12 R L 284
400	Rewashankar Moolchand v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 72; 1939 N L J 562; 41 Cr. L J 182; 12 R N 167.
401	Himayatullah v. Parbhoo Dayal	...	12 R O 228; 1940 O L R 2; 1940 O W N 18 S B.
402	Gokaran Singh v. Brij Bhukan Singh	...	A I R 1939 All. 717; (1939) A L J 928; 1939 R D 516; 12 R A 319; I L R (1939) All. 892.
404	Razia Begum v. Kishundeo Narain Mahtha	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 286; 6 B R 177; 21 P L T 541; 12 R P 397.
406	Ram Kailash Kunwari v. Ishwar Saran	..	A I R 1939 All. 715; (1939) A L J 996; 12 R A 321; I L R (1939) All. 917.
408	Kitab Ali v. Anil Behary Dutta	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 723; 70 C L J 93; 43 C W N 877; 12 R O 361.
410	Shankar Dyamangonda Patil v. Puttabai Gurusathgonda K. Patil	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 483; I L R (1939) Bom. 556; 41 Bom. L R 917; 12 R B 237.
411	Ram Kishan Ram Bhakat v. Satya Narain Bhakat...	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 741; 69 C L J 562; 43 C W N 185; 12 R O 359.
412	Municipal Council, Tanjore v. Sundaresan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 429; (1939) 1 M L J 87; 49 L W 173; (1939) M W N 426; 12 R M 538.
413 (1)	Pulin Chandra Chattapadhyaya v. Khatra Mohan Ghose	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 748; 70 C L J 4; 12 R O 363.
413 (2)	Emperor v. Lavji Mandan	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 452; 41 Bom. L R 980; 41 Cr. L J 183; 12 R B 253.
415	Ram Pershad v. Dhanna	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 513; 41 P L R 198; 41 Cr. L J 181; 12 R L 308.
416	Sarat Chandra Roy Chaudhury Bahadur v. Arjun Mandal	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 742; 43 C W N 1191; 12 R O 360
417	S, an Advocate, In re	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 917; 50 L W 566; (1939) M W N 1037; (1939) 2 M L J 630; I L R (1940) Mad. 84; 41 Cr. L J 185; 12 R M 564 S B.
418	Pitambar Ramchandra Paliye v. "Saheb Chand Harakchand Shop"	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 277; 1939 N L J 472; 12 R N 155; I L R (1939) Nag. 697.
419	Public Prosecutor, Madras v. M. S. Menoki	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 914; 50 L W 428; (1939) 2 M L J 631; (1939) M W N 1127; 41 Cr. L J 186; 12 R M 563.
420	Janak Dulari v. Sri Gopal	...	A I R 1939 All. 706; (1939) A L J 875; 12 R A 326; I L R (1939) All. 912.
421	Gooru Narayana v. Vaikuntam Chinna Lakshmayya	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 927; (1939) M W N 735 (1); (1939) 2 M L J 399; 50 L W 654; 12 R M 543.
422	Mandir Gita Bhawan, Shiri Kurukhsetra Jiran Uddar Kurukhsetra v. Sadhu Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 554; 12 R L 291.
424	Bepin Chandra Gorain v. Hem Chandra Mukherjee	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 709; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 63; 43 C W N 692; 12 R O 368.
426	Ram Rattan v. Gobind Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 501; 12 R L 289; I L R (1940) Lah. 84; 42 P L R 366.
427	R. D. K. Chinna Venkatappa Nayanam Bahadur Varu v. Gubba Sundararajulu Naidu	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 431; 49 L W 172; (1939) M W N 226; 12 R M 541.
428	Emperor v. Miro Ghulam Hussain	...	A I R 1939 Sind 339; (1940) Kar. 88; 41 Cr. L J 187; 12 R S 168.
429	Gurappa Bhimanna Ohidguppi v. Madwalappa Ramchandrappe Dumane	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 392; 41 Bom. L R 833; 12 R B 239.

431	Nani Lal Das, In the goods of ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 737; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 1; 12 R O 364.
434	Akella Surayya v. Thummalapalli Krishnamurthi ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 583; (1939) M W N 481; 12 R M 540.
435	Secretary of State v. Sadho Lal Jaiswal	A I R 1939 All. 748; (1939) A L J 905; 12 R A 323.
438	Commissioner of Waqf, Bengal v. Narainsingh Chandra Daw & Co. ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 648; I L R (1939) 1 Cal. 462; 43 C W N 415; 12 R O 366.
440 (1)	Paidi Subbayya, In re ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 905; (1939) W N 739 (2); 41 Cr. L J 203; 12 R M 573.
440 (2)	Kurella Ramamurti v. Nalam Subbarao	A I R 1939 Mad. 481; (1939) 1 M L J 491; (1939) M W N 323; 49 L W 534; 12 R M 539
441	Barq Raza v. Akbari ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 152; 1940 O L R 3; 12 R O 229.
454	Secretary of State v. District Board, Rangpur ...	A I R 1939 Cal. 758; 70 C L J 126; 12 R C 373.
459	Kamakshi Ayyar v. Namberumal Ayyangar ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 508; (1939) M W N 303; (1939) 1 M L J 531; 49 L W 481; 12 R M 542.
460	Municipal Corporation of Rangoon v. Ram Behari	A I R 1939 Rang. 432; 1939 Rang. 504; 12 R Rang. 194.
461	Tubal Uriah Butler v. The King ...	(1939) M W N 1005; 43 C W N 1121; 41 Cr. L J 206; 1940 O L R 33; 6 B R 287; 12 R P O 113 P C.
465	Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. Voora Sreeramulu Chetty	A I R 1939 Mad. 903; 50 L W 590; (1939) 2 M L J 667; I L R (1939) Mad. 770; 12 R M 544 S B.
467	Kanhaiya Lal v. Hamid Ali ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 164; 12 R O 243; 1940 O L R 16; (1940) O W N 462.
476	J. N. Maduranayakam Pillai v. Secretary of State ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 386; 49 L W 151; (1939) M W N 200; I L R (1939) Mad. 483; (1939) 1 M L J 176; 12 R M 546.
480	Ramkhalawan Singh v. Monilal Sahu ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 678; 20 P L T 883; 6 B R 16; 19 Pat. 159; 12 R P 371 F B.
483	U Thiseitta v. U Eindawuntha ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 385; 1940 Rang. 97; 12 R Rang. 196.
486	Khanchand Mayaram v. Pessumal Lakhumal ...	A I R 1939 Sind 360; (1939) Kar. 312; 12 R S 165.
487	Bishan Lal v. Banwari Lal	A I R 1939 All. 713; (1939) A L J 945; 12 R A 327.
489	Bhagwan Das v. Muhammad Nawaz Shah	A I R 1939 Lah. 319; I L R (1939) Lah. 408; 41 P L R 785; 12 R L 295.
495	Raichand Gulabchand Accha v. Secretary of State	A I R 1939 Bom. 505; 41 Bom. L R 1077; 12 R B 242.
498	Ram Ranbijaya Prasad Singh v. Madho Turha ...	A I R 1939 Pat. 623; 20 P L T 715; 6 B R 187; 12 R P 375.
500	Veerammami v. Veerabasava Chikka Royal ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 278; I L R (1939) Mad. 338; (1939) 1 M L J 39; (1939) M W N 9; 49 L W 115; 12 R M 550.
501	Vishwanath Prasad Jallan v. Holyland Cinetone, Ltd., Lenares ...	A I R 1939 All. 739; (1939) A L J 950; 12 R A 330.
508	M. A. Bhagvati v. Emperor ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 480; I L R (1939) Bom. 496; 41 Bom. L R 878; 41 Cr. L J 188; 12 R B 251.
508	Roshan N M A. Karim Omer & Co. v. Mohamed Ebrahim ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 315; 1939 Rang. 194; 12 R Rang. 198.
513	Sri Narain Khanna v. Secretary of State ...	A I R 1939 All. 723; (1939) A L J 736; 12 R A 334.
514	Durga Singh v. Kesho Lal	A I R 1940 Pat. 170; 18 Pat. 839; 6 B R 195; 12 R P 376.
519	Lokmanya Mills Ltd., Barsi v. Municipal Borough, Barsi ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 477; I L R (1939) Bom. 571; 41 Bom. L R 937; 12 R B 247.
520	Lal Din v. Official Receiver, Lyallpur ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 536; I L R (1939) Lah. 275; 41 P L R 741; 12 R L 300.
521	Pancham Singh v. Deb Ram ...	A I R 1939 All. 751; (1939) A L J 1053; 12 R A 333; 1939 R D 579.

523	Ambica Prosad Sanyal v. Messrs. Soorajmull Nagarmull Firm	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 620; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 291; 43 O W N 999; 12 R O 378.
526	Government of Burma v. Arunachallam	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 408; 12 R Rang 203.
529	Ambika Thakur v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 611; 18 Pat. 544; 6 B R 203; 41 Cr. L J 191; 12 R P 389; 21 P L T 45.
542	Behangir Oursetji Mistri v. Kastur Pannaji Oswal	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 344; I L R (1939) Bom. 493; 41 Bom. L R 583; 12 R B 245.
543	Emperor v. Mahanand Kherajmal	...	A I R 1939 Sind 341; (1940) Kar. 123; 41 Cr. L J 180; 12 R S 169.
544	Board of Commissioners for H. R. E., Madras v. Trustee of Sri Virupakshaswami Swami	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 801; (1939) M W N 775; (1939) 2 M L J 325; 12 R M 551.
545	Mohammad Abdul Sattar v. Rahimuddin	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 87; 12 R N 158.
546	Government of Bengal v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 706; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 23; 43 O W N 789; 12 R O 381.
549	Errol Mackay v. Oswald Forbes	...	A I R 1940 P O 16; 1940 O L R 47; 6 B R 265; 1940 O W N 32; 12 R P C 103; (1940) 1 M L J 64; 51 L W 93; (1940) A L J 60; (1940) M W N 114; 21 P L T 199; 42 P L R 117; 44 O W N 317; 42 Bom. L R 315; 70 O L J 566; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 286; (1940) Kar. (P O) 72 Sup; 67 I A 64 P C.
551	C. Fleming v. Official Receiver, Ferozepore District	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 183; I L R (1939) Lah. 429; 41 P L R 78; 12 R L 301.
552	Booniah v. R. M. N. R. M. Chettyar Firm	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 406; 1939 Rang. 508; 12 R Rang. 205.
554	Khaji Dodda Khaji Sahib v. Ohigamalla Nanjappa	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 642; I L R (1939) Mad. 833; 49 L W 635; (1939) M W N 478; (1939) 1 M L J 909; 12 R M 553.
556	Central Talkies Circuit v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 448; I L R (1939) Bom. 574; 41 Bom. L R 919; 12 R B 257.
557	Sukhdeo Pandey v. Rameshwar Prasad Agarwala	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 522; 6 B R 200; 12 R P 381.
560	Kanti Chandra Ghosal v. Suchitra Sundari Dassi	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 606; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 285; 43 O W N 855; 12 R O 385.
562	Diravyam Pillai v. Veeranan Ambalam	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 702; I L R (1939) Mad. 853; 49 L W 460; (1939) M W N 329; (1939) 3 M L J 822; 12 R M J 551.
569	Purushottam Damodar Raichurkar v. Gangadhar Kashinath Sakhare	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 445; I L R (1939) Bom. 560; 41 Bom. L R 931; 12 R B 256.
571	A. Ranganatham Chetti v. M. Ethirajulu Nayudu	...	A I R 1940 P O 17; 6 B R 268; 12 R P O 107; (1940) 1 M L J 24; 51 L W 96; 1940 O L R 53; (1940) M W N 107; 70 O L J 507; I L R (1940) Mad. 172; (1940) Kar. (P O) 43 Sup; 67 I A 25 P C.
573	Peoples Bank of Northern India Ltd. v. Nanikram Charatsing	...	A I R 1939 Sind 270; (1939) Kar. 401; 12 R S 166.
574	Ram Oudh v. Government of Burma	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 448; 1939 Rang. 591; 12 R Rang. 207.
575	Sunil Kumar Kerr v. Sieir Kumar Kerr	...	A I R 1940 P O 30; 6 B R 271; 1940 O W N 35; 12 R P O 105; 51 L W 44; (1940) A L J 66; 1940 O L R 55; 21 P L T 133; (1940) M W N 137; 42 P L R 120; 44 O W N 289; 42 Bom. L R 394; (1940) 1 M L J 795; (1940) Kar. (P O) 76 Sup; 67 I A 102 P C.
578	A. Veeran Kutti v. P. P. Koya Kutti	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 735; 49 L W 707; (1939) M W N 563; (1939) 2 M L J 86; I L R (1939) Mad. 828; 12 R M 561.
580	Trimbak v. Bhagu Bai	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 249; 1939 N L J 409; 12 R N 159.
587	Prafulla Kumar Maity v. Uday Chandra Pradhan	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 736; 43 O W N 1192; 12 R O 391.
588	Behari Lal Sud v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 529; 41 P L R 652; 41 Cr. L J 201; 12 R L 313.

590	Ram Sarup v. Court of Wards	...	A I R 1910 P O 18; 6 B R 278; 1940 O W N 66; 12 R P O 109; 51 L W 86; (1940) A L J 54; 1940 O L R 58; I L R (1940) Lah. 1; (1940) 1 M L J 278; 42 P L R 174; 44 O W N 345; 42 Bom. L R 307; (1940) M W N 278; 71 O L J 34; (1940) Kar. (P O) 63 sup; 67 I A 50 P C.
594	Narsingh Singh v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 659; 20 P L T 655; 6 B R 215; 41 Cr. L J 209; 12 R P 431.
597	Rai Indra Narsin v. Mohammad Ismail	...	A I R 1939 All. 687; (1939) A L J 819; 12 R A 337; I L R (1939) All. 885.
598	Ram Bilas Sharma v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 375; 21 P L T 194; 6 B R 221; 41 Cr. L J 214; 12 R P 429.
599	Karshi Ram v. Mrs. Owen Roberts	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 565; 12 R L 302; I L R (1940) Lah. 135.
602	Harihar Dorai v. Upendra Fati	...	A I R 1939 Pat. 497; 6 B R 218; 12 R P 384.
605	Tan Sit Shan v. U Po Nyun	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 421; 1940 Rang. 93; 12 R Rang. 208.
606	Buxar Central Co-operative Bank, Ltd. v. Akhoury Bindhyachal Prasad Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 261; 6 B R 222; 12 R P 387; 21 P L T 173.
608	Narhar Sonajee Jahagirdar v. Trimbak Shri-dhar Jahagirdar	...	A I R 1940 Bom. 12; 41 Bom. L R 1174; 12 R B 255.
609	Baldev Singh v. Sher Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 556; 41 P L R 524; 12 R L 306.
611	Bhairo Dutt Bhandari, an. Advocate, Ranikhet, In the matter of	...	A I R 1940 All. 1; (1939) A L J 957; 41 Cr. L J 211; I L R (1940) All. 60; 12 R A 367 S B.
613	Shib Lal v. Gobindi	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 562; 41 P L R 513; 12 R L 305.
614	Kumarapan v. The King	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 427; 41 Cr. L J 216; 12 R Rang. 240.
616	Satish Chandra Giri v. Dharanidhar Singha Roy	...	A I R 1940 P O 24; 44 O W N 177; 6 B R 291; 51 L W 49; 21 P L T 91; 1940 O W N 104; 12 R P 117; 1940 O L R 64; (1940) M W N 172 (2); 42 P L R 158; 71 O L J 1; 42 Bom. L R 293; (1940) 1 M L J 371; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 266; (1940) A L J 409; (1940) Kar. P O 47 Sup; 67 I A 32 P C.
623	Mariam Bibi v. Cassim Ebrahim Malin	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 375; 1939 Rang. 474; 12 R Rang. 210.
624	Ohhotelal v. Gopaladas	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 78; 12 R M 168; I L R (1940) Nag. 130.
626	Anandi Prasad v. Dulhin Kishori Kuer	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 254; 6 B R 224; 12 R P 401.
628	Ayancheri Kovilakath Sanakra Varma Raja v. Ayancheri Kovilakath Oheria Rama Varma Raja	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 902; (1939) M W N 832; 50 L W 375; (1939) 2 M L J 506; 12 R M 566.
630	Muzafferpur Municipality v. Tara Prasad	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 313; 6 B R 226; 41 Cr. L J 217; 12 R P 433.
632	Mul Raj v. Tulsai Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 542; 12 R L 309; I L R (1939) Lah. 541.
634	Jnanada Govinda Chaudhury v. Birendra Nath Goswami	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 595; 69 O L J 347; 12 R O 387.
638	Doman Sahu v. Gangu Nayek	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 300; 6 B R 229; 21 P L T 165; 12 R P 404.
641	Baker Ali v. Amir Ali Meah	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 396; 12 R Rang. 216.
644	Kauleahar Shukul v. Ram Kishore Lal	...	A I R 1939 All. 699; 12 R A 339.
647	T. Sivasankara Mudaliar v. Radhabai Ammal	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 611; (1939) M W N 483; (1939) 2 M L J 515; 50 L W 520; 12 R M 567.
648	Star Trading and Investment, Ltd. v. Ashutosh Mukherjee	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 627; 70 O L J 158; 43 O W N 1116; 12 R O 401.
649	Rani Dhandei Kuer v. Fatma Zuhra	...	A I R 1939 All. 698; (1939) A L J 807; 12 R A 342; I L R (1939) All. 921.
650	Ramji Lal v. Mandai	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 226; 1940 O W N 15; 1940 O L R 25; 12 R O 252.
652	Gobind Ram v. Kaju Ram	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 504; 42 P L R 232; 12 R L 310.
655	Bai Hakimbu v. Dayabhai Rugnath	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 508; 41 Bom. L R 1104; 12 R B 258.

660	Bhudeo Prasad v. Sri Nath	...	A I R 1939 All. 657; 12 R A 343.
663	K. K. N. K. A. R. Chettyar Firm v. Aga M. Shreerazee	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 436; 1939 Rang. 606; 12 R Rang. 217.
668	Man Singh v. Baij Nath Sahai	...	A I R 1939 All. 694; (1939) A L J 830; 1939 R D 513; 12 R A 341; I L R (1939) All. 888.
669	Keshav Ramkrishna Bhatt Phadke v. Subba Manga Naik	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 490; 41 Bom. L R 994; 12 R B 263.
671	Mohammad Murtaza v. Cyril Indernath Dey	..	A I R 1940 Pat. 432; 6 B R 232; 19 Pat. 111; 12 R P 407.
675	Hussainbi v. Khairuddin Kutubuddin	..	A I R 1939 Bom. 487; 41 Bom. L R 875; 12 R B 265.
677	C. S. Nataraja Pillai v. C. S. Subbaroya Chettyar	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 693; (1939) M W N 180; 49 L W 287; (1939) 1 M L J 499; I L R (1939) Mad. 507; 12 R M 569.
682	Bansidhar v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 All. 18; (1939) A L J 671; 41 Cr. L J 220; 12 R A 366; I L R (1939) All. 865.
683	Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Sind and Aden v. Central Popular Assurance Co. Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Sind 364; (1940) Kar 130; 12 R S 172.
685	Frahlad Chandra Singh v. Bhim Mahato	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 341; 6 B R 336; 19 Pat. 172; 12 R P 411.
690	Rai Sri Krishna Mohan Ji v. Purshotam Das	...	A I R 1939 All. 695; (1939) A L J 751; 12 R A 346.
691	Pattu Kumari Bibi v. Nirmal Kumar Singh Nawlakha	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 569; 70 O L J 5; 43 O W N 907; 12 R O 332.
700	Akbar Husain Khan v. Emperor	...	A I R 1940 All. 7; (1939) A L J 962; 41 Cr. L J 227; 12 R A 371; I L R (1939) All. 975.
701	Jarnail Singh v. Bahadur Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 561; 41 P L R 593; 12 R L 315.
702	Tikamdas Hotumal v. Kishnomal Jessomal	...	A I R 1939 Sind 367; (1940) Kar 36; 12 R S 174.
704	Debendra Chandra De v. Jamini Kumar Dey	..	A I R 1939 Cal. 744; 43 O W N 1209; 12 R O 402; I L R (1940) 1 Cal. 153.
705	Akoojee Jadwet and Co. v. A. V. and Son	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 423; 12 R Rang. 219.
709	Hans Hotz v. Emperor	..	A I R 1940 All. 5; (1939) A L J 1032; 41 Cr. L J 230; 12 R A 370; I L R (1940) All. 67.
711	Hans Raj Gupta v. Ram Lal Baldeo Parshad	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 498; 12 R L 317.
712	Synemodelux, Ltd., Tinnevely v. K. Vannamuthu Pillai	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 498; (1939) 1 M L J 534; (1939) M W N 324; 49 L W 537; 12 R M 574.
713	Ram Rattan v. Municipal Committee, Amritsar	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 511; 12 R L 316; I L R (1940) Lah. 362.
714	Abdul Latif v. Habibulla	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 351; 69 O L J 28; 12 R O 401.
726	Ambika Prasad v. Maqbulunnissa	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 207; 1940 O W N 129; 1940 R D 66; 1940 O L R 39; 12 R O 255.
727	Mishrilal v. Barik	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 305; 1939 N L J 487; 12 R N 169; I L R (1939) Nag. 665.
731	Deputy Commissioner, Kheri, Manager, Court of Wards, Mahewa Estate v. Kr. Khushwaqt Rai	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 180; 1940 O W N 22; 1940 O L R 31; 12 R O 253; 1940 R D 28; 15 Luck 298.
733	Mo Maung U v. Ma Bla On	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 399; 1939 Rang. 543; 12 R Rang. 222.
736	Jai Mangal Tewari v. Bindeshuri Singh	...	A I R 1940 Oudh 134; 1939 O W N 1005; 1940 O L R 36; 12 R O 257; 15 Luck 157.
738	Angelo v. Kandan Manjhi	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 316; 6 B R 241; 41 Cr. L J 221; 12 R P 440.
744	Sahibzadi v. Abdul Ghafoor	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 454; 41 P L R 867; 12 R L 318.
745	Babu v. Emperor	..	A I R 1940 Oudh 241; 1940 O L R 43; 41 Cr. L J 228; 1940 O W N 118; 12 R O 278.
748	Ram Chandra Singh v. Baldeo Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 184; 6 B R 247; 41 Cr. L J 232; 12 R P 446.
749	Karangiseti Onkarappa v. Karingiseti Chenappa	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 33; 50 L W 896; (1939) 2 M L J 884; 12 R M 575; (1940) M W N 9; I L R (1940) Mad. 358 F B.

753	Maddankuri Subba Rao, In re ...	A I R 1940 Mad. 55; 50 L W 511 (1); (1939) M W N 1012; (1939) 2 M L J 750; 41 Cr. L J 225; 12 R M 593.
754	District Magistrate, Sultanpur v. Mr. Ramjas Yadava ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 178; 1940 O L R 40; 41 Cr L J 233; 12 R O 280.
755	Mammili Kunhi Raman Kitavu, Karnavan and Manager of Thavashi v. Vengilleri Thananoheri Kunhi Karanavan Kitavu ...	A I R 1940 Mad. 80; 50 L W 676; (1939) M W N 1136; (1939) 2 M L J 757; 12 R M 579.
756	Lachhmi Narain v. Musaheb Ali ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 214; 1940 O L R 42; 1940 O W N 80; 1940 R D 60; 12 R O 259.
757	Maung Aye Maung v. A Scott & Co. ...	A I R 1940 Rang. 1; 1939 Rang. 619; 12 R Rang. 225 F B.
765	Ramchand Virmal v. Lilaram ...	A I R 1939 Sind 291; 12 R S 175.
766	Shantranji Ji v. Deputy Commissioner, Manager, Court of Wards, Mahewa Estate, Kheri ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 183; 1940 O W N 26; 1940 O L R 46; 1940 R D 26; 12 R O 261.
767	Bhairo Kumar v. Markande Gir ...	A I R 1939 All. 679; (1939) A L J 620; 1939 R D 444; 12 R A 347; I L R (1939) All. 822.
768	Perumal Mooppan v. Subramania Mudaliar ...	A I R 1939 Mad. 299; (1939) 1 M L J 74; (1939) M W N 1115 (2); 12 R M 588.
769	Harballav Prasad Chowdhury v. Jagballav Prasad Chowdhury ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 7; 18 Pat. 777; 20 P L T 859; 6 B R 248; 12 R P 416.
771	Hardwari Lal v. Ohhotey Lal ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 205; 1940 O L R 18; 1940 O W N 146; 12 R O 262.
772	Noor Bibi v. Municipal Committee, Ambala City ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 453; 12 R L 319; 42 P L R 109.
773	Ramsagar Yadav v. M. Yunus ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 32; 20 P L T 712; 6 B R 250; 41 Cr. L J 234; 12 R P 451.
774	Har Govind Prasad v. Mahraj Kunwar ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 231; 1940 O W N 123; 1940 O L R 50; 1940 R D 62; 12 R O 263.
778	Official Assignee, Karachi v. Dhanoomal Mohanlal ...	A I R 1939 Sind 361; (1940) Kar. 235; 12 R S 177.
760	Zalliram v. Mangalsingh ...	A I R 1939 Nag. 302; 1939 N L J 477; 12 R N 173.
783	Ram Sarup Singh v. Mohan Singh ...	A I R 1939 All. 672; I L R (1939) All. 713; (1939) A L J 678; 1939 R D 485; 12 R A 348.
788	Ram Kumar Ram Saraff v. Mohan Lal Maharaj ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 270; 6 B R 256; 21 P L T 363; 12 R P 421.
791	Govind Ram v. A. U. John ...	A I R 1939 All. 668; (1939) A L J 675; 1939 R D 372; 12 R A 353.
793	Asian Assurance Co., Ltd. v. Asa Ram ...	A I R 1940 Oudh 212; 1940 O W N 149; 1940 O L R 62; 12 R O 266.
795	Paragji Bhulabhai v. Bhagwanji Bawabhai ...	A I R 1940 Bom. 14; 41 Bom. L R 1231; 41 Cr. L J 245; 12 R B 311.
796	Firm Harechandrai Anandram v. Firm Kedarnath Nirmal Ohandra Guha ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 353; 6 B R 259; 12 R P 418.
799	Murari Lal v. Emperor ...	A I R 1940 All. 3; (1939) A L J 1037; 41 Cr. L J 236; 12 R A 372.
801	Kishori Lal v. Governor-in-Council, Punjab ...	A I R 1940 F O 4; (1939) Kar. F O 191; 6 B R 336; 1940 O L R 100; (1940) M W N 180; 71 O L J 108; 12 R F O 17 F C.
802	Ah Li v. U San Baw ...	A I R 1939 Rang. 446; 1939 Rang. 581; 12 R Rang. 232.
804	Brij Raj Kumari v. Subh Karan Das ...	A I R 1940 F O 5; 6 B R 333; (1939) Kar. (F O) 190; 1940 O L R 97; 71 O L J 86; 12 R F O 21 F C.
805	Firm Ruldu Ram-Daulat Ram v. Basant Ram ...	A I R 1939 Lah. 356; 41 P L R 809; 12 R L 321.
807	Krishna Vitnak Mahar v. Shankar Krishna Gandhi ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 419; 41 Bom. L R 863; 12 R B 269.
808	Jannatun-Nissa Begam v. Parshadi ...	A I R 1940 All. 28; (1939) A L J 1014; 12 R A 355.
809	Hassan Bi v. Nek Alam ...	A I R 1940 Lah. 9; 41 P L R 678; 12 R L 320.
811	Rai Kissenji v. Sri Kissen Mackar ...	A I R 1940 Cal. 26; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 370; 12 R C 415.
813	Ajam Ibram Modan v. Bai Hava Bibi ...	A I R 1939 Bom. 485; I L R (1939) Bom. 472; 41 Bom. L R 892; 12 R B 266.
816	Raja Singh v. Ohaichoo Singh ...	A I R 1940 Pat. 201; 6 B R 262; 20 P L T 957; 12 R P 423.

819	Ismail Piperdi v. Momin Bi Bi	...	A I R 1940 Rang. 12; 1939 Rang. 668; 12 R Rang. 234 F B.
821	Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Sind and Baluchistan v. Ahmedabad Advance Mills Ltd.	...	A I R 1940 P O 36; 51 L W 61; (1940) A L J 63; 6 B R 334; 12 R P O 174; 1940 O L R 98; (1940) 1 M L J 137; (1940) M W N 115; 44 O W N 379; 21 P L T 177; 42 Bom. L R 318; 71 O L J 156; (1940) Kar (P O) 97 Sup; 67 I A 115, I L R (1940) Bom. 332; 42 P L R 464 P C.
824	Muthuswami Chettiar, In re	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 23; 50 L W 802; (1939) M W N 1209; 41 Cr. L J 233; (1940) 1 M L J 11; 12 R M 584; I L R (1940) Mad. 335 F B.
828	Dharmon v. Ran Singh	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 563; 41 P L R 620; 12 R L 323.
829	Emperor v. Taduturu Poligadu	...	A I R 1940 Mad. 12; (1939) M W N 873; 50 L W 437; 41 Cr. L J 242; 12 R M 612.
832	Nebhandas Hollaram v. Emperor	...	A I R 1939 Sind 337; (1940) Kar. 91; 41 Cr. L J 246; 12 R S 192.
834	T. H. Chandler v. Mrs. A. Chandler	...	A I R 1939 All. 696; (1939) A L J 572; 12 R A 358; I L R (1939) All. 819.
835	Dolaram Aratmal v. Mulomal Radhakishindas	...	A I R 1939 Sind 272; 12 R S 181.
837	Ahmad Hussain v. Amir Bano	...	A I R 1940 All. 63; 12 R A 356.
839	Dattatraya Vishnu Dabholkar v. Sadashiv Shivram Nisal	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 513; 41 Bom. L R 882; 12 R B 271.
843	Ladli Parshad v. Ohaman Lal	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 473; 41 P L R 632; 12 R L 324; I L R (1940) Lah. 231.
845	Khemchand Ramdas Wadhwa v. Mathradas Girdharidas	...	A I R 1939 Sind 289; (1940) Kar. 41; 12 R S 179.
847	Lee Shi v. Consolidated Tin Mines of Burma Ltd.	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 428; 12 R Rang. 237.
850	V. V. Vythilingam Pillai v. Seshan	...	A I R 1939 Mad. 477; 49 L W 103; (1939) 1 M L J 416; (1939) M W N 295; 12 R M 580.
852	Prabhavati Devi v. Mrs. Lila Singh	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 75; 20 P L T 796; 6 B R 267; 12 R P 428.
854	Babu Govind Das v. Indrawati	...	A I R 1940 All. 38; (1939) A L J 919; 12 R A 359; I L R (1940) All. 11.
857	Ramdeyal Babu Lal Firm v. Lakhu Sao	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 58; 20 P L T 768; 6 B R 270; 12 R P 427.
858	Banwari Lal v. Hussaini	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 455; 41 P L R 457; 12 R L 336.
861	Chiranji Lal v. Ohheda Lal	...	A I R 1940 All. 8; (1939) A L J 1040; 12 R A 362.
865	Indu Prova Debi v. Durga Oharan Mitra	...	A I R 1940 Pat. 40; 20 P L T 757; 18 Pat. 828; 6 B R 274; 12 R P 436.
870	Ahmed Ibrahim Singapori v. Collector of Surat	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 447; I L R (1939) Bom. 611; 41 Bom. L R 934; 12 R B 278.
871	Dhirendra Nath Das v. Indra Chandra Kisriwala	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 578; 12 R O 418.
874	Tarabai Shriniwas Naick Guttal v. Murtagharya Anantacharya	...	A I R 1939 Bom. 414; I L R (1939) Bom. 576; 41 Bom. L R 924; 12 R B 275.
877	Salig Ram v. Oharan Daas	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 492; 41 P L R 610; 12 R L 329.
880	Sripat Singh Dugar v. Mohini Sundari	...	A I R 1939 Cal. 626; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 440; 12 R O 420.
881	Nandlal Rampratap v. Deorao	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 94; 12 R N 178.
883	Singaram v. S. P. R. Somasundaram	...	A I R 1939 Rang. 444; 12 R Rang. 241.
884	Mrs. N. A. Alexander v. M. S. Jalil	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 279; 12 R O 274; 1940 O L R 71; 1940 O W N 139.
888	Janba v. Manno	...	A I R 1939 Nag. 312; 1939 N L J 486; 12 R N 177.
889	Lyallpur Bank, Ltd. v. Ramji Das	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 237; 1940 O W N 132; 1940 O L R 75; 12 R O 270.
893	Secretary, Municipal Committee, Nagpur v. Ramchandra	...	A I R 1940 Nag. 174; 12 R N 179.
894	Sardar Khan v. Mohammad Akram Khan	...	A I R 1939 Lah. 560; 12 R L 336.
895	Bhawani Shankar v. Mohammad Hasan	...	A I R 1940 Oudh. 182; 1940 O W N 167; 1940 O L R 79; 12 R O 269.

TABLE

OF

Cases Overruled and Reversed In Volume 185 of Indian Cases, 1940.

Abdul Wahad v. Emperor, 78 Ind. Cas. 97; 23 Cr. L J 97 (Overruled)	...	208
Anant Potdar v. Mangal Potdar, 4 Pat. 704; 91 Ind. Cas. 483; A I R 1926 Pat. 27; 7 P L T 291 (Overruled)	...	480 F B
J. N. Surty v. T. S. Chettyar Firm, 4 R 265 at p. 288; 98 Ind. Cas. 417; A I R 1927 Rang. 20; 5 Bur. L J 187 (Overruled)	...	819 F B
Khaji Dodda Khaji Sahib v. Ohigamalla Nanjappa, 169 Ind. Cas. 359 (Reversed)	...	554
Kola Surayya v. Kola Subbamma, 53 M L J 677; 108 Ind. Cas. 863; A I R 1928 Mad. 42; (1927) M W N 911 (Overruled)	...	749 F B
Māgan Behari I al v. Ram Pratap Singh, (1939) A L J 405; 184 Ind. Cas. 160; A I R 1939 All. 535; I L R (1939) All. 568; 12 R A 183 (Overruled)	...	113 S B

GENERAL INDEX

INDIAN CASES 1940, Volume 185 JOURNAL SECTION

ARTICLES.

	Page.		Page.
Absence of Covenants for Title, &c.	2	Enemy Aliens	6
Aliens and Enemy Aliens	5	Forfeiture of Bankruptcy	1
Appeal after Plea of Guilty	17	Punch and the Police	29
Cattle on the Highway	33	Recitals in Deeds	7
Character Training Centres	21	Sandbags	37
Consent to Assault	18	The Effect of Discharge	2
Duties of Hotel-keepers	6

EXTRACTS FROM CONTEMPORARIES

A Gleam of Humour	8	Making Amends	36
A Judicial Compliment to Scott	36	Notice under s. 107, Criminal Procedure Code	39
— and Crime	23	Old Scots Judges	35
Cruelty to Animals	39	Passports	32
Dangerous Ambiguities	38	Prize Courts	22
Deodands	8	— Punishment	39
Discipline and Character	23	Railways and Deodands	8
Dogs and Oats	4	Road Accidents and the Blackout	24
Don't and Do	22	Scots Judges' Other Titles	35
Evacuation and Desertion	3	Scraps of Paper	23
Fun Fairs	20	The Poor Woman's Dog	24
International Law	4	Unconscious Libel	32
Is an "Armed Merchant Ship" Legal?	40	Unusual Probation Condition	19
Legal Practitioner and Money-lending	38	— Warning	39
Limited Neutrality	4	What was a Deodand?	8

IMPERIAL ACTS

The Defence of India Act No. XXXV of 1939	9	The Insurance (Second Amendment) Act No. XLI of 1939	28
The Indian Air Force Volunteer Reserve (Discipline) Act No. XXXVI of 1939	25	The Motor Vehicles (Amendment) Act No. XL of 1939	27
The Indian Aircraft (Amendment) Act No. XXXVII of 1939	25	The Panth Piploda Courts (Amendment) Act No. XXXVIII of 1939	26
The Indian Oaths (Amendment) Act No. XXXIX, of 1939	28	The Workmen's Compensation (Second Amendment) Act No. XLII of 1939	28

REVIEWS

Broom's Legal Maxims, Tenth Edition	20	Laws of India or Civil Practice, Volume 1	20
-------------------------------------	----	---	----

INDIAN CASES

1940

VOLUME—185

FEDERAL COURT

Appeal from the High Court at Patna
October 9, 1939

GWYBE, O. J., SULAIMAN AND
VARADACHARIAR, JJ.

RAMNANDAN PRASAD NARAIN
SINGH AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

Kulpati Shri Mahanth

GOSHWAMI MADHWANAND RAMJI—
RESPONDENT

Bihar Money-lenders Act (III of 1938), ss. 16, 11—Appeal relating to claim under s. 16 is maintainable and order of High Court relating to s. 11 can also be dealt with in such appeal.

An appeal to the Federal Court is maintainable so far as it relates to the appellants' claim under s. 16 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act of 1938 (now s. 13 of the Act of 1939) and the order of the High Court so far as it relates to s. 11 of the Act of 1938 (now s. 7 of the Act of 1939) can also be dealt with in such an appeal, as in estimating the value of the attached properties, the amount due on the mortgage has to be ascertained. Shyamakant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2), followed. [p. 3, col. 1.]

Sulaiman, J.—This is an appeal by the judgment-debtors arising out of proceedings in execution of a simple money decree, dated March 11, 1935 (confirmed on appeal by the High Court on January 6, 1938) for about Rs. 15,000 passed on the basis of two promissory notes dated October 6, 1931, on which date a mortgage deed for Rs. 42,000 was also executed in favour of the creditor.

On September 12, 1938, the judgment-debtors filed an application under ss. 11 and 16 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act (Act III of 1938); also purporting to be an objection under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. Their complaint was that in the execution case the properties were attached and sought to be sold "subject to the said mortgage lien". They urged that in view of the provisions of s. 11 of the Bihar Act the amount claimed to be due under the mortgage deed was not in fact due, and so the properties could not be sold subject to that lien, and should therefore be valued free from that lien. The reply, dated November 5, 1938, filed by the decree-holder was to the effect that inasmuch as s. 16 of the Bihar Act had been declared null and void, no inquiry into the valuation of the properties could be made and the objection should, therefore, be dismissed.

The learned Subordinate Judge understood the objection to mean that the value of the properties should be assessed and that it be declared that the mortgage deed subject to which the decree-holder wanted to sell the same, should be held to have been satisfied on account of the provisions of s. 11 of the Provincial Act. As regards the validity of s. 16, after pointing out that under O. XXI, r. 17 of the Code in the case of a decree for payment of money the value of the property shall, as nearly as may be, correspond to the amount due under the decree, he held the section to be void because of the ruling in Vishwanath Narain Singh v. Mahant Harihar Gir (1). As regards the applicability of s. 11, he held that :

"This plea of the judgment-debtors cannot be entertained in these proceedings as the validity or satisfaction of the mortgage bond to which the properties are admittedly subject cannot be a matter for consideration in this execution case. The mortgage encumbrance will be notified as usual, without deciding as to the correctness of the amount said to be due under it".

He further pointed out that the judgment-debtors would later be entitled to sue for the redemption of the mortgage and show whether the mortgage money was satisfied or not.

Unfortunately the objection and the reply thereto do not make it quite clear whether the sale had been ordered "subject to the mortgage" as contemplated by O. XXI, r. 62, Civil Procedure Code, or whether the previous mortgage had been merely notified as contemplated by r. 66 of that order. The learned Counsel for the appellants has, however, conceded that there had been no adjudication under r. 62. The order of the Subordinate Judge also made it clear that the mortgage was to be merely notified.

(1) 19 P.L.T. 760; 178 Ind. Cas. 279; A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 90; 11 B.P. 231; 5 B.R. 73; 17 Pat. 714.

The judgment-debtors appealed to the High Court and again raised the question of the applicability of ss. 11 and 16 of the Bihar Act. Section 11 had presumably been invoked for the purpose of getting the true value of the property estimated under s. 16. The High Court felt bound by its two previous decisions holding that these sections were void, and summarily dismissed the appeal.

As regards the applicability of s. 16, I expressed the view in Shyamkant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2) which had turned solely on that section, that the order of the High Court relating to it was not a final order within the meaning of s. 205 (1) of the Government of India Act. As in that case the new Act, of which the appellants wanted to take advantage in the appeal instead of relying upon it later in the first Court, had come into force after the appeal had been filed, I preferred to base my conclusions both on the ground that the repugnancy had been removed by the assent of the Governor-General to the new Act and that s. 16 had not in fact been repugnant to O. XXI, r. 66, Civil Procedure Code, as amended by the Patna High Court. I am now bound by the opinion of the majority that an appeal lies even from the order of the High Court under s. 16 of the Provincial Act.

As regards an order under s. 11 of the Act, there can be no doubt that when passed, it would involve a determination of the right of the decree-holder and the liability of the judgment-debtor, and such a determination being embodied in the decree passed in the suit would be a judgment within the meaning of s. 205 of the Government of India Act and of course also a decree. The difficulty which I feel in this case is that the stage for a decree in conformity with s. 11 has not yet arrived as no suit for the enforcement of the mortgage has yet been filed.

(2) (1939) F O R 193; 182 Ind. Cas. 161; A I R 1939 F O 74; 1939 O L R 399; 12 R. F O 1; 5 B R 756; 20 P L T 473; (1939) M W N 674 (F O)

If all that has happened in the execution proceedings is that the decree-holder has asked that his previous mortgage should be notified, and accordingly the proclamation of sale merely announces the existence of that encumbrance and there has been no determination by the execution Court under O. XXI, r. 62, Civil Procedure Code, that the property is really subject to such mortgage, then the order would not be any final order in the case, much less a judgment or a decree. I would then be inclined to hold that such an order in itself could not be the subject-matter of an appeal either to the High Court, or to the Federal Court. On the other hand, had the execution Court held that the attached properties were subject to the mortgage, and should be sold subject to the subsisting charge, and the judgment-debtors' objection has been thrown out on the ground that they cannot avail themselves of the provisions of s. 11 because they are void, then there might be a determination of a question between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtors within the meaning of s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, in which case the order would be a decree within the meaning of s. 2, Civil Procedure Code or at any rate a final order within the meaning of s. 205 of the Government of India Act. The order declaring the validity of the mortgage might then be final and binding on the judgment-debtors in a suit for redemption that they may bring or any suit that may be brought by the mortgagees hereafter. If, however, the appeal lies because of the order under s. 16, then the validity of s. 11 can be equally considered under s. 205 (2) of the Government of India Act, specially as in estimating the value of the mortgaged properties the amount due on the mortgage has to be ascertained.

I am inclined to think that the provisions of s. 11 affected "the jurisdiction and powers", of the Courts both with respect to "Contracts" or "Transfer of property" (List III Nos. 10 or 8 and 15) and "Money-lending" (List II Nos. 27 and 2). But the repugnancy to the existing Indian Laws has been cured by the Governor-General's assent to the new Act, which re-enacted the same provisions in s. 7.

Gwyer, C. J.—The material facts have been set out in the judgment which has just been delivered.

The case is clearly governed by the decision of this Court in Shyamkant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2) both as regard the maintainability of the appeal and as to the order to be passed. According to that judgment, the relief which the appellants claimed in the Courts below under ss. 16 and 17 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938 (No. III of 1938), is now available to them under ss. 13 and 14 of the Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act, 1939 (No. VII of 1939), the validity of which there is no ground for questioning.

The decree-holder sought to have the appellants' properties sold subject to a mortgage which he held over them; and in the Courts below the appellants claimed that in calculating the amount due to the decree holder under the mortgage they should have the benefit of s. 11 of the Act 1938. As s. 11 has now been re-enacted as s. 7 of the Act of 1939, the appellants are entitled to claim the benefit of this provision in the new Act when the executing Court proceeds under s. 13 to determine the value of the properties to be sold. In these circumstances, it appears to my brother Varadachariar and myself unnecessary to consider whether or not s. 11 of the Act of 1938 was void and we express no opinion upon it.

It is, in our opinion, equally unnecessary to decide whether this appeal would have been competent if it had not raised the question under s. 16 of the Act of 1938. We agree that, according to the previous decision of this Court, the appeal is maintainable so far as it relates to the appellants' claim under s. 16 of the Act of 1938 (now s. 13 of the Act of 1939) and we also agree that if the appeal is to this extent competent, the order of the High Court so far as it relates to s. 11 of the Act of 1938 (now s. 7 of the Act of 1939) can also be dealt with in this appeal, as in estimating the value of the attached properties the amount due on the mortgage has to be ascertained.

The case will be remitted to the High Court with a direction to discharge their order dated February 9, 1939, and the lower Court's order dated November 18, 1938, and to give liberty to the appellants to file an application under s. 13 of the Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act, 1939.

There will be no order as to costs.

s. Order accordingly.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Case No. 673

of 1938

(Criminal Revision Petition No. 641 of 1938)

January 6, 1939

PANDRANG, Row, J.

In re KRISHNA IYER—PETITIONER

Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (III of 1918), ss. 5 (1), 20—Rules under s. 20—Rr. 16, 18, 22—Charge under s. 5 (1) not specifying whether milk in question was cow's or buffalo's—Certificate of analysis based on assumption that it was buffalo's—Sample found to contain 3½ per cent. of milk fat—Offence held not established.

The accused had been convicted of an offence punishable under s. 5, cl. 1 (d) of the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act. The charge was that he sold milk below the standard of purity prescribed by Government. The charge did not state whether it was buffalo's milk or cow's milk that was said to have been sold by him contrary to law. The certificate of analysis by the Government Analyst was to the effect that the sample contained 60.5 parts of genuine milk, 35.0 parts of added water and 4.5 parts of cane sugar in a total of 100 parts. This opinion was based on the assumption that the milk that was sent as sample that is the milk that was sold by the petitioner, was sold as buffalo's milk. There was no basis for this assumption that it was buffalo's milk that was sold. The sample was found to contain 3½ per cent of milk fat. There was nothing to show that the quantity of solid found was below the prescribed minimum;

Held, that the sample in this respect of which the offence was said to have been committed must be dealt with as if it were cow's milk that was offered for sale or sold. The minimum percentage of milk fat was only 3 per cent. under r. 16. The sample contained 3½ per cent milk fat. It could not therefore be said that the sample was below the minimum prescribed so far as milk fat was concerned. R. 18 did not apply and the offence had not been established.

Or. R. P. under ss. 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Vellore, in Or. App. No. 13 of 1938.

Mr. V. Rajagopala Mudaliar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. K. Venkatraghavachari, for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioner has been convicted of an offence punishable under s. 5, cl. 1 (d) of the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (III of 1918). The charge is that he sold milk below the standard of purity prescribed by Government. The charge that was framed against the accused did not state whether it was buffalo's milk or cow's milk that was said to have been sold by him contrary to law. The certificate of analysis in this case by the Government Analyst is to the effect that the sample contained 60.5 parts of genuine milk, 35.0 parts of added water and 4.5 parts of cane sugar in a total of 100 parts. But this opinion as to the composition of the sample was based according to the certificate on the fact that the sample contained only 3.4 per cent. milk fat and only 0.321 per cent. nitrogen and 4.5 per cent. cane sugar where as it is laid down in G.O. No. 1867 P. H. dated September 1, 1932, that genuine milk contains at least 4.5 per cent. milk fat and at least 0.53 per cent. nitrogen. It is obvious, therefore, that this opinion was based on the assumption that the milk that was sent as sample that is the milk that was sold by the petitioner, was sold as buffalo's milk. There is no basis for this assumption that it was buffalo's milk, that was sold. The evidence of the Sanitary Inspector is also to the effect that he merely asked for a cup of milk and it was given to him. He does not say that he asked for any particular kind of milk, cow's or buffalo's. Rule 22 of the rules framed under s. 20 of the Act by the Government provides that "where milk is sold or offered for sale without any indication as to whether it is derived from the cow or the buffalo, the provision of rr. 16, 17 and 18 shall apply thereto in all respects as if it were cow's milk sold or offered for sale. It is, therefore, clear in this case that the sample in this respect of which the offence is said to have been committed must be dealt with as if it were cow's milk that was offered for sale or sold. The minimum percentage of milk fat is only 3 per cent. under r. 16. The sample contained 3.4 per cent. milk fat. It cannot therefore be said that the sample was below the minimum prescribed so far as milk fat is concerned. It is contended, but there is no evidence to show, that the quantity of solid found in the sample was below the prescribed minimum. Rule 18 does not seem to apply to this case in view of the note that is found below r. 21. In these circumstances it must be held that the offence has not been established in view of the analysis which is relied upon by the prosecution. The conviction and the sentence imposed upon the petitioner are therefore set aside and he is acquitted and the fine, if paid, must be refunded to him.

N.D.

Conviction set aside.

FEDERAL COURT

Appeal from the High Court at Patna

October 12, 1939

GWYER, C. J. SULAIMAN AND

VABADACHARIAR, J.J.

RAM PRATAPJI—APPELLANT

versus

HARI KISHAN DASS AND OTHERS

—RESPONDENTS

Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (VII of 1939), s. 13—S. 13 which re-enacts s. 16 of Bihar Money-lenders Act (III of 1938), is valid.

The Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act VII of 1939, re-enacting in s. 13, s. 16 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938, is perfectly valid. Shyamkant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2), followed.

Judgment.—In this case, a mortgage decree was obtained against the appellant on July 1, 1935, for a sum of Rs. 14,599-6-11. The respondents in this Court having applied for execution of the decree in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Gaya, the appellant filed an application under ss. 16 and 17 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938 (No. III of 1938), for fixing the value of the mortgaged property and for deciding which portion of the property should be sold in order to satisfy the decree. But a Division Bench of the Patna High Court had already held these sections to be void under s. 107 of the Constitution Act, as being repugnant to an existing Indian Law; Vishwanath Narayan Singh v. Mahanth Harihar Gir (1). The Subordinate Judge accordingly, on November 17, 1938, dismissed the application, and an appeal to the High Court was dismissed on the same grounds, on February 6, 1939, since that date, the Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act, 1939 (No. VII of 1939), has been passed re-enacting in s. 13, s. 16 of the Act of the previous year. This Court in Shyamkant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2), held in similar circumstances that it was unnecessary to go into the question whether any of the sections in the earlier Act were void, since the Act of 1939 having been reserved for consideration of the Governor-General and having received His Excellency's assent, could not now be questioned in any Court. We therefore allow the present appeal. The case will be remitted to the Patna High Court with a direction to discharge the order of February 6, 1939, and the order of the Subordinate Judge dated November 17, 1938, and to give the appellant liberty to make such applications as he may be advised under the Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act, 1939 (No. VII of 1939). There will be no order as to costs.

(1) A.I.R. 1939, Pat. 90; 178 Ind. Cas. 279; 19 P. L. T. 760; 11 R. P. 231; 5 B. R. 73; 17 Pat. 714.

(2) (1939) F. O. R. 193; 182 Ind. Cas. 161; A.I.R. 1939 F. O. 74; 1939 O. L. R. 399; 12 R. F. O. 1; 5 B. R. 756; 20 P. L. T. 473; (1939) M. W. N. 674 (F. C.).

B. Order accordingly.

ODDH CHIEF COURT

Miscellaneous Appeal No. 50 of 1937

October 24, 1939

ZIA-UL HASAN AND HAMILTON, JJ.

*SHAMBHOO DAYAL AND OTHERS

—DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

KUNDAN LAL—CREDITOR—

RESPONDENT

U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (XXV of 1934), ss. 4, 9 (5) (a)—Joint debtors who have not joined in making application under s. 4 must be made parties—Subsequent transferees of mortgaged property made parties to mortgage suit and decree passed—Transferees, whether joint debtors with mortgagors.

Section 9 (5) (a) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act makes it compulsory that joint debtors, who have not joined in making the application under s. 4, should be made parties to proceedings before the Special Judge. The definition of debt in s. 2 (a) covers a decretal debt also so that where in a mortgage suit the subsequent transferees from the mortgagors are made parties and a decree is passed against them, the transferees must be deemed to be joint debtors with the mortgagors and in an application under s. 4 by the mortgagors, the transferees must be made parties to the proceeding.

Misc. A. against the order of the Special Judge, First Grade, Lucknow, dated April 27, 1937.

Mr. D. P. Khare, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. L. Verma, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal under s. 45 of the Encumbered Estates Act. The appellants, who are father and sons, filed an application under s. 4 of the Act impleading Lala Kundan Lal, respondent, as the creditor-opposite party. Lala Kundan Lal filed a written statement in which he stated that he had obtained a decree on his mortgage and also contended that all those persons who were parties to the decree in his favour as judgment-debtors were also necessary parties to the present application under s. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act. On this objection the learned Special Judge ordered that all the persons named by the respondent-opposite party in para 9 of his written statement should be made parties to the case before him, and directed the applicants (the appellants) to take necessary steps for the purpose. It is against this order of the learned Special Judge that the present appeal has been brought.

It is conceded before us that the persons ordered by the Court below to be impleaded in the case are subsequent transferees of the property mortgaged to the respondent. It is argued that s. 9 (5) of the Encumbered Estates Act does not contemplate the inclusion of subsequent transferees of a mortgaged property in the expression "joint debtors" but that it refers to those persons only who have borrowed money jointly and are consequently personally responsible to re-pay the debt. We are unable to accept this argument. Under s. 2 (a) "debt" includes any pecuniary liability except liability for unliquidated damages. The definition, therefore, covers a decretal debt also so that the persons mentioned in para. 9 of the respondent's written statement must be deemed to be joint debtors with the present appellants, and as such, the Special Judge shall have to apportion the debt among them. In fact it appears to us that s. 9 (5) (a) of the Act makes it compulsory that joint debtors, who have not joined in making the application under s. 4, should be made parties to proceedings before the Special Judge and so it was incumbent on the learned Judge to make the order that he did when it was brought to his notice that persons other than the applicants were parties to the respondent's decree as judgment-debtors.

It was argued that under s. 18 of the Act the effect of the decree to be passed by the Special Judge would be to extinguish the mortgage previously held by the opposite party respondent, so that the decree which will be given to him by the Special Judge will be a simple money decree and as the other judgment-debtors of the respondent's decree were not parties to the original loan, they would not be affected by the decree to be passed by the Special Judge. No doubt the decree of the Special Judge is to be deemed a simple money decree but it will have to be executed in relation to the same mortgaged property and this being so, it is necessary that those persons who are interested in the property as subsequent transferees should be made parties to the proceedings under the Act and it is, we think, on this principle that s. 9 (5) (a) has been enacted.

It was also sought to show that while the respondent will not be prejudiced by the persons mentioned in the Court's order not being impleaded, the applicants-appellants will suffer loss by their being made parties. We think, however, that it is not necessary to consider what would be the effect of the said persons being made parties on the applicants' interests when it is perfectly clear that under s. 9 (5) (a) of the Act, it is imperative that they should be made parties.

The appeal is without force and is dismissed with costs.

E.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT
Appeals Nos. 266 to 268 of 1937
November 21, 1938

SEN, J.

MON MOHAN BHATTACHARJEE AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

BIDHU BHUSAN DUTTA

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Schools of law—Mitakshara—How far to be considered authority in Bengal—Debts—Legal necessity—Debts incurred for marriage of male member, whether for necessity—Marriage—Sanskara includes marriage—Alienation—Sale of minor's property without legal necessity—Whether void or voidable—Sale not set aside by minor—Transferee from him, if acquires right to sue—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6 (e)—Sale of minor's property—Purchaser in possession—Minor has merely right to sue—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 44—Right to question sale is personal one of minor and cannot be exercised by his transferee.

Although the Dayabhaga School of Law prevails in Bengal nevertheless the Mitakshara is to be considered as very high authority in Bengal on all questions in respect of which there is no conflict between it and the Dayabhaga. [p. 9, col. 1.]

Under the Hindu Law the entire joint family property is liable for the debts reasonably incurred for the marriage of a male member thereof. Gopala Krishnamaraju v. Venkatanarasa Raju (1) and Sundar Bai v. Shiv Narayana (3), relied on. Ramjas Agarwalla v. Chand Mondal (3), referred to.

The term sanskara includes the sacrament of marriage.

The sale by the natural guardian of a Hindu minor of the minor's property when there is no legal necessity for such sale is not void but voidable and is valid until set aside. The minor on attaining majority has the right to have the sale set aside and he must do so within the period fixed by Art. 44, Limitation Act. Until the sale is set aside, the minor's interest in the property amounts merely to a right to sue and therefore a transferee from him does not get anything. [p. 9, col. 2.]

Where a minor's property is sold and the purchaser goes into possession and is still in possession, all the interest which the minor has in the property is a mere right to sue to get the sale set aside and the transfer of such a right is prohibited by s. 6 (e), Transfer of Property Act. [ibid]

The right to question the validity of the sale is a personal right of the minor which can be exercised by him on attaining majority. The purchasers from minor do not acquire this right by their purchase of property from him. Jhaverbhai Hathibhai v. Babhai Becher (4), referred to.

Dr. Radha Benode Pal and Mr. Shyama Pada Majumdar, for the Appellants.

Mr. Bijali Bhushan Sanjal (in Nos. 266 and 268) and Mr. Jyotirindra Nath Das, (in No. 267) for the Respondents.

Judgment.—These are three appeals by some of the defendants in three suits for the declaration of the plaintiffs' title to certain plots of land and for ancillary reliefs. The suits were numbered 949, 950 and 951 of 1934 and were tried together by the Munsif, Second Court, Krishnagar, who decreed them in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge upheld the decision of the trial Court making certain modifications in the decree passed with respect to Suit No. 949 of 1934. The defendants have now appealed to this Court. The appeals were taken up for hearing together and this judgment shall govern the three appeals. At the outset the learned Advocate for the appellants stated that he could not press the appeals arising out of suits numbered 949 and 950. They are Second Appeals Nos. 266 and 268, respectively. These appeals are accordingly dismissed with costs in favour of the appearing respondents.

In Suit No. 951 of 1934 out of which Second Appeal No. 267 arises the plaintiff's case briefly is as follows: There were two cousins Hari Mohan and Hari Nath who had an eight annas share each in certain property which they had inherited from their ancestors. These two cousins separated in mess and property. Hari Mohan died leaving three sons Nut Behari, Pralhad and Dhruba. Nut Behari married Malatimala who is defendant No. 3. He died leaving two sons Ramani Mohan and Abani Mohan who are defendants Nos. 1 and 2, respectively. Pralhad married Satya Kumari, defendant No. 10, and had two sons Murari and Mani Mohan who are defendants Nos. 8 and 9, respectively. Dhruba married Charusila, Dhruba predeceased his brothers leaving Charusila a childless widow. Hari Nath died leaving as his heirs two grandsons Mohini Mohan and Debendra by his daughter as his heirs. They are defendants Nos. 6 and 7, respectively. The plaintiff's suit is concerned with the eight annas share of the property which belonged to Hari Mohan. Dhruba inherited a one-third share in this property. On his death his widow Charusila sold this one-third share to defendant No. 10 Satya Kumari, the wife of Pralhad, for legal necessity. Nut Behari and Pralhad then separated and Nut Behari held his one-third share in the property separately. After Pralhad's death, Satya Kumari and her two sons Murari and Mani Mohan together had a two-third share in the property of Hari Mohan. The plaintiff, by three kobalas Exs. 6, 6-a and 6-b purchased certain plots of land appertaining to this two-third share. This was in Falgun and Chaitra 1335 B. S. corresponding to February and March 1929 and in Baisakh 1336 B. S. corresponding to April and May, 1929. The kobalas were executed by Murari on his own behalf and by Satya Kumari for self and as guardian of her minor son Mani Mohan (defendant No. 9). In the kobala Ex. 6 (a) it was recited that the sale was effected to raise funds to meet the current family expenses and to pay off certain debts. In the kobalas Exs. 6 and 6 (b) it is stated that the property was sold to raise money to meet the marriage expenses of Murari, the adult male son of Satya Kumari. After the sale the plaintiff possessed the land peacefully till 1340 B. S. corresponding to 1933 and 1934, when some of the paddy on the land was forcibly reaped by some of the defendants. Defendant No. 6 then brought a collusive and fraudulent partition suit being Title Suit No. 1 of 1931 and had a compromise decree passed therein declaring that Hari Mohan had a seven annas share in the ancestral property and Hari Nath a nine annas share therein. The plaintiff contended that this was a fraudulent decree and that in any case it was not binding on him. He accordingly sued for a declaration of his title to the property in suit, for confirmation of his possession and for ancillary reliefs.

Various defences were taken in the trial Court, but for the purposes of this appeal, the following only need be mentioned. It was contended that Hari Mohan's share was 7 annas and not 8 annas and that this was declared in a decree passed in a partition suit; the sale by Charusila to Satya Kumari was alleged to be invalid as there was no legal necessity for the sale; as regards the sales by defendants Nos. 8, 9 and 10 to the plaintiff, the defence was that the sale was void inasmuch as the vendors when they executed the sale deeds were fraudulently induced by the plaintiff into believing that they were executing powers-of-attorney in favour of the plaintiff. Defendants Nos. 4 and 5 claimed to have purchased some of the properties in suit from defendants Nos. 8 and 9 in the year 1933 by a kobala Ex. L and defendant No. 6 claimed to have purchased some of the properties in suit in execution of his decree for costs in the Partition Suit No. 1 of 1931. The trial Court held against the defendants on all points. In the lower Appellate Court an additional point was taken. It was contended that the share of defendant No. 9, Mani Mohan, was not affected by the transfers effected by the kobalas Exs. 6 and 6 (b). On the dates of these kobalas defendant No. 9 was a minor and his share was transferred by his mother, defendant No. 10, acting as his guardian in order to meet the marriage expenses of her elder son Murari (defendant No. 8) who was then a major. The argument is that under the Hindu Law the minor's property could not be made liable for such an expenditure and that therefore Mani Mohan's share was unaffected by these transfers. The lower Appellate Court concurred in the finding of the trial Court as regards the defences taken there. With respect to the new point raised, the lower Appellate Court makes the following observations :

"It is true that the eldest son's marriage expenses could not be a legal necessity, but the thing is that the mother really required money for meeting the current expenses of the joint family she was in charge of and so there was legal necessity."

The learned Subordinate Judge then goes on to say that even if it be held that there was no 'legal necessity' for the sale, the plaintiff's title should be declared for the following reasons. He points out that the sale of Mani Mohan's share was not void but voidable and that after the sale all that remained in Mani Mohan was a mere right to sue to set aside the sale and nothing more. This right the learned Judge holds is not transferable by reason of the provisions of s. 6, Transfer of Property Act, and he decided consequently that defendants Nos. 4 and 5 got nothing by the transfer. As regards defendant No. 6 the learned Subordinate Judge holds that the partition decree in execution of which defendant No. 6. purchased part of the property was a nullity and that defendant No. 6, obtained nothing by his purchase. On these findings the learned Subordinate Judge upheld the decree of the trial Court.

It this Court the learned Advocate for the appellants stated that he would urge only one point against the decision of the lower Appellate Court and that he accepted all the other findings. The argument briefly is as follows: The share of Mani Mohan in the property left by Pralhad was not liable to meet the marriage expenses of Murari and therefore the transfers executed by Exs. 6 and 6 (b) could not affect Mani Mohan's share. The learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in holding that the money was required to meet the current expenses of the family. He was also wrong in his view that after the sales Mani Mohan had no interest left in the property except a mere right to sue to set the sales aside. It was contended that by the subsequent sale to defendants Nos. 4 and 5 by Ex. L Mani Mohan expressed his intention to avoid the sales effected during this minority and that by this subsequent sale the previous sales, so far as they affected Mani Mohan's share, were made void. On these grounds it was urged that the plaintiff's title with respect to the share of Mani Mohan in the property in suit transferred by the kobala 6 and 6 (b) had not been established. This in substance is the argument urged before me. Learned Advocate for the appellants had no objection to the suit being decreed with respect to the rest of the property.

In my opinion the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in holding that the sales effected by the kobalas Exs. 6 and 6 (b) were for the purpose of raising money for meeting what he describes as the 'Current expenses' of the joint family. The documents recite that the money was required for meeting the expenses of the marriage of Murari and there are no materials placed before me in support of the view of the learned Subordinate Judge which is mere surmise. The question therefore which first arises for determination is whether the share of Mani Mohan in the property is liable to meet the expenses of Murari's marriage. Learned Advocate for the respondent contends that under the Hindu Law the entire joint family property is liable for the debts reasonably incurred for the marriage of a male member thereof and he referred me to the Full Bench decision in Gopala Krishnamaraju v. Venkatanarasa Raju (1) and to the case in Sundar Bai v. Siv Narayana (2). Both these cases undoubtedly lay down the principle contended for by the learned Advocate for the respondent.

The Madras case is exactly in point. There three brothers mortgaged their joint property to raise funds to meet the marriage expenses of one of them who was an adult. One of the three brothers was a minor at the time. In a suit on the mortgage it was contended that the share of the minor brother was not bound by the mortgage. The Full Bench held that marriage is obligatory on a Hindu who does not desire to adopt the life of a perpetual Brahmachari or of a Sanyasi and that being so, the debts reasonably incurred for the marriage of a twice born Hindu male are binding on the joint family properties.

The Bombay decision deals with the matter exhaustively. The learned Judge referred to a text of Yajnavalkya cited and expounded in the Mitakshara where it is laid down that in a joint Hindu family consisting of several brothers of whom some have and others have not had their sacramental ceremonies (Sanskaras) performed by their father during his lifetime, the former are bound to get these ceremonies performed in respect of the latter out of their joint property. The learned Judge then went on to discuss whether the term "Sanskara" would include the marriage ceremony of a male and after an elaborate examination of the different texts on the point concludes that it does. I respectfully agree with the view that the term "Sanskara" includes the sacrament of marriage. Golap Chandra Sarkar Sastri in his treatise on Hindu Law states that marriage is the last of the "Sanskaras" or sacramental rites that are ordained to have the effect of purifying the body specially from inherited taint, if any. (Hindu Law by Golap Chandra Sarkar Sastri Edition 7, p. 161). If joint property is liable for the debts incurred for performing the "Sanskaras" of a co-parcener then certainly the marriage expenses of a male co-parcener would be a liability on the joint property. Learned Advocate for the appellant in meeting this argument says that this may be the law according to the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law but that it is not so according to the Dayabhaga School. He points out that the decisions relied on deal with persons governed by the Mitakshara. He was not able, however, to point out any text in or ruling under the Dayabhaga Law which is contrary to the view expressed in the cases mentioned above, nor have I been able to find any decision or text which would establish that the Dayabhaga lays down a different rule. There is a case decided by this Court which has, I think, some bearing on the question. I refer to the case in Ramjas Agarwalla v. Chand Mondal (3). In this case two brothers, one a major and one a minor, owned some property. This property was mortgaged by the major brother and his mother acting as guardian of the minor brother. The bond recited that the money was raised to meet the marriage expenses of the minor brother. The question arose whether the marriage expense of the minor constituted a legal necessity which would justify the guardian in mortgaging the property. The case in Sundar Bai v. Shiv Narayana (2) was referred to and Mukherjea, J. in dealing with that case said:

(1) 37 M 2/3; 17 Ind. Cas. 308; A I R 1914 Mad. 432; 23 M L J 288 (F B).

(2) 32 B 81; 9 Bom. L R 1368.

"It is true that marriage is a sacrament or Sanskar in Hindu Law and the only Sanskar for those who are not twice born."

He goes on to say that the Hindu Law, however, did not sanction early marriages of males and he quotes the text of Manu which says:

"Let a man of 30 years marry an agreeable girl of 12 years or a man of thrice eight years a girl of eight years, one marrying earlier deviates from duty."

Mukherjea, J. then went on to point out that the marriage of this minor was in contravention of the provisions of the Child Marriage Restraint Act of 1929 and held that such a marriage did not furnish a legal necessity. I refer to this case merely for the purpose of showing that this Court considered the Bombay decision and did not dissent from the view laid down there that the marriage expenses of a male co-parcener are to be met out of the entire joint estate. From the texts and the authorities I am of opinion that the expenses of the marriage of a Hindu male co-parcener are to be met out of the joint estate in this province as well. Although the Dayabhaga School of law prevails here nevertheless the Mitakshara is to be considered as very high authority in Bengal on all questions in respect of which there is no conflict between it and the Dayabhaga. In this view of the law, I hold that the sales in favour of the plaintiff by Exs 6 and 6 (b) are valid and binding on the share of Mani Mohan as well on that of Murari and Satya Kumari.

This is sufficient to dispose of the appeal. I propose, however, to give my opinion on the other contention raised by the respondent, namely that even if it be held that Mani Mohan's share in the property was not liable for the debts incurred for meeting the marriage expenses of Murari nevertheless the validity of the sales could not be questioned inasmuch as Mani Mohan had not got the sales set aside and inasmuch as defendants Nos. 4 and 5 got nothing by the purchase in 1933 of Mani Mohan's share as Mani Mohan at that time had merely a right to sue which was not transferable at law. It is now well-established that the sale by the natural guardian of a Hindu minor of the minor's property when there is no legal necessity for such sale is not void but voidable and that the sale is valid until set aside. The minor on attaining majority has the right to have the sale set aside and he must do so within the period fixed by Art. 44, Limitation Act. No question of limitation arises in this case but Mani Mohan though he has attained majority has not yet had the sales set aside. The sales, therefore stand and are valid. It certainly cannot be said that the sales have been set aside merely because Mani Mohan has chosen to ignore the sales by his guardian and to sell the same property to defendants Nos. 4 and 5. It has been found by both Courts that the plaintiff went into possession after his purchase and is still in possession. In these circumstances all the interest which Mani Mohan possessed in the property was a mere right to sue to have the sale set aside. The transfer of such a right is clearly prohibited by s. 6 (e), Transfer of Property Act. The purchaser from Mani Mohan by the kobala Ex. L therefore, got nothing. There is an additional reason why the appellants cannot succeed. Murari, Mani Mohan and Satya Kumari who were defendants Nos. 8, 9 and 10 and who were the vendors in the sales sought to be impugned did not appeal against the decision of the trial Court. The only person who had the right to question the sale is Mani Mohan and as he has accepted the decision of the trial Court it must be taken that he has acquiesced in the sale and elected not to dispute it. The right to question the validity of the sale is a personal right of the minor, Mani Mohan which he could have exercised on attaining majority. Defendants Nos. 4 and 5 have not acquired this right by their purchase of the property from him. In this connection I would refer to the case in Jhaverbhai Hathibhai v. Babhai Becher (4). In view of the findings arrived at, this appeal also must be dismissed with costs.

S. Appeals dismissed.

(4) A I R 1933 Bom. 42; 141 Ind. Cas. 808; 34 Bom. L R 1512; Ind. Rul. (1933) Bom. 165.

ODUH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 312 of 1937

October 9, 1939

ZIA-UL HASAN, J.

Pandit SITLA SAHAI—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

Raja SRI RAM AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876), ss 6, 10, 11, 13
—Pre-emption—Suit for pre-emption of part of property sold—Maintainability of—Second appeal—Question of law, if can be entertained for first time.

A suit cannot be instituted under the Oudh Laws Act for pre-emption of part of the property sold, on payment of a proportionate share of the price. Baij Nath v Mahabir Prasad (3), relied on.

When a question of law is raised for the first time in second appeal upon facts either admitted or proved beyond controversy, it is not only competent but expedient in the interests of justice to entertain the plea. Abdul Hafiz v. Manohar Lal (3), relied on.

S. O. A. against the order of the Civil Judge, Rae Bareilly, dated April 30, 1937.

Messrs. Ram Bharosey Lal and Anant Prasad Nigam, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Wasim, for Respondent No. 1.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff-pre-emptor's second appeal against a decree of the learned Civil Judge of Rae Bareilly upholding a decree of the learned Munsif by which he dismissed the appellant's suit for pre-emption.

The learned Counsel for the respondent vendee has contended that the appellant's suit must fail as it was for pre-emption of only part of the property purchased by his client. The certified copy of the sale-deed filed by the plaintiff-appellant shows that by that deed three items were sold. Two of these were shares in certain groves and the third was a one-sixth share in bazar Kundanganj of village Karanpur. It is the last property that the plaintiff wanted to pre-empt by the present suit.

As the law stands in this province, it appears that the suit is clearly not maintainable. In Raj Birendra Bikram Singh v. Brij Mohan Pande (L. R. 61 I. A. 235) (1) their Lordships of the Judicial Committee while interpreting the Oudh Laws Act remarked :

"In the cases now under consideration, the property sold by the vendor was the whole taluqdari mahal containing 163 villages.

The plaintiffs in each suit claimed to pre-empt one of the said villages only. It would be absurd to suggest that they would be bound to tender the whole of the price, namely, Rs. 5,50,000 which was the price at which the vendor was willing to sell and yet there is no provision in the Act which would enable the plaintiffs to tender the amounts at which the plaintiffs valued the two villages respectively as was stated in their plaint or any amount other than the said Rs. 5,50,000. These considerations, in their Lordships' opinion, are conclusive as showing that the claims of the plaintiffs as stated in their plaint are not within the above-mentioned Act and are, therefore, not maintainable."

In Baij Nath v. Mahabir Prasad (1937 O. W. N. 1202) (2) a Bench of this Court held that it is not permissible under the Oudh Laws Act to pass a decree for pre-emption of part of the property sold, on payment of a proportionate share of the price.

It was contended on behalf of the appellant that the plea now raised was not taken in the Courts below and should not, therefore, be allowed to be raised in second appeal. On behalf of the respondent-vendee, I have been referred to para. 14 of the written statement. That paragraph is not very clearly worded but there can be no doubt that both the Courts below considered that by that paragraph the contesting defendants meant to raise the plea that the plaintiff was not entitled to pre-empt part of the property sold. Both the Courts while mentioning the defence of the vendees have referred to the plea that pre-emption of a portion of the property cannot be allowed. The issue framed on para. 14 of the written statement was not decided by the trial Court as it considered that the suit failed on other issues, but there can be no doubt that both the Courts took para. 14 of the written statement as pleading the bar of partial pre-emption. But even if it be supposed that the plea was not raised by the defendants in the Court below, it seems to me that there is no bar to its being entertained in second appeal by this Court. In Abdul Hafiz v. Manohar Lal (1939 O. W. N. 736) (3) a Bench of this Court following the dictum of Lord Watson in Connecticut Fire Insurance Co v. Kavanagh (1892 A. O. 473) (4) held that when a question of law is raised for the first time in the Court of last resort upon the construction of a document or upon facts either admitted or proved beyond controversy, it is not only competent but expedient in the interests of justice to entertain the plea. The plea raised on behalf of the respondent does not require any fresh evidence to be put in but is based on the written statement and on what is not disputed and what is apparent from the copy of the sale deed filed by the plaintiff-appellant himself.

(1) 61 I A 235; 151 Ind. Cas. 74; 11 O W N 843; A I R 1934 P O 153; 7 R P O 26; 67 M L J 149; 38 O W N 989; 60 O L J 143; (1934) A L J 732; 40 L W 784; 9 Luck. 407 (P O).

(2) (1937) O W N 1202; 171 Ind. Cas. 987; 10 R O 151; 1937 O L R 584; A I R 1938 Oudh 37.

The suit of the plaintiff-appellant being for pre-emption of a portion only of the property purchased by the answering respondents, must fail. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

s

Appeal dismissed.

(3) (1939) O W N 736; 183 Ind. Cas. 604; 1939 O L R 537; 12 R O 44; 1939 R D 455; A I R 1939 Oudh 233.

(4) (1892) A O 473; 61 L J P C 50; 67 L T 508; 57 J P 21.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 20 of 1936

December 23, 1938

DAVIS, J. C. AND LOBO, J.

MANGALMAL AGANMAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS NOS. 18 AND 19—APPELLANTS
versus

Haji MUHAMMAD USIF BHORO AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Co-sharers—Co-ownership of Muhammadans and joint ownership of Hindu family—Distinction—Adverse possession—Co-sharers—Essentials—Partition—Allotment—Alienees of co-owners, shares of—Estate not large enough for alienees to get from their vendors' share all they purported to sell—Same piece of land not sold twice over—Principle of priority of first purchaser over subsequent, if applies.

There is a difference between the co-ownership of Muhammadans and the joint ownership of a joint Hindu family, for, while in a joint Hindu family all the co-parceners have a share in the whole property, among Muhammadans who inherit as heirs, each one has a specific share. [p. 12, col. 1.]

To constitute a title by adverse possession in one co-owner as against another, there must be ouster or exclusion; there must be a disclaimer by the one of other's title by open assertion of a hostile title. It is not sufficient to show acts of possession; the possession required must be adequate in continuity or publicity and in extent, to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor. Bhagbhari v. Khatun (2), relied on. [ibid]

In a suit for partition if what the co-owners sold or purported to have sold can be allotted to their alienees on partition, it should be so allotted so that the alienees can get from their vendors what they sold or purported to sell to them. Gemalsingji Khumansingji v. Bai Fati (5), relied on.

The principle that the alienees under the first sale have priority with respect to the lands sold or purported to be sold to them over subsequent purchasers will have no application if the estate is not large enough for the alienees to get from their vendor's share all they purported to sell to them and if the vendors have not sold the same piece of land twice over. Din Dayal v. Gur Saran Lal (7), relied on [p. 13, col. 1.]

Mr. Srikrishindas H. Lulla, for the Appellants.

Mr. Hukumatrai M. Eidnani, for the Respondents.

Davis, J. C.—This is an appeal from the judgment of the District Judge of Larkana in which he modified the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Mehar. The Subordinate Judge in a suit for partition between Muhammadans, the heirs of one Khuda Baksh, who died some thirty years ago, dismissed the plaintiffs' suit against defendant Nos. 18 and 19, alienees of two of the joint owners Hamid and Musa, sons of Khuda Baksh, finding that the claim against them was time-barred, they having been for more than twelve years in adverse possession of the land not only against their vendors but against their sisters, the daughters of Khuda Baksh, through one of whom Amnat, as son and husband, the plaintiffs claimed. But the District Judge was of a different opinion holding that as against the female heirs and against the plaintiffs who claimed through them adverse possession was not proved and this question of adverse possession and the equities to be considered in the partition of the property are the only questions argued before us in appeal.

Now, so far as the question of adverse possession is concerned, it appears that in 1917 the two brothers Musa and Hamid sold not only their own share in the common property to defendants Nos. 18 and 19, but they sold the shares of their sisters also. They sold twelve-annas in the rupee of Survey Nos. 274, 275, 255 and 276, and four-annas in the rupee of 273 and 277. The alienees, defendants No. 18 and 19, can only have perfected their title against the shares of the sisters or the sisters' heirs if they can show a possession on their part having all the necessary attributes of adverse possession. The learned Subordinate Judge appears to be of the opinion that mere possession by strangers who become co-owners by a sale from some of the co-owners was necessarily adverse possession against the rest; but there is a difference between the co-ownership of Muhammadans and the joint ownership of a joint Hindu family for while in a joint Hindu family all the co-parceners have a share in the whole property, among Muhammadans who inherit as these sons and daughters did, as heirs, each one has a specific share. Therefore the ruling to which Mr. Lulla with his usual diligence has referred us relating to Hindus or Sikhs or Buddhists affords us no true guidance. Mr. Lulla, however, relies on Dhumoomal Chandiram v. Kaim Khatu (1) at p. 134 and particularly the passage:

"Now, the Court will not presume and will refuse to believe, without very clear proof, that, when the sons of a Muhammadan pardanashin lady lease or mortgage family lands, they do so adversely to her, that is, in fraud of her rights, or with the intention to defeat them. The natural presumption is that they deal with the lands as managers or agents for her as well as for themselves. We must, therefore, date the commencement of the defendants' adverse possession from the date of the sale to their father."

We do not think that the learned Judge there laid down any general principle of law. It is, in our opinion, merely an expression of his opinion that in certain circumstances the sons of pardanashin lady who leased or mortgaged family lands did so as her agents. That case, however, dealt not, as here, with sale, but with ordinary acts of management. Even so, we think it well that this ruling be kept to its own particular facts for we ourselves think that the Court should be alert to protect the interests of pardanashin women, cut off from the world, and should rely more upon facts than upon presumptions. To constitute a title by adverse possession in one co-owner as against another, there must be ouster or exclusion; there must be a disclaimer by one of the other's title by open assertion of a hostile title. It is not sufficient to show acts of possession; the possession required must be adequate in continuity or publicity and in extent, to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor: Bhagbhari v. Khatun (2) Mr. Lulla argued that the District Judge is wrong when he said that there must be adverse possession to the knowledge of the true owner, but in the case he referred, Secretary of State v. Debendra Lal (3) at p. 137, their Lordships of the Privy Council said:

"As to what constitutes adverse possession, a subject which formed the topic of some discussion, in the case, their Lordships adopt the language of Lord Robertson in delivering the judgment of the Board in Radhamoni Debi v. Collector of Khulna (4) where his Lordship said that, 'the possession required must be adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor.' The classical requirement is that the possession should be nec vi nec clam nec precario. Mr. Dunne for the Crown appeared to desiderate that the adverse possession should be shown to have been brought to the knowledge of the Crown, but in their Lordships' opinion there is no authority for this requirement. It is sufficient that the possession be overt and without any attempt at concealment or that the person against whom time is running ought, if he exercises due vigilance, to be aware of what is happening. If the rights of the Crown have been openly usurped, it cannot be heard to plead that the fact was not brought to its notice."

But there is a great difference between the opportunities of knowledge of the Crown with its officers in every district and in every village and of pardanashin women behind the pardah. Their Lordships say, it is not necessary to show that adverse possession was brought to the knowledge of the Crown. It is sufficient that the possession be adverse and without any attempt at concealment so that the person against whom time is running ought, if he exercised due vigilance, to be aware of what is happening. In this case, the pardanashin ladies did, so far as they could, exercise due diligence but they did not know what was happening. The learned District Judge held that Amnat, the sister through whom the plaintiffs claimed, lived jointly with her brothers and shared the produce of the lands. He finds the Banias, defendants Nos. 18 and 19, did not prove they were exclusively enjoying produce. On the contrary, the evidence showed that Musammam Amnat lived with Hamid and Muso and enjoyed the produce even after her marriage with Usif and that after her death he enjoyed her share. It is not suggested that the Judge was not on the evidence able to find these facts and in second appeal we will not disturb the findings on facts; therefore, from the facts no legal inference of adverse

(3) 66 M L J 134 at p 137; 147 Ind. Cas. 545; A I R 1934 P C 23; 61 I A 78; 61 C 262; 6 R P O 49; 11 O W N 96; (1934) M W N 165; 39 L W 257; 36 Bom. L R 249; 38 O W N 285; (1934) A L J 153; 59 C L J 56 (P O).

(4) 27 I A 138 at p. 140; 27 C 943; 7 Ser. 714; 4 O W N 597 (P O).

(1) 18 L R 133 at p. 134.

(2) 16 S L R 25; 80 Ind. Cas. 118; A I R 1921 Sind 177.

possession can be drawn in favour of the Banias, Mangalmal, defendant No. 18, and Hundomal, defendant No. 19, and the District Judge's judgment on this question must be upheld.

On the question of equities in the partition of the property, Mr. Lulla argues that if what Muso and Hamid sold or purported to have sold can be allotted to their alienees on partition, it should be so allotted so that the alienees can get from Muso and Hamid what Muso and Hamid sold or purported to sell to them. He relies on Gemalsingji Khumansingji v. Bai Fati (5). To this equitable application of s. 41, Transfer of Property Act, we can see no objection. But Mr. Lulla goes further. He says that there were several sales and that his clients the alienees under the first sale of 1917, have priority with respect to the land sold or purported to be sold to them over subsequent purchasers. He relies on Narayan Babaji v. Nathaji Durgaji (6). In this case, however, it is clear that all the purchasers in the subsequent sales which the Court could have recognized, and these are seven in all, the alleged oral sale being excluded will have to make some contribution, will have to give up some proportion of their supposed purchases because the estate is not large enough for the alienees of Hamid and Muso to get from Hamid and Muso's share all Hamid and Muso purported to sell them. Nor does it appear that Hamid and Muso sold the same piece of land twice over, there will be no conflicting claims and no question of priority to the same piece of land: see Din Dayal v. Gur Saran Lal (7) at p. 341. We think the equitable position will be made sufficiently clear to the revenue authorities who are carrying out the actual partition if we modify lines 364 to 374 in the judgment of the District Judge as follows:

"The shares of Hamid, Muso, Karimat and Rahmat would go to the purchasers and the purchasers will contribute equally if they have taken anything in excess of the shares of the vendors. The purchasers will, as far as possible, be kept in possession of the property sold or purported to have been sold to them to the extent of the shares of the vendors in the whole estate if this can be done, and without prejudice to any of the co-owners. The partition should be made according to these directions by the revenue authorities."

We must therefore confirm the judgment of the District Judge with this variation and dismiss the appeal with costs. There are cross-objections by the plaintiff-respondents on the order of costs in the lower Appellate Court, the order being that each party should bear his own costs, and as this order was passed in a partition suit, we think it is a proper order, and the cross-objections are dismissed with costs accordingly.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 253 of 1937

February 24, 1939

LOKUR, J.

LAXMAN MANJUNATHAYA BALWALLI

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

VENKATRAO MANGESHRAO

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 47, O VIII, r. 6—Partition decree keeping certain property undivided pending litigation about it and providing that, that property should be partitioned by metes and bounds after termination of that litigation—Property subsequently lost to family and money acquired in its stead—Separate suit for partition of that money basing right on decree, if barred by s. 47—A suing B for share in certain amount realized by B—B claiming set-off in respect of certain amount awarded to him against A by previous decree—Set-off, if can be allowed—Omission of B to pay court-fee, whether affects his claim to set-off.

Where a partition decree has kept certain immovable property undivided until the termination of a pending litigation concerning such property and has further provided that after the determination of the said litigation, the property should be divided by metes and bounds between the parties according to their shares but after the decree that property is lost to the family and some movable property in the form of money is acquired in its stead, that movable property cannot be partitioned in execution of the decree which made no reference to it, and a separate suit mentioning the circumstances and basing right to the partition of the money on the decree is not barred by s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. Krishna Roy v. Jawahar Singh (1) and Ahmed v. Shaik Essa (2), relied on. [p. 15, col. 1.]

Where A sues B for a share in certain amount realized by B and B in his written statement claims set-off in respect of certain amount awarded to him against A by a previous decree, the set-off can be granted as both the claims are definite pecuniary demands. It does not matter that B had already secured by a judgment against A the amount which he claimed by way of a set-off. The omission of B to pay court-fees on the amount claimed does not affect his claim to set-off.

S. A. from the decision of the District Judge, Kanara, in Appeal No. 121 of 1935.

(5) 40 Bom. L. R. 1205; 179 Ind. Cas. 721; A. I. R. 1939 Bom. 40; 11 R. B. 261.

(6) 28 B. 201; 5 Bom. L. R. 945.

(7) 42 A. 386 at p. 341; 59 Ind. Cas. 67; A. I. R. 1920 All. 253; 18 A. L. J. 287.

Messrs. G. P. Murdeshwar and U. S. Hattayangadi, for the Appellants.

Messrs. D. R. Manerikar and R. A. Mundkur, for Respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3, respectively.

Judgment.—This second appeal arises out of a suit filed by the plaintiffs to recover their share in the moneys realized by the defendants on behalf of all of them. The plaintiffs and the minor defendants were members of a joint Hindu family, and by a compromise decree in the year 1925, they partitioned the joint family property among themselves. Plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 4 were allotted one-fourth share, plaintiffs Nos. 5 and 6 three-eighths share, and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 three-eighths share. One other property, situated in the village of Hosakuli, had been purchased by the family, and as the vendor had filed a suit under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act alleging that the sale was a mortgage, the decree provided that that property should be left undivided until the termination of the said litigation. The part of the decree which dealt with that property ran as follows:

"As there is litigation going on in respect of the property of the village Hosakuli, it is retained in common and undivided. The assessment of the said property should be paid by all the different three branches of the family, according to their respective shares determined in this compromise. Its income also is to be enjoyed similarly. After the determination of the said litigation, the property is to be divided specifically, according to their shares. All costs of the said litigation including the future, are to be borne by all the three different branches according to their shares."

In the litigation it was ultimately held that the transaction was a mortgage, and the vendor was allowed to redeem the mortgage on payment of the amount found due. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 being minors, the Deputy Nazir of the District Court was appointed their guardian and he recovered Rs. 981-4-9 from the mortgagor on February 10, 1933. The plaintiffs, who were entitled to five-eighths share, in this amount, which represented the property of the village Hosakuli mentioned in the compromise decree, made a demand from the Deputy Nazir for their share; but under the orders of the District Judge, plaintiff No. 1 was informed by a letter (Ex. 18) that he and the other plaintiffs should take steps to recover their share by executing the decree. In the meantime the Deputy Nazir himself had presented a darkhast against the plaintiffs to recover Rs. 250 and Rs. 375 which had been awarded to the defendants by the compromise decree in order to equalize the shares. In the suit the defendants put in a written statement asking for a set-off in respect of these amounts. The trial Court held that the suit was barred by s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, that the set-off was permissible, and that on deducting the amount sought to be set-off from the amount due to the plaintiffs as their share, nothing remained due to them. The suit was, therefore, dismissed, and under the circumstances the parties were ordered to bear their own costs. Those findings were upheld in appeal, and the decree of the trial Court was confirmed. In this appeal the plaintiffs have deducted from their claim the amount of the expenses of the litigation and limited their claim to Rs. 493 only. It is urged that their suit is not barred by s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, and that the defendants should not have been allowed to claim a set-off in this suit. It is also contended that, as the plaintiffs were driven to the suit by the reply given by the Deputy Nazir, they should have been awarded their costs.

The suit would obviously be barred under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, if the claim made in the suit could be made in execution of the compromise decree. The extract from that decree, which I have given above, clearly shows that the property of the village Hosakuli was kept undivided as a litigation was pending about it and it was further provided that after the termination of that litigation that property should be specifically divided according to the shares, that is to say, that the property should be divided by metes and bounds between the plaintiffs and the defendants. It did not provide for a contingency of the property itself being lost to the family and the mortgage amount being realized. It was not then known that the property was only in mortgage with the family and that the family was only entitled to recover the amount due under the mortgage. The decree did provide for the cost of the litigation, and the executable part of the decree provided for the partition of the land by metes and bounds. The facts of this case are analogous to those in Krishna Roy v. Jawahir Singh (1). There the plaintiff had purchased a one guntha share in a certain estate and obtained a decree for possession against the defendants. While the plaintiff's suit was pending, and before he took out execution under the said decree, there were certain partition proceedings, whereby the defendants' interest in that estate was converted into a smaller estate in view of their share in the whole estate. It was then held that a separate suit could be brought by the plaintiff to have it declared that the defendants' interest in the former estate had passed into the latter and that it was not barred by s. 244, corresponding to the present s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. The same view was taken in Ahmed v. Shaik Essa (2). In that case an award decree for partition directed a certain sum of money to be paid to the plaintiffs by defendant No. 1 on the plaintiff's handing over certain movable and immovable property and executing certain deeds of conveyance. But subsequently a vessel, which was part of the movable property to be handed over to the plaintiffs, was lost at sea and the plaintiffs were therefore unable to fulfil the condition on which alone they could claim the payment of the amount awarded to them. The plaintiffs issued a notice calling upon defendant No. 1 to show cause why in execution of the decree the Court should not ascertain and fix some sum as the value of, or compensation for, the loss of the vessel to be deducted out of the amount awarded to him, as their vessel could not be delivered. Subsequently, the plaintiffs applied to have the decree amended by stating the sum to be paid in lieu of the vessel, but that application was also refused; and ultimately it was held that the proper remedy was a suit. Starling, J. observed (p. 504*) :

"In my opinion, the only way in which the plaintiffs can obtain what they seek is by filing a fresh suit setting out the decree herein, and the circumstances which have transpired since the passing of that decree, and asking for a declaration of their rights under all the circumstances of the case."

In the present case also certain circumstances have transpired after the compromise decree for partition was passed. That decree contemplated the division by metes and bounds of specific immovable property, but after the decree that property was lost to the family and some movable property was acquired in its stead. Hence that movable property cannot be partitioned in execution of the decree which made no reference to it, and the plaintiffs were right in filing a separate suit mentioning the circumstances and basing their right to the partition of the money on the compromise decree. I therefore hold that the suit is not barred by s. 47, Civil Procedure Code. This litigation was really unnecessary as the trial Court has found that the amount due from the plaintiffs to the defendants is almost equal to the amount claimed by the plaintiffs in this suit, and taking accounts, it found that nothing was really due to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs, however, contend that as the amount due to the defendants is ordered to be paid to them by the compromise decree, and as the defendants have already filed a darkhast to recover that amount, it cannot be claimed as a set-off in this suit. In support of this contention it is pointed out that a written statement asking for a set-off has the same effect as a plaint in a cross suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in respect both of the original claim and of the set-off, and that as the claim of the set-off has already been adjudicated upon and embodied in the decree, there cannot be a fresh suit asking for that very amount. This contention, however, cannot be upheld in view of illustration (d) to O. VIII, r. 6, Civil Procedure Code, which says:

"A sues B on a bill of exchange for Rs. 500. B holds a judgment against A for Rs. 1,000. The two claims being both definite, pecuniary demands may be set-off."

It does not matter that B had already secured by a judgment against A the amount which he claimed by way of a set-off. The only other objection to the set-off is that the defendants should have been called upon to pay the necessary court-fees on the amount claimed. It is true that the defendants should have paid the requisite court-fees, but their omission to pay the court-fees does not affect their claim to the set-off since they can be called upon to pay the necessary court-fees at any stage of the proceedings under s. 149, Civil Procedure Code. Thus, the result is that if the defendants pay the requisite court-fees on their claim for the set-off, nothing will be found due to the plaintiffs, but the plaintiffs had to file the present suit on account of the attitude taken by the Deputy Nazir on behalf of the defendants. (His Lordship then dealt with the question of costs and proceeded further). The result is that the decree of the lower Courts dismissing the suit is confirmed. The defendants shall pay the court-fees on their claim for the set-off in the trial Court. They will pay the plaintiffs their costs in the trial Court to the extent of their claim for Rs. 449-12-7 only, and will bear their own costs in the trial Court. The plaintiff should pay the costs of the defendants in the lower Appellate Court and bear their own. The costs

In this Court will be borne by the parties themselves.

s.

Decree confirmed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 5 of 1935

December 9, 1938

WADSWORTH, J.

CHOKKA DHANAMMA AND ANOTHER

—APPELLANTS

versus

THE COROMANDEL COMPANY, LIMITED, OOCANADA AND ANOTHER

—RESPONDENTS

Tort—Common carriers—Liability for loss of goods—Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (XXVI of 1925), s. 2—Lighter carrying goods from port not to another port but to ship which carries those goods to another port—Lighter, if comes under s. 2.

Common carriers, are liable for the loss of goods entrusted to them for carriage unless the loss be due to an act of God or of the King's enemies.

Where a lighter carries goods from the port but it does not carry those goods to any other port, the fact that the goods transported are placed in another ship, which itself carries them to another port, would not bring such lighter within the purview of s. 2 of Act XXVI of 1925. Moreover, even if such lighter was a "ship" to which that Act applies, cl. (g) of r. 2 of Art. IV of the Schedule to that Act would make the owners of the lighter liable for the loss of goods which is due to the fault of the agent of the carriers.

S. A. against the decree of the District Court of East Godavari at Rajahmundry in A. S. No. 117 of 1933, preferred against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Oocanada, in O. S. No. 56 of 1931.

Mr. V. Govindarajachari and K. V. Rangacharyulu, for the Appellants.

Mr. T. Satyanarayanan, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a contract for the carriage of goods from the wharf at Oocanada to a steamer lying at anchor in the roads. The facts are no longer in dispute. The first plaintiff the Coromandel Company was shipping agent for Messrs. Ralli Brothers and in that capacity through its agent the second plaintiff, arranged for the transport of 875 bags of castor seeds in a lighter of which the 4th defendant was the tindal, whereas the owner has now been found to be the second defendant, defendants Nos. 1 to 3 being members of a joint family. The goods were loaded into the lighter which left for the anchorage some 6 or 7 miles away from the wharf one night and returned on the following evening, whereupon the 4th defendant reported that his boat had sprung a leak and he had been obliged to jettison 330 bags of seeds and further 144 bags had been damaged by sea water. The circumstances were suspicious and an inquiry demonstrated that the 4th defendant's story was false and that the missing bags had been stolen by him or with his connivance. The plaintiffs claimed to recover the value of the lost and damaged goods from the defendants. Defendants Nos. 1 to 3 denied the liability but the suit has been decreed against defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 4 and the family properties of the 3rd defendant. The appeal has been preferred by defendants Nos. 1 and 3.

There can be no doubt that the damage was caused owing to the criminal act of the fourth defendant. If the defendants are common carriers, they are liable for the loss of goods entrusted to them for carriage unless the loss be due to an act of God or of the King's enemies. It is urged they are protected by rules made under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act (XXVI of 1925). The reply to this contention is that by s. 2 of that Act the rules apply only to the carriage of goods by sea in ships carrying goods from any port in British India to any other port whether in or outside British India. There seems to be some doubt whether the anchorage of Oocanada is or is not included within the limits of the port. The plaintiff asserts that the ships are anchored in the port and there is no denial. But the actual notification prescribing the limits of the port is not in evidence. The matter is to my mind, however, not material. The defendants' lighter would come within the definition of a "ship" in Act XXVI of 1925. It carries goods from the port of Oocanada, but it does not, so far as the evidence goes, carry those goods to any other port and the fact that the goods transported are placed in another ship, which itself carries them to another port, would not, to my mind, bring this lighter within the purview of s. 2 of Act XXVI of 1925. Moreover, even if this lighter was a "ship" to which that Act applies, I am of opinion that cl. (g) of r. 2 of Art. IV of the Schedule to that Act would make the defendants liable for this loss which is certainly due to the fault of the agent of the carriers. The decision of the Court below is correct and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

N.D.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Appeals Nos. 57 and 58 of 1938

January 10, 1939

S. K. GHOSE AND B. K. MUKHERJEA, JJ.
KEDAR NATH TUSHNIAL AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAJ KUMAR DAS AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS

Will—Execution—Burden of proof—Propounder stranger to family and attesting witnesses men of opposite camp, if lessens the burden—Probate—Part of will lost—Probate, when can be granted—Testamentary capacity—Presumption.

The burden of proving due execution of the will is always on the propounder, and the burden is not lessened by the fact that the propounder is a stranger to the family and the attesting witnesses are men of the opposite camp. The Court is of course competent to disregard the testimony of some of the attesting witnesses and pronounce in favour of the will, if it is satisfied from the evidence collectively or from the circumstances of the case, that the requirements of law have been complied with and that the witnesses who had spoken against the will had not spoken the truth. Brahma Dutt v. Chaudan Bibi (4), relied on. [p. 23, col. 2.]

Under s. 23F, Succession Act, probate may be granted if the whole will is lost but the contents are proved. But if only a part of the will is lost, probate may also be granted if the contents are proved. Where all but the first page which is lost are found to be genuine, and as to the first page the evidence is sufficient to show the contents, Probate of the will can be granted. Kedar Nath v. Sarojini Dasi (1), referred to. [p. 20, col. 1.]

If, the will is a natural one, and due execution is proved, testamentary capacity is ordinarily presumed.

As. from the original decrees of the District Judge, Sylhet, dated December 23, 1937.

Dr. S. C. Basak, Dr. N. C. Sen-Gupta and Mr. Priya Nath Dutta, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Atul Chandra Gupta, Hiralal Chakravarti, Nikunja Behari Roy and Bhabesh Chandra Barua, for the Respondents.

S. K. Ghose, J.—The appellants before us were the petitioners in the lower Court and they are the heirs of one Damodar Das Tushnial who was a creditor to the estate of Joyram Das, deceased. In these proceedings, they seek to establish that Joyram validly executed a will bearing date Bhadra 31, 1334 corresponding to September 17, 1927. It is not disputed that prior to that date, that is to say, on Falgun 9, 1318, corresponding to February 21, 1912, Joyram had validly executed another will which was registered. At that time, Joyram had two wives, two daughters and four sons. At the time of the disputed second will, one of the wives and one of the daughters had died and three of the sons had attained majority. The main difference between the two wills may be stated as follows: By the first will Joyram dedicated all his immovable properties to an idol and bequeathed his movable properties to his sons. He appointed his sons as *shebait*s and named two executors who were to administer the estate until the sons had attained majority. By the second will, only a portion of the immovables was made debutter and the remaining immovable properties were given to the four sons. Certain other provisions were made in favour of his wife and one daughter who were then living. Joyram died on October 5, 1927. It is further alleged that five days before his death, on September 30, 1927, Joyram executed a deed of gift in favour of his second son, Jitendra in respect of a piece of immovable property. This deed of gift was registered after Joyram's death, but the second will remained unregistered.

For some time after Joyram's death, no application for probate was made in respect of either of the two wills. It appears that on January 22, 1929, Joyram's sons took a loan of Rs. 6,000 by mortgaging some of the immovable properties which would pass to them by the terms of the second will. This loan was given by a land mortgage Bank and the evidence is not now disputed that at time the second will was shown to some of the directors of the Bank by way of proving the title of the mortgagors. About two months later, on March 28, 1929, the four sons of the testator again raised a loan of Rs. 2,000 by mortgaging some of the properties which would pass to them by the second will. This document was also shown to the mortgagees and was in fact made over to them for keeping as title deed. One of the mortgagees has deposed and the evidence on that point is not questioned. On August 13, 1930, Mohendra Chandra Das who was one of the four executors named in the second will filed an application for probate of that will. The proceedings continued for four months until December 12, 1930, when the case was dismissed for default. It may be noted here that to that application for probate one Manindra Kumar Dey as an attesting witness to the second will signed his name in verification for the application. Then followed another transaction. On December 7, 1931, the four sons applied to Damodar Das Tushnial for a loan of Rs. 9,000 upon a mortgage of properties bequeathed to them by the second will. At that time, this document was in the custody of the Court having been there since the filing of the application for probate on August 13, 1930. The loan was given by Damodar Das Tushnial and a part of the money went to pay off the debt due to the land mortgage Bank. Then a step was taken which may be described as curious. On January 4, 1932, two affidavits were sworn, one by Mohendra Chandra Das and the other by Dayadra Nath Das who were two of the four executors named in the second will. In these two affidavits, these two persons stated that they would not take probate or letters of administration of the will in question. These affidavits were filed in Will Case No. 65 of 1930. The other two executors named in that will were Jitendra and Jamini, two of the four sons of the testator.

It may be stated here that there is further evidence that the testator's sons were dealing with the properties as if these properties had passed to them as secular properties in accordance with the terms of the second will. This evidence will be referred to later. Up to this time, the first will had not been mentioned in Court. It appears that the firm of Abdul Majid obtained a money decree against the four sons and started execution case on July 16, 1932, and proceeded to attach the movable properties. On August 15, 1932, the sons filed a petition alleging that the decree had been adjusted. The point to note is that two days before this, on August 13, 1932, an application for probate of the first will was made for the first time. This application was filed by Raj Kumar Das, one of the executors named in the will. The evidence is that the first will was all along in the custody of Raj Kumar. As a result of this application, probate was granted on September 3, 1932. Then Raj Kumar filed a claim case in the execution case. This claim case appears to have been dismissed on May 27, 1932. Meanwhile, on September 27, 1932, the present appellants filed two applications, one for the revocation of the grant of probate in respect of the first will and the other for letters of administration with the second will annexed. Petitions of objection were filed by Raj Kumar, by Hemangini, the widow of the testator, and by the sons. Hemangini and one of the witnesses Radhika Mohan Dutt were examined on commission. The other witnesses were examined in Court before Mr.

Masih, the District Judge. He gave judgment holding in favour of the applicants, namely that the second will was proved and that the first will stood revoked. Against that judgment, Raj Kumar Das filed an appeal to this Court. By the judgment, dated February 4, 1937, D. N. Mitter and M. C. Ghose, JJ. set aside Mr. Masih's decision and remanded the case for re-hearing with a direction that the idol should be represented by a proper guardian before the Court. This was done and some of the witnesses were recalled and cross-examined before the then District Judge, Mr. Younie. He gave judgment taking a view contrary to that of Mr. Masih and held that the alleged second will had not been validly executed by Joyram. He accordingly dismissed the application. Against that judgment these appeals have been filed.

It is quite clear that if the second will be held to be validly executed, the first will will necessarily stand cancelled and the probate already granted of that will will stand revoked. The question in these proceedings is whether the second will has been proved to have been validly executed. It is not disputed in this Court that the second will was in fact signed by the testator and that a ceremony, if it may be so-called, of execution and attestation was gone through. Mr. Gupta appearing for the respondents in this Court does not dispute this fact and indeed, as mentioned already, probate of the second will had once been applied for. The question raised in this Court upon the evidence is with regard to testamentary capacity and proof of attestation. The document does not contain the signature of the testator. It purports to bear a mark and his name was signed for him by the scribe, Raman Bihari De. The names of eight attesting witnesses appear in the document, out of which one Banka Behari Sen has died since the date of the document; another witness Manindra Kumar De and also the scribe Raman Behari De are absent. The other witnesses have been examined. (After discussing evidence his Lordship concluded as follows). So far therefore the evidence leads to the inference that the second will was validly executed by Joyram. It is a document of five pages.

Dr. Basak for the appellants in this Court has stated that it is not his case that the first page is genuine. He concedes that there is evidence to show that the original first page is lost and that another page has been substituted. His further case is that the remaining four pages are genuine. When the case went back on remand the appellants applied to the Court that Raj Kumar who had been contesting the proceedings at the first trial and had taken out probate of the first will should be appointed guardian of the idol for the purpose of these proceedings. This was on March 30, 1937. On the same day, Raj Kumar filed a petition stating that his interests and those of the idol were not identical and suggesting the names of three persons who might be appointed guardian of the idol. The first name was that of Pradyumna Kumar Sen who was related to him and living with him in the same house. Accordingly Pradyumna was appointed guardian to represent the idol. On May 1, 1937, Pradyumna filed a petition of objection in respect of the idol and in para. 21 of that petition he stated that he had reason to believe that the sons of Joyram in collusion with their karmachari Raman Behari had manufactured the will and that he further suspected that specially the first page and the signatures of Baikuntha and Radhika were forged. On May 3 following, he filed a petition in the course of which he stated that he suspected that the first cartridge paper used in the will had been issued by Government long after the alleged date of execution. Thereupon, the sons of the opposite party were called upon to produce the original sheet but this they were unable to do. Evidence was taken of an officer in the office of the Controller of Printing, Stationery and Stamps, Calcutta, and it was to the effect that the first sheet was not in existence on September 17, 1937, that is to say, the date on which the will purports to have been executed, but the other four sheets were in existence at the time. Mr. Younie has found that this spurious first page was substituted for the original one and as to the motive for the substitution, there is the evidence of Surendra to the effect that in the original first page reference was made to Joyram's previous will, but the first page as it now stands contains no such reference. I see no reason why this evidence should not be accepted. The question, was raised after remand and it certainly shows special knowledge on the part of the objector Pradyumna who was representing the idol. Further, the evidence goes to show that the altered page as it now stands is the same as the original first page except the reference to the previous will is omitted. Mr. Younie has been impressed by this evidence which is described as a dramatic development having taken place since the idol was made a party and from this he draws the inference that the entire will has been fabricated.

On the other hand, Dr. Sen Gupta for the appellants in this Court contended that if the change in the first page was necessary, it only goes to show that the original first page was something different and therefore the will could not have been forged. I think this argument is reasonable and should be accepted. As to the time and the motive for the alteration one can only speculate, but so far as the evidence goes, it would be sufficient to infer that the alteration of the first page took place at the time when the application for the probate of the second will was made by Mohendra and the document itself was filed in Court. Possibly, at that time the interested parties had decided that the first will should be suppressed. The present appellants had nothing to do with it. But whatever that may be, it is possible for us to come to the finding, that the original first page of the will in question is lost and that this is not due to any action on the part of the testator himself, that the first page as it stands is in the same terms as the original first page of the will which was executed by the testator except that the reference to the previous will is omitted, and that the remaining four pages are genuine. Now, the first page contains the signature of Radhika Mohan which appears to have been identified by him as being his genuine signature on the false copy, but the signatures of the other attesting witnesses including that of Basanta appear on the remaining four pages of the will and this evidence leads to the inference that Radhika did validly sign the will as an attesting witness on the original first page.

In these circumstances, the question arises whether the petitioners will be entitled to the grant of the probate of the second will. Leaving out the first page, the remaining four pages contain all the secular dispositions made by the testator. There are two schedules mentioned at the end of the document. Of this, Sch. II explains itself because the heading is, "rules for the sheba and puja, etc." Schedule I does not explain itself but para. 3 provides that the sons shall be the owners of all immovable properties after excluding those described in Sch. I. The portion above para. 3 which occurs on the second page, leaving the first page aside, contains some directions as to debutter properties. It is not necessary for the purpose of this case to construe the will by excluding the first page in respect of the properties comprised in Sch. I. But even leaving out the first page, there is no difficulty in understanding the disposition with regard to properties mentioned on the four pages. In this state of affairs, there is no difficulty in granting probate by taking the second to the fifth page of the will as genuine and by taking the first page as proving the contents of the original first page except that reference to the previous will is omitted. Under s. 238, Succession Act, probate may be granted if the whole will is lost but the contents are proved. But if only a part of the will is lost, probate may also be granted if the contents are proved. In Kedar Nath v. Sarojini Dasi (1) only a portion of the will was produced and there was no evidence as to the contents of the remainder of the will. The question arose as to whether probate could be granted of the portion of the will which was produced. McLean, C. J. observed :

"It must, I consider, be taken as settled law in England (see Sugden v. Lord St. Leonards (2)) that probate can be granted of a portion of a will, though, if the extant portion be only the residuary clause, some question may arise, as was pointed out by Lord Herschell in Woodward v. Goulstone (3). We are not, however, dealing with any such clause in the present case. It must be taken to be established by the English decisions that, where the contents of a lost will are not completely proved, probate can be granted to the extent to which they are proved. The present will is proved to the extent of the first sheet."

The present case, however, is stronger. All but the first page are found to be genuine, and as to the first page, the evidence is sufficient to show the contents. In these circumstances there is no difficulty, in my judgment, to grant probate of the will. The appellants are, therefore, entitled to succeed. The result is that the application for letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed will be granted on this understanding, that in the document as it stands, the first page will be taken to be not the genuine first page, but its contents will be taken to be the same as the contents of the original first page, except that in the latter there was reference to the previous will, and the remaining four pages of the document will be taken to be genuine. As the result of this, the probate granted in respect of the first will will stand revoked. The appeals are accordingly allowed. The appellants will be entitled to their costs throughout which will come out of the estate of the testator. A consolidated hearing-fee of five gold mohurs is allowed in both the appeals.

B. K. Mukherjea, J.—I agree with my learned brother in holding that these appeals should be allowed. The appellants before us are the heirs of one Damodar Tushnial who was a mortgagee of certain properties belonging to one Joyram Das, a resident of Sylhet, the mortgage being effected by the sons of Joyram after the death of the latter. The two connected appeals arise out of two applications made by Damodar, while he was alive, for letters of administration in respect of the last will of Joyram which purported to have been executed on September 17, 1929, and for revocation of probate granted to one Raj Kumar Das in respect of an earlier will of the same testator. Damodar died pending these proceedings and the present appellants were substituted in his place. Both the applications have been dismissed by the District Judge of Sylhet and it is against these orders of dismissal that the present appeals have been taken. To appreciate the point in controversy in both these appeals, it is necessary to give here a succinct narrative of the material facts. Joyram Das, who was a prosperous businessman in the town of Sylhet died on October 5, 1937, leaving a widow Hemangini, and four sons, to wit, Jogendra, Jitendra, Jamini and Janaki. He also left surviving him a daughter named Sukeshini who was married to one Basanta Kumar Das.

It is admitted that Joyram executed a will on February 21, 1912, which was duly registered. By this will, all his immovable properties were made debutter and were dedicated to the family deity Sri Sri Giridhari Jew. Certain legacies were given to the testator's first wife Radharani and to his daughter Sukeshini, and the rest of the movable properties including the karbar were given to the four sons in equal shares. The sons were directed to pay Rs. 6 a month, out of the income of the movable properties, for defraying the expenses of worship of an idol called Shamsundar Jew which was installed by the testator at Navadvipa and Rs. 3 a month, as maintenance allowance to the testator's mother-in-law. The executors named in the will were Raj Kumar Das and Dayadra Nath Das. The dispute is as I have said above with regard to a later will, which Joyram was alleged to have executed on September 17, 1927, just eighteen days before his death. By this will some of the immovable properties of the testator which were made debutter by the first will were given to the four sons in absolute right, and the rest were dedicated to the deities Giridhari Jew and Shamsunder Jew, the latter idol having been brought down from Navadwipa and installed in the family dwelling house at Sylhet. The will gave a legacy of Rs. 2,000 to Hemangini, the second wife of the testator, and another legacy of Rs. 200 to his daughter Sukeshini. The movable properties that would remain after paying off the debts of the testator were also given to the sons in equal shares. There were four persons named as executors in this will, namely (1) Mohendra Chandra Das, (2) Dayadra Nath Das, (3) Jitendra and (4) Janaki, the last two being the second and third sons of the testator.

(1) 26 O. 634; 3 O W N 617.

(2) (1876) L R 1 P D 154; 45 L J P 49; 34 L T 372; 24 W R 860.

(3) (1886) 11 'A O 469; 56 L J P 1; 55 L T 790; 35 W R 337; 51 J P 307.

From the evidence it appears that very soon after the testator's death even though no application for probate of the second will was made, the sons began to deal with the properties left by the testator in accordance with the provisions of the second will. These immovable properties which were dedicated to the deities were treated as debutter property while the rest were enjoyed and disposed of as secular properties belonging to the sons in absolute ownership. On January 22, 1929, the three major sons borrowed from the Sylhet Co-Operative Land Mortgage Bank, a sum of Rs. 6,000 on a hypothecation of some immovable properties which were made debutter by the first will of Joyram, but were given to the sons by the second will. Ramani Mohan Das, a retired District Magistrate who was the Chairman of the Bank at that time, swears that a will was shown to him by Jamini, one of the sons of the testator, and he was satisfied on a perusal of the same that the properties which the sons were going to mortgage were not made debutter by the testator. On March 28, 1929, the sons again borrowed a sum of Rs. 2,000 from Mohini Mohan Das and others on mortgage of some properties and Jogendra Mohan Das, one of the mortgagees, has stated in his evidence that a will purporting to be executed by Joyram Das was not only shown to him, but was actually kept in his custody for more than a year.

On August 13, 1930, it appears that an application for probate of the second will was actually made by Mohendra who was one of the executors named in the will, but strangely the application was not proceeded with and it was allowed to be dismissed for default on December 12, 1930. On December 7, 1931, the sons executed a mortgage bond in favour of Damodar Das Tushnial to secure a loan of Rs. 9,000. Out of this sum of Rs. 9,000, only Rs. 1,908 annas odd was taken in cash, and the rest was retained by the mortgagee to pay off the Sylhet Land Mortgage Bank, and take back the mortgage deed. There was also a deed of exchange executed by the sons on June 27, 1932, and by this deed they transferred to one Newali Chand Das certain properties to which they could claim title only under the second will. It appears that one Abdul Majid, a creditor of the sons, attached some property of theirs in execution of a money decree some time in July 1932. After the attachment was made Raj Kumar Das, one of the executors under the first will, who was staying elsewhere, now came forward and presented an application for probate of the first will on August 13, 1932. The probate was granted ex parte on September 3, 1932. On September 27, 1932, Damodar Das, who, as said above, had advanced money to the sons on mortgage of some of the properties, presented two applications before the District Judge of Sylhet: one for revocation of the probate granted to Raj Kumar Das in respect of the first will on the ground that there was suppression of the fact of the existence of the second will when the grant was made and the other for grant of letters of administration with a copy annexed of the second and last will of Joyram.

The applications were contested by Raj Kumar as well as by Hemangini and her sons and daughter. The learned District Judge, by his judgment dated March 29, 1934, held in favour of Damodar Das and allowed both the applications. There were appeals taken against this decision to this Court by Raj Kumar Das and these appeals (viz., F. A. Nos. 83 and 84 of 1934) were heard and disposed of by D. N. Mitter and M. C. Ghose, JJ. on February 4, 1937. The learned Judges set aside the judgment of the District Judge and sent both the cases back for re-hearing on the ground that the deity who was the principal legatee under the first will was not properly represented in the proceedings. It was directed that the Court should appoint a proper guardian for the deity and allow him to contest the probate proceeding.

After the cases went back, Mr Prodyumna Kumar Sen was appointed guardian of the idol, and fresh objection was filed on its behalf. Most of the witnesses who had been examined before, were produced and cross-examined on behalf of the idol. The idol also led additional evidence in the shape of examining Mr. Sanat Kumar Chatterjee, an officer in the Stationery Department of the Government, to show that the first page of the will was a subsequent fabrication; the water-mark on the sheet showing that the paper did not exist at the date when the will purported to be executed. The District Judge by his judgment dated December 23, 1937, dismissed both the applications whereupon the petitioners have preferred these appeals.

The only point in controversy in both the appeals is, as to whether or not the alleged second will of Joyram was a valid testamentary document duly executed by a free and capable testator. If this question is answered in the affirmative, the appellants are not only entitled to letters of administration in respect of the second will, but the grant of probate in respect of the first will must be revoked. On the other hand, if a negative answer is given to this question both the applications of the appellants must be dismissed. Now, it is not disputed by the respondents before us, that the alleged second will of Joyram was in existence at the date of the death of Joyram or rather at the date when it purported to be executed. It is not a document which was fabricated subsequently. Their case is that a ceremony of execution was gone through and the document was brought into existence actually on September 17, 1927. It was not, however, according to them a will of Joyram. It was the will of the sons prepared at their instance and for their benefit and with the assistance of some of their friends and dependants, they managed to stage a show of execution and attestation though the testator had no testamentary capacity and neither could nor did comprehend what the document was. It is true that the sons acted upon the second will and made use of it for the purpose of borrowing money from others for some years after the testator's death. But that, it is said, was quite in accordance with their plan and the circumstances that the sons acted upon the will is not at all material to prove that it was genuine. The last contention is undoubtedly sound, but I think that though the conduct of the sons is not much relevant in this connection yet some weight might be attached to the conduct of the executor under the first will.

Raj Chandra Das, the executor under the first will, did not apply for probate till five years after the testator's death. He says that he was at Brindaban and the reason why he did not apply for probate earlier was that the sons did not pay him the expenses. But he says at the same time that he was paying the costs of probate out of his own pocket. The application for probate was necessary to file a claim in the execution case started by Abdul Majid. The fact that the sons had been mortgaging several immovable properties left by Joyram was too well-known, and it is somewhat strange that Raj Kumar, whose intention, as he says, was to prevent waste by the sons, did not care to come in and apply for probate earlier. A suspicion is also raised by the fact that on January 7, 1931, two of the executors under the second will, viz. Mohendra and Dayadra filed two sworn declarations in Court, declaring that they would never apply for probate of that will. If the sons were really behind this move, it is apparent that having taken as much advantage as they could of the second will, they wanted to give it a decent burial and a way was being prepared to bring in the first will which alone could save the properties mortgaged or attached from the clutches of creditors. As neither of these persons have come forward to depose in the case in spite of strenuous efforts by the petitioners, it is difficult to say what exactly was behind the declarations which they made. It cannot be denied that Mohendra at any rate admitted the execution of the second will in his application for probate of the same.

Before I turn to the evidence relating to execution of the will and the presence or absence of testamentary capacity in the testator, it would be convenient to look at the provisions of the second will as compared with those of the first. To me, it seems that the provisions of the second will are quite natural and the changes are necessary in view of the altered state of circumstance since the first will was executed. The first wife of Joyram had died already and hence a legacy was given to Hemangini by the second will and not to the first wife. The idol Shamsundar Jew had been brought down from Navadwipa and the second will makes the dedication in favour of both the deities and not to Giridhari Jew alone. Rupees 2,000 were set apart for education expenses of the minor son. The material change was that some of the properties which were made debutter by the first will were given to the sons by the second. Raj Chandra says that the business of Joyram which was the only valuable movable property had dwindled down very much during the last five years of his life. It seems to me to be very natural that having regard to the declining state of his business, the testator thought it proper to bequeath some of the immovable properties to his sons. If the business failed they had nothing else to fall back upon and it might be necessary to raise money for carrying on the karbar itself. I am not impressed by the argument advanced on behalf of the respondents that Joyram, a religious man as he was, could not think of taking back some of the properties which were already given to the deity.

In the first place, a gift by a will is not effective till the death. Even assuming that there was a mental dedication, it appears that the testator himself found it necessary to sell some of the properties that were made debutter by the first will, before his death. Two deeds of sale of the year 1924 in respect of some of the immovable properties have been made exhibits in this case: vide Exs. 23 and 32, and they strengthen the view that after the execution of the first will conditions had changed which induced the testator to alter his plan of making all his immovable properties debutter. The other argument which found favour with the District Judge, is that the testator was not in good terms with his sons and as one of his sons was mentally defective, he could not have any reason for altering the debutter. I don't think that this contention has much weight. As the karbar was not expected to bring much income, some of the immovable properties were given to the sons. The fact that the eldest son was mentally defective and the youngest was a minor could not possibly affect the situation. The second son indeed was once implicated in a criminal case, but it does not appear that the father had lost his natural affection for this son. The story of Heamangini, that this son was turned out of the house, does not appear to be a credible one. After all, the sons were all treated alike, and no distinction was made between one son and another in the first will of Joyram. As the debutter created by the first will was an absolute debutter, I fail to see, how the sons who were made shebaita could derive any substantial secular benefit from the debutter properties.

Coming now to the evidence relating to execution of the will, it is undoubtedly true as was contended by Dr. Basak, that the appellant had to encounter a great difficulty in the way of producing the attesting witnesses before the Court. Many of them, including the scribe, did not appear even after issue of warrants. Those who came and deposed were unwilling witnesses and some turned positively hostile. The burden of proving due execution of the will is always on the propounder, and the burden is not lessened by the fact that the propounder is a stranger to the family and the attesting witnesses are men of the opposite camp. The Court is of course competent to disregard the testimony of some of the attesting witnesses and pronounce in favour of the will, if it is satisfied from the evidence collectively or from the circumstances of the case, that the requirements of law have been complied with and that the witnesses who had spoken against the will had not spoken the truth: vide Brahma Dutt Chaudan Bibi (4). (After examining some evidence his Lordships proceeded further). If the story of the draft is accepted, and there is no reason why it should not be accepted, there remains no doubt that the will was really the will of Joyram. Radhika Mohan Dutt is the last witness whose evidence is material on the point. He was present when the will was being written by Raman Behari and he saw the testator putting his mark. He himself as well as Dr. Baikuntha and Hem Chandra, also signed the will as attesting witnesses. On being asked about the mental condition of the testator the witness says nothing definite. He could not say whether he had intelligence or not though he was not unconscious, and adds that had he not intelligence, he would never have executed a will. I think this witness corroborates the story of execution and attestation as given by Basanta, and his evidence does not show that the testator had no testamentary capacity.

If, as I have said above, the will is a natural one, and due execution is proved, testamentary capacity is ordinarily presumed. None of the attesting witnesses, including the family doctor, says anything from which it can be inferred that the testator had no clear idea of the extent of his property or the claims of those who were entitled to his bounty. The beneficiaries with certain minor exceptions were the same as in the earlier will, and, if the testator had the first will in his mind, the few changes that were introduced by the second will did not at all make it a complicated instrument which a man of his age even though suffering from illness could not comprehend. Besides, the objector's specific case was that the testator was unconscious, and this I think has not been established by any reliable evidence. The evidence of Hemangini on this point is not worth acceptance. That the testator had testamentary capacity is also proved by a deed of gift which was executed after this will. I cannot agree with the learned Advocate for the respondent that the deed of the gift was manufactured after the death of Joyram and it was the result of Kala's blackmailing. The document was admitted in evidence under s. 89, Evidence Act, and unless there is something to the contrary proved by proper evidence, we must presume that it was properly executed and attested. There is nothing unnatural in this deed. The small plot of land at Navadwipa was lying vacant and it was given to one of the sons of the donor. The result is that I do not agree with the view taken by the learned Judge, and in my opinion, the evidence and circumstances of the case do establish that the second will was duly executed and attested and was the work of a free and capable testator. Ordinarily I would have been reluctant to disagree with the trial Court on questions of fact which depend mainly on oral evidence, but here the major portion of the evidence was recorded not by Mr. Younie against whose judgment the present appeals have been laid, but by Mr. Masib, who actually pronounced his decision in favour of the propounder. Mr. Younie had before him, the witnesses only when they were cross-examined on behalf of the idol.

(4) A I R 1916 Cal. 374; 31 Ind. Cas. 686; 20 C W N 192.

Then there remains another question, as to whether, having regard to the finding of the trial Court which has not been challenged in appeal, that the first page of the will, as it is before the Court, is not genuine, we can grant letters of administration in respect of the will either in whole or in part. It can now be taken to be proved, that the first page of the original will has been tampered with and a new page was substituted in its place. Dr. Basak on behalf of the appellants argues that even if the first page of the will is left out, he is entitled to probate in respect of the remaining sheets of the will about which there is no dispute, and relies upon the decision in Sugden v. Lord St. Leonards (2). It was held by Cockburn, C. J. in that case, and this was agreed to by Sir George Jessel, M. R., that if all the contents of a lost will are not before the Court, probate should be allowed of that which it has, so long as it is satisfied that it has the substantial part of the will made out. This case was discussed and considered in Woodward v. Goulstone (3). There the only part of the will with regard to which convincing evidence was available was the residuary clause and nothing was known about the legacies. In such a case, it was held, the principle in Sugden v. Lord St. Leonards (2), cannot be made applicable. Though there is no statutory provision covering such cases in the Succession Act, the principle in Sugden v. Lord St. Leonards (2), together with the qualification as indicated in Woodward v. Goulstone (3), has been held to be applicable in India: Vide Kedar Nath v. Sarojini Dasi (1). In the case before us, the four sheets of the will, about the genuineness of which no question can arise, contain complete disposition of all the properties of the testator save and except those which are described in Sch. (I). We know for certain what the properties in Sch. (I) are and therefore there is no difficulty in saying that we have got here a substantial part of the will and the legacies mentioned there are not in any way dependant on the gift of Sch. (I) properties.

But I think, we can go further in this case, and say that the contents of the first page are sufficiently established by other evidence. The second page of the will begins with the latter portion of para. (2). Paragraph 1 and a part of para. 2 therefore are wanting. From the rest of the will the conclusion is irresistible that para. 1 contained a disposition of Sch. (I) properties. We think that the evidence of Surendra who carried the instructions of the testator to the Pleader Rajendra Das makes it clear that the first page of the will as it now stands is a reproduction of the first page of the original will, subject to this, that the present sheet does not contain any clause regarding the revocation of the previous will which the original sheet did. The internal evidence also shows that the first page contained a disposition of Sch. (I) properties in favour of the deities. We hold therefore that both the appeals should succeed. The petitioners are entitled to letters of administration with a copy annexed of the will of Joyram dated September 17, 1927, and the first page of the will must be taken to be the first page of Ex. (1) with an additional clause that the previous will of 1912 had been revoked by this will. The probate granted to Raj Kumar in respect of the first will must be revoked.

D.

*Appeals allowed.OUDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 187 of 1937

September 1, 1939

RADHA KRISHNA, J.

SAHEB DIN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GAURI SHANKAR—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT

*Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 111 (g)
—Forfeiture—Essentials—Lessor, if must give notice to lessee—Second appeal—Question of law can be raised.*

Under s. 111 (g), Transfer of Property Act, in order to work a complete forfeiture, it is not only that the lessee should have renounced his character as such but the lessor should have given notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease.

A plea of law, which goes to the very root of the case, can be entertained in second appeal. The Official Liquidator of M. B. Moola Sons, Ltd. v. Perin B. Burjorjee (1), relied on.

S. J. A. against the decree of the Additional Civil Judge, Lucknow, dated December 10, 1936, upholding the decree of the Munsif, South, Lucknow, dated September 30, 1936.

Mr. D. N. Bhattacharji, for the Appellant.

Mr. B. P. Misra, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is the defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for ejectment brought against him by the plaintiff-respondent on the allegation that the defendant was holding the land in suit as his lessee and the lease was determined by forfeiture on the ground that the lessee had renounced his character as such by setting up a title in himself. The Courts below have decreed the suit.

In second appeal before me it has been argued that in order to work a complete forfeiture it is not only that the lessee should have renounced his character as such but the lessor should have given notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease. No such notice was given and, therefore, it is argued that the suit was not maintainable.

The other contention put forward on behalf of the appellant is that the plaintiff failed to prove his title.

It is admitted that if the relationship between the parties is that of lessor and lessee then the case would be governed by the provisions of s. 111, cl. (g) of the Transfer of Property Act as amended in 1929.

I have heard the learned Counsel for the parties. I am of opinion that the first contention raised by the learned Counsel for the appellant must prevail. Section 111 (g) runs as follows :

"A lease of immovable property determines—(g) by forfeiture, that is to say,—(1) in case the lessee breaks an express condition which provides that, on breach thereof the lessor may re-enter * * * or (2) in case the lessee renounces his character as such by setting up a title in a third person or by claiming title in himself; or (3) the lessee is adjudicated an insolvent and the lease provides that the lessor may re-enter on the happening of such event; and in any of these cases the lessor or his transferee gives notice in writing to the lessee of his intention to determine the lease;"

A perusal of the last sentence will show that the giving of notice in writing is an essential condition of forfeiture taking effect in law. In fact the act of lessee renouncing his character as such makes the lease only voidable, that is, gives the lessor a right to avoid the lease but the lessor is not entitled to take possession until he actually avoids the lease by issuing a notice in writing as set forth in the last sentence in cl. (g) of s. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act. My opinion which is based entirely upon the language of the enactment referred to above is that a lessor cannot file a suit for ejectment until after he has given notice because till then the relationship of lessor and lessee subsists.

On behalf of the respondent it is contended that the above plea is a new one and raises a question of fact and should not be permitted in second appeal. The plea, in my opinion, is a pure plea of law and I am of opinion that in order to entitle him to a decree for ejectment, it was necessary for the plaintiff to set up definitely in his plaint a case to the effect that he had complied with the provisions of law by issuing a notice. A plea of law, like the present one, which goes to the very root of the case, can be entertained in second appeal. The plea of law in the present case arises upon the allegations in the plaint itself and upon the record of the case and I consider that it is not only competent but expedient in the interests of justice to entertain such a plea (Vide The Official Liquidator of M. E. Moola Sons, Ltd. v. Perin R. Burjorjee, A. I. R. 1932 P. C. 118) (1).

On the view expressed by me above it must be held that the suit as framed was not maintainable. It is not necessary to decide the other point raised by the learned Counsel for the appellant.

The result is that the appeal is allowed, the decree passed by the Courts below is reversed, the suit filed by the respondent is dismissed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

(1) A. I. R. 1932 P. C. 118; 136 Ind. Cas. 737; 36 C. W. N. 877; 55 C. L. J. 362; 10 R. 242; 34 Bom. L. R. 1071; (1932) M. W. N. 680, 59 I. A. 161; (1932) A. L. J. 706; 36 L. W. 75; 63 M. L. J. 131; 9 C. W. N. 930; Ind. Rul. (1932) P. C. 151 (P. C.).

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 968 of 1934

October 24, 1938

WADSWORTH, J.

CHERUTTY AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

NAGAMPARAMBIL RAVU AND OTHERS

—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Maintenance — Daughter—Maintenance denied to daughter during lifetime of her father—If can file suit directly against manager of joint family—Proper course for her to be followed, stated—Minor co-parcener—Maintenance, denied to him—In suit by him for maintenance he must make also alternative claim for partition—Minor co-parcener, whether can claim maintenance without making alternative claim for partition.

A daughter, during the lifetime of her father is not entitled to bring a suit directly against the manager of the joint family property, ignoring the fact that the primary responsibility for her maintenance is upon the father and his properties, both joint and separate. The proper course for a daughter to adopt, if during the lifetime of her father, she has been denied maintenance, is not to bring a suit for maintenance against the manager of the joint family, but to bring a suit against her father claiming maintenance out of his properties, joint and separate. After she has got her decree, she may, if necessary, enforce it by the sale of her father's share in the joint family properties. This would presumably lead to a proper partition in which the rights of each branch of the family could be equitably worked out.

A co-parcener cannot claim maintenance if he is entitled to claim partition. But although it cannot be said that in no circumstances can a Court give a decree for maintenance against the family properties in favour of the minor co-parcener, yet in the vast majority of cases, where the circumstances would justify a decree for maintenance, they would also justify a decree for partition and so it should be open to the Court to pass that decree which the Court thinks best in the interests of the minor whose rights have been denied. From this, it follows that a minor coparcener who has been denied maintenance and wishes to claim maintenance should bring his suit in the alternative claiming partition or maintenance as the Court thinks fit, unless his guardian decides to adopt the usual form of a suit claiming partition in the property. Bhagwan Singh v. Kawal Kaur (2) and Ramdas v. Lachman Das (3), distinguished. [p. 27, col. 2]

[Quere.—It is very much doubtful whether a minor co-parcener has a right to claim maintenance without at least putting it within the power of the Court to give the ordinary relief of partition should the Court think fit].

S. C. A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, South Malabar at Calicut in A. S. No. 176 of 1931.

Mr. K. P. Ramkrishna Ayyar, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. Subramanian, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by plaintiff No. 1, his wife (plaintiff No. 2), his son (plaintiff No. 3) and his daughter (plaintiff No. 4), against the defendants who represent a collateral branch of the same family, claiming arrears of maintenance, on the basis that the family is undivided. The lower Appellate Court, though it expressed a very strong opinion that the family was not undivided, unfortunately gave no finding on the subject and the whole suit was dismissed on the ground that a co-parcener cannot claim maintenance, but should sue for partition. This decision overlooks the fact that neither plaintiff No. 2 nor plaintiff No. 4 are co-parceners, one being the wife and the other the daughter of a co-parcener. There is no appeal by plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2. The appeal is preferred only by plaintiff No. 3 (the son) and plaintiff No. 4 (the daughter). The contention in appeal based on the observations of the Privy Council in Rama Rao v. Rajah of Pittapur (1) at p. 784 is that the son is entitled to be maintained out of the joint family property because he is a co-parcener and that the daughter is entitled to be maintained out of the joint family property, because she is a female member of the family whom the family is obliged to maintain until her marriage. The grounds on which the claim is made are therefore different in the case of the son from those in the case of the daughter. As to the claim of the son, it is, I think, undoubtedly the ordinary rule that a co-parcener cannot claim maintenance if he is entitled to claim partition. Objection has been taken on the ground that the authorities quoted in the text-books in support of this proposition are all Bombay authorities. But the proposition is stated both by Mr. Mayne and Sir Dinshaw Mulla in general terms and no Madras authority to the contrary has been quoted before me.

(1) 41 M. 778 at p. 784; 47 Ind. Cas. 354; A. I. R. 1918 P. O. 81; 45 I. A. 148; 35 M. L. J. 392; 34 M. L. T. 276; 16 A. L. J. 833; 28 C. L. J. 428; 5 P. L. W. 267; 20 Bom. L. R. 1056; 23 C. W. N. 173; (1918; M. W. N. 922 (P. C.).

Mr. Ramkrishna Iyyar has quoted two Lahore cases, one which is that in Bhagwan Singh v. Kawal Kaur (2) where a widow claiming maintenance for herself and her minor son and daughter was given a decree against assets of the joint family, comprising a certain allowance for the widow and an additional sum for each of the minor children. In this case, the learned Judges did not consider the question whether the minor boy should or should not have brought a suit for partition and the fact that he had rights as a co-parcener as distinct from his rights as a minor entitled to maintenance is not referred to. The other case quoted is that in Ramdas v. Lachman Das (3) which was a case in which two grandsons sued their grandfather for maintenance during the lifetime of their father. It was observed that the grandfather's liability for maintenance arose only owing to the possession of joint family properties in his hands. This was of importance as affecting the question of jurisdiction which was the question actually decided in that case and no decision was given on the merits of the suit which was remanded for disposal in the light of the decision on the jurisdiction question. I do not think this can be treated as an authority for the proposition that the sons can get a decree for maintenance against the manager of the family during the lifetime of their father without claiming a partition. The argument which has the greatest force with reference to the claim of the son rests on the fact that the minor son's right to claim partition is not an absolute right, whereas he has an absolute right to be maintained out of the family property—at any rate, to the extent of his share; and it is argued that if he can claim partition only in circumstances which make it necessary to divide the family property in his interests, there would be no remedy for the refusal of maintenance in circumstances which do not make the partition desirable in his interests. I do not think it necessary for me for the purpose of the present case to lay down that in no circumstances could a Court give a decree for maintenance against the family properties in favour of the minor co-parcener. But it does appear to me that in the vast majority of cases where the circumstances would justify a decree for maintenance, they would also justify a decree for partition and it should, in my opinion be open to the Court to pass that decree which the Court thinks best in the interests of the minor whose rights have been denied. From this it seems to me to follow that a minor co-parcener who has been denied maintenance and wishes to claim maintenance should bring his suit in the alternative claiming partition or maintenance as the Court thinks fit, unless his guardian decides to adopt the usual form of a suit claiming partition in the property. I doubt very much whether a minor co-parcener has a right to claim maintenance without at least putting it within the power of the Court to give the ordinary relief of partition should the Court think fit. It seems to me obvious that a claim for separate maintenance by a co-parcener without any partition is likely to lead to great complications in any subsequent working out of his right to partition.

With reference to the claim of the daughter, I doubt very much whether the daughter during the lifetime of her father is entitled to bring a suit directly against the manager of the joint family property, ignoring the fact that the primary responsibility for her maintenance is upon the father and his properties, both joint and separate. In the present case, we have the curious position of the father and the daughter joining together to sue the manager for the daughter's maintenance. A daughter whose father is a member of a joint Hindu family has a right to be maintained by her father and out of his share in the joint family property. To allow her to get a decree directly against the manager of the joint family property would, in my opinion, be to create a situation which would almost certainly lead to complications and probably to injustice. Her maintenance would have to be charged on a particular item. That item might well be sold in execution of her decree. If that were done, would the father be allowed at a subsequent partition to take his full share of the balance of the joint family properties, ignoring the fact, that one item had been taken away to satisfy a liability which is primarily his own. It is suggested that a decree could be given and the charge could be made subject to a proviso that if it were realized, the item of property sold should be treated as part of the share of the father. It does not seem to me practicable to make any such provision which would have the effect of attempting a partial partition. It seems to me that the proper course for a daughter to adopt if, during the lifetime of her father, she has been denied maintenance, is not to bring a suit for maintenance against the manager of the joint family, but to bring a suit against her father claiming maintenance out of his properties, joint and separate. After she has got her decree, she may, if necessary, enforce it by the sale of her father's share in the joint family properties. This would presumably lead to a proper partition in which the rights of each branch of the family could be equitably worked out. Seeing that the daughter's right is primarily against her father's share and that is a right which is derived from him, I do not consider that she should be allowed to bring a suit directly against the person in charge of the family properties, instead of proceeding against the person who is primarily responsible for her maintenance and whose share in the family properties is ultimately liable. In the result, therefore, I dismiss the appeal with costs. Leave to appeal granted.

(2) A I R 1927 Lah. 280; 101 Ind. Cas. 201; 8 L 360; 28 P L R 201; 9 L L J 117.

(3) A I R 1936 Lah. 853; 169 Ind. Cas. 321; 9 R L 733.

N.B.

Appeal dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

First Appeal No. 53 of 1935

August 22, 1938

LOBO AND WESTON, J.J.

VIRBHANDAS SHAMSING AND OTHERS—

APPELLANTS

versus

DASUMAL KESHOWDAS AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENT

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 3, 5, 130—Dissolution of partnership—Certain partners paid off and in return assigning their interest in assets of partnership to remaining partners—Whether amounts to transfer of property—Assignment to those remaining partners of debts due to firm can only be made by writing signed by other partners.

The definition of "transfer of property" is sufficiently wide to cover cases in which on dissolution of a partnership, certain partners are paid off and in return, give up or assign their interests in the assets of the partnership. Where those partners arrange that the remaining partners are to be entitled to the debts due to the firm, such an arrangement amounts to a transfer of an actionable claim, and under s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, such a transfer could be made only by a writing signed by the other partners. Brijmohan v. Mahabeer (1) and Mulibai v. Shewaram Menghraj (2), distinguished.

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal for the Appellants.

Mr. Srikishindas H. Lulla, for the Respondents.

Weston, J.—The facts leading to this litigation are as follows: Suit No. 62 of 1931 in the Court of the First Class Sub-Judge, Sukkur, was filed in the name of the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing of Sukkur, said to have been already dissolved, by two partners Changomal and Seommal against another firm Dasumal Keshowdas of Pir Jo Goth through nine persons. The defendant partners are said to be the descendants of one Takhandas and to have formed a joint family business among themselves. Although in the plaint it is suggested that defendants were the only partners of the firm of Dasumal Keshowdas it was pleaded by defendants that there were also certain other partners in this firm. The nine defendants were also concerned in the plaintiff firm of Virbhandas Shamsing and it appears that this firm of Virbhandas Shamsing was made up of the two plaintiffs, the nine defendants and three other persons, who were not made parties to the suit, as partners. This is not stated in the plaint but was disclosed by plaintiffs following an application by defendants under O. XXX, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, 1908. The case of plaintiffs was that the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing was dissolved on October 30, 1930, and that a balance sheet or po'amel was drawn up at that time. The two plaintiffs then took on the business with its assets and liabilities and the other partners then ceased to have any connection with the firm. The firm of Dasumal Keshowdas, as such, had had dealings with the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing and on the date of the dissolution of the latter firm, owed it an amount of about Rs. 15,000. The present suit therefore filed originally, as has been stated, in the name of the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing was for the recovery of this amount of Rs. 15,000 from the firm of Dasumal Keshowdas.

Defendants among other defences pleaded that the suit was not maintainable and that as plaintiff's firm had been dissolved, all the partners of that firm were necessary parties to the suit. After written statements were filed plaintiffs Changomal and Secomal applied to amend the plaint by striking out the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing and continuing the suit themselves in their personal capacity. The application was allowed and an amendment made. The learned Subordinate Judge held that on the evidence it was proved that there had been dissolution of the partnership of Virbhandas Shamsing and that plaintiffs had taken up the assets and liabilities of the partnership. He held, however, that as the suit was by plaintiffs in their individual capacity as assignees of the outstandings of the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing, this assignment of the debt due to the firm could only be made under s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, by means of an instrument in writing signed by the transferors or their duly authorized agents. As there was no such instrument, he has dismissed the suit with costs.

Plaintiffs appeal and it is contended by Mr. Dipchand on their behalf, firstly, that no document in writing was necessary in order to give plaintiffs a right to sue for a debt due to the firm, and secondly, in the alternative that even if a document in writing is necessary, yet such a document exists by reason of the potamal drawn up at the time of dissolution of the partnership. In view of the amendment of the plaint, it is no longer necessary to consider whether, although the firm of Virbhandas Shamsing had ceased to exist, the suit by Changomal and Secomal in the name of the firm was not maintainable in view of the fact that the firm existed and these persons were partners when the cause of action accrued. Plaintiffs probably in view of the provisions of O. XXX, r. 9, have chosen to base their case upon the arrangements said to have been made at the dissolution of partnership.

We would remark that the evidence that the arrangement pleaded was accepted by all partners appears to us very unsatisfactory. It is admitted that there were partners other than plaintiffs and defendants, but we have not been able to find evidence that these other partners who are not parties to the suit were consulted about or accepted the arrangements said to have been made. On this ground alone we think that plaintiffs must fail. Assuming, however, that the arrangement was proved that all the partners agreed that Changomal and Secomal were to be entitled to the suit debt, in our view such an arrangement amounts to a transfer of an actionable claim, and under s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, such a transfer could be made only by a writing signed by the other partners. That the suit debt is an actionable claim appears from the definition in s. 3, Transfer of Property Act, Section 5 of the same Act, defines transfer of property as an act by which a person conveys property to one or more persons or to himself. Mr. Dipchand has relied upon certain cases of joint Hindu family businesses such as Brijmohan v. Mahabeer (1), in which it was held that in a Mitakshara joint family business no assignment is necessary when a co-parcener retires from membership of the family business. But we do not think that these cases can be applied to other partnerships. In our view the definition of transfer of property is sufficiently wide to cover cases in which on dissolution of a partnership, certain partners are paid off, and in return, give up or assign their interests in the assets of the partnership. In England when a change in a firm has occurred assignment of the debts of the old firm in the new firm is necessary if the new firm wishes to sue to recover these debts: vide Lindley on Partnership, 10th Edn., p 359. In the present case, we understand that partners other than plaintiffs were given cash credits in consideration of their giving all rights in the assets of the firm. This being so, we hold that s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, requires that the acquisition by plaintiffs or the assignment to plaintiffs of the actionable claim now in suit could not be effected except by a document in writing signed by the other partners.

Mr. Dipchand has relied upon the ruling of this Court reported in Mulibai v. Shewaram Menghraj (2), which is said to lay down that s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, is not exhaustive of all methods of devolution of interest. This was a case where there had been a devolution by a decree of the Court, but such a devolution is expressly saved from the operation of s. 130 by s. 2 (d), Transfer of Property Act, and this ruling cannot be taken to mean that devolutions other than those exempted from the operation of s. 130 are valid. It only remains to see whether in the present case the writing required by s. 130 exists. No such writing appears on the record of the case, and for evidence of the existence of any such writing we do not think we need go further than the statement of the plaintiff Changomal when (at p. 16 of the paper-book) he says : "There were no signatures on the potamel." The conclusion must be that no writing signed by other partners was made to effect the assignment of the suit debt to the present plaintiffs. The suit as brought therefore was not maintainable. The appeal must fail and is dismissed with costs.

(1) 63 O 194; 166 Ind. Cas. 781; 40 O W N 808; 9 R O 614.

(2) A I R 1926 Sind 78; 90 Ind. Cas. 111.

D. Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeals Nos. 151 and 249 of 1936

December 13, 1938

VARADACHARIAR AND ABDUR RAHMAN, JJ.

SURATHU SITHARATHNAMMA—

APPELLANT

versus

PILLARISSETTI SESHAMMA AND ANOTHER

—RESPONDENTS

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 17—Suit by widow against persons claiming as legatees under her husband's will, for recovery of possession of his property on ground that he died intestate—Alternative prayer for maintenance—Separate court-fee for alternative claim, if must be paid—Hindu Law—Maintenance—Widow—Provision by husband in his will as regards maintenance to be granted to his widow, if deprives Court of power to fix reasonable maintenance—Mere fact that widow was living away from her husband during his lifetime without any justifiable cause, whether causes forfeiture of her right to maintenance.

Where a widow brings a suit for recovery of her husband's property alleging that he died intestate, against persons who claim to be legatees under the will executed by her deceased husband with a prayer in the alternative for maintenance, the payment of court-fees for the higher claim for possession is sufficient to cover the alternative claim for maintenance as well, and no separate court-fee is payable for such alternative claim. [p. 31, col. 1.]

Any provision made by the husband in his will as regards the wife's maintenance cannot be regarded as taking the matter out of the Court's power to fix a reasonable maintenance but can only be taken as a suggestion made by the husband as to what would be a reasonable provision for maintenance when the provision made by the husband in his will for the maintenance of his wife and minor daughters appears to be inadequate, the Court has power to substitute a more reasonable provision. Promotha Nath Roy v. Nagendrabala (1), relied on. [ibid.]

Obiter.—A widow does not forfeit her right to maintenance from her deceased husband's estate merely because she was living separate from her husband during his lifetime without any justifying cause but not for any improper purpose, nor is she debarred from enforcing the right against the legatees from her husband, more especially so when the husband's conduct during his lifetime clearly shows that he never regarded his wife as having forfeited her claim to maintenance. Surampalli Bangaramma v. Surampalli Brambaze (4), relied on, Naganna Naidu v. Lakshmi Debi (2), explained, Sankaramurthy v. Subbamma (3), distinguished.

As. against the decree of the Sub-Judge (Additional), Masulipatam, dated December 9, 1935.

Messrs. G. Lakshmanna and P. S. Ramachandra Ayyar, for the Appellant in No. 249 and for the Respondents in No. 151.

Messrs. P. V. Rajamannar and K. Subba Rao, for the Respondents in No. 249 and for the Appellants in No. 151.

Varadachariar, J.—These appeals arise out of the same suit which related to the estate of one Pillarisetti Butchi Venkatarao Naidu who died at Masulipatam on November 17, 1932. Plaintiff No. 1 is the junior wife of the deceased and plaintiff No. 2 is her minor daughter. The defendant is the daughter of the deceased by his predeceased senior wife. The main prayer in the plaint was for recovery of possession by the plaintiffs on the footing that the deceased died intestate. As the defendant was setting up a will alleged to have been executed by the deceased on May 10, 1932, there were alternative prayers for maintenance, for the marriage expenses of plaintiff No. 2, etc. The defendant set up Ex. 1 as the will left by the deceased. The plaintiff denied its genuineness and contended that even if it had been executed by the deceased, it must have been got from him at a time when he was not of a sound disposing state of mind and as a result of undue and overpowering influence exercised by the defendant and those interested in her. The defendant denied these allegations. The will Ex. 1 contains certain provisions as regards the maintenance to be paid to the plaintiffs and the money to be paid for the marriage expenses of plaintiff No. 2. The plaintiffs contended that even if the will was true and otherwise valid, these provisions as regards the maintenance, marriage expenses, etc., could not affect their right to a reasonable provision for the same under Hindu Law. The learned Subordinate Judge held that Ex. 1 was duly executed by the deceased in a sound disposing state of mind and was not brought about by any undue influence. He accordingly dismissed the suit so far as it claimed possession of the estate. He was however of opinion that the provisions in Ex. 1 as regards maintenance and marriage expenses to be paid to the plaintiffs were inadequate and unsubstantial and were not binding upon the plaintiffs. He was also of opinion that the security for the same provided by the will was of very little value. He accordingly enhanced the amounts payable to the plaintiffs under these heads and made better provisions for securing their payment. The plaintiffs have preferred A. S. No. 249 of 1336 against this decree and the defendant has preferred A. S. No. 151 of 1936.

So far as the claim for recovery of possessions of the estate on the footing of intestacy is concerned, we see no reason to differ from the conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge (His Lordship then discussed the evidence and proceeded). It only remains to deal with the alternative claim to maintenance and other payments. The defendant in her appeal has contended that the lower Court has fixed the maintenance too high. A question has also been raised in support of her appeal that, in the circumstances, the Court has no power to interfere with the provision made by the deceased in the will. The plaintiffs on the other hand have, in their appeal, claimed that a more liberal provision should be made for their maintenance and for the expenses of plaintiff No. 2's marriage. Having given to the contentions of both sides our best consideration, we see no reason to interfere with the rates fixed by the lower Court.

On the question of law raised by Mr. Subba Rao on behalf of the defendant, he drew our attention to the conflicting observations of the two learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court who took part in Promotha Nath Roy v. Nagendrabala (1). It happened in that case that both the learned Judges agreed as to the propriety of the provision that had actually been made in the will. The observations on the general question were therefore obiter. It has not been disputed before us that if the husband had bequeathed his property ignoring the wife's claim to maintenance, such giving away will not affect the widow's claim to maintenance. If this is the true legal position, it appears to us that there is more to be said in favour of the view taken by Cox, J. in Promotha Nath Roy v. Nagendrabala (1), that any provision made by the husband in his will as regards the wife's maintenance cannot be regarded as taking the matter out of the Court's power to fix a reasonable maintenance but can only be taken as a suggestion made by the husband as to what would be a reasonable provision for maintenance. Mr. Subba Rao conceded that if the provision in the will was so unsubstantial as practically to make it illusory, the Court might regard it as a fraudulent exercise of the husband's power, if any, in the matter. Without using such strong language, the learned Subordinate Judge, has in this case, held that the security provided in the will for the payment of maintenance to the plaintiffs is of very little value.

It is no doubt true that for many years before the testator's death, the husband and the wife had been living apart; but there are conflicting versions as to the reason for the same. Fortunately, no improper motives have been suggested for the plaintiffs living apart and it must be said to the credit of both the husband and the wife that in spite of all the strain involved on their good-will by such living apart, the husband never thought that the wife was no longer entitled to claim maintenance or by her conduct had forfeited it. Even during the time that he was ill, he took particular care to see money sent to her every month for her maintenance and a provision has been made in the will on the same lines. While giving credit for this to the husband, we cannot help feeling that when it came to his making these provisions in the will, the estrangement caused by such living apart has weighed his feelings far too much against the plaintiffs. The mere fact that during his lifetime he has been giving her Rs. 20 per mensem will not of itself establish that that was an adequate provision for all time. The first plaintiff was day by day growing older and her father on whom she might at one time have relied was growing older too. On the other hand, plaintiff No. 2, as she was growing in age, would require greater expenditure to bring her up in a decent way befitting their position in society. There is again the fact that during his illness which was chronic and protracted, the husband had to spend large amounts on his own treatment and that might well have made it difficult for him to make a more liberal provision for the plaintiffs. But that necessity ceased with his death. In these circumstances, we have come to the conclusion that the provision made by the deceased in his will in favour of the plaintiffs is inadequate and it is within the power of the Court to substitute a more reasonable provision.

The learned Counsel for the defendant next contended that by reason of plaintiff No. 1 living apart from her husband for so many years, she must be deemed to have forfeited her right to maintenance and that a right to the same in these circumstances cannot be enforced against the legatee from the husband. In support of this proposition, he relied on the decisions in Naganna Naidu v. Lakshmi Debi (2) and Sankaramurthy v. Subbamma (3). The point decided in Sankaramurthy v. Subbamma (3), does not now arise for decision. The learned Judges recognized the existence of a conflict of judicial opinion on the point then before them, namely the right of a daughter-in-law to claim maintenance from a legatee who has taken the father-in-law's self-acquired property under a bequest. The decision proceeds on the footing that the daughter-in-law had no legal right to claim maintenance from the father-in-law during his lifetime. That is not the position here; because, subject to the defendant's argument as to forfeiture by reason of separate living, the plaintiffs undoubtedly had a legal right to claim maintenance from the defendant's father. The decision of the Privy Council in Naganna Naidu v. Lakshmi Debi (2), does not support the argument that a wife for ever forfeits her claim to maintenance by living away from the husband. Their Lordships were only dealing with a claim for arrears of maintenance claimed in respect of a period during which the wife had been living away from the husband without justifiable cause. No question arose in that case with reference to a claim for future maintenance. We have examined the record of that case and the judgment of the Subordinate Judge explains why no claim for future maintenance had to be considered in that case. The wife did not there sue for future maintenance and as a matter of fact, her husband died two months after the institution of the suit. By the affirmation of the trial Court's judgment, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee could not be taken to have negatived the wife's right to future maintenance, because the learned Subordinate Judge stated in that case at the conclusion of his judgment that since the date of her husband's death, the plaintiff would certainly have been entitled to maintenance. It seems to us therefore safe to proceed on the footing that in Naganna Naidu v. Lakshmi Debi (2), their Lordships did not pronounce an opinion on the question whether a wife who, during her husband's lifetime had lived apart from him without justifiable cause but for no improper purpose forfeits her right to maintenance for all time or is merely prevented from claiming separate maintenance during the time that she is living apart. In Surampalli Bangaramma v. Surampalli Brambaze (4), one of the learned Judges was clearly of opinion that it would merely be a case of suspension of the right and not a forfeiture. Even on this question, it is unnecessary in the present case to express a definite opinion, because the husband's conduct itself clearly showed that he never regarded the wife as having forfeited her claim to maintenance. As we have observed already, he was, throughout his lifetime, remitting moneys to plaintiff No. 1 for the maintenance of herself and plaintiff No. 2 and made what he considered a suitable provision for the same in the will. The only question for decision therefore is as to the reasonableness of the provision that has been made by him.

(2) A I R 1928 PC 187; 110 Ind. Cas. 30; 55 M L J 242; 28 L W 105; 48 C L J 171 (P.C.)
 (3) A I R 1938 Mad 914; 179 Ind. Cas. 121; 48 L W 411; (1938) M W N 922; 11 R M 514; (1939) 1 M L J 301; 1 L R (1939) Mad. 242.

It was next contended by the learned Counsel for the defendant that the lower Court had overestimated the income from the Salt Factory and that the provision made by the lower Court in favour of the plaintiffs was much too onerous to the defendant. On the other hand, it has been contended by the learned Counsel for the plaintiffs that the lower Court's estimate of the income was unduly low and that the provision made by the lower Court is inadequate. We do not think there is any justification for the contention that the lower Court's estimate of the income is too high. It is true that the testator contemplated the possibility of the income sometimes going below Rs. 1,000; but the suit was actually tried three years after the testator's death and the defendant was in the best position to produce satisfactory materials to establish what the income was. Though we have held that the plaintiffs were not justified in suggesting any kind of conspiracy between D. W. No. 4 and the defendant during the testator's lifetime to bring into existence the will, Ex. 1, there can be little doubt that during the trial D. W. No. 4 has been doing his best to support the defendant's case. The reason given for the non-production of the factory accounts for the years 1932-33 and 1933-34 is wholly unconvincing. The accounts for 1934-35 have been produced. Mr. Lakshmanma has contended that even these accounts are not reliable because, according to him, the prices shown for the sale of salt are not true prices. The learned Subordinate Judge was also of the opinion that D. W. No. 4 and the defendant were estimating the income much too low. We think that the figure fixed by him is perhaps the safest estimate in the circumstances. On that basis we see no reason to differ from the rates fixed by him for the maintenance of the plaintiffs and for the expenses of plaintiff No. 2's marriage.

(4) 31 M 338; 18 M L J 254.

The result is that both the appeals must be dismissed with costs and the lower Court's decree confirmed except in respect of two matters. As the plaintiffs instituted the suit in forma pauperis, the lower Court has made provision in its decree for payment of the court-fee payable to Government and the amount thus directed to be paid is Rs. 2,539-13-0. Mr. Lakshman has contended—and we think rightly—that the lower Court has arrived at this figure on a wrong view of the law. The plaint contained alternative prayers either for possession or for maintenance. When the matter was before the District Court, the District Court made an order on January 15, 1935, directing that court-fee should be calculated under s. 17, Court Fees Act, on three separate heads, namely the claim for possession, the claim for maintenance, etc., and the claim in respect of Sch. C. Totalling up the three heads the learned District Judge made up the sum of Rs. 2,539-13-0 as follows: Rupees 1,582-7-0 for recovery of possession, Rs. 837-7-0 for the maintenance claim and Rs. 119-15-0 for Sch. C claim. The inclusion of Rs. 837-7-0 as a separate item seems to us unwarranted. The payment of court-fee for the higher claim for possession was in the circumstances sufficient to cover the alternative claim as well. The sum of Rs. 2,539-13-0 mentioned as court-fee in the lower Court's decree will accordingly be reduced to Rs. 1,702-6-0.

It has also been brought to our notice that the decree of the lower Court does not incorporate the provision in the judgment for the expenses of plaintiff No. 2's marriage. This provision will be included in the decree as it is covered by the provision for charge made in the concluding portion of the lower Court's decree. The decree will, however, state that the amount awarded for the marriage expenses will be claimable only three months before the date fixed for the marriage.

N.S.

Order accordingly.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 332 of 1936

October 10, 1938

Bose, J.

Musammât RENUKABAI—APPELLANT

versus

BHEOSAN HAPSAJI JUNGHARE

AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 100, 91, 53, 3—Agreement creating charge offending against latter part of s. 100—Validity—Charge, how created—In default of payment of maintenance, the plaintiff given right to cultivate fields by taking possession—Whether creates charge—Mortgage of such fields with notice, effect of—Enforcement of charge against mortgagee—Form of decree—Burden of proving that transfer was for value and without notice—Conduct which can be regarded as wilful abstention from making inquiry—Notice to agent, is constructive notice to principal.

The first part of s. 100, Transfer of Property Act, deals with substantive rights and the second with the manner in which they are to be enforced, that is to say, with the adjective or procedure law. That being so, the latter portion of the section cannot be said to govern the former. An agreement which clearly falls within the definition cannot therefore be invalidated altogether simply because it contains provisions which offend against the procedural law, as laid down in the latter portion of the section. (p. 35, col. 1.)

The agreement which provides that in default of payment, of maintenance by one party to the plaintiff, the latter would be at liberty to cultivate the fields by taking possession of the same, the intention is that the plaintiff is to look to the profits from this land for her maintenance, for a particular period. That clearly creates a charge. It does not amount to a mortgage, for there is no transfer of any interest in the property charged and such a charge cannot be enforced by sale of the land. When the parties themselves expressly contract that the remedy for default in payment shall be delivery of possession for a particular period, namely during the lifetime of the charge holder and not sale, the Courts would not be justified in substituting a totally different contract for the one made. Khajaj Sulekhan Qadir v. Salimullah Bahadur (1) and Nawab Umjad Ali Khan v. Mohamdee Begum (2); relied on. [ibid.]

Where the property thus charged was mortgaged, the mortgagee having the constructive notice of the charge and there being default in payment of maintenance, the charge was sought to be enforced against the mortgagee:

Held, that the decree should approximate as near as may be to a decree for foreclosure; that is to say, the defendant must be given the chance of redemption if he desired to keep the property in his possession. The relief was an equitable one and so could be moulded to suit the requirements of the case.

The possession of a mortgagee who takes with constructive notice of the charge, is that of a trustee, or to be more accurate resembles that of a trustee, under s. 91 of the Trusts Act. Consequently, he is as much bound to fulfil the obligation which attaches to this property as the mortgagor himself. An equitable lien arises under the law. Omrao Begam v. Secretary of State (3) and Varden Seth Sam v. Luckpathy Royjee Lallah (4), followed.

Whether the matter falls squarely within s. 100, Transfer of Property Act, or whether it comes under a more general rule of law, the burden is on the transferee to establish that he is a bona fide transferee for value without notice. Bhup Narain Singh v. Gokul Ohand (5), relied on.

Where a mortgagee knows about the law of registration, and also that if he wants to make sure that the property mortgaged to him was free from encumbrances, it is necessary for him to search the registers and yet while actually instituting a search or rather causing one to be made, refrains from making the same, his conduct can only be regarded as wilful abstention. Agra Band v. Barry (6), referred to [p. 36, col. 1.]

Where the registers of the Registrar contain a reference to a particular agreement creating a charge on particular property on the date on which they were examined on behalf of the mortgagee, an omission to look at the entries against this property and to look into them carefully must be held to be due either to wilful abstention or to gross negligence and the mortgagee must be held to have constructive notice of the charge.

S. A. from the appellate decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated March 30, 1936, in Civil Appeal No. 58-A of 1935, confirming the decree of the Court of the First Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Amraoti, dated November 1, 1935.

Diwan Bahadur K. V. Brahma, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. R. Bobde, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—The plaintiff sues for possession of a field to the extent of a 1-3rd share and for arrears of maintenance.

The field originally belonged to a joint Hindu family of which the plaintiff was a member. On a partition between the male members, this field was assigned to the share of the plaintiff's grandson Ramrao. He undertook to pay the plaintiff a maintenance allowance of Rs. 300 a year and agreed in default to hand over the field to the plaintiff for her cultivation and enjoyment during her lifetime. This agreement is embodied in a registered document, Ex. P-1, dated February 8, 1926.

On March 20, 1926, Ramrao mortgaged the field to one Lalji, the father of the defendants Nos. 2-4 for Rs. 8,000 (Ex. B-9).

After this, on November 29, 1926, he sold the field to one Ramchandra Suryabhan. The first defendant who was a co-sharer, thereupon brought a suit for pre-emption, obtained a decree on June 23, 1928, and obtained possession. He also agreed at the same time, since, according to the plaintiff, the responsibility for paying the plaintiff her maintenance allowance had now devolved on him, to pay the plaintiff her Rs. 300 a year. The plaintiff says he did so up to January 1, 1932, but as he stopped payments after that date she sued him and obtained a decree on April 30, 1934, in Civil Suit No. 577 of 1933.

In the meanwhile the defendants Nos. 2-4 had sued on their mortgage (C. S. No. 32 of 1932). They obtained a final decree for foreclosure and took possession on November 4, 1933. The first defendant was thus dispossessed.

The plaintiff's case is that the defendants Nos. 2-4 are now liable for the maintenance allowance and since they have refused to pay it on demand, the plaintiff is entitled to possession. Hence this suit.

The principal defence to the action in the lower Courts was that the defendants Nos. 2-4 are bona fide transferees for value without notice and so are not bound by the charge. The lower Courts have upheld this plea and have dismissed the plaintiff's claim. She appeals here.

The main point taken here on behalf of the defendants Nos. 2-4 is that the document in question, Ex. P-1 does not create a charge at all and that, therefore, no question of notice arises.

The document is in the following terms:—

"You are my grandmother and you are entitled to maintenance from me. Hence I shall give you Rs. 300 on account of maintenance each year in the month of January and shall obtain your receipt. In default to pay the aforesaid maintenance allowance at the stipulated time, I shall pay interest thereon.....I shall pay you this amount each year as stipulated. In case of default in the payment of the maintenance amount, I agree in writing to let you cultivate the following fields and thereby let you maintain yourself."

The last sentence is taken from the transaction given me by the learned Counsel for the defendants-respondents. I agree it is a more correct rendering of the original than the official translation:

It will be seen that the agreement was that the plaintiff was to enter upon possession and cultivate herself in the event of default and not that the property should be brought to sale in the manner contemplated by s. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. This, it is argued, differentiates the agreement in question from a charge and, therefore, it is argued, considerations which apply to charges cannot be applied here.

Section 100 of the Transfer of Property Act defines a charge in the following words:

"Where immovable property of one person is by act of parties made security for the payment of money to another, and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property."

This part of the section has not been touched by the amendment.

Then, having defined a charge, the section continues to deal with the manner of its enforcement. Before the amendment, it ran thus :—

"and all the provisions hereinbefore contained as to a mortgagor shall, so far as may be, apply to the owner of such property, and the provisions of ss. 81 and 82, shall, so far as may be, apply to the person having such a charge"

After amendment it reads as follows :—

"and all the provisions hereinbefore contained which apply to a simple mortgage shall, so far as may be, apply to such a charge."

It will be seen that the first part of the section deals with substantive rights and the second with the manner in which they are to be enforced, that is to say, with the adjective or procedural law. That being so, I do not think the latter portion of the section can be said to govern the former. It may be relevant in considering whether a charge was really intended to be created but I do not think that an agreement which clearly falls within the definition can be invalidated altogether simply because it contains provisions which offend against the procedural law. Therefore what we primarily have to see is whether the agreement here falls within the ambit of the definition. That resolves itself into two questions: (1) was the intention to make the property security for payment of the money, and (2) does it not amount to a mortgage?

I have no doubt about the first point. The agreement was that in default of payment, the plaintiff was to be at liberty to cultivate the fields. The intention therefore was that the plaintiff was to look to the profits from this land for her maintenance. That clearly creates a charge. See Khajaj Sulehman Quadir v. Salimullah Bahadur (1). It does not amount to a mortgage, for there is no transfer of any interest in the property charged. Therefore the conditions of the definitions are fulfilled.

But I also agree that the charge here cannot be enforced by sale. When the parties themselves expressly contract that the remedy for default in payment shall be delivery of possession for a particular period, namely during the lifetime of the charge-holder and not sale, I do not think the Courts would be justified in substituting a totally different contract for the one made. The difference is a material one, for if sale is the remedy, then the owner stands a chance of losing his property for all time, whereas if possession is all that can be claimed, then his proprietary interest in the property is unaffected and his right to possession revives on the death of the charge-holder. It is to be observed that s. 100 contemplates other methods of enforcement, for the words relating to sale are so far as may be and their Lordships of the Privy Council observe in Nawab Umjad Ali Khan v. Mohumdee Begum (2) that

"unless some authority is cited to show that the transaction is invalid, effect should have been given to the manifest intention of the parties"

The trouble arises here because in India the one word "charge" is used to embrace not only charges properly so-called, which arise by act of parties, but also liens which arise by operation of law. In the one case, namely of charge proper, remedy by sale is of the essence, but not necessarily so in the case of a lien.

As between the immediate parties to the agreement, it does not much matter what the transaction is called, for it could clearly be specifically enforced. If Ramrao had failed to pay, the plaintiff could have compelled him to perform his bargain and place her in possession. In those circumstances the possession of the defendant, who, as I shall show later took with constructive notice of the charge, was that of a trustee, or to be more accurate, resembled that of a trustee, under s. 91 of the Indian Trusts Act. Consequently, he is as much bound to fulfil the obligation which attaches to this property as Ramrao was. An equitable lien arises under the law. Cases of analogous liens under the English Law are to be found in Oote on Mortgages, Vol. I, p. 80 and Vol. II, p. 337. The Privy Council also envisage the possibility of equitable charge in India in Omrao Begum v. Secretary of State (3) and Varden Seth Sam v. Luckpathy Royjee Lallah (4). See also Ghose's Law of Mortgages in India, 4th Edition, Vol. I, p. 130 et seq.

That brings me to the question of notice. There is not much difficulty there. Whether the matter falls squarely within s. 100 or whether it comes under a more general rule of law, the burden is on the transferee to establish that he is a bona fide transferee for value without notice. This has been

(2) 11 M I A 517 at p 548; 10 W R 25; 2 Suth. 98; 2 Sar. 315 (P O).

(3) 19 O 584 at p 593; 19 I A 95; 6 Sar. 192 (P O).

(4) 9 M I A 307 at p 326; 1 Sar. 857, 1 Suther 460; 19 B R 756 (P O).

(1) 49 O 820 at p 836; 69 Ind. Cas. 138; A I R 1922 P O 107; 31 M L T 79; 4 U P L R (P O) 70; 43 M L J 385; 24 Bom. L R 1257; 27 C W N 101; 21 A L J 1; 27 O L J 56; 49 I A 153 (P O).

settled by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Bhup Narain Singh v. Gokhul Chand (5), where they quote a passage from an earlier ruling of the Board in Varden Seth Sam v. Luckpathy Royjee Lallah (4). Their Lordships stated there that it does not matter whether the charge is an equitable or a legal one for the principle is the same and continued :

"As one who owns property subject to a charge can, in general, convey no title higher or more free than his own, it lies always on a succeeding owner to make out a case to defeat such prior charge."

That settles the question.

The lower Appellate Court has placed the burden on the plaintiff and so has the first Court, but that, according to their Lordships' decision, is wrong.

It may be conceded that registration does not operate as constructive notice here because the amendment to s 3 of the Transfer of Property Act, had not been made at the date of the mortgage but the definition of notice was the same.

"A person is said to have notice of a fact when... but for wilful abstention from an enquiry or search which he ought to have made, or gross negligence, he would have known it."

This makes the matter as variable as the proverbial Chancellor's foot. What would be gross negligence in one case would not be so in another; what would amount to wilful abstention in one man would not necessarily be so in another. The type and kind of search expected of one person would not be the same as that required of another. It all depends upon the man's knowledge and the means of information which lay to his hand.

"It is merely the course which a man dealing bona fide in the proper and usual manner for his own interest, ought, by himself or his solicitor, to follow with a view to his own title and his own security. Agra Band v. Barry (6)."

In the present case there can be no doubt that the defendant knew about the law of registration. He knew that if he wanted to make sure that the property mortgaged to him was free from encumbrances it would be necessary for him to search the registers. I say he knew this because he actually did institute a search, or rather caused one to be made. That being so, armed with that knowledge, if he had refrained from making a search, it could only have been regarded as wilful abstention in his case.

(5) 13 Pat. 242 at p 251; 147 Ind. Cas. 1134; A I R 1934 P C 68; 61 I A 115; 6 R P O 108; 11 O W N 330; 39 L W 363; 15 P L T 67; (1934) M W N 206, 66 M L J 255; 38 O W N 393; (1934) A L J 291; 38 Bom. L R 421; 59 O L J 139 (P O).
(6) (1874) 7 H L 135.

It is not a matter of law; it is not that the law requires a search in every case. It is a question of fact, pure and simple. Would a man possessed of the knowledge which the defendant possesses, or rather possessed at the relevant date, knowing all he did, acting honestly, anxious to take a mortgage free from encumbrances, have searched the registration registers? If yes, then an omission to do so would either be wilful abstention or gross negligence.

I stress this because the lower Courts, and especially the lower Appellate Court, seem to think that the matter is one of law and have decided the case accordingly. I refer in particular to the following sentence :

"No duty is cast by the law to take an inspection of the registry."

In the present case I can only come to one conclusion on the facts. The defendant did cause a search to be made. He must have done that for some reason. The only reason possible was to see whether the property was free from encumbrances and whether the title sought to be conveyed resided in the mortgagor. That being so, he was aware of the value and necessity of a search when taking a mortgage of property and if he was aware of that, then it was incumbent on him, possessed of that knowledge, to make the necessary search or cause it to be made on his behalf.

It is necessary to come to this finding before one passes on to the next step, because if it was not necessary for him to make a search, then the fact that he made, or caused to be made a very cursory one, would not tell against him. On the other hand, if it was necessary, then a cursory glance through the registers and an omission to look at the entries relating to this property could only have been due to wilful abstention or to gross negligence. No other conclusion is possible.

Now we know that the registers did contain a reference to this particular agreement on the date on which they were examined on behalf of the defendant. I have also held that it was incumbent on the defendant, armed with the knowledge he had, to inspect or cause these registers to be inspected. That being so, an omission to look at the entries against this property and to look into them carefully must, in the circumstances of this case, have been due either to wilful abstention or to gross negligence.

The next question is whether the defendant can be charged with the negligence or bad faith of his agent. It is now settled that he can. The matter is dealt with in Mulla's Transfer of Property Act, 1933 Edition, p. 33. In spite of a Calcutta decision to the contrary, their Lordships of the Privy Council decided in Mohori Bibee v. Dharmodas Ghose (7) that the acts and knowledge of the agent were the acts and knowledge of his principal, and this as Sir Dinshaw Mulla points out accords with the principle that "he who acts through another is deemed to act in person." Were it otherwise "notice would be avoided in every case by employing agents."

This principle has now been embodied in Explanation III to s. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act, but the amendment introduces no new law. It merely gives effect to the Privy Council decision as against the earlier Calcutta ruling in Greender Chunder Ghose v. Mackintosh (8).

In these circumstances not only has the defendant not proved that he is a bona fide transferee without notice but he is in equity deemed to have had constructive notice of the charge. Consequently it can be enforced against him.

The next question then is to what extent can this be done? The claim includes a prayer for arrears of maintenance and also for possession. It is clear that no personal decree can be passed against the defendant because he was not a contracting party. He did not agree to pay the plaintiff anything.

It is equally clear under the terms of Ex. P-1 that if there is default in payment of the allowance, then the plaintiff is entitled to possession. There has been default and so under a strict interpretation of the bond possession would have to be handed over. But even a foreclosure mortgage is not enforced like that, and so a mere charge, which is a lesser right cannot be placed upon a higher footing. The decree will therefore have to approximate as near as may be to a decree for foreclosure; that is to say, the defendant must be given the chance of what I might term redemption if he desires to keep the property in his possession. That resort may be had to foreclosure in suitable cases is evident from 13 Halsbury 93. The relief is an equitable one and so can be moulded to suit the requirements of the case.

The decree will therefore be that if the defendants pay into Court the sum of Rs. 317-4-0 and future interest thereon from July 6, 1936 (the date of the appeal in this Court) to March 6, 1939 (the date hereby fixed for payment) at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum simple together with the costs on or before March 6, 1939, then the plaint property will stand free from the charge created by reason of the said sum (but not free from a charge for future maintenance). But if they do not, then the defendants will place the plaintiff in possession of the plaint property for the period of her life in lieu of her right to maintenance.

(7) 30 O 539 at p 545; 30 I A 114; 8 Sar. 374; 7 O W N 441 (P O).

(8) 4 O 897 at p 910; 4 O L R 193.

I have not allowed future interest from the date of suit to the date of the appeal because it was not claimed and no court-fees were paid for such a relief.

The appeal is allowed and the decrees of the lower Courts are reversed. Costs in all three Courts will be paid by the defendants-respondents.

D.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 404 of 1934

April 17, 1939

LEACH, C. J. AND PATANJALI SASTRI, J.J.

SAMINATHA IYER AND ANOTHER—

APPELLANTS

versus

(MINOR) VAGEESAN BY GUARDIAN

SIVAKAMI AMMAL—RESPONDENT

Hindu Law—Adoption—Brahmin adopting daughter's son—Datta homam, if essential.

The performance of the datta homam ceremony is not essential for the validity of the adoption by a Brahmin of the son of his daughter. [p 37, col. 2.]

[Case-law referred to.]

S. A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Kumbakonam, dated November 29, 1933

Mr. K. S. Desikan, for the Appellants.

Messrs. K. Rajah Ayyar, R. Viswanathan and V. Ramaswamy Ayyar, for the Respondent.

Leach, C. J.—The question which falls for decision in this case is whether the performance of the datta homam ceremony is essential when a Brahmin adopts the son of his daughter. Natesa Ayyar, the brother of the first appellant, adopted the respondent, the son of his only daughter. Natesa Ayyar was joint with his brother and his brother's son, the second appellant. Natesa Ayyar died on September 23, 1929, and the respondent filed the suit out of which this appeal arises on January 22, 1930, for partition of the family properties. The appellants denied the factum of adoption, and advanced the alternative plea that if the respondent had been adopted, the adoption was invalid as the datta homam ceremony had not been performed. They also averred that if the respondent's adoption was valid, the partition of the family estate was not for his benefit. The District Munsif of Kumbakonam, who tried the suit, held that the adoption had taken place, but the datta homam ceremony had not been performed. As the District Munsif considered that the ceremony was not necessary for a valid adoption and being of the opinion that the suit was for the benefit of the respondent he granted the decree prayed for. The appellants appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who concurred in all the findings of the District Munsif. The appeal to the Subordinate Judge having failed, the appellants have appealed to this Court. The findings of fact of the Subordinate Judge are conclusive and the only question which we have to decide is whether the performance of the datta homam ceremony was essential in this case the family being of the Brahmin caste.

By the decision of the Privy Council in Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1) it has now been finally settled that the datta homam ceremony is not necessary when the adoption is of a Brahmin boy of the same gotra. I shall return to the judgment in that case presently; but before doing so I desire to trace the course of decision in this Province. In Singamma v. Venkata Charlu (2) it was held that in order to establish a valid adoption in a Brahmin family, proof of the performance of datta homam was not essential; proof of the giving and taking was sufficient. In that case it was not known whether the adopted boy was or was not of the same gotra and the decision must therefore be taken to apply to the adoption of a boy of a different gotra. This decision was followed by Kindersley and Muttusamy Ayyar, JJ. in Chanidramala v. Muktamala (3) which related to an adoption by a Kshatriya. Muttusamy Ayyar, J., however, observed that if the question whether religious ceremonies were essential to adoption were res integra, he would have felt considerable difficulty in holding that the ceremony of datta homam was not of the essence of a valid adoption among the three higher classes. The same doubt was expressed in the judgment of Turney, O. J. and Muttusamy Ayyar, J. in Venkata v. Subhadra (4). In Govind Ayyar v. Dorasami (5) a Full Bench, consisting of Collins, O. J. and Kernan, Muttusamy Ayyar, Brandt and Parker, JJ. held that the ceremony of datta homam was not essential to a valid adoption among Brahmins in Southern India when the adoptive father and son belonged to the same gotra. To that extent the Court felt it might adhere safely to the decision in Singamma v. Venkata Charlu (2). It did not expressly say that that decision went too far and therefore it cannot be said that the decision was overruled, but the doubts apparently still existed. The case in Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1) related to an adoption from the same gotra and in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee Lord Shaw observed:

(1) 39 B 441; 29 Ind. Cas. 639; A I R 1915 P C 7; 42 I A 135; 13 A L J 570; 19 O W N 729; 17 Bom. L R 527; 22 O L J 1; 29 M L J 34; 18 M L T 1; (1915) M W N 484; 2 L W 611 (P O).

(2) 4 M H C R 165.

(3) 6 M 20.

"The question whether the datta homam is a legal requisite in Bombay for adoption among the three twice born classes does not, however, in the view of their Lordships, broadly arise in the present case. It is in no way necessary to canvass or call in question any dicta upon that general point, nor does the question arise, whether, for instance, the principle extends to India at large of the decision of the Madras Full Bench in Govind Ayyar v. Dorasami (5) or of the Madras High Court in Singamma v. Venkata Charlu (2) both decisions being of value as containing a careful study of the authorities, and affirming that the ceremony of datta homam is not essential to a valid adoption among Brahmins in Southern India, for, in the opinion of the Board, the necessity does not arise where the child to be adopted belongs to the same gotra as that of the adoptive father."

In view of this statement and bearing in mind that in Govind Ayyar v. Dorasami (5) there was no express limitation of the decision in Singamma v. Venkata Charlu (2) it is certainly arguable that the latter decision still stands. If it stands, it is binding on us and provides a short answer to the appellants' case. It is, however, not necessary to come to a definite decision on the question whether it binds us or to inquire into the question whether the judgment went too far, because the appeal may be disposed of on another ground. There is ancient authority for the proposition that the datta homam ceremony is not essential in the case of an adoption by a father of his daughter's son and the authority is the Yama text. The text is set out in the judgment of Sir Asutosh Mookerjee in Katki v. Lak Pati Pujari (6) and reads as follows:

(4) 7 M 548.

(5) 11 M 5 (F B).

"The homam or the like ceremony is not necessary in the case of adoption of the daughter's or the brother's son; by the verbal gift and acceptance alone, that is accomplished; this is declared by the Lord Yama."

Little is known of Yama but his name appears in the list of law-givers set forth in the Smriti of Yajnavalkya. Sir Asutosh Mookerjee accepted the text as of unquestionable genuineness and authority and set forth his reasons in detail. The text was accepted by the Bombay High Court in Valubai v. Govind Kashinath (7) and was accepted as authority for the proposition that the datta homam ceremony was not required in the case of adoption of a daughter's son in the course of the arguments in Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1). In Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (8) Banerjee, J. did cast doubt on the authenticity of the text, but I do not consider that his criticism should outweigh its acceptance in Katki v. Lak Pati Pujari (6), Valubai v. Govind Kashinath (7) and Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit (1). Moreover, the case in Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (8) was carried to the Privy Council, Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (9) and there is no indication in the judgment of the Board of the acceptance of the criticism of Banerjee, J. On the other hand Lord Hobhouse in delivering the judgment referred to the fact that "one ancient sage, called the holy Yama, expressly asserts the right to adopt a sister's son." It is true that the Yama text is in conflict with the Dattaka Chandrika in that the latter does not recognize the validity of the adoption of a daughter's son. The prohibition has, however not been observed in Southern India, where a custom exists of adopting a sister's or a daughter's son; vide Vayidianada v. Appu (10). It does not, of course, follow from the fact that there is this custom that the datta homam ceremony is not essential in the case of the adoption of a daughter's son, and there is no evidence that it is customary to dispense with the datta homam ceremony in such a case, but if the Yama text is accepted, it must be (6) 20 O W N 19; 27 Ind. Cas. 39; A I R 1915 Cal. 214; 20 O L J 319.

(7) 2 B 218; 1 Bom. L R 770.

(8) 17 A 294; A W N 1895, 167 (F B).

(9) 21 A 412; 26 I A 153; 7 Sar. 474 (P O).

(10) 9 M 44 (F B).

held that the ceremony is not essential to a valid adoption. I see no reason why it should not be accepted and consequently I hold that the adoption in this case was valid despite the fact that the datta homam ceremony was not performed.

Mr. Rajah Ayyar on behalf of the respondent advanced the argument that the reason why the datta homam ceremony is not essential in the case of the adoption of a daughter's son is because the Hindu Law regards a daughter's son as being in the same position as a son's son in the performance of the obsequies and other ceremonies following the death of the grandfather. He referred in this connection to the judgment of Venkataramana Rao, J. in Panchapakesa Iyer v. Gopal (11) where the learned Judge quoted these words of Vishnu: "In regard to the obsequies of ancestors, daughter's sons are considered son's sons" and the following words of Manu:

"Between a son's son and the son of a daughter there exists in this world no difference; for even the son of a daughter saves him (who has no sons) in the next world, like the son's son."

This may be the reason why Yama declared that the datta homam ceremony was not essential in the case of the adoption of a daughter's son, but the validity of the text does not depend on the discovery of the reason for the rule. For the appellants it has been argued that the Yama text refers to the son of a daughter born after the daughter's appointment by the father to continue his line. The wording of the text does not support this argument and the argument is obviously fallacious because adoption is not necessary when the appointed daughter bears a son. The son is regarded from the moment of his birth as the son of the daughter's father and not as the son of her husband. I consider that the case was rightly decided below and as my learned brother shares this opinion, the appeal will be dismissed with costs.

Patanjali Sastri, J.—This second appeal raises the question of Hindu Law whether datta homam is essential to the validity of the adoption of a daughter's son by a Brahmin. The general question whether that ceremony is an essential requisite for a valid adoption among Brahmins and other twice born classes was also raised, but it is not necessary in this case to decide it, as I am clearly of opinion that no datta homam is necessary even among Brahmins for the adoption of a daughter's son. As there is no decided case on this precise question, the discussion before us had to turn to some extent on the Hindu Law texts and text-books. The learned Advocate for the appellants urged that Dattaka Chandrika and Dattaka Mimamsa are works of great and unquestionable authority on Hindu Law in matters relating to adoption and that both of them clearly laid down that datta homam is essential among the twice born classes to the establishment of the filial relationship of the person adopted. This is no doubt the general rule according to these authorities, but an exception based on a text of Yama in the case of a brother's son's adoption has been recognized in decided cases. If the authority of this text is to be acted upon, it concludes the question in favour of the respondent as it excepts the adoption of a daughter's son also from the rule requiring datta homam. The appellants' learned Advocate therefore directed his attack against the genuineness and authority of this text and drew our attention to the observations of Banerjee, J. in Bhaqwar Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (b) at p. 325* where that learned Judge throws doubt on the authenticity thereof.

(11) 48 L W 887; 183 Ind. Cas. 877; A I R 1939 Mad. 216; (1938) M W N 1180; 12 R M 382.

It is no doubt true that this text does not appear in Yama Smriti and Yama-dharma Sastra as they are now extant. But the authenticity and the authority of the text have been accepted in a long course of decisions in this country beginning with Huebut Rao v. Govindarao (12) of the year 1821 and Mr. Mandlik has also regarded its authenticity as beyond question. In Katki v. Lak Pati Pujari (6) Mukherjee, J. after an elaborate examination of the authorities bearing on the point, definitely accepted its authenticity and relied upon its authority in the case of the adoption of a brother's son which was there in question. It was also accepted as genuine and acted upon by the Allahabad High Court in Atma Ram v. Madho Rao (13) and by the Bombay High Court in Valubai v. Govind Kashinath (7), both cases relating to adoption of a brother's son. In view of these decisions, it seems to me that the authenticity as well as the authority of the text of Yama is no longer open to question. The learned Advocate for the appellants further contended that even if the text is accepted as genuine, it must, on its true construction, be taken to apply only to the case of a putrika putra and a Dwyamushyayana adoption and not to Dattaka adoptions. The text runs thus :

"Dauhitre Bhratru putre cha Homadiniyama nahi Vagdanadeva tatsiddih. (Ityaha Bhagvan Yama)" which may be translated as follows :

"Homam or the like is not prescribed in the case of a daughter's son or a brother's son; by verbal gift alone that is accomplished. So declared homam Yama."

The argument is that the expression Vagdanadeva (by verbal gift alone) cannot apply to a Dattaka form of adoption, as corporeal delivery and acceptance of the child is universally treated as the essential part of an adoption in the Dattaka form. It seems to me that this argument proceeds on a misconception. The context makes it clear that the expression Vagdanadeva (by mere verbal gift) is used in contradistinction to homadi niyama (prescription of homam or the like), to convey the meaning that no gift accompanied by the burning of the sacrificial fire and Vyahrutis, etc., is necessary, but a mere gift with a verbal declaration of intention to give is sufficient. Dana or gift ordinarily imports corporeal delivery and Vagdana is used merely to make it clear that the delivery is to be made with appropriate words showing an intention to give. Moreover, in the case of putrikaputra, there was no adoption by the maternal grandfather at all. The daughter's son when born automatically became the son of the maternal grandfather if the latter had no male issue. He was recognized as one of the subsidiary sons in the Hindu Law not by virtue of any adoption but by mere intention on the part of the maternal grandfather, and without any consent asked for or obtained (see Mayne's Hindu Law, Edn. 10, p. 113). The reference in the text to Vagdana being sufficient would, therefore, be devoid of any meaning as applied to a putrika putra. Nor has the reference to a brother's son ever been understood to relate only to Dwyamushyayana adoption. This contention of the appellants' learned Advocate must therefore be rejected.

Apart from the text of Yama, referred to above, it has been contended by the learned Advocate for the respondent that the reason of the now well-established rule that no datta homam is necessary in cases where the adopted son and the adoptive father belong to the same gotra would apply equally to the adoption of a daughter's son. In the Full Bench decision in Govind Ayyar v. Dorasami (5) which laid down this rule for this Province, it is said at p. 9*:

(12) (1821) 2 Borr 82.

(13) 6 A 276; A WN 1824, 82 (FB.)

*Page of 17 A.—[Ed.]

"Both Manu and Caunakha declare that one who is eligible for adoption should be the reflection or have the resemblance of a son and the commentators apparently thought that as adoption is made partly to secure spiritual benefit arising from the performance of obsequies, the prescribed ceremony was necessary to ensure to the adopted son competency to perform those obsequies with efficacy."

If thus the object of the homam is to bring about an effective transfer of the person from his own gotra prior to the adoption to the gotra of the adopter so as to clothe him with ceremonial competency, it would seem that such a ceremony is not necessary in the case of a daughter's son who though belonging to a different gotra has always been recognized as competent to perform obsequial rites for the maternal grandfather. See the texts cited in Panchapakesa Iyer v. Gopal (11) at p. 891† and Narasinga Rao v. Maha Lakshmi Bai (14) at p. 390, where their Lordships of the Privy Council point out that according to Hindu religious ideas, a daughter's son stands in the place of a son and like a son is a liberator from put. The respondent's learned Advocate suggested that the special position of a daughter's son in relation to his maternal grandfather might indeed be the reason for Yama's text excepting his adoption from the rule prescribing datta homam and other formalities. The suggestion certainly seems plausible but it can only be a speculation, as the text itself does not give the reasons on which it is based. But however that may be, as the Full Bench decision holding that no datta homam is necessary where the adopter and the person adopted belong to the same gotra seems to proceed upon the view that the homam would be necessary only to ensure the ceremonial competence of the person adopted, it would not be unreasonable to hold that such ceremony is not necessary in the case of the adoption of a daughter's son who according to the Hindu Dharmasastras is already endowed with such ceremonial competence. On this ground also, the respondent's adoption can be upheld.

It is a matter of satisfaction that our conclusion which is in consonance with modern ideas which tend more and more to favour the disentanglement of civil rights and obligations from the meshes of Hindu ceremonial law could be supported on the authority of an ancient text. I agree with my Lord that this appeal fails and should be dismissed with costs.

(14) 50 A 375 at p 390; 109 Ind. Cas. 703; A I R 1928 PC 156; 55 I A 180; 55 M L J 42; 48 C L J 106; 28 L W 171; 32 O W N 1965; 26 A L J 897; 30 Bom. L R 1231; 5 O W N 951 (P O)

*Page of 11 M.—[Ed.]

†Page of 48 L. W.—[Ed.]

N.-S.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Execution First Appeal No. 137 of 1938

May 10, 1939

IQBAL AHMAD AND BAJPAT, JJ.

SHEO PRASAD AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT—
DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

KALKA PRASAD DHAWAN—DEBTOR

HOLDER—RESPONDENT

U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act (XXVII of 1934), s. 2 (2) (g)—Property presenting appearance of bungalow and compound in residential area—Whether "land" under s. 2 (2) (g).

An area held by a person was a walled compound within which there was a bungalow and some out-houses. In the compound there were two old trees and a small vegetable garden. The property thus presented the appearance of a bungalow and compound in a residential area:

Held, that under the Tenancy Act, the compound could not be held to be "land" and it was, therefore, not land within the meaning of s. 2 (2) (g), U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act.

Ex. F. A. from the decision of the District Judge, Cawnpore, dated March 21, 1938.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. N. Seth, for the Respondent.

Iqbal Ahmad, J.—This is an appeal by Sheo Prasad and his three minor sons and is directed against an order of the District Judge of Cawnpore rejecting an application filed by the appellants under ss. 5 and 30, Agriculturists' Relief Act, XXVII of 1934. The application was made under the following circumstances: On November 10, 1930, Sheo Prasad on his own behalf and on behalf of his minor sons executed a simple mortgage-deed in favour of Kalka Prasad, respondent, for a sum of Rs. 13,000. The parties to the mortgage-deed appointed two pleaders as arbitrators to determine the amount to which the respondent was entitled on the basis of the mortgage. This reference to arbitration was without the intervention of the Court. Before the arbitrators the parties entered into a compromise and the arbitrators decided the dispute in accordance with that compromise. They passed a decree in favour of Kalka Prasad for a sum of Rs. 13,000 together with interest at a certain rate from the date of the mortgage. This decree was, on an application by Kalka Prasad, made a rule of the Court. Kalka Prasad then, on May 8, 1937, filed an application for execution of the said decree. The amount claimed by him on account of principal and interest was Rs. 20,434-12-6 and he prayed that the said amount be realised by sale of the mortgage property. The appellants then filed an application under ss. 5 and 30, Agriculturists' Relief Act, praying for reduction of interest and for the decretal amount being made payable by easy instalments. The appellants claimed to be agriculturists by virtue of the provisions of s. 2(2) (g) of the Act, which provides that a person holding land free of rent, the area of which does not exceed 80 acres, is an agriculturist for the purposes of the Act. Kalka Prasad, respondent, contended that the appellants did not hold "land" within the meaning of the Act, and as such, were not entitled to the benefit of the provisions of the Act. The learned Judge accepted this contention of the decree-holder and rejected the application filed by the appellants. The appeal in this Court was wrongly filed as an execution first appeal. It is really a first appeal from order under the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

It is common ground that the appellants hold an area of 7 biswas 2 biswansis which is rent-free. The appellants' contention was that that area was "land" within the meaning of the Act, whereas Kalka Prasad's contention was that the area did not constitute "land" and was mere abadi. By s. 2 (9) of the Act, it is provided that "land" shall have the same meaning as in the Agra Tenancy Act, 1926. In the Tenancy Act "land" is defined as meaning "land which is let or held for agricultural purposes, or as grove-land or for pasturage but does not include land for the time being occupied by dwelling houses or appurtenant thereto."

The area held by the appellants was shown as grove in the settlement of 1283 Fasli. In the next settlement of 1311 Fasli again the area was recorded as a grove. But in the last settlement which took place in 1338 Fasli, 1 biswa 15 biswansis out of the total area of 7 biswas 2 biswansis was recorded as abadi and the rest of the area was recorded as a grove. The same entry was repeated in khataunis for 1343 and 1344 Fasli. But in the khassra of 1343 and 1345 the whole of the area was recorded as abadi. As the dispute between the parties could not be satisfactorily disposed of without ascertaining the nature of the property held by the appellants, the learned District Judge appointed an Amin to prepare a map and to submit a report after local inspection. The Amin prepared a map and submitted a report to which no objection was taken by either party. It appears from the map and the report that the area held by the appellants is a walled compound within which there is a bungalow and some out-houses. In the compound, there are two old trees and a small vegetable garden. In short, the property presents the appearance of a bungalow and compound in a residential area. This compound is either within the municipal limits of Cawnpore or within the Juhi Notified Area which is adjacent to the city of Cawnpore. The question, therefore, arises whether this area can be held to be "land" within the meaning of s. 2 (2) (g), Agriculturists' Relief Act. In accordance with the definition of "land" in the Tenancy Act, an area which is for the time being occupied by dwelling-houses or is appurtenant thereto is not land. As the compound held by the appellants is occupied by a residential house and outhouses for servants and the open space therein is appurtenant to the residential house, the compound cannot be held to be "land" within the meaning of the Tenancy Act and is, therefore, not land within the meaning of s. 2 (2) (g), Agriculturists' Relief Act. The appellants could not, therefore, be held to be agriculturists, and as such, the application was rightly rejected by the learned District Judge. The appeal accordingly fails and is dismissed with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 245 of 1935

January 31, 1939

WADSWORTH, J.

RAJA OF VIZIANAGARAM AND ANOTHER

—APPELLANTS

versus

MUDUMOORU SANYASIRAJU—

RESPONDENT

Irrigation—Controlling authority constructing new work in interest of irrigation facilities—Its duty stated—Person suffering damages due to new work, whether has right to insist that new work should not work to his detriment.

It is the duty of the controlling authority when constructing a new work in the interests of irrigation facilities generally to take such reasonable precautions as are obviously necessary to prevent damage to others. Although the person who suffers on account of the new work has no right to require the authorities to maintain the course of the channel for ever in one particular bed, yet he has the right to insist that any alterations which the controlling authority may find necessary, shall not work to his detriment. Krishna Chandra Deo v. Raja of Vizianagaram (1), Rylands v. Fletcher (2) and Sankara Vadivelu Pillai v. Secretary of State (3), referred to.

S. A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Vizagapatam, in Appeal Suit No. 34 of 1934.

Mr. S. Venkatesa Ayyangar, for the Appellants.

Mr. Govindarajachari, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is preferred by defendant No. 1 representing the Vizianagaram Estate against the decision in a suit for an injunction to restrain defendant No. 1 from altering the course of the channel to the detriment of the plaintiff. It seems to be established on the findings of the Courts below that the channel marked DD in the plan attached to the plaint and also in the Commissioner's plan, flowing from west to east has been diverted by means of an embankment so that it flows southwards along the path marked EF-1 on the plan and that an incidental consequence of this diversion has been damage to the plaintiff's land which is situated to the west of the diversion. It is contended for the appellant that the duty imposed upon a zamindar to construct and maintain irrigation works gives him a right to create any new works which he finds to be necessary in the interests of irrigation and imposes an obligation on third parties to construct such protective works as may be necessary to prevent damage to their lands resulting from the new works. It seems to me that this is an overstatement of the legal position of the zamindar with reference to irrigation. It is true that this Court held in Krishna Chandra Deo v. Raja of Vizianagaram (1), that the rule in Rylands v. Fletcher (2), is not applicable to Indian irrigation conditions. The storing of water in an agricultural tank is a natural and a lawful user and is not actionable for damage in the absence of negligence. This is quite another matter from holding that either a zamindar or Government are entitled to construct new irrigation works so as to damage the lands of others without any liability for the damages so caused. It was held by a Bench of this Court in (1) 60 M L J 662; 135 Ind. Cas. 349; A I R 1931 Mad. 561; (1931) M W N 23; 34 L W 771; Ind. Rul. (1932) Mad. 93.

(2) (1868) 3 H L 330; 37 L J Ex. 161; 19 L T 320.

Sankara Vadivelu Pillai v. Secretary of State (3) that "the rights of Government in connection with the distribution of water, do not include a right to flood a man's land because, in the opinion of Government, the erection of a work which has this effect is desirable in connection with the general distribution of water for the public benefit."

I know of no principle upon which the rights of a zamindar can be placed any higher than the rights of the Government with reference to irrigation. It is one thing to say that the Government or the zamindar has the right to restore an irrigation work to its former condition without regard to the fact that the restoration will result in the submersion of lands which, owing to the disrepair of the work, had for some time been immune from submersion. It is another thing to say that the controlling authority has the right to construct the new work so as to submerge the lands of third parties not hitherto liable to submersion without compensation for the damage thereby caused. To my mind it is the duty of the controlling authority when constructing a new work in the interests of irrigation facilities generally to take such reasonable precautions as are obviously necessary to prevent damage to others. This is not to say that the irrigation authority is prima facie liable for the consequence of any escape of water from an irrigation tank owing to an act of God or to some unforeseen and improbable rush of water; but that there is a duty to provide such protection against the ordinarily anticipated flow of water, as would safeguard third party's lands from damage as a result of the new work of irrigation. Applying this principle to the present case, it would appear that the estate has diverted the flow of water along a pathway without any precautions to prevent the water from damaging the plaintiff's land which lies adjacent to that pathway. The plaintiff has, in my opinion, a right to require the estate to construct such protective works as may be necessary to prevent damage to the plaintiff's lands from the flow of water which may ordinarily be expected in the channel and the plaintiff has a right to demand that the pre-existing course of the channel shall not be altered except after the completion of the protective works necessary. I do not think that the plaintiff has the right to require the defendant to maintain the course of the channel for ever in one particular bed. But he has the right to insist that any alterations which the controlling authority may find necessary, shall not work to his detriment.

(3) 28 M 72; 15 M L J 33.

In this view it seems to me that the injunction granted by the lower Appellate Court goes too far and requires modification. The modification which I propose to introduce will make it unnecessary to go into the question whether the injunction cannot be granted for want of the presence of the owners of the land through which the old course of the channel passed from the record of the case. But I observe that the plaintiff asserted that defendants Nos. 8 and 9 were the owners of that land, that this assertion was not traversed in the written statement and that in the absence of an issue regarding non-joinder of any plea to substantiate such an issue, it is not proper to non-suit the plaintiff for want of other parties. In the result, the appeal is allowed and the injunction granted will be modified, defendant No. 1 being restrained from damaging the plaintiff's land by the diversion of the course of the channel marked DD in the plaintiff's plan so as to flow along the path marked EE-1 in that plan and defendant No. 1 being required to construct such an embankment as may be sufficient, or so to alter the course of the channel, as to prevent such damage. The appellant having substantially failed will pay the costs of the respondent in this Court. Leave refused.

N-8.

Order accordingly.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

First Appeals Nos 95 and 255 of 1936

February 3, 1939

BROOMFIELD AND MACLIN, JJ.

Mahant NARSIDASJI BALMUKUNDDASJI

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

BAI JAMNA—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Hindu Law—Maintenance—Widow—Arrears of—Principles applicable—Husband giving part of estate to charity—Maintenance, how calculated—General principle—Husband keeping carriage in his lifetime—Widow, if entitled to allowance for conveyance—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 11, s. 92—Rule, if precludes amendment of plaint which under O. VI, r. 17, may be made at any time—Hindu dying disposing of his property by will and trust deed in favour of charitable institutions—Will providing for certain amount as maintenance for widow—Suit by widow challenging validity of deeds and alternatively claiming suitable maintenance for her according to Hindu Law—If governed by s. 92—Practice—Pleadings—Moffatt pleadings, construction.

Generally speaking the same principles apply to arrears as to future maintenance, although, the Court is not bound to award arrears of maintenance at the same rate as might be considered reasonable for the future. Ekradeshwari Bahusin v. Homeshwar Singh (6) and Gurushiddappa Mallappa v. Parvatewva Shivappa (7), relied on. [p. 49, col. 2.]

Hindu Law and opinion regard charitable gifts and bequests with favour, and if a Hindu husband of his own free will chooses to diminish his estate by giving away part of it to charity (assuming of course that he is not doing it with the object of defeating his widow's reasonable claims), the widow is entitled to say that she should be given maintenance in proportion to what the income was before the charitable gifts or bequests were made. [ibid.]

The general principle in awarding maintenance to a Hindu widow is that the amount awarded to her must enable her to live as consistently with the position of a widow in something like the same degree of comfort and with the same reasonable luxury of life as she had in the lifetime of her husband. Where her husband had during his lifetime kept a carriage for several years, it may be regarded as a reasonable luxury and a reasonable allowance for conveyance may be awarded to the widow. Ekradeshwari Bahusin v. Homeshwar Singh (6), relied on. No doubt O. VII, r. 11, Civil Procedure Code, uses the words "shall reject" which are mandatory words. But prima facie the Rule is mandatory only rebus sic stantibus, that is to say, when the Court has to deal simply with the position referred to in the Rule, and would not preclude an amendment of the plaint which under O. VI, r. 17, may be made at any stage of the proceedings. Order VII, r. 11, and O. VI, r. 17, ought to be read together. Midnapore Zamindari Co., Ltd v. Secretary of State (1), dissented from, Valli v. Mahmud (2), explained. [p. 47, col. 1.]

A Hindu died disposing of his property by will and a trust deed in favour of charitable institutions. The will provided for a certain amount to be paid to the testator's widow for her maintenance. The widow brought a suit challenging the validity of the deeds and alternatively, if this could not be done, claiming maintenance suitable for her requirements and status to which she was entitled under the Hindu Law:

Held, that the widow was not seeking to enforce the trust. She was claiming what she considered reasonable maintenance not on the basis of the trust but in spite of the trust, relying on principles of Hindu Law to which the trust, though valid in other respects, must conform. She was not asking the Court to administer the trust but administer her husband's estate in accordance with these principles simply for the purpose of giving her proper maintenance. Hence the suit was not governed by s. 92, Civil Procedure Code, and not liable to be dismissed because it had not been filed as a representative suit with the sanction of the Collector. Narsidas Jekisondas v. Ravishankar Prabhaskar (3), Annappa Ramchandra Pai v. Krishna Narayan Prasad (4) and Abdur Rahim v. Abu Mohamad Barkat Ali (5), distinguished.

Moffatt pleadings should not be construed too strictly, if to do so, would work injustice. [p. 48, col. 2.]

F. As. from the decision of the First Class Sub-Judge, Ahmedabad, in Special Civil Suit No. 937 of 1931.

Mr. M. G. Setalvad, Advocate-General,

Messrs. K. J. Khandalawala and H. M. Choksi, for the Appellants.

Messrs. G. N. Thakor N. N. Majumdar and B. G. Thakor, for the Respondent.

Broomfield, J.—First Appeal No. 95 of 1936, is an appeal against a decree of the First Class Subordinate Judge, Ahmedabad, awarding the plaintiff Rs. 5,014 in respect of arrears of maintenance. The facts leading to the litigation were shortly these: The plaintiff's husband Ambalal, who was a wealthy and pious Hindu, died on July 27, 1929, leaving properties immovable and movable which have been described in a schedule annexed to the plaint. They consisted of lot No. 1 a large residential house in Jamalpur, Ahmedabad, containing several buildings in one compound, lot No. 2 a shop forming a portion of the above, lot No. 3, a building, and lot No. 4 a dehla also situated in Jamalpur, lot No. 5 a building known as the apangashram or Cripples' Home which was constructed by Ambalal in his lifetime on land belonging to the temple of Shri Jagannathji, and lot No. 6 a building on the Richey Road, Ahmedabad, in which Ambalal in his lifetime had started a dispensary. The movable properties consisted of 12 shares in the National Mills, ten shares of the Saraswati Oil Mills Co. which is now in liquidation, a certain amount of outstandings of the deceased Ambalal, and two deposit receipts for Rs. 10,000 each, one in the name of the plaintiff and the other in the name of Ambalal's sister Kashi now deceased. At the time of Ambalal's death, there was a sum of Rs. 20,000 and over lying on deposit in the National Mills and this was divided into two separate deposits of Rs. 10,000 each.

Ambalal disposed of his property by four wills and a trust deed dated September 29, 1925, and two subsequent wills dated May 5, 1928. All these documents were registered. Without going into detail, it may be stated that of the four wills executed on September 29, 1925, one, Ex. 35, gives the income of the Saraswati Oil Mills Co., shares and deposit for the maintenance of the apangashram. Another Ex. 36, gives the shares of the National Mills and some other moneys and outstandings for the maintenance of the same institution. The third will, Ex. 145, gives all Ambalal's immovable properties in the event of his having no son to provide rajbhog (i. e. food for the deity and Sadhus) in Shri Jagannathji's temple of which defendant No. 1 is the mahant. This is subject to provision being made for the residence of Ambalal's wife, the plaintiff, and his sister Kashibai. The fourth will, Ex. 146, provides for the maintenance of Kashibai, who was to have Rs. 600 a year, and also a sum of Rs. 5,000 for charity, etc. Rs. 10,000 deposited in the National Mills were to be set apart for her maintenance. A similar provision was made for the maintenance of the plaintiff, and it was provided that after her death Rs. 5,000 were to be spent on her obsequies. The trust deed, which is Ex. 160, provided for the dispensary. The house on Richey Road, which Ambalal had purchased for Rs. 60,000, was given for housing the institution, and it was to be maintained by letting part of it on rent. Three years later, two further wills were executed. Exhibit 47 provides for the maintenance of Ambalal's sister and wife in much the same way as before but with slight modifications. By this will it is provided that the wife as well as the sister was to be allowed to spend Rs. 5,000 on punyadan or pilgrimage instead of the money being spent only after her death. Exhibit 48, the last will, contains further dispositions for the apangashram which had in the meantime been built. Ambalal's shares in the National Mills were assigned for this purpose.

Apart from these wills and the trust deeds, the plaintiff would have been her husband's heir. No action was taken by her till 1931. In April of that year she sent notices through a Pleader to the defendants, who are executors under the wills or trustees under the trust deed or both, contesting the validity of these deeds and claiming maintenance suitable to her requirements and status in life. The plaint in the suit in which this appeal arises was presented on September 28, 1931. It is a long and prolix document the gist of which is, that the wills should be declared null and void as having been obtained by the undue influence of defendant No. 1, the mahant of the temple, and defendant No. 2, who was Ambalal's doctor, and that alternatively, if this could not be done, plaintiff should be awarded the maintenance to which she claims to be entitled under Hindu Law; and that the defendants should be called upon to account for the losses alleged to have been sustained owing to their mismanagement and should be removed, and that new trustees should be appointed. The reliefs asked for were: (a) A declaration that the six wills were executed by Ambalal owing to the undue influence of defendants

Nos. 1 and 2, and that plaintiff is the legal heir and owner of all the property of her deceased husband. This relief was valued at Rs. 5,250. Plaintiff reserved the right to bring a separate suit for similar relief in respect of the trust deed; (b) A permanent injunction restraining all the defendants from taking possession of any of the suit properties, from collecting rents, making vahivat and so on, and from obstructing the plaintiff or interfering with her enjoyment of the properties. This relief was valued at Rs. 200; (c) The Court was asked to take accounts from the defendants of their management and to settle their liability to the estate of the deceased for any loss that the estate might have suffered owing to their negligence and mismanagement. This relief was valued at Rs. 200; (d) The Court was asked to determine the amount which defendant No. 1 should pay in respect of the superstructure of the apangashram which had been erected by Ambalal on the premises of the temple. This relief was valued at Rs. 2,000, but the plaintiff expressed her willingness to pay the deficit stamp, if any.

In the alternative, the plaintiff prayed for two reliefs. In the plaint as originally framed, the first prayer was for maintenance at the rate of Rs. 400 or Rs. 350 in addition to the Rs. 50 provided by the wills. She claimed this for the future and also claimed arrears at the same rate for 26 months from the date of Ambalal's death, and she prayed that the estate should be administered to enable these payments to be made. The relief was valued at Rs. 8,000. By an amendment, which was allowed on December 13, 1934, the claim was limited to past maintenance only at the rate of Rs. 350 or Rs. 300 in addition to the Rs. 50 given by the wills. This was done to avoid the payment of the additional court-fees on the sum of Rs. 42,000 which the plaintiff had been ordered to pay. The second alternative relief prayed for is that true and proper accounts should be taken of the defendant's management and of the loss sustained by the estate of the deceased owing to their mismanagement and negligence that the Court would decide the liability of the defendants to the estate and would remove them from their trusteeship and appoint new trustees and make proper administration of the estate. This relief was valued at Rs. 200.

In their written statements, the defendants denied the allegation that the wills were obtained by undue influence, and contended that the plaintiff is not entitled to any higher rate of maintenance than that provided by the wills. Defendant No. 1 claimed credit for certain expenditure on the plaintiff's behalf. Some technical defences were also raised, viz. that the court-fees paid were insufficient, that the suit is governed by s. 92, Civil Procedure Code, and is, therefore, bad for want of the sanction of the Collector, and that it is not maintainable as an administration suit. There were certain interlocutory proceedings to which I may just refer. In February, 1932, an application was made by plaintiff for appointing a Receiver and for interim maintenance. The Subordinate Judge refused to appoint a Receiver, and as to interim maintenance ordered that the plaintiff should continue to recover the rent of lots Nos. 2 and 3 as she was doing. There were cross-appeals against these orders, but they were dismissed. Plaintiff also applied to be examined on commission and this was granted by the trial Court but the order was set aside in revision by the High Court.

The issue as to court-fees was tried as a preliminary issue. Defendants Nos. 2 and 4 in their written statement contended (1) that the court-fee should be paid on the value of property as the relief sought was really possession, (2) that the court-fees on the future maintenance should be paid on Rs. 42,000, i. e. ten times the annual sum claimed. The Subordinate Judge who tried this issue thought that the suit should be treated as in essence one for increased maintenance and nothing else, and he ordered the plaintiff to pay court-fees on Rs. 42,000. That was on October 10, 1934, and a fortnight's time was given for payment. This time was extended by a month on October 25 and by another week on November 22. In the meantime on November 20, plaintiff made an application for amending the plaint by dropping the prayer for future maintenance, and this was allowed, as I have said, on December 13, 1934. The case was then disposed of on the merits. The dispositions by the six wills were held to be valid, but the plaintiff was held to be entitled to maintenance at the rate of Rs. 275 a month less Rs. 50 a month already paid under the wills and less Rs. 806 which she had recovered as rent for 26 months. A decree was accordingly passed for the sum of Rs. 5,044 from the estate of Ambalal in the hands of the executors. Defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 4 have appealed, and there are cross-objections by the plaintiff.

Then first point taken by the learned

Advocate-General, who appears for the appellants, is that the suit is in effect one for possession of the properties enumerated in the schedule to the plaint and fees should have been paid on the value of these properties. The point has not been discussed by the trial Judge, and apparently was not seriously argued before him. The argument of the learned Counsel for the respondent is that this is not to be regarded as a suit for possession. The plaintiff does not need to sue for possession. She is now in possession admittedly of lots Nos. 1 and 4; lot No. 1 she occupies as her residence and lot No. 4 she has been using as a stable. She is also in possession of lots Nos. 2 and 3 through tenants. She does not seek possession of lot No. 5, which is the apangashram, but claims only the amounts spent on building it, and in the present suit she does not seek any relief at all in respect of lot No. 6 which is the dispensary. As for the shares they are in the name of Ambalal, and if she gets the injunction asked for, that would be sufficient to protect her rights. We think that this reasoning is sound, and that the Judge was right in holding that the reliefs, apart from the claim for maintenance, were correctly valued in the plaint. The second point is, that, as the additional court-fees which plaintiff was ordered to pay were not paid, the plaint should have been rejected under O. VII, r. 11, Civil Procedure Code, and that an amendment of the plaint was not permissible. The rule says:

"The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases (a) where it does not disclose a cause of action; (b) where the relief claimed is undervalued, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so; (c) where the relief claimed is properly valued, but the plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so."

No doubt the rule uses the words "shall reject" which are mandatory words. But prima facie the rule would seem to be mandatory only rebus sic stantibus, that is to say, when the Court has to deal simply with the position referred to in the rule, and would not preclude an amendment of the plaint which under O. VI, r. 17, may be made at any stage of the proceedings. It might obviously lead to great hardship if a plaintiff were unable to pay the enhanced fees ordered, and if there were no alternative but the rejection of the plaint. The learned Advocate-General suggested that in that case he might apply to continue the suit in forma pauperis. But if the rule is to be construed as strictly as the learned Counsel contends that would not be a compliance with it. It would be as much an avoidance of payment of the fees as an amendment of the plaint.

We were referred to Midnapore Zemindary Co., Ltd. v. Secretary of State (1) which does no doubt support the argument which has been put forward. With all deference, however, to the learned Judges who decided that case, we think that it takes too technical a view of the rule. There is no authority of this Court which is really in point. In Valli v. Mahmud (2) the trial Court had dismissed a suit for non-payment of court-fees under s. 10, Court Fees Act, and in appeal the District Judge held that the proper procedure was to reject the plaint under this rule. But he allowed the plaintiff an option to abandon part of his claim and so avoid the payment of further fees. This Court held that this procedure was unjustified. The learned Judges said (p. 766*):

"... we are not aware of any provision of law or any authority which shows that a plaintiff who has not properly valued his claim or paid a sufficient court-fee is entitled at the last moment to an option such as was allowed to him by the District Judge."

The Court did not hold or intend to hold, we think, that once an order under the rule has been made, no amendment of the plaint may ever be permitted. It may be mentioned that the plaintiff have intimated her willingness to abandon the claim for future maintenance even before the Court passed orders on the question of court-fees (see the purshis dated October 8, 1931, at p. 461 of the paper-book). We think that O. VII, r. 11 and O. VI, r. 17, ought to be read together, and are not prepared to say that the amendment was not properly allowed in this case. It seems worthy of note that cl. (b) and (c) of r. 11 are differently worded. The Judge in this case did not call on the plaintiff to correct the valuation although the case clearly comes under cl. (b) and not under cl. (c). He corrected the valuation himself and called on the plaintiff to pay the fees. The fact that the party is to be called on to correct the valuation, which must mean apparently to remove the inconsistency between the relief claimed and the valuation, instead of being merely told to pay the deficit, rather seems to suggest that it is open to him to remove the inconsistency by abandoning part of his claim. On that view the plaintiff has in fact corrected the valuation which is all that is necessary under cl. (b) of the rule and the plaint after the amendment was no longer undervalued. This reasoning may perhaps be rather technical but then so is the objection. Then it was argued that the suit relates to a public charitable trust, the apangashram. It seeks some of the reliefs enumerated in s. 92 (1) of the Code, and therefore under cl. (2) of the section it could only be instituted according to the provisions of the section with the sanction of the Collector. As the sanction of the Collector has not been obtained, it is argued that the whole suit ought to be dismissed. In para. 19 of the plaint it is stated :

(1) 44 O 352; 40 Ind. Cas. 96; A I R 1917 Cal 77; 21 O W N 834.

(2) 16 Bom. L R 763; 26 Ind. Cas. 746; A I R 1914 Bom. 117.

*Page of 16 Bom. L. R — [84]

"It seems that defendant No. 1 has not put at all into practice the said scheme which was made for the apangashram under the two wills mentioned in para. 16 above. On the contrary, the Sadhus of defendant No. 1's akhada stay in the buildings erected in the name of apangashram. And they have been using it for the keeping of carriages, chariot and storing of grass belonging to defendant No 1. That is, really speaking, defendant No 1 enjoys the said property in the name of the apangashram."

The Court was asked to take accounts from the defendants and settle their liability for any loss caused by their negligence and mismanagement and has also been asked to remove them from their trusteeship and to appoint new trustees. In support of his argument, the learned Advocate-General relies on Narsidas Jekisondas v. Ravishankar Prabhaskar (3) and Annappa Ramchandra Rai v. Krishna Narayan Prasad (4). But in these cases and in the Privy Council case in Abdur Rahim v. Abu Mahomed Barkat Ali (5) which is referred to and discussed therein, suits had been brought by beneficiaries under a public trust to enforce the trust. In so far as the plaintiff here seeks to set aside the wills as having been brought about by undue influence, she is quite obviously not suing to enforce the trust and the learned Advocate-General concedes that so far the suit is not obnoxious to s. 92. There is we must admit considerable difficulty as regards the alternative reliefs which are certainly claimed on the footing that the wills are "legal and fit to be confirmed" as stated in the plaint. But even here it may be argued, not unreasonably we think, that the plaintiff is not seeking to enforce the trust. She is claiming what she considers reasonable maintenance not on the basis of the trust but in spite of the trust, relying on principles of Hindu Law to which the trust, though valid in other respects, must conform. She is not asking the Court to administer the trust but administer her husband's estate in accordance with these principles simply for the purpose of giving her proper maintenance. This is the gist of the argument of the learned Counsel for the plaintiff, and we think on the whole it is sound. The plaint is very awkwardly drafted, but it has frequently been held that mofussil pleadings should not be construed too strictly, if to do so would work injustice, and reading the plaint as a whole we think it permissible to take this view of it. On this view we consider that it is not governed by s. 92 and not liable to be dismissed because it has not been filed as a representative suit with the sanction of the Collector.

On the merits of the case, that is to say, the propriety of the award of Rs. 5,014 for arrears of maintenance, Mr. Setalvad has argued, first, that whatever rate of maintenance be held suitable, the plaintiff must give credit for what she has received. The trial Judge has deducted from the gross amount found due to her at the rate of Rs. 275 a month, Rs. 50 a month provided in the wills and Rs. 806 the rent recovered for part of lot No. 1 at Rs. 31 per month. But she had also recovered, it is said, an equal amount as rent of lots Nos. 2 and 3 and has used lot No. 4 as a stable for which Rs. 10 a month should reasonably be charged as rent. Besides that, witness Natvarlal, a protegee of Ambalal, says that he paid to her a sum of Rs. 108 which was owing from him to Ambalal. If these sums are deducted, the amount to be awarded, whatever it is, would be further reduced by Rs. 806 plus Rs. 260 plus Rs. 108 = Rs. 1,174. But the amount actually recovered as rent for lots Nos. 2 and 3 seems to have been Rs. 380 only (see pp 212 and 214 of the paper-book). As for lot No. 4 which plaintiff used as a stable, we do not think she can be charged rent for this if she was entitled to maintain the carriage, and in our opinion, she was. The proper deductions to be made in our opinion are Rs. 1,360 paid under the wills, Rs. 806 for rent of part of lot No. 1, Rs. 380 for rent of lots Nos. 2 and 3 and Rs. 108, i. e. in all Rs. 2,594.

(2) 32 Bom. L R 1435; 128 Ind. Cas. 891; A I R 1931 Bom. 33; Ind. Rul. (1931) Bom. 107.

(4) 38 Bom. L R 808; 165 Ind. Cas. 1601; A I R 1936 Bom. 412; 9 R B 202

(5) 55 I A 96; 108 Ind. Cas. 361; A I R 1928 P O 16; 55 O 519; 9 P L T 65; I L T 40 Cal. 19; 27 L W 339; 32 O W N 482; 26 A L J 484; 54 M L J 609; 30 Bom. L R 774; 48 O L J 55 (P O.)

It was argued that the amount should be still further reduced by a sum of Rs. 2,500 which plaintiff is said to have realised by the sale of ornaments not proved to be her stridhan ornaments. The amount recovered was perhaps only Rs. 2,100 as plaintiff says. But the point to be noted is that the second and final will which dealt with plaintiff's maintenance, Ex. 47, provided that the ornaments are to be sold on plaintiff's death and the proceeds spent within one month in connection with her obsequies. That being so, we do not think the ornaments can be regarded as forming part of Ambalal's estate or that they have to be taken into consideration in the calculation of the plaintiff's maintenance. As the ornaments have been sold, the amount to be spent on the obsequies may have to be diminished pro tanto. But we can see no justification for deducting the amount from the sum to be allowed for arrears of maintenance.

The Municipal taxes on the buildings occupied by the plaintiff are fairly heavy and in providing for the future, this may have to be taken into consideration. But the accounts at p. 220 of the paper-book and the bills and receipts Exs. 36 to 44 show that defendant No. 1 paid the tax for the year 1930-31 and there is no evidence that plaintiff paid any taxes at all during the period with which we are concerned. As regards the rate of maintenance allowed by the trial Court, which is made up of Rs. 200 for household and other expenses and Rs. 75 for a carriage, Mr. Setalvad's contentions are that plaintiff has produced no evidence as to her actual expenditure and the trial Judge has not based his figures on actuals but on what he considers the plaintiff might reasonably have spent, that whereas the present income of the estate is only about Rs. 4,000 a year—and that was the income for the last four years of Ambalal's life—the Judge allowed himself to be influenced by the fact that the income used to be much more and the average for ten years was about Rs. 10,000 a year, that it is unreasonable to allow the plaintiffs Rs. 3,300 a year for her maintenance when for the last four years of his life Ambalal and his sister and plaintiff together had little more than this to live upon, that there is no necessity for plaintiff to have a carriage and her husband gave express directions to defendant No. 2 on several occasions that the horse and carriage were to be sold, and, lastly, that the estimate of Ambalal's household expenses on which the Judge has based plaintiff's allowance is exaggerated and includes a great deal of expenditure which there is no need for plaintiff to incur.

We do not think that the absence of reliable evidence as to what plaintiff has actually spent is very important. She may have spent more or less than she was entitled to charge the estate with for her maintenance. The principles on which maintenance is to be calculated are expounded in Ekradeshwar Bahwasin v. Homeshwar Singh (6), to which the trial Judge has referred, and generally speaking the same principles apply to arrears as to future maintenance, although, as pointed out in Gurushiddappa Mallappa v. Parwatewva Shivappa (7), the Court is not bound to award arrears of maintenance at the same rate as might be considered reasonable for the future. We agree with the learned Advocate-General that the maintenance ought to be calculated with reference to the income of the estate as it is now and not as it was before Ambalal began to spend so much money on charity. Hindu Law and opinion regard these charitable gifts and bequests with favour, and if a Hindu husband of his own free will chooses to diminish his estate by giving away part of it to charity (assuming of course that he is not doing it with the object of defeating his widow's reasonable claims), the widow is entitled to say that she should be given maintenance in proportion to what the income was before the charitable gifts or bequests were made. Such a claim would be quite absurd in the present case because it appears that Ambalal's ordinary expenditure remained pretty much the same throughout, and he spent no more on himself and his family for ordinary living expenses when his income was Rs. 20,000 a year than he did when it was Rs. 4,000. But although there is one passage in the judgment which rather suggests that the trial Judge thought the gift of the Richey Road bungalow in trust for the dispensary might be disregarded in the calculation of maintenance, I doubt if this really has affected his conclusions. At any rate he professes to base his award not on Ambalal's income but on his normal expenditure on his household.

(6) 56 I A. 132; 116 Ind. Cas. 409; A I R 1929 P O 128; 8 Pat. 810; 33 O W N 637; 10 P L T 345; 49 O L J 679; 31 Bom. L R 816; 6 O W N 526; (1929) A L J 695; 30 L W 1; 57 M L J 50; (1929) M W N 468; Ind. Rul. (1929) P O 193 (P O.)

(7) 33 Bom. L R 1293; 167 Ind. Cas. 973; A I R 1937 Bom. 135; 1 L R (1937) Bom. 113; 2 R B 347.

As regards the allowance for a conveyance, Ambalal had kept a carriage for fifteen or sixteen years with one short interval of six months. Sometimes he kept two conveyances. We think it may be regarded as a reasonable luxury within the meaning of the rule laid down in Ekradeshwari Bahusin v. Homeshwar Singh (6) and we are not prepared to say that the allowance of Rs. 75 a month for this purpose is unwarranted. We may say that when the time comes for making provision for the future this allowance might fairly be taken to include stabling. On the other hand we think, there is a good deal of force in the argument that the figures of household expenditure in Ambalal's diaries which are accepted as correct by both sides do not justify an allowance of Rs. 200 a month for the expenses of plaintiff alone. The trial Judge says that Ambalal's household expenses were on the average Rs. 4,500 per annum. This figure appears to be taken from the statement compiled from the diaries and put in on plaintiff's behalf. In this statement household expenses and miscellaneous expenses of Ambalal, dharmada, etc., have been lumped together. A jumbled total of this kind is meaningless. There is no reason why plaintiff's miscellaneous and charitable expenditure should be on a scale comparable to her husband's. The statement put in by the defendants shows that the household expenses proper were never more than about Rs. 1,600 a year and often much less. In the years when the income was at its highest, in 1921 and 1922, the figures were Rs. 976 and Rs. 1,297. The average for the last three years of Ambalal's life was Rs. 1,400 or less than Rs. 120 a month for three people and their servants. The plaintiff's dress costs roughly Rs. 180 a year or Rs. 15 a month.

A very considerable item in plaintiff's statement is under the heading of personal and medical expenses. The annual totals for the years Samvat 1980 to 1984 (omitting the year Samvat 1981 for which the diary is not forthcoming) were Rs. 362, Rs. 1,302 made up of two items of Rs. 677 and Rs. 625, Rs. 874 and Rs. 451. In the defendant's statement there is no separate heading for plaintiff's personal expenses. The corresponding figures for her medical expenses are Rs. 13, Rs. 334, Rs. 386 and Rs. 11. In 1925, when the plaintiff's last child was born and died soon after delivery, she had a difficult confinement and heavy medical expenses had to be incurred. But that is a long time ago. It is vaguely stated that she is still weak and infirm, but there is no reliable evidence, the evidence of any medical man or nurse for instance, to show that she is a confirmed invalid or in need of constant or expensive medical treatment. An allowance of Rs. 50 a month for medicine and miscellaneous expenses including charity ought, in our opinion, to be quite sufficient. Rupees 75 for a conveyance, Rs. 60 for medicine and cook, Rs. 15 for dress; and Rs. 50 for other expenses, comes to Rs. 200 a month, and we see no reason why that allowance should be exceeded. The amount due for twenty-six months is therefore Rs. 5,200, from which, as I have said, Rs. 2,594 are to be deducted as having been already recovered, leaving a balance of Rs. 2,606 as the amount to be decreed.

In the cross-objections Mr. Thakor for the plaintiff has repeated the contention that the wills are void for undue influence. He relies on s. 16, Contract Act, s. 89, Trusts Act, and on the equitable rule which has been referred to in Shivgangawa Madiwalappa Vulavi v. Baiangouda Govindgouda Patil (8), that when a person obtains any benefit from another, whether under a contract or as a gift, by exerting his influence, which, in the opinion of the Court, prevents the grantor from exercising an independent judgment in the matter, the latter can set aside the contract or recover the gift. It is argued that it is for defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to prove that these wills were not induced by undue influence. This argument, however, presupposes that these defendants were in a position to dominate the will of Ambalal, and we agree with the trial Judge that there is no good reason to suppose that they were in that position. Ambalal was a religious man and might perhaps be described as a religious fanatic. But we can see no reason to suppose that he was under the domination of defendant No. 1. He was a devotee of the temple of which defendant No. 1 is the mahant and claims to be the proprietor. He regarded defendant No. 1 with reverence and treated him accordingly. But we think that the plaintiff and her witnesses are exaggerating when they say that Ambalal regarded defendant No. 1 as a God or imposed a blind confidence in him. The evidence shows that he used to visit other temples as well, and was in the habit of making charitable gifts for the benefit of sadhus and cripples and cows. The dispositions of his property, which have been impugned, seem to have been quite in keeping with his character.

(8) 40 Bom. L R 132; 176 Ind. Cas. 187; A I R 1936 Bom. 304; 11 R B 25.

Defendant No. 2 was his medical attendant and, as he was somewhat frequently ailing, he may have seen a good deal of him. But defendant No. 2 was not his only doctor, and we can find no reliable evidence that he dominated the will of his patient in any way. The plaintiff has admitted in her evidence that Ambalal used to consult defendant No. 2 about medicine but not about business. The suggestion that Ambalal was depressed by the loss of his infant son in 1925 and that the defendants took advantage of his state of depression seems to us to be far-fetched. It was in 1925 that the child died. He lived for four years after that during which he took active steps to start the apangashram and the dispensary.

We can find no proof at all that the defendants exerted any pressure on him in connection with the wills. The writer of the wills and the trust deed, who is a retired Sub-Registrar and apparently a respectable witness, has deposed that Ambalal himself gave him all the instructions for the documents and approved of the drafts and that neither defendant No. 1 nor defendant No. 2 had anything to do with the wills or made any suggestions in connection with them. Practically, all that has been elicited in the cross-examination of this witness is that defendant No. 2 paid him his writing charges on Ambalal's behalf. The writer had asked for a sum of Rs. 250 and Ambalal, apparently at the suggestion of defendant No. 2, decided to pay Rs. 110 only. That is one point; and the other is that the witness says that Ambalal told him not to talk about the wills. Then it is to be noted that according to the evidence Ambalal was not by any means a weak-minded sort of man. On the contrary he seems to have been a shrewd businessman who dealt in shares, quite profitably as it appears and was a director in several companies.

Then again the dispositions made by these wills cannot be regarded as in any way unconscionable. It is true that the provision made in them for Ambalal's wife is below the standard which the law considers reasonable, but it is not so patently unreasonable as to rouse any suspicion that Ambalal was not acting on his own volition. The house which has been assigned for plaintiff's residence is apparently a very good one. Ambalal had expended a lot of money on re-building it shortly before his death. He very probably anticipated that she would be able to let part of it and he may well have thought that an additional allowance of Rs. 50 a month would suffice. Plaintiff has alleged that she was kept in ignorance of these wills. It seems to me that that is a little doubtful. It is an admitted fact that Ambalal constructed the apangashram and started the dispensary in his lifetime. So that plaintiff must have known all about them and indeed she admits that she did. She has also admitted that her husband once told her "you are an illiterate woman. So I have asked defendant No. 2 and Popatlal (defendant No. 4) to look after all this work." In any case a man does not necessarily consult his wife about his testamentary dispositions. It has been suggested that Ambalal's letters to defendant No. 2 show a spirit of subservience to him. These letters are at pp. 437 and 438 of the paper-book. They show no doubt extreme devotion on Ambalal's part to the God of Sri Jagannathji temple. But we cannot find in them any indication that he was under the influence of defendant No. 2. On the contrary the letters rather suggest that the dispositions made in the wills were Ambalal's own and that he was instructing defendant No. 2 to carry them out. The learned trial Judge has expressed the opinion that two of the defendant's witnesses, the pujari of the temple and a retired talati, have given false evidence about one of the wills, the one which related to the apangashram having been deposited in the temple by Ambalal in the presence of the plaintiff. This conclusion seems to be mainly based on discrepancies as to time which are not necessarily at all suspicious after the lapse of ten years. But anyhow, as the learned Judge says, this has little or no bearing on the question of undue influence. We cannot find any real similarity in the circumstances present here to such a case as Sital Prasad v. Parbhu Lal (9) on which learned Counsel for the plaintiff relied. In that case the plaintiff was obviously under the thumb of the defendant who had housed and financed him and helped him to recover his property, which he then induced him to transfer half to his brother and half to a temple of which he was the proprietor but in which the plaintiff was not interested at all. The evidence in this case has been examined by the trial

Judge with meticulous care, and the opinion of an experienced Hindu Judge on a point of this kind must be given great weight. We hold that there is no substance in the cross-objections.

The result is that the decree of the trial Court is modified by substituting the figure Rs. 2,606 for Rs. 5,044. The order as to costs in trial Court will stand, and as each party here has partly succeeded and partly failed, we propose to make the same order in the appeal, viz. that each party should bear his own costs. The cross-objections will be dismissed with costs, and First Appeal No. 255 of 1936, which relates to the rent of lot No. 4 and which is not pressed, is dismissed with costs.

B.

*Decree modified.PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 134 of 1936

December 23, 1938

FAZL ALI AND VARMA, JJ.

RADHEY LAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

KANHAI LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, Paras. 16, 1—Decree in accordance with award—Award in excess of powers conferred on arbitrators—Appeal, if lies—Partition suit—Parties not agreeing as to mode of division of properties and referring matter to arbitration—Such case, if covered by Para. 1—Parties agreeing as to their respective shares—Agreement incorporated in preliminary decree and division of properties referred to arbitrators—Final decree wholly based on award—Case, if falls under Sch. II.

There is ample provision in Paras. 14 and 15 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, to enable the Court, to which the award is submitted, to refuse to give effect to the award if in its opinion it is either void or invalid or illegal. If, however, the award is accepted, it means that in the opinion of the Court it is neither void nor invalid and the Legislature does not appear to have intended that the opinion of the Court should be challenged in appeal. Paragraph 16 merely gives effect to the principle of finality of awards and the intention of the Legislature evidently is that an award should be subjected to the scrutiny of one Court only, namely, the Court through which reference is made to arbitrator and not that Court and an Appellate Court. No appeal, therefore, lies from the decree when it is in accordance with the award, even if the award itself is in excess of the powers conferred upon the arbitrators. Durga Charan Deb Nath v. Gangadhar Deb Nath (3), dissented from. [p. 55; cols. 1 & 2.]

The expression, "the matter in difference between the parties" which has been used in Para. 1, Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, is quite general and fully covers a case where in a partition suit the parties not having agreed among themselves as to how the property was to be divided, referred the matter to the arbitrators. [p. 53, col. 2.]

There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure to prevent the parties from referring the matter in difference between them to arbitration at any stage of the suit. Where in a partition suit the parties have agreed among themselves as to their respective shares and this agreement is incorporated in the preliminary decree but the division of the properties is referred to the arbitrators and the division of the properties which is wholly a subject of the final decree, is wholly based upon the award of the arbitrators, the case falls under Sch. II, [p. 54, col. 1.]

The essential difference between a Commissioner appointed to effect a partition and an arbitrator is that the former is an officer selected and appointed by the Court, in whose selection the parties have not, as of right, any choice, whereas the latter is a person selected by the parties in whose selection the Court has no choice. In the former case the parties have expressed no consent to be bound by the decision of the Commissioner who is appointed by the Court and whose decision the parties may challenge before the Court passing a final decree. In the latter case they have expressed such consent and cannot challenge the arbitrator's decision on questions of law and fact except on the limited grounds mentioned in Sch. II of the Civil Procedure Code. Bholanath Roy v. Bata Kriasho Roy (1), followed. [p. 53, col. 2.]

A. from the original decree of the Sub-Judge, Patna, dated December 23, 1935.

Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherjee, Messrs. B. C. De, S. N. Mukherjee, Mehdi Imam and K. P. Varma, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Khurshaid Husnain, N. K. Prasad II and Ramanugrah Prasad, for the Respondent.

Fazl Ali, J.—This is an appeal from a final decree in a partition suit which purports to be based upon an award given by certain arbitrators appointed by the parties just before the final decree in the suit was passed. The parties are brothers, the plaintiff being the younger brother of the defendant and both being the sons of one Basant Lal. On June 18, 1934, the plaintiff instituted the present suit for the partition of properties, both movable and immovable, and in Sch. I of the plaint he claimed that one of the items of the properties to be divided between him and the defendant was cash amounting to nine lakhs of rupees. The plaintiff also made an application to the Court for the appointment of a Commissioner to make an inventory of the joint properties on the allegation that the movable properties were in danger of being removed by the defendant. The defendant did not file any written statement, but he filed an application in which he denied some of the allegations made by the plaintiff and tried to resist the appointment of the Commissioner. Ultimately a Commissioner was appointed and before him on June 23, 1934, the parties presented a compromise petition. This petition recited that it had been settled between the parties (1) that the plaintiff would accept 7 annas share in all the movable properties, articles, cash, ornaments, etc., and the defendant would take the remaining 9 annas, and (2) that the properties should be partitioned by three persons who had been chosen by the parties, the names of these persons being Nanda Lal Bhagat, Lechman Sao and Hari Kishun. The petition further stated "that in whatever manner the aforesaid arbitrators shall partition and allot the properties, cash, articles and bond, ijara (deeds), decrees, etc., shall be acceptable to both parties, and should, for any reasons, they fail to agree in the partition of any property, the opinion of the majority shall prevail and the partition shall take effect accordingly."

The arbitrators subsequently gave their award setting out therein details of properties allotted to the plaintiff and the defendant, respectively. They decided that the defendant had concealed a sum of three lakhs and not over nine lakhs of rupees as was alleged by the plaintiff, and to equalize the share of the plaintiff in the total asset, they directed the defendant to pay to him a sum of Rs. 98,773 odd. Certain objections were preferred by the defendant to the award, but they were disallowed by the Subordinate Judge who directed the preparation of the final decree in accordance with the award. The defendant then moved this Court against the order of the Subordinate Judge giving effect to the award, but their application was dismissed. They have now preferred this appeal from the final decree passed by the learned Subordinate Judge and the main question which has been argued in this Court is whether an appeal lies from the decree. Paragraph 16 (2), Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, provides :

"Upon the judgment pronounced according to the award, a decree shall follow, and no appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award."

Prima facie, therefore, no appeal can be entertained from the decree passed in the present suit. It is however contended by Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherjee who appears on behalf of the appellant that in the present case an appeal will lie, because in the first place Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, has no application to the facts of the present case; and, secondly, because the so-called award of the arbitrators was without jurisdiction and was therefore in law no award at all. As to the first point it is contended that the parties having agreed among themselves as to their respective share in the properties to be divided, there was no longer any matter in difference between them so as to bring the case under Para. 16, Sch. II and the position of the so-called arbitrators was not unlike that of a Commissioner who is usually appointed for the partition of properties in a suit for partition after the preliminary decree is passed. This contention is obviously untenable, because the compromise petition itself shows that all the differences between the parties had not been settled. Indeed, in the very preamble of the petition it is recited that the reference to the three persons named in the petition became necessary because "many kinds of harassment and monetary loss are involved in a dispute between the parties and it is not known how long the suit will be going on and what will be the result."

Evidently the parties were not agreed among themselves as to how the properties were to be divided, otherwise there would have been no necessity of referring the question to the arbitrators. The expression "the matter in difference between the parties" which has been used in Para. 1, Sch. II, is quite general and I have no doubt that it fully covers the present case. As to the distinction between a Commissioner and an arbitrator it has been clearly pointed out in Bholanath Roy v. Bata Krishto Roy (1), and I shall merely quote the following passage from the judgment delivered in that case :

"The essential difference between a Commissioner appointed to effect a partition and an arbitrator appears to me to be that the former is an officer selected and appointed by the Court, in whose selection the parties have not, as of right, any choice, whereas the latter is a person selected by the parties in whose selection the Court has no choice. In the former case the parties have expressed no consent to be bound by the decision of the Commissioner who is appointed by the Court and whose decision the parties may challenge before the Court passing a final decree. In the latter case they have expressed such consent and cannot challenge the arbitrator's decision on questions of law and fact except on the limited grounds mentioned in Sch. II of the Code."

Thus the first contention put forward on behalf of the appellant must fail.

It is next contended that the present case does not fall within Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code at all, because this schedule is intended to apply to those cases only where a decree is based wholly upon the award of the arbitrators, whereas in the present case the final decree is based partly upon a preliminary decree and partly upon the award of the arbitrators. This contention must be negatived on the short ground that there is nothing in the Code to prevent the parties from referring the matter in difference between them to arbitration at any stage of the suit and that it is not quite correct to say that the final decree which has been passed in the suit is not wholly based upon the award of the arbitrators. It is true that the parties agreed among themselves as to their respective shares and this agreement was incorporated in the preliminary decree but the division of the properties which is the subject of the final decree was wholly based upon the award of the arbitrators.

(1) 7 P L T 739; 95 Ind. Cas. 321; A I R 1937 Pat. 135; (1926) Pat. 161.

Lastly, it was contended that the award of the arbitrators is void, because they had no authority to divide the cash which was not produced before them. It is contended that the arbitrators had been authorized merely to divide those properties, the existence of which was admitted and they went beyond their jurisdiction in deciding that the defendants had concealed a sum of three lakhs of rupees. It appears that this was precisely one of the points raised by the appellant before this Court in the civil revision to which reference has already been made, but it was overruled, it being pointed out that the arbitrators had been empowered not only to divide the properties but also to ascertain what was to be divided. It appears to us that the view which was expressed in that case is the only reasonable view which can be taken when the compromise petition is carefully read. As I have already stated, one of the properties which the plaintiff asked the Court to divide was cash amounting to about nine lakhs of rupees. The compromise petition does not suggest anywhere that the allegations of the plaintiff in this respect were to be entirely ignored nor does it say that the arbitrators were to divide only such properties as were produced before them. On the other hand, it recites that in whatever manner the arbitrator shall partition and allot the properties including the cash shall be acceptable to both parties. I do not think, therefore, that the compromise petition which is the basis of the arbitrators' authority imposed any such limitation upon the power of the arbitrators as to prevent them from trying to ascertain what was to be divided. This is quite sufficient to dispose of the contention put forward on behalf of the appellant; but the legal aspect of the matter must also be examined, inasmuch as the learned Advocate for the appellant argued upon it at some length and cited various authorities in support of his contention.

It appears that previous to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Ghulam Khan v. Mohammad Hassan (2) it was held in a number of cases that though a decree might be in accordance with an award, an appeal would lie from the decree if the award upon which the decree was passed was invalid. This view, however, has been abandoned by the majority of the High Courts in India since the pronouncement of the Judicial Committee in that case. The Judicial Committee dealing with s. 522 which corresponded to Para. 16 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, observes as follows with reference to the concluding words of this provision which are to the effect that no appeal shall lie from a decree passed upon a judgment pronounced according to an award except in so far as a decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award :

"Those words appear to be perfectly clear. Their Lordships would be doing violence to the plain language and the obvious intention of the Code if they were to hold that an appeal lies from a decree pronounced under s. 522 except in so far as the decree may be in excess of or not in accordance with the award. The principle of finality which finds expression in the Code is quite in accordance with the tendency of modern decision in this country. The time has long gone by since the Courts of this country showed disposition to sit as a Court of appeal on award in respect of matters of fact or in respect of matters of law."

It may be pointed out here that the Civil Procedure Code does take into account those cases where an award determines any matter not referred to arbitration and Para. 14 of Sch. II clearly provides that in such cases the Court may remit the award to the re-consideration of the arbitrator upon such terms as it thinks fit. In the present case, the defendant did not ask the Court specifically to remit the award or any part of it to the arbitrators under Para. 14, but it is pointed out that one of his objections to the award was that the arbitrators had gone beyond the scope of the reference in awarding a decree for Rs. 98,773-2-3. This objection, however, even if we assume it for the purpose of this appeal to have been an objection under Para. 14, was considered and overruled and the application made by the appellant to the High Court to revise the order of the Subordinate Judge overruling his objection did not also succeed. Then comes Para. 15 which provides firstly, that the award remitted under Para. 14 becomes void on the failure of the arbitrators to reconsider it; and secondly, that an award may be set aside on certain grounds specified in that paragraph. The first part of the paragraph had no application to the case, as the award was never remitted to the arbitrators and the defendant did not succeed in persuading the Subordinate Judge to set it aside under the second part of the paragraph. Paragraph 16 says :

(2) 29 O 167; 29 I A 51; 6 O W N 226; 8 Sar. 154 (P O).

"Where the Court sees no cause to remit the award or any of the matters referred to arbitration for re-consideration in the manner provided in Para. 14 and where the Court has refused an application made to it to set aside an award, the Court shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award."

In the present case the Court below followed the course clearly indicated in this paragraph and pronounced a judgment according to the award. It follows therefore, that under cl. (2) of this paragraph, in order to determine whether an appeal lies from a decree based upon a judgment so pronounced, all that is to be ascertained is whether the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award. Here it is not disputed that the decree is in accordance with the award but it is contended that the award itself is in excess of the powers conferred upon the arbitrators. It appears to me in these circumstances that no appeal lies from the decree of the arbitrators and I am fortified in this view by several decisions of this High Court and other High Courts of this country. Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherjee referred us to the decision of a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Durga Charan Deb Nath v. Gangadhar Deb Nath (3) in which it was held that there is a distinction between an award which is irregular and an award which is void, and that where the decree is based upon an award which is without jurisdiction, the decree is really based on something which is not an award. That case, however, has not been followed by the other High Courts and with great respect to the learned Judges who decided it, I am unable to agree to the proposition enunciated therein.

The expressions "void" and "without jurisdiction" are sometimes used in a loose sense as bearing the same meaning as the terms invalid and illegal. But in whatever sense they may be used, I think that there is ample provision in Paras. 14 and 15 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, to enable the Court, to which the award is submitted, to refuse to give effect to the award if in its opinion it is either void or invalid or illegal. If, however, the award is accepted, it means that in the opinion of the Court it is neither void nor invalid and the Legislature does not appear to have intended that the opinion of the Court should be challenged in appeal. Paragraph 16 merely gives effect to the principle of finality of awards and the intention of the Legislature evidently is that an award should be subjected to the scrutiny of one Court only, namely the Court through which reference is made to arbitrator and not that Court and an Appellate Court. I would thus prefer to follow the decision of our own Court which seem to be in consonance with the decision of the Judicial Committee as well as the plain language of Para 16 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code. I would, therefore, dismiss this appeal with costs. Hearing fee ten gold mohurs.

Varma, J.—I agree. The contention on behalf of the appellants against the decree is not that the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award but that the award itself is defective in some of the ways pointed out by Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherjee. Firstly, he contends that the arbitrators had exceeded the powers that were conferred upon them, because although the plaint referred to the property ascertained and unascertained, the petition of compromise did not refer to the unascertained portion of the property. Now, reading the various documents in connection therewith, namely the petition of compromise and the preliminary decree passed thereon, it is clear to me that even the unascertained cash was included because when the arbitrators were to divide the property between the brothers, all the properties could not be known to the arbitrators from the very beginning and they had to ascertain as to what the properties were which they were to divide. Moreover, the defendants raised this point before the Court below. The petition of objection shows that they wanted to question (though not very clearly but in a round-about way) the authority of the arbitrators to give an award with regard to the property not ascertained by them. But that objection was disallowed. That is to say, even if we assume that there was a petition under Para. 14 of Sch. II, Civil Procedure Code, that petition was rejected and then comes the mischief of Para. 16 of Sch. II that after a petition under Para. 14 is rejected, a judgment must follow and a decree passed thereon, and when that decree is passed, then unless the party questioning the decree can show that the decree is in excess of the award or not in accordance with the award, he has no right to appeal. About the other point that this is not a decree passed entirely upon the award, it is clear from the materials before us that although a large number of documents had to be referred to, it is really a decree based on the award. I agree that no appeal lies in this case.

S.

*Appeal dismissed.BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 44 of 1938

March 16, 1939

BEAUMONT, O. J. AND B. J. WADIA, J.
NARIMAN EDULJI CONTRACTOR—

APPELLANT

versus

PIROJBAI NARIMAN CONTRACTOR

—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 11—Petitions by husband and wife under Guardians and Wards Act—Consent order passed by which husband was to pay for maintenance and schooling of children to wife or school authorities as the case may be—Wife taking out summons for leave to execute consent order as if it were money decree—Order held valid but could not be executed as decree for payment of money.

Husband and wife made cross-petitions under the Guardians and Wards Act but arrived at an agreement with regard to the maintenance and custody of their minor children. A consent order was passed, whereby the husband was to pay the expenses of the maintenance and schooling of the children and the wife or the school authorities, as the case may be, were to receive the money for the said purpose. Subsequently the wife took out a summons for leave to execute the consent order as if it were a decree for the payment of money under O. XXI, r. 11, Civil Procedure Code:

Held, that the order did not fall within the terms of the Guardians and Wards Act, which does not confer on the Court any power to order a parent, or anybody else, to pay the school bills of the minors, but as the parties consented to the Court passing an order, which was within its ordinary jurisdiction, and as they were properly before the Court, the order was a valid order. The consent order, however, could not be regarded as a decree for payment of money to the decree-holder, the wife, for a part, and possibly the whole amount might be paid to third parties, and could not, therefore, be executed as such.

Mr. F. J. Coltman, for the Appellant.

Sir Jamsheджи Kanga and R. J. Colah, for the Respondent.

Beaumont, C. J.—This is an appeal against an order made by Engineer, J. giving leave to the applicant to execute a consent order dated August 6, 1929, to the extent of Rs. 9,008. The consent order of August 6, 1929, was made on two cross-petitions by a husband and a wife under the Guardians and Wards Act, VIII of 1890. By consent the two petitions were consolidated and certain orders were made as to the custody of the minor children of the marriage of the husband and wife (of whom there were three), and as to their maintenance and then the order contained this provision:

"And I do by and with the like consent further order that the said Nariman Edulji Contractor (i. e., the husband) do pay all the expenses of the maintenance and schooling of all the said minors and that the said Pirojbai Nariman Contractor (i. e., the wife) or the school authorities, as the case may be, do receive the money sent by him from time to time for the said purpose and do forward to him proper receipt and vouchers therefor."

In the year 1937, there were divorce proceedings and ultimately a decree for divorce was made in favour of the wife. On March 7, 1938, the wife took out a summons for leave to execute the consent order inserting in col. G, in the form under O. XXI, r. 11, a sum of Rs. 15,400 odd, which she alleged to be the amount due for schooling and maintenance under the consent order. On that application, there was a reference to the Commissioner to find out what was the amount due for schooling and maintenance, and on July 25, 1938, the Commissioner reported to the Court that the parties had agreed the sum at Rs. 9,008. On that report the learned Judge made the order, which is the subject of this appeal, in which he ordered that the husband do pay to the wife a sum of Rs. 9,008 and further ordered that the wife be granted leave to execute the consent order dated August 6, 1929, to the extent of Rs. 9,008. The husband objects to the order giving leave to execute the consent order, and his objection is based on three grounds. It is said, first, that the consent order regarded as a decree of the Court is a nullity, as it was made without jurisdiction; secondly, that if it is a valid decree, it is not a decree for payment of money; and thirdly, that there is no method of quantifying the amount for which a decree is passed when such amount is not specified in the decree.

With regard to the first point, Mr. Coltman relies on Somakka v. Ramiah (1) and Parvathammal v. Chokkalinga Chetty (2) as authorities for the proposition that an order directing the father to pay a sum for the maintenance and schooling of his children is not an order which can be made under the Guardians and Wards Act, and that if such an order is made under the Act, it cannot be treated as a decree made under the ordinary original jurisdiction and executed as such. I am quite prepared to accept the propositions which those cases lay down, and I think that the order made in this case did not fall within the terms of the Guardians and Wards Act, which does not confer on the Court any power to order a parent, or anybody else, to pay the school bills of the minors. But neither of the Madras cases dealt with a consent order. It is no doubt well established that parties cannot by consent confer upon a Court jurisdiction which it does not possess, but that is not quite the case with which we have to deal. In this case the parties were properly before the Court in a matter under the Guardians and Wards Act, under which no doubt the Court had only a limited jurisdiction, and it seems to me that the parties were justified in consenting to the Court making an order, which it was within the general competence of the Court to make, though it was not within the special jurisdiction which alone the Court could have exercised in the absence of consent. As the parties consented to the Court passing an order, which was within its ordinary jurisdiction, and as they were properly before the Court, I think that the order was a valid order.

(1) 36 M 39; 13 Ind. Cas. 251; 22 M L J 193; (1911) 2 M WN 519.

The second question is whether this is a decree for the payment of money. Order XXI, r. 11, provides that where a decree is for payment of money, the Court may execute it in the manner therein provided, and then sub-r. 2 provides for the application for execution containing various particulars, and under the heading (g) the amount due upon the decree has to be stated. I am not prepared to say that every decree, to come within the description of a decree for payment of money, must state the exact sum due. You may certainly have a decree for payment of money not presently due, and when the amount claimed by the decree-holder is not admitted by the judgment-debtor, I see no objection to the Court adopting the course, which it adopted in this case, and directing an inquiry to ascertain the amount due. I am not, therefore, impressed with the appellant's third objection to the order appealed from. But the difficulty I feel is in holding that this is a decree for payment of money. It is a decree for payment of all the expenses for the maintenance and schooling of the minors, and it provides that the wife or school authorities, as the case may be, are to receive the money. It is quite plain that it is not a decree for payment of money to the decree-holder, the wife, for a part, and possibly the whole amount might be paid to third parties. It seems to me that a decree in that form cannot be regarded as a decree for payment of money, which can be executed as such. On that ground I think that the appeal must be allowed and the order of the learned Judge set aside, so far as it relates to execution of the consent order of 1929. The respondent to pay to the appellant the costs in this Court as well as in the Court below.

(2) 41 M 241; 41 Ind. Cas. 341; A I R 1918 Mad. 389; (1917) M W N 602; 6 L W 526.

B. J. Wadia, J.—I agree.

s.

Appeal allowed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Suit No. 25 of 1939

February 20, 1939

LOBO, J.

DALMIA CEMENT, LTD.—PLAINTIFFS

versus

NARAIN DAS ANANDJI BEOHAR—

DEFENDANT

Trade Unions Act (XVI of 1926), s. 18—Scope—Does not afford immunity to trade union for an act of deliberate trespass—Tort—Trespass—Lawful entry—Burden of proof—Stranger entering on premises built by employer on his land for housing workmen for convenience of his business—Entry without permission of employer—Such person must show that his entry was justified—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIX, r. 2—Temporary injunction in suit for declaration and injunction, when could be granted—Prima facie case and balance of convenience must be made out.

Section 18, Trade Unions Act, does not afford immunity to a trade union or to an officer thereof for an act of deliberate trespass.

Where the employees are housed by their employer for the convenience of his trade in the houses built on his own land, the relationship between them are not those of landlord and tenant at all. These workmen therefore are mere licensees of the employer and the entire property is in the occupation of the employer. If, therefore, a third person enters upon such land without the permission and against the wishes of the employer, the burden of showing that the entry was lawfully justified lies on such a person. White v. Bayley (1), Smith v. Overseers of St. Michael, Cambridge (2) and The King v. Oadby (3), relied on.

In a suit for a declaration and injunction it was alleged by the plaintiff that the defendant accompanied by some persons armed with lathis was trespassing on the plaintiff's land and was staging demonstrations thereon which were calculated to overawe and intimidate the plaintiff and his workmen :

Held, that if the plaintiff had made out a prima facie case and the balance of convenience was on his side, the temporary injunction under O. XXXIX, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, if prayed for, could be granted.

Mr. D. N. O'Sullivan, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Srikishindas H. Lulla, for the Defendant.

Order. — This is a suit for a declaration and injunction and along with the plaint the plaintiffs applied under O. XXXIX, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, for a temporary injunction. On January 27, I granted the prayer for interim injunction and issued notices to the defendant. It is this matter which is before me for disposal now. A brief statement of the facts will suffice. The plaintiffs are the Dalmia Cement, Ltd., a large industrial concern which recently acquired an extensive piece of land near Drigh Road where they set up and completed a cement factory as recently as July, 1938. The plaintiffs employ a very large number of mechanics, labourers and workmen, a good proportion of these are provided with quarters near the factory on the plaintiffs' land. In January 1938, it is alleged by the plaintiffs, a Trade Union was formed by the men employed in their factory which was registered under the Trade Unions Act as the 'Cement Factory Workers' Union' and Mr. R. K. Sidhwa, M. L. A., was elected President thereof. The plaintiffs allege that in or about September, 1938, the defendant Naraindas Anandji Bechar resenting this establishment of a Labour Union otherwise than under his leadership started a campaign, the object of which was to destroy the union under the leadership of Mr. R. K. Sidhwa and establish one under his own leadership. That on December 22, 1938, owing to the defendant's activities in this regard, the plaintiffs informed the defendant that he was not to enter the plaintiff's premises. It is alleged that for some time, in fact, till January 19, 1939, the defendant created no trouble, but it is the plaintiffs' case that from January 19, 1939, the defendant from day to day with an ever-increasing body of men armed with lathis began to trespass on the plaintiffs' land and stage demonstrations thereon calculated to overawe and intimidate the plaintiffs and their workmen, that for these activities the defendant chose the hour of 7-30 A. M. which was the time when the plaintiffs' workmen came to their work either from outside or from their lodgings in the plaintiffs' property.

No written statement has yet been filed by the defendant but his defence has been set out in great detail in his counter-affidavit. It is the defendant's case that he is the President of the Karachi Factories Workers' Union, the President of the Sind Provincial Trade Union Congress, and the representative of labour on the Sind Provincial Legislative Assembly: that it is his business in life to protect the interests of labour, that the labourers employed by the plaintiffs were subjected to considerable hardships and disadvantages, that over 400 of them had joined his Union and that in going to the premises of the plaintiffs he was doing so for an entirely peaceful purpose in the interest of labour and in the interest of the employees of the plaintiffs. The 400 of the labourers who were members of his Union had invited him to their quarters and it was for the purpose of meeting them that he went to the plaintiffs' property. He admits that because obstruction had been caused to him in these peaceful activities he had been obliged to take with him "an increasingly large number of members" of his Union; but there had been no demonstrations, there had been no force or violence or show thereof, he and his men had never gone anywhere near the factory and works, everything was peaceful and legitimate. The plaintiffs' suit was for trespass, there could be no case of trespass when the defendant was there on the invitation of the workmen of the plaintiffs' tenants on the plaintiffs' property; the suit was clearly barred by s. 18, Trade Unions Act, XVI of 1926. I have heard the learned Advocates for the plaintiffs and the defendant and have come to the conclusion that the rule issued by me must be made absolute. In granting or refusing a temporary injunction in such a suit the Courts generally consider two matters: (1) Has the plaintiff made out a prima facie case? (2) On which side lies the balance of convenience? It does not appear to me in the first instance that s. 18 of Act XVI of 1926 is any bar to the present suit. If the section is carefully read and if the object of the Legislature is carefully considered, it will be clear that whereas ordinarily a person is liable in tort if he deliberately brings about a breach of contract of employment between employer and employee, the section provides that a registered trade union or an officer or member thereof is protected from a suit or a legal proceeding if he induces some person to break a contract of employment or interferes with the trade, business or employment of some other person, in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, &c. The important and significant words in the section are "on the ground only." The section does not afford immunity to a trade union, or to an officer thereof for an act of deliberate trespass.

It is not necessary for me at this stage to go any further into the matter. This is merely an interlocutory application and any detailed discussion of the merits of the suit on law or facts is undesirable. Nor do I think that there is any substance in the contention of the learned Advocate for the defendant that the defendant is not a trespasser because he enters the premises of the plaintiffs on the invitation of their tenants. The relations between the plaintiffs and such of their workmen as they have housed on their own property are not those of landlord and tenant at all. These workmen are housed by the plaintiffs for convenience of their trade. These workmen therefore are mere licensees of the plaintiffs and the entire property is in the occupation of the plaintiffs. Reference on this point may be made to the case in White v. Bayley (1) and to the cases in Smith v. Overseers of St. Michael, Cambridge (2) and The King v. Oadby (3). The plaintiffs are, therefore, in possession and the defendant in coming upon their land without their permission and against their orders is a trespasser and the burden lies on him to prove lawful justification for his entry. I am not prepared to accept on the bare statement of the defendant the allegation that he has been coming on the property of the plaintiffs on the invitation of the plaintiffs' workmen. The defendant could have supported this statement with a number of affidavits since he states that no less than 400 or 500 workmen of the plaintiffs are members of his Union. He has not chosen to file the affidavit of a single workman. Nor am I prepared to accept the defendant's assertion that his visits with "an increasingly large number of members" to the plaintiffs' premises are entirely peaceful in their nature. The plaintiffs have with their affidavit filed a number of photographs taken on each morning after January 19 and it is obvious from a look at these photographs that the persons who trespass on the plaintiffs' premises, in some instances near the office and factory of the plaintiffs, are armed with lathis, and their attitude is defiant and menacing. In most of the photographs, the defendant figures. In my opinion there can be no doubt that the plaintiffs have made out a prima facie case for a temporary injunction. As regards the balance of convenience, there can be no question. The demonstrations have been systematically staged at a time when the plaintiffs' workmen come to their work and the obvious result of this is to terrorize the plaintiffs' workmen and disorganize the plaintiffs' business. It is the plaintiffs alone who suffer. I therefore make the Rule absolute and award the plaintiffs the costs of this application.

(1) (1861) 128 R R 681; 10 O B (N.S.) 227; 32 L J O P 253; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 948.

(2) (1860) 3 El. & El. 383; 30 L J M O 74; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 24; 3 L T (N.S.) 687; 122 R R 748.

(3) (1818) 1 B & Ald. 476; 106 R R 175.

D.

Rule made absolute.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Order No. 85
of 1939

September 13, 1939

HARRISS, C. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.
SARJU PRASAD AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

DEOKI SINGH AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182, Expl. 1—Partition decree giving plaintiff and defendants joint possession of part of property and also separate possession of other properties—Decree must be regarded as joint—Application for execution of such decree by one of the parties takes effect in favour of all parties—Appeal—Parties—Application for execution of partition decree—All parties to partition decree impleaded—Only one of them filing objection impleading decree-holder alone and objection allowed—Decree-holder can in appeal implead only objector as respondent without impleading other parties.

Where a decree in a partition suit gives the plaintiffs and defendants joint possession of part of the property, though it also gives them separate possession of other properties, the decree must be regarded as a joint decree and cannot be regarded both as a joint decree and a decree held by each of the parties in severalty. If therefore an application is made by one of the interested parties for the execution of the decree within three years of the decree, it takes effect in favour of all the parties and a subsequent application made by the decree-holder within three years of the previous application but beyond three years from the date if the decree is not barred by Art. 182, Limitation Act, Ram Nath Rai v. Harendra Kumar Rai (1), distinguished, Man Mohan Gope v. Madhusudan Gope (2), followed, Muhamad Sahoob Levai v. Mayamad Ammal (3), referred to.

Where in application for the execution of a partition decree, the decree-holder impleads all the parties to the partition decree and only one of them files an objection impleading the decree-holder alone and the objection is treated as a separate miscellaneous suit and decided against the decree-holder, the decree-holder is fully entitled in appeal to implead only the objector as respondent without impleading other parties to the partition decree. The objector by his objection having invited the Court to decide the matter between him and the decree-holder only, cannot subsequently raise an objection that the decree-holder should have impleaded other parties in appeal.

A. from an order of the District Judge, Gaya, dated December 21, 1938, reversing an order of the Subordinate Judge, Gaya, dated May 3, 1938.

Mr. Rajkishore Prasad, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. V. Varma, for the Respondents.

Harries, C. J.—This is a second appeal from an order of the learned District Judge of Gaya in an execution matter.

The decree-holders, who are respondents in this appeal, brought proceedings claiming partition of an estate. A preliminary decree was passed which was eventually made final. Four takhtas were prepared and allotted to the respective parties and one plot of land was left joint between the parties. The date of the final decree in this partition suit is October 26, 1923.

On December 22, 1936, the decree holder-respondents filed an execution application praying for delivery of possession of the takhta allotted to them. It is to be observed that this application was made more than three years after the date of the partition decree; but it is common ground that during the interval two of the interested parties had made applications in execution and had obtained possession of their respective takhtas. If these two applications enure for the benefit of all the parties, then it has to be conceded that the application of the decree-holder-respondents was within time.

In the execution case filed on December 22, 1936, the decree-holders impleaded all the parties to the partition suit, but only the present appellant raised any objection. On September 27, 1937, the appellant Sarju Prasad filed an objection praying that the execution case be dismissed on the ground that it was barred by limitation. It is to be observed that in this objection the appellant Sarju Prasad impleaded only the present decree-holder-respondents. He did not implead the other parties to the partition proceedings. This objection was treated as separate miscellaneous case and numbered Miscellaneous Case No. 99 of 1937, and in due course, this miscellaneous case was heard and determined by the learned Subordinate Judge. He held that the previous application in execution did not enure for the benefit of the decree-holder-respondents, and accordingly he came to the conclusion that their application for execution was barred by limitation in that it was presented beyond the period of three years from the date of the partition decree. On appeal the learned District Judge was of opinion that the execution application was not barred by time and reversed the decision of the Court below. It is against the order of the learned District Judge that the present second appeal has been filed.

In the first place, it has been argued that the application for execution made by the decree-holder was barred by time. Counsel for the appellants has urged that the two previous applications made by other parties could not be regarded as applications made by holders of a joint decree and thus would not enure for the benefit of the decree-holder-respondents. Counsel has relied upon the case of Ram Nath Rai v. Harendra Kumar Rai (1). In that case it was held that an application by one of several parties to a partition decree to be put in possession of land allotted to him in severalty is not an application by one of a number of joint decree-holders, and thus such an application would not prevent time running against other parties to the partition decree. It must be remembered that in the case of Ram Nath Rai v. Harendra Kumar Rai (1) no property had been left joint by the partition decree.

The facts of the present case cannot be distinguished from the facts in Man Mohan Gope v. Madhusudan Gope (2). In this latter case the partition decree allotted certain properties in severalty to each of the parties but reserved a certain property as ijmali between the plaintiff and the defendants, the plaintiff applied for execution and received part satisfaction. Subsequently some of the defendants applied for execution beyond three years of the date of the decree but within three years of the plaintiff's application for execution. A Bench held that the decree was passed jointly in favour of the plaintiff and the defendants within the meaning of Explanation I of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act and the defendants' application having been made within three years of the plaintiff's application for execution, it was not barred by time. No distinction whatsoever can be drawn between the present case and the case of Man Mohan Gope v. Madhusudan Gope (2) and in my judgment this latter Calcutta case should be followed.

(1) 35 O W N 448; 131 Ind. Cas. 860; 53 O L J 225; Ind. Rul. (1931) Cal. 208; A I R 1931 Cal. 581; 56 O L J 1102.

(2) 36 O W N 772; 189 Ind. Cas. 786; 56 O L J 10; Ind. Rul. (1937) Cal. 655; A I R 1937 Cal. 869.

Explanation I to Art. 182 of the Indian Limitation Act, is in these terms:—

"Where the decree or order has been passed severally in favour of more persons than one, distinguishing portions of the subject-matter as payable or deliverable to each, the application mentioned in cl. 5 of this article shall take effect in favour only of such of the said persons or their representatives as it may be made by. But where the decree or order has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, such application, if made by any one or more of them, or by his or their representatives, shall take effect in favour of them all".

The question to be decided here is whether the decree passed in this partition suit was a joint decree or not. It certainly gave the plaintiffs and defendants joint possession of part of the property, though it also gave them separate possession of other properties. The decree cannot be regarded as both a joint decree and a several decree. It cannot be regarded as though there is one decree for joint possession in favour of the plaintiffs and the defendants and another decree for separate possession of their respective allotments. In Man Mohan Gope v. Madhusudan Gope (2) at p. 713* Rankin, C. J. observed:—

"It seems to me that the decree before us is certainly one passed jointly in favour of the plaintiff and the present respondents so far as the Kalikhola and the road are concerned, and unless the decree is for the present purpose to be regarded as though there was one decree for joint possession in favour of the respondents and the plaintiff and another and different decree for separate possession of their allotments by the respondents, I think this appeal must fail."

He held that the decree in that case which was very similar to the decree in the present case, was a joint decree and could not be regarded both as a joint decree and a decree held by each of the parties in severalty.

The view expressed by the Calcutta High Court has been approved of in the case of Muhammad Sahoob Levai v. Mayamad Ammal, 145 Ind. Cas. 968 (3). In my judgment the present decree must be regarded as a joint decree, and that being so, the previous applications for execution must be regarded as applications which would take effect in favour of all the parties. It is common ground that the present application was made within three years of the previous execution application, and that being so, the application was not barred by Art. 182 of the Indian Limitation Act.

In the second place, it has been argued that the appeal before the learned District Judge was bound to fail for want of parties. The learned District Judge held that there was no defect, but it has been strenuously urged before us that the learned District Judge could not decide the question of limitation in the absence of all the parties to the partition decree. The decree holders impleaded all the parties to the partition decree in their execution application but as I have stated only one of them, namely the appellant raised an objection. He filed an objection impleading the decree-holder-respondents only, and this objection was treated as a separate miscellaneous case. What the Subordinate Judge decided was a proceeding between the appellant and the decree-holders and having decided it in favour of the appellant the decree-holders were fully entitled, in my view, to appeal to the District Judge and implead only the appellant as respondent to the appeal. The appellant by his objection had invited the Court to decide the matter between him and the decree-holders, and that being so, he cannot now raise an objection that the decree-holders should have impleaded other parties who were not made parties by the appellant himself in Miscellaneous Case No. 99 of 1937. The matter was one purely between the parties to this appeal, and that being so, the respondents were not bound to implead the other parties to the partition decree.

It has been contended that a decision of the Court on the question of limitation binds all the other parties to the execution decree. Clearly in this case the appellant only invited a decision between him and the decree-holder, and it is unnecessary for us to consider at this stage what the possible effect of any finding on limitation might be. It is sufficient to say that the order under appeal was an order made between the parties to this appeal, and that being so, it cannot be said that the appeal before the learned District Judge could not be sustained by reason of failure to join other persons who might be interested. The appellant himself limited the scope of the proceedings and he cannot object to the manner in which the appeal was preferred in the Court of the learned District Judge. In my view, there is no merit whatsoever in this objection.

(3) 145 Ind. Cas. 968; 38 L W 568; A I R 1933 Mad. 789; 9 R M 174; 65 M L J 582; (1933) M W N 1295.

For the reasons which I have given, I hold that this appeal fails and would accordingly dismiss it with costs.

Fazi Ali, J.—I entirely agree.

s. Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 488 of 1936

February 10, 1939

PANDEANG ROW, J.

KANNAYYA REDDI—PETITIONER

versus

MUTHU REDDI—RESPONDENT

Contribution—Claim for contribution as between partners, when cannot be entertained—Debt borrowed for partnership trade—Joint decree against partners—One partner paying off whole decretal amount, if can claim contribution against others.

It is one thing to say that money was borrowed as it was required for the partnership trade by both the partners, the borrowing itself not being a partnership transaction though the partners borrowed it in order to advance it to the partnership as capital, and it is quite another thing to say that the borrowing itself was by the partnership. It is only when the claim for contribution is based on the contract of partnership or intimately bound up with the relation of partnership that it would be excluded by the general doctrine that as between partners there can be no claim for contribution.

Where the claim for contribution is not based on the ground that as a partner the defendant is liable to contribute but the basis of the claim is a joint decree made against the plaintiff and the defendant in respect of debt contracted for partnership trade in execution of which the plaintiff alone had to pay the entire amount due under the decree in such a case, the law of partnership does not prohibit the entertainment of a claim for contribution against other partner. Subbarayudu v. Adinarayadu (1) and Ellappa Mudaliar v. Swaminatha Mudaliar (2), relied on.

O. R. P. to revise the decree of the District Court, North Arcot at Vellore, dated August 29, 1935.

Messrs. Ch. Raghava Rao, S. Rajaraman and S. Kothandarama Nayanar, for the Petitioners.

Mr. C. R. Rajagopalachari, for the Respondent.

Order.—The point raised in this petition is whether the claim of the plaintiff, who is the petitioner in this Court, for contribution is not maintainable. This objection to the claim was not made in the trial Court which passed the decree in favour of the plaintiff; it was only in the lower Appellate Court that for the first time it was contended that on the admission of the plaintiff in his evidence that the debt in respect of which a decree had been passed against the plaintiff and the defendant had been borrowed by himself and the defendant for the purpose of a partnership trade carried on by them, the claim for contribution was not maintainable. It is not possible to say that the admission of the plaintiff clearly show that the borrowing itself was a partnership transaction. It is one thing to say that money was borrowed as it was required for the partnership trade by both the partners, the borrowing itself not being a partnership transaction though the partners borrow it in order to advance it to the partnership as capital, and it is quite another thing to say that the borrowing itself was by the partnership. In any case the present claim is not based on the ground that as a partner the defendant is liable to contribute. The basis of the claim is a joint decree made against the plaintiff and the defendant in execution of which the plaintiff alone had to pay the entire amount due under the decree. In such a case, the law of partnership does not prohibit the entertainment of a claim for contribution. It is only when the claim for contribution is based on the contract of partnership or intimately bound up with the relation of partnership that it would be excluded by the general doctrine that as between partners there can be no claim for contribution.

I have had occasion already to consider the question and I have expressed my opinion that in cases of this kind where the claim for contribution is based on the payment by the plaintiff in its entirety of a joint decree debt due by him and by the defendant, the claim for contribution cannot be defeated even if the original debt in respect of which the decree was passed was a partnership debt. The Advocate for the petitioner has relied on two cases, namely, those reported in Subbarayudu v. Adinarayadu (1) and Ellappa Mudaliar v. Swaminatha Mudaliar (2). The latter case was one in which the decree had been obtained by a stranger in respect of a partnership debt and the plaintiff alone had to pay up the whole of the decree amount and it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover contribution. The decree of the lower Appellate Court therefore is not in accordance with law and must be set aside. It is accordingly set aside and the decree of the trial Court is restored. The petitioner who is the plaintiff in the suit, will be entitled to his costs in this and in the lower Appellate Court.

(1) 18 M 134.

(2) 38 L W 316; 145 Ind. Cas. 858; A I R 1933 Mad. 755; 6 R M 139.

N.S.

Decree set aside.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 778 of 1938

September 1, 1939

HARRIES, C. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.

SHEONARAIN PRASAD SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

GANGA PRASAD SAHU—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 116—Assignment of decree for certain amount—Portion of money kept with assignee to be paid to assignor's creditor if decree is realized—Suit by creditor of assignor to recover amount—Nature of—Article applicable—Interest—Suit for compensation for breach of contract—Interest, if recoverable—Measure of damages.

P who had obtained a mortgage decree against A assigned the decree to D for certain amount a portion of which was left with D to be paid to X who was creditor of P. This amount was not to be paid to X until D had realized the decree. D realized the decretal amount but refused to pay X who then brought a suit to recover the amount:

Held, that the suit was neither one for specific performance of a contract nor for indemnity but was a suit for compensation for breach of contract and was therefore governed by Art. 116, Limitation Act. Ram Rachhya Singh Thakur v. Raghunath Prasad Misir (1), relied on.

In a suit for compensation for breach of contract, the plaintiff can recover the interest on the amount of compensation as he is entitled to such an amount as would compensate him for the loss which he has suffered by reason of the defendants' breach of contract. The correct measure of damages is the actual loss sustained by the plaintiff plus a reasonable rate of interest thereon. J. H. Pattinson v. Srimati Bindhya Debi (2), distinguished.

A. from a decision of the District Judge of Gaya, dated January 11, 1938, confirming a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Gaya, dated July 1, 1937.

Messrs. Nawal Kishore Prasad II and R. P. Jaruhar, for the Appellants.

Messrs. B. C. De and K. N. Lal, for the Respondent.

Harries, C. J.—This is a defendants' appeal from concurrent decrees of the Courts below decreeing the plaintiffs' claim for Rs. 1,700 and interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum from July 27, 1933.

On July 12, 1920, one Prasad Sahu predecessor-in-interest of plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, obtained a preliminary mortgage decree for Rs. 7,379 against Asfandiar Khan, and on June 13, 1921, this decree was made absolute. On August 1, 1924, Prasad Sahu assigned this mortgage decree to defendants Nos. 1 to 3 and two other persons for Rs. 5,000. A sum of Rs. 3,300 was paid to Prasad Sahu and the remainder, namely Rs. 1,700, was left with defendants Nos. 1 to 3 to be paid to plaintiff No. 1 who was a creditor of Prasad Sahu. It was a term of the agreement that this sum was not to be paid to plaintiff No. 1 until defendants Nos. 1 to 3 had realised the decree.

Defendants Nos. 1 to 2 executed the decree assigned to them in execution case No. 289 of 1932 and on July 11, 1933, the judgment-debtor deposited the decretal amount in Court. On July 18, 1933, this amount was attached by some third party, but on July 21, 1933, the attachment order was withdrawn and the execution case was dismissed on full satisfaction to the decree-holder. On July 24, 1933, defendants Nos. 1 to 3 withdrew the money which had been so deposited. For some reason or other defendants Nos. 1 to 3 refused to pay the sum of Rs. 1,700 to plaintiff No. 1 as they had agreed in the contract of August 1, 1924, and on July 22, 1936, the plaintiffs brought this suit to recover the sum of Rs. 1,700 together with interest. Both the Courts below decreed the plaintiffs' claim; but it has been contended by Mr. Nawal Kishore Prasad on behalf of the appellants that the decrees of the Courts below cannot be sustained.

The first point taken by the appellants is that this suit was barred by limitation. As I have stated earlier, the sum of Rs. 1,700 was not payable by defendants Nos. 1 to 3 to plaintiff No. 1 until the defendants had realised the decree. The decretal amount was deposited by the judgment-debtor in Court on July 11, 1933, but this was attached by a third party. However, on July 21, 1933, the attachment order was withdrawn and the execution case dismissed because the decree had been fully satisfied. It has been contended that the decree was realised at latest by July 21, 1933, and that time ran from that date. The suit was actually brought on July 22, 1936, over three years from the date when the decree was realised.

If this was a suit to recover a sum of money due, it would have been barred in three years, and it might well be said that the present suit was out of time. The trial Court appears to have thought that the present suit was one for specific performance and that Art. 113 of the Limitation Act applied. It was, however, held that time began to run not from the date when the execution case was dismissed on the ground of full satisfaction but from the date when the money was actually withdrawn, namely, July 24, 1933. Accordingly the learned Munsif held that the suit was within time.

The lower Appellate Court was of opinion that this was a suit to which Art. 116 of the Limitation Act applied and as that article gave the plaintiffs six years to bring the suit, the suit was well within time.

It has been strongly urged that this is a suit for specific performance, but, in my view, it is clearly not so. Specific performance can only be asked for in suits falling within s 12 of the Specific Relief Act, and clearly this is not such a suit.

It was further argued that this was a suit for indemnity; but in my view it is not such a suit. The contract entered into by defendants Nos. 1 to 3 was not to indemnify plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 3 against any loss but it was a contract to pay plaintiff No. 1 a sum of money on the happening of a specific event, namely the realisation of the decree. It appears to me that this is a case where compensation is sought for breach of contract. Defendants Nos. 1 to 3 promised to pay plaintiff No. 1 Rs. 1,700 when the decree was realised, and this promise they have broken. It is not a suit to recover money lent or money due as a result of some transaction similar to a loan. It is clearly a case where the plaintiffs are suing for compensation for the defendants' breach of contract. That being so, Art. 116 of the Limitation Act applies, and that article gives the plaintiffs six years to bring the suit. The suit, therefore, was well within time, and the defence of limitation was of no avail to the defendants.

In my view this case cannot be distinguished from the case of Ram Rachhya Singh Thakur v. Raghunath Prasad Misser (1). In this latter case money had been left with a vendee to pay a debt due from the vendor to a third party. The vendee failed to pay, and a Bench of this Court held that his failure gave the vendor a right to sue for compensation for breach of contract, and that Art. 116 of the Limitation Act applied to such a suit. It is impossible to distinguish that Bench case from the case now before the Court, and that being so, it must be held that the present suit is within time.

It was further argued that if this suit was a suit for compensation, then the plaintiffs' claim was bound to fail by reason of the fact that the plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 had failed to establish that they had suffered any loss. It was contended that before plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 could succeed, they would have to show that they had been compelled to pay plaintiff No. 1 the sum of Rs. 1,700 which the defendants had contracted to do.

In the first place, this argument entirely overlooks the fact that plaintiff No. 1, the person who was to receive the money, is a party to the suit. Both the Courts held that he was a privy to this contract, and that being so, he has obviously suffered loss, because he has not received the sum which the defendants contracted to have paid over to him. Further, it appears to me that plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 have suffered serious loss even if they have not been called upon as yet to pay what is due to plaintiff No. 1. Their liability to plaintiff No. 1 is still undischarged, and that being so, they can sue for compensation for breach of contract. This point also has been clearly decided in the case of Ram Rachhya Singh Thakur v. Raghunath Prasad Misser (1) to which I have already referred. In my view, however this case is regarded, the plaintiffs have a cause of action for compensation.

Lastly, the appellants have argued that the Courts below were wrong in granting interest upon this sum of Rs 1,700, and reliance has been placed upon a Bench decision of this Court. J. H. Pattinson v. Srimati Bindhya Debi (2), in which it was held that in the absence of an agreement, express or implied, interest on money wrongfully detained is not recoverable either under the Interest Act or under the proviso to the only section in that Act. If this was a claim for money wrongfully detained, there can be no doubt that interest could not be recovered; but if the suit is to be regarded as a suit for compensation, then the plaintiffs are entitled to such an amount as would compensate them for the loss which they have suffered by reason of the defendants' breach of contract. The defendants, the moment they realised this money, were bound by their contract to pay it to plaintiff No. 1, and this they failed to do. The Court must, therefore, consider what damage the plaintiffs have suffered. It appears to me that plaintiff No. 1 has clearly suffered damage in excess of Rs. 1,700, and if this is regarded as a claim by plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 they also suffered loss in excess of Rs. 1,700. They have been deprived of the use of this money because of the defendants' breach of contract and the latter are bound to compensate the plaintiffs for their loss. It appears to me that the correct measure of damages is the loss sustained by the plaintiffs, and such loss can very properly be estimated as Rs. 1,700 plus a reasonable rate of interest thereon. That would be a fair and reasonable manner of ascertaining the amount of compensation due by reason of the breach of contract. Both the Courts below have considered twelve per cent. per annum simple to be reasonable interest upon this money. It may be that the lower Courts were wrong in granting a decree for Rs. 1,700 together with interest in terms; but the decree can be justified when it is regarded as a decree which gives the plaintiffs the actual loss which they have suffered. In my view interest at twelve per cent. together with the amount of Rs. 1,700 fairly and reasonably represents the loss suffered by the plaintiffs. That being so, they were entitled to recover such a sum by way of damages for breach of contract. The argument that they were not entitled to interest as such is really academic. If they are entitled to the full amount granted by the Court below by way of damages, then the decrees of the Courts below must be sustained.

(1) 8 Pat. 880; 122 Ind. Cas. 244; A I R 1930 Pat. 46; Ind. Rul. (1930) Pat. 196.

(2) 12 Pat. 216; 146 Ind. Cas. 56; 14 P L T 149; A I R 1933 Pat. 196; 6 R P 225.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Fazl Ali, J.—I agree.

E.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Appeal No. 358 of 1938

March 21, 1939

DALIP SINGH, J.

AMAR NATH KHOSLA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

M. C. MOHAN—PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Copyright—Assignment—Work incomplete when document assigning copyright is drawn up—Copyright, if transferred—Direct words not used—Evidence of parties, if uninterested, whether guide to meaning of phrases used—Deed—Construction

There cannot possibly be a transfer of copyright or assignment of copyright in a non-existing work where there is no proof that the work was substantially completed at the time when document transferring copyright was drawn up and on the face of it the document refers to a future work, copyright cannot be transferred by it. Performing Right Society, Ltd. v. London Theatre of Varieties Ltd. (1), relied on. [p. 66, col. 2]

Where direct words are not used to convey a right and the matter is one of inference by implication from the phrases used, then the evidence of the parties, if they are not interested one way or the other in the matter, is the surest of all guides as to the meaning of the phrases used. [p. 67, col. 1.]

F. A. from the decree of the Additional District Judge, Lahore, dated July 9, 1938.

Mr. Achhru Ram, for the Appellants.

Messrs. M. C. Mahajan and Dina Nath Bhasin, for the Respondent (Plaintiff).

Judgment.—In this case the plaintiff, the publisher of a work called "The Public Service Commission General Knowledge Questions with Answers" sued the defendant, the editor and publisher of a work called "Manual of Public Service Commission General Knowledge Question Papers with Answers" for breach of copyright with consequential injunctions and delivery of copies and for rendition of accounts. The defendant denied infringement of copyright and also among other pleas, which do not now concern us, took the plea of the plaintiff, not having locus standi to bring the suit. The trial Court framed two relevant issues:

"(1) Has the plaintiff copyright in the work 'Public Service Commission General Knowledge Questions with Answers'?"

"(2) Has there been infringement of this copyright, etc., etc.?"

On the first question it came to the conclusion that the author of this work, one Mr. Vatsayayana, had transferred his copyright to the plaintiff, Mr. Mohan, by means of a document, Ex. P-7, dated October 10, 1934, and that therefore the plaintiff had copyright in the said work. The plaintiff having thus copyright obviously had locus standi to sue. On the second question it came to the conclusion that the defendant had undoubtedly infringed copyright, the Court pointing out that the defendant's so-called original work contained not only copies of the plaintiff's answers but even copies of the mistakes made in the plaintiff's book. It therefore decreed the suit, granting the plaintiff a perpetual injunction against the defendant from printing and producing the work and injunction for delivery to the plaintiff of copies in the defendant's possession and a preliminary decree for accounts of copies already printed and sold and ordering that the defendant shall pay to the plaintiff amounts realized by him or his agents by reason of the sale of the defendant's work and its copies and reproductions. The defendant has come in appeal and the first point raised is that the Court should not have made the defendant pay to the plaintiff the entire amounts realized by him or his agents by sale of the defendant's work, but only the profits realized by him. The learned Counsel for the respondent concedes this contention and the decree would have to be amended by changing the word "amounts" to the words "the profits."

The next contention raised by the learned Counsel for the appellant is more serious and it refers to the plea raised as to the locus standi of the plaintiff. The contention of the learned Counsel is (i) that Ex. P-7 could not transfer the copyright in a book which was non-existent at the time when Ex. P-7 was written; (ii) that Ex. P-7 as a matter of fact does not purport to assign any copyright; and (iii) that the plaintiff's case was that he was the owner of the copyright and he had not alleged any assignment or transfer by Ex. P-7 or any other document; and that on the evidence it was clearly shown that the plaintiff was not the author of the book and therefore could not be said to have the copyright vested in himself. On the last contention it was contended by that learned Counsel for the respondent that the evidence on the record showed a joint collaboration on the part of Mr. Vatsayayana and Mr. Mohan in the working of the book. I have no hesitation in rejecting this contention. It seems to me perfectly clear on the evidence of Mr. Vatsayayana, which I see no reason to doubt, that Mr. Vatsayayana was the sole author of the book in the sense that he wrote the answers to the questions and he also, as I shall presently show, selected the questions. But the evidence is not clear on the second point.

It is, however, I think fairly inferable, reading the evidence as a whole and any doubt that might have existed on the matter has been set at rest, by taking the evidence of Mr. Vatsayayana in this Court who has stated on oath that he did select all the questions to be answered. There is therefore no force in the contention of the learned Counsel for the respondent that the plaintiff owned the copyright in this work by reason of being its joint author along with Mr. Vatsayayana. It is also clear that Mr. Vatsayayana could not be said to be an employee of Mr. Mohan for the purpose of writing this book. Mr. Vatsayayana states that he had commenced writing this book in 1932 and finished it some time at the end of 1934. Mr. Mohan admits that he had not met Mr. Vatsayayana till about a month before the execution of Ex. P-7, that is October 10, 1934, that is to say, he must have met Mr. Vatsayayana some time in September or August at the earliest in 1934. The agreement itself clearly does not show any contract of service in the sense that Mr. Mohan was to control Mr. Vatsayayana in his answer to the questions or in their selection. On the contrary, there is a clause stating that Mr. Vatsayayana is to indemnify Mr. Mohan against any claims, actions, damages and costs arising from infringement of copyright. Infringement of copyright in this work could only arise either by reason of the answers or by selection of the questions. If Mr. Mohan had any hand in either writing the answers or selecting the questions, it was hardly likely that a general indemnity clause should cast the entire burden of infringement of copyright on Mr. Vatsayayana. This being so, it follows that the author of this work was Mr. Vatsayayana.

And the next question that arises is, did Mr. Vatsayayana transfer the copyright which vested in him in this work to Mr. Mohan by Ex. P-7, as contended by the plaintiff? The learned Counsel for the appellant has contended that there could not possibly be a transfer of copyright or assignment of copyright in a non-existing work and this he has supported by Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 7, Edn. 2, p. 556, para. 869 and Performing Right Society, Ltd. v. London Theatre of Varieties

Ltd. (1), at p. 12 and also by Copinger on the Law of Copyright, Edn. 7, p. 99. The learned Counsel for the respondent has not contested this position but he contests that the work had really been substantially completed at the time when Ex. P-7 was signed and that therefore the copyright that was transferred at that time was in an existing and not a non-existing work. On this point the evidence on the record was far from clear, because the attention of the Counsel on both sides does not appear to have been directed to the essential points in the case. I therefore under the provisions of O. XLI, r. 27, took the evidence of Mr. Vatsayayana to clear up this question. Mr. Vatsayayana, however, was unable to throw any light on the question at all and the case must be decided on the evidence as it stands. On the evidence as it stands, there is no proof that the work was substantially completed at the time when Ex. P-7 was drawn up. On the face of it the document appears to refer to a future work and this being so, copyright could not be transferred by it. This being so, it becomes unnecessary to consider the other question, namely that if the work did exist, would the terms of Ex. P-7 amount to a transfer of copyright? Had such a question arisen, I think I would have upheld on the whole that Ex. P-7 did transfer such a right.

In all cases where direct words are not used to convey a right and the matter is one of inference by implication from the phrases used, then I consider that the evidence of the parties, if they are not interested one way or the other in the matter, is the surest of all guides as to the meaning of the phrases used and the evidence of Mr. Mohan, and Mr. Vatsayayana leaves no doubt that the parties intended to convey the copyright in this book to Mr. Mohan. This is also the conclusion of the trial Court based on the clause prohibiting the author from taking any interest directly or indirectly in a competing publication and on the clause making it compulsory for the author to revise new editions of the work to entitle him to receive royalty. Evidently, the issue of new editions was left entirely to the discretion of the publisher, which would not be the case if the owner of the copyright remained the author, who could terminate the agreement at the end of the first edition otherwise. But the difficulty remains that in the absence of anything to show that the work was a completed transaction, this document cannot be held to transfer any copyright and therefore the inevitable result follows that the plaintiff had no locus standi to sue. I arrived at the result with great reluctance, for, I am convinced that the case is genuine enough and the defendant is taking advantage of a technical plea, but I cannot avoid the conclusion. It is contended that this person, Mr. Vatsayayana, should be added as a party now. No doubt this could be done but this would merely mean a re-trial from the beginning and the only thing would be the saving of court-fee which is not very excessive in this case. I therefore do not see that any useful object would be served by directing a re-trial with Mr. Vatsayayana added as a party. The same suit can be brought over again with proper precautions taken. I therefore do not accept this contention. I am obliged therefore to accept the appeal and dismiss the suit. In the circumstances I would leave the parties to bear their own costs.

D.

Appeal allowed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 10 of 1936
September 23, 1938

DAVIS, J. O. AND TYABJI, J.
KHODROMAL JERAMDAS—

APPLICANT

versus

MENGHOMAL JESSOMAL AND ANOTHER—
OPPONENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLIII, r. 1—Order amending final decree, if in itself appealable—Whether can be treated as amending preliminary decrees and appealed against.

On an application under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, the Subordinate Judge believing that he was in error when he passed the final decree purported to amend his own final decree by altering the same in order to correct what was believed to be a mistake. The District Judge on appeal treated the order of the Subordinate Judge amending the final decree as a decree and allowed the appeal.

Held, that the order of the Subordinate Judge amending the final decree was not an appealable order in itself; but that he should be treated to have amended the preliminary decree which amended decree could be appealed against.

O. R. App. from the decision of the District Judge, Sukkur, dated October 25, 1935.

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal, for the Applicant.

Mr. Kundanmal Dayaram, for the Opponents.

Davis, J. C.—This is a revision application against an order of the District Judge of Sukkur setting aside an order of the Subordinate Judge of Jacobabad whereby he had amended his own final decree passed in Suit No. 331 of 1932 which was before him. This was a suit for settlement of partnership accounts in which one Menghomal, opponent No. 1 in this revision application, was the plaintiff, and one Seyomal, opponent No. 2, was defendant No. 5, and as a result, Rs. 1,034-1-4 was found due to defendant No. 5, Sevomal. But one Khodromal who was the plaintiff in another suit in which Sevomal was a defendant obtained as long ago as 1927 a decree for Rs. 3,000 against Sevomal, and in execution of that decree, he obtained from the Court an order of attachment of this Rs. 1,034-1-4 found due to Sevomal in the suit of 1932. Sevomal though described as a simpleton was not so easily got at and in the proceedings which then commenced in the partnership suit he agreed that the Rs. 1,034 odd found due to him should be paid to the plaintiff Menghomal and accounts were made up on this basis and a final decree was passed accordingly; so Khodromal found he was deprived of this Rs. 1,034. He then applied to the Subordinate Court under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, so freely invoked in the mofussil Courts to correct mistakes and to right all real or supposed wrongs, and the Subordinate Judge believing that he was in error when he passed the final decree based upon accounts in which this Rs. 1,034 was allotted by the Commissioner to Menghomal purported to amend his own final decree by an order dated December 11, 1934, whereby he gave effect to the attachment of Khodromal, found that the Rs. 1,034 should not and could not have been allotted to Menghomal by the Commissioner, and therefore reduced the sum found due under the final decree to Menghomal by this Rs. 1,034. Menghomal then appealed to the District Court, and the District Judge treated the order of the Subordinate Judge amending the final decree as a decree, and allowing the appeal, set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge of December 11, 1934, amending the final decree and restored the unamended decree dated October 31, 1934.

Now, it is argued in revision on behalf of Khodromal who has lost this Rs. 1,034 to Menghomal, that the District Judge had no power to deal in appeal with this order of the Subordinate Judge amending his own decree under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, as the order of the Subordinate Judge amending the final decree was without jurisdiction; an application in revision under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, would lie to this Court, but no other remedy was available. No appeal lies against an order under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code. To this it is contended for the opponent that the nature of an order is not determined by the section of the law to which it may quite wrongly have been assigned; the true test is, what is the order in itself? It does not change its true nature merely because it is given a wrong name, and reference is made to the case in Syed Mahomed Maliha v. Chowdhury Mahomed Ismail Khan (1) at p. 206. This case is only one of a number of cases wherein it is laid down that a Court cannot evade the appellate jurisdiction of the Court above it by arbitrarily placing its order under a section the orders of which are not appealable. In that case, as in this, a Judge altered a decree already signed and sealed in order to correct what was believed to be a mistake made by the Commissioners, and the Appellate Court said:

"The view taken by them that the Commissioners had distributed the rent of the tenures with reference to the Record of Rights is baseless. Moreover, the report of the Commissioners was considered and modified as regards the amount of rent payable by the defendants, by the Subordinate Judge in his judgment of June, 1916. There was no arithmetical or clerical error in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge which might have been corrected under s. 151 or s. 152, Civil Procedure Code. If there was any error, that error ought to have been corrected on appeal; or if there was any error apparent on the face of the record, there might have been an application for review of judgment under O. XLVII, r. 1, Civil Procedure Code. The Subordinate Judge after consideration of the facts came to the conclusion that the rent payable by the defendants was Rs. 129-2-0. The decree as originally drawn up was quite in accordance with the judgment and there was nothing wrong in it. Without the judgment being amended or set aside, that decree could not have been amended or set aside, by an indirect attack. On behalf of the respondent it was urged that we might amend the judgment under those sections of the Civil Procedure Code, because some wrong has been done to his client. There is nothing in the judgment which comes within the purview of s. 151 or s. 152, Civil Procedure Code. The proper remedy, as already indicated was by way of review or appeal against the judgment if there was anything wrong in it. The result therefore is that this appeal is allowed and the decree as amended must be set aside and it should be brought in accordance with the judgment delivered on June 27, 1916."

(1) A I R 1927 Cal. 203 at p. 206; 100 Ind. Cas. 309; 44 O L J 441.

We think, therefore, that the District Judge should not have treated the order of the Subordinate Judge dated December 11, 1934, altering the final decree, as an appealable order in itself, but he should have regarded the decree of October 31, 1934, as amended by the later order. In short, it was the amended decree which was appealable. He should then have allowed the appeal, set aside the amended decree and restored the decree as first drawn up. Looked at thus, we think there is no doubt that the District Judge had jurisdiction, and this revision application must fail and we dismiss it with costs accordingly. We are not now prepared to hear the revision application as a second appeal. Order accordingly.

D. Application dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 627 of 1939

June 26, 1939

ABDUL RASHID, J.

GHULAM MOHAMMAD—PETITIONER
versus

Musammat ALLAH RAKHI—RESPONDENT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s 488—Wife living with husband for short while during pendency of her application for maintenance, by husband's subterfuge—Maintenance, if should be disallowed on the ground.

Where the husband has neglected his wife for a number of years and the fact that he has succeeded by means of a subterfuge in making her live in his house for a short while during the pendency of an application for maintenance by her, should not be allowed to affect the decision of the application presented by her for maintenance. Peary Lal v. Naraini (1), relied on.

Or. R. case reported by the Sessions Judge, Jhelum, dated April 18, 1939.

Facts.—The evidence on the record proves that the petitioner Musammat Allah Rakhi, even during the pendency of her petition before the Magistrate was living in the house of her husband Ghulam Mohammad. This fact is admitted even by one—petitioner's own witness—Haidar Khan. The respondent Ghulam Mohammad as well as all his three witnesses, who are lambar-dars of the village, have unanimously deposed that the petitioner was living with her husband. The following quotations from the order of the Magistrate show that he virtually accepts the evidence on this point as true :

"If I were not to grant her maintenance, I am satisfied that Ghulam Mohammad would immediately turn her out I think it quite possible that during the pendency of this case Allah Rakhi has on occasions lived with her husband."

Report.—As the evidence on the file proves that during the pendency of her petition Musammat Allah Rakhi, petitioner, was residing in her husband's home, no question of her husband neglecting or refusing to maintain her arose and her petition should have been dismissed forthwith. I accordingly forward these proceedings to the High Court with the recommendation that the order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate be set aside and Musammat Allah Rakhi's petition be dismissed.

Mr. M. L. Puri, for the Respondent.

Order.—It appears that during the pendency of the present proceedings Ghulam Mohammad fabricated a false case of theft against his wife Musammat Allah Rakhi and her father who is deaf and dumb. During the course of the investigation, the Police summoned Musammat Allah Rakhi and her father, and in order to bring about a compromise between the parties advised Musammat Allah Rakhi to go and live with her husband. Musammat Allah Rakhi therefore entered into a compromise and went to the house of her husband. She states emphatically that she entered into the compromise with her husband as he had brought a false criminal case against her and her father, and that her husband took her to his house by force. She began unwillingly to live in his house in order that he may not prosecute her for theft. She is unwilling to live with her husband as she is afraid that he might do her bodily harm. It appears that her husband has succeeded by means of a subterfuge in inducing his wife to live with him for a short period. This is, however, no ground for rejecting her application for maintenance. Ghulam Muhammad has married again and is living with his second wife. He has neglected Musammat Allah Rakhi for a number of years and the fact that he has succeeded by means of a subterfuge in making her live in his house for a short while should not be allowed to affect the decision of the application presented by Musammat Allah Rakhi for maintenance. Reference may be made in this connection to Peary Lal v. Naraini (1). I am, therefore unable to accept the recommendation of the learned Sessions Judge and dismiss the petition presented by Ghulam Mohammad for reversal of the order of the Magistrate. The Magistrate's order granting maintenance of Rs. 4 per month to Allah Rakhi from November 21, 1938, is maintained.

(1) A I R 1935 All. 977; 159 Ind. Cas. 308; (1935) Or. Cas. 1197; 58 A 379; 37 Or. L J 62; (1935) A L J 1186; 1935 A L R 1106; 8 R A 426.

D.

Petition dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Special Second Appeal No. 47 of 1939

May 17, 1939

ROBERTS, O. J. AND DUNKLEY, J.
MAUNG MAUNG AND ANOTHER—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—APPELLANTS

versus

V. V. R. CHETTYAR FIRM—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS

Execution—Limitation—Plea of—Execution application not fructified but withdrawn and dismissed—Judgment-debtor, if barred by res judicata or estoppel from raising question of limitation later—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 162 (5)—Application—Plaint in suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), whether application under Art. 182 (5)—Or application made to proper Court

Orders in execution proceedings are binding upon the parties thereto on principles analogous to those of res judicata, or of estoppel. Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kari (1), and Mungul Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri (2), relied on [p. 70, col. 2.]

Where, however, no objection to execution is taken and the application for execution does not fructify, but is withdrawn and dismissed, the judgment-debtor is not debarred by the principles of res judicata or estoppel from raising the question of limitation later. [p. 71, col. 1.]

[Case-law referred to]

A "suit" is a proceeding which is instituted by the presentation of a plaint and is in its nature different from an "application made" under the Limitation Act. Hansraj Gupta v. Dehra Dun Electric Tramway Co., Ltd. (9), relied on. [p. 71, col. 2.]

An application which is to save limitation under Art. 182 (5), Limitation Act, must be made "to the proper Court for execution," a suit to have an order in claim case set aside cannot be treated as an application under Art. 182 (5). Raghunandan Pershad v. Bhugoo Lal (10), referred to.

A suit under O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code, cannot keep the execution proceedings pending when there has been a definite order of the executing Court dismissing the execution application; in such a case, if the decree-holder succeeds in the suit, he will have to file a fresh application for execution and re-attach the property. A plaint in such a suit cannot, therefore, be treated as an application, within the meaning of cl. 5 of Art. 182. Hasan Shah v. Mohamed Amir Mirza (8), distinguished. [p. 73, col. 1.]

Nor can the filing of such a suit be an application to the proper Court for execution when the filing of the suit in the Court which has jurisdiction to execute the decree or in some other Court must depend upon the fortuitous circumstance of the value of the attached property. [Ibid.]

Sp. S. A. against the decree of the District Court, Thaton, dated November 24, 1938.

Mr. U Kyaw Htoon, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. A. Ruuf, for the Respondents.

ROBERTS, C. J.—The respondent, the V. V. R. Chettyar firm, obtained a decree against the appellants, Maung Maung and Ma The Yin Mai, in the Sub-Divisional Court of Thaton on May 22, 1931, for the sum of Rs. 1,270. They made an application for execution, but the attachment was removed at the instance of a third party, who claimed the paddy land which had been attached as his own property; and the case was closed on January 11, 1932. On July 1, 1935, fresh execution proceedings were taken out, and the question of whether these proceedings were time-barred was never agitated: notices were issued directed to the appellants and were served on them, but the respondent firm discontinued the proceedings on July 12, 1935. A third application was made by the respondents on June 28, 1938. It is quite plain that the period of three years within which application must be made begins to run in the words of Art. 182 (5) from the date of the final order passed on an application made in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution or to take "some step-in-aid of execution of the decree or order." The learned Sub-Divisional Judge seems to have overlooked this provision in holding that the application was time-barred; and on appeal to the District Court this omission was rightly pointed out. But then there arises the further question as to whether the application made on July 1, 1935, was time-barred, or rather whether the appellants could contend that it was, and as it was whether once the respondents' remedy was barred by statute the decree could be revived against the judgment-debtors. The learned District Judge was of opinion that the present appellants (respondents in the Court below) could not raise the matter at that stage: it is from this decision that the present appellants have appealed. Now, it is perfectly true that their Lordships of the Privy Council have held that orders in execution proceedings are binding upon the parties thereto on principles analogous to those of res judicata, or of estoppel: Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kari (1) and Mungul Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri (2). But where no order for execution has been made the question of limitation appears to me to remain still open for determination.

(1) 6 A 269; 11 I A 37; 4 Sar. 489 (P O).

(2) 8 C 51; 8 I A 123; 11 O L R 113; 4 Sar. 249 (P O).

The principle involved was considered in Subramania Aiyar v. Raja Rajesware Sethupathi (3). In that case notice went to the sons of a deceased judgment-debtor to show cause why they should not be brought on the record as legal representatives of their father, a decree holder having applied for execution by attachment and sale of properties in the respondents' possession; they did not appear and an order was made ex parte against them: it was held that they were not estopped from moving to set aside the attachment on the ground that the properties did not belong to the judgment-debtor. It was observed that the party who is sought to be affected by the bar of res judicata should have notice of the point which is to be decided against him and should have an opportunity of putting forward his contentions against such a decision. Again in Umed Ali v. Abdul Karim (4) it was pointed out that in Mungul Pershad Dicit v. Grija Kant Lahiri (2) their Lordships of the Privy Council had declined to differ from a Full Bench decision, Bisseshur Mullick v. Mahatab Chunder (5) in which it was held that the mere service of notice on the judgment-debtor to show cause why an execution should not proceed after the decree was barred was not a proceeding in execution merely because the judgment-debtor did not come in and oppose it. In Genda Lal v. Hazari Lal (6) a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court held that where no objection to execution is taken but the application for execution does not fructify, the judgment-debtor is not debarred by the principle of res judicata from raising the question of limitation later. The principles underlying these decisions have been applied in this High Court in Ma Tin v. Ko Ba Thet (7) and I respectfully agree with the decision of my learned brother in that case. There must be orders in the execution proceedings which bind the parties, before it can be said that the question of limitation has been finally disposed of; a mere application for execution which is withdrawn and dismissed does not fall within the principle of the decisions of their Lordships of the Privy Council to which I have referred. I have come to the conclusion therefore that there is no rule of estoppel nor application of the principle of res judicata which precluded the appellants here from raising the contention that the earlier application was time-barred.

Dr. Rauf urges that even if this is so the respondents filed a suit on January 25, 1932, for a declaration that certain properties were those of the judgment-debtor. This suit was not disposed of till January, 1933, and it is contended that the second application for execution is thus saved from limitation since it was brought within the requisite period of three years, namely on July 1, 1935. In other words, he says that the plaint in this suit is an application made in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution within the meaning of Art. 182 (5). He cites Hasan Shah v. Mohamed Amir Mirza (8) as an authority for the proposition that a plaint in such a declaratory suit can be treated as an application under Art. 182 (5). Now the Chief Court of Oudh seems to be alone in taking this view: on the facts before them they held that the effect of the suit was to keep the execution proceedings pending till the suit was decided. Even though the application in execution proceedings was ordered to be "filed" they held that this was not a final decision in respect of it. In the present case, however, the execution proceedings had been brought to an end at the instance of the decree-holder himself on January 11, 1932. They were not "pending" when the suit was filed on January 25: on the contrary, the application for execution had been dismissed. Apart from this, s. 2, Limitation Act, declares that "suit" does not include an appeal or an application. A "suit" is a proceeding which is instituted by the presentation of a plaint and is in its nature different from an "application made" under the Limitation Act: see Hansraj Gupta v. Dehra Dun Electric Tramway Co., Ltd. (9). Again the application which is to save limitation under Art. 182 (5) must be made "to the proper Court for execution." Now if a suit is brought for a declaration under O. XXI,

(3) 40 M 1016; 38 Ind. Cas. 627; A I R 1918 Mad. 1167.

(4) 35 C 1060; 8 C L J 193.

(5) 10 W R 8; Beng. L R Sup. Vol. 967 (F B).

(6) 58 A 313; 160 Ind. Cas. 394; A I R 1936 All. 21; (1935) A L J 1189; 1936 A L R 118; 8 R A 599 (F B).

(7) (1939) Rang. 152; 184 Ind. Cas. 74; A I R 1939 Rang. 245; 12 R Rang. 121.

(8) 6 Luck 234; 128 Ind. Cas. 723; A I R 1930 Oudh 468; 7 O W N 887; 15 R D 55; 11 L R (O) 294; Ind. Rul. (1931) Oudh 58.

(9) 54 A 1087; 142 Ind. Cas. 7; A I R 1933 P O 63; 60 I A 13; Ind. Rul. (1933) P O 43; (1933) M W N 190; (1933) A L J 175; 35 Bom. L R 319; 37 L W 445; 64 M L J 403; 37 C W N 379; 57 C L J 166 (P O).

r. 63, the extent of the Court's jurisdiction will be the governing factor in deciding whether to bring it in the same Court as that which had cognizance of the execution proceedings; it will be a matter of chance whether it is brought in the proper Court for execution or not. I cannot, therefore, hold that such a suit should be treated as an application under Art. 125 and in the circumstances of the present case, I am satisfied that the respondent's contention is of no weight and that this appeal ought to be allowed. I concur with the order proposed by my learned brother with regard to costs.

Dunkley, J.—The final order passed on Execution Application No. 63 of 1931 was passed on January 11, 1932, and it was to the effect that the application was dismissed at the request of the Advocate for the decree-holder. The next application was Execution Application No. 42 of 1935, which was filed on July 1, 1935. Consequently, on the face of it, this application was time-barred. Objection on this ground was not taken at the time by the judgment-debtors, who did not appear. In fact, the record of Execution Application No. 42 of 1935 shows that all that was done on that application was to issue notices to the judgment-debtors, and on the day fixed for the return of these notices, the Advocate for the decree-holder asked that the case might be closed and it was closed at his request. The objection that execution of the decree is barred by limitation has been taken by the judgment-debtors in the third application for Execution No. 25 of 1938 and the learned District Judge on first appeal has correctly appreciated that the question for decision is the application of the principle of res judicata to execution proceedings. I have recently dealt with this question in Ma Tin v. Ko Ba Thet (7) the report of which was not available to the learned District Judge, and the arguments which we have heard in the present appeal have served to convince me of the correctness of my judgment in that case. I relied mainly on the decision of a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Genda Lal v. Hazari Lal (6). Part of the head note of the report of that case reads as follows:

"If the judgment-debtor does not appear and offer any objection, and the Court had issued notice on the supposition that the application for execution was in time, no occasion arises for the Court to enter upon an inquiry as to whether the application is or is not barred by time. A mere order that the decree should be executed, which under O. XXI, r. 23 (1), has to be automatic, cannot be regarded as a definite adjudication, as between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, of any objection which might have been raised if the judgment-debtor had appeared, so as to operate as a bar by implication at all subsequent stages of the proceeding. If the application does not fructify and is struck off, there is no bar of res judicata against the judgment-debtor. If, on the other hand, some further step is taken, which amounts to the application for execution fructifying, so as to become analogous to a suit being decreed, then the judgment-debtor would be barred by the principle of res judicata from raising the question subsequently."

Now in Application No. 42 of 1935, even if the judgment-debtors had appeared in response to the notices, they would have had no opportunity of raising an objection because on the day fixed for their appearance the application was withdrawn by the decree-holder. Hence the principle of res judicata has no application to the present matter and it is open to the judgment-debtors to object to execution on the ground that it is barred by limitation. For the decree-holder it is argued that Execution Application No. 42 of 1935 was made within time and for this purpose reference is made to Suit No. 8 of 1932 of the Sub-Divisional Court of Thaton. This was a suit under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code which was brought by the decree-holder after the attachment in Execution Application No. 63 of 1931 had been removed and the execution application had been dismissed. The plaint was filed on January 25, 1932, and the suit was finally decided on January 12, 1933. The argument is that a plaint in a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, is an application to take a step-in-aid of execution of the decree within cl. 5 of Art. 182, Limitation Act, and that if the plaint is filed in the proper Court for execution, then such a suit satisfies completely the conditions of cl. 5 of Art. 182, so that the date of the final judgment in the suit forms a fresh starting point for the running of time under that clause. Reliance is placed on the case in Hasan Shah v. Mohamed Amir Mirza (8) but that case is readily distinguishable because the ratio decidendi of the learned Judges is to be found at the close of their judgment, where it is stated:

"We are of opinion that the effect of such a suit (under O. XXI, r. 63) is to keep the execution proceedings which have given rise to it pending till the decision of the suit. If the suit succeeds, proceedings continue. If the suit fails, the proceedings fail simultaneously. The order cancelling or maintaining an attachment is liable to be affected by the result of the suit. This is clear from the terms of r. 63 itself. If that is so, it follows that an order cancelling or maintaining an attachment becomes final only on the date of the disposal of the suit. In this particular case what the Court did was that it ordered the application to be "filed." This we are unable to construe as a final decision of the application."

Consequently, what the learned Judges really held was that there was no "final order" no the execution application until the suit under O. XXI, r. 63, had been decided. With the greatest respect, that was undoubtedly true in the case before them; but if this is to be taken as a general proposition of law applicable in every instance in which a suit under O. XXI, r. 63 is filed, then, in my opinion, it is too broadly stated. A suit under O. XXI, r. 63, cannot keep the execution proceedings pending when there has been a definite order of the executing Court dismissing the execution application; in such a case, if the decree-holder succeeds in the suit he will have to file a fresh application for execution and re-attach the property. In the present case, Execution Application No. 63 of 1931 was dismissed by the Court at the request of the decree-holder. I am prepared to concede that a suit under O. XXI, r. 63, is a step-in-aid of execution, but, with the greatest respect, I am unable to agree that a plaint can be treated as an application, within the meaning of cl. 5 of Art. 182. This construction appears to me to be contrary to the express provisions of the Limitation Act, s. 2, sub-s. (10) of which enacts that in the Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, "suit" does not include an appeal or an application. A suit means a civil proceeding instituted by the presentation of a plaint: Hansraj Gupta v. Dehra Dun Electric Tramway Co., Ltd., (9) at p. 1074*. Nor am I able to hold that the filing of such a suit can be an application to the proper Court for execution when the filing of the suit in the Court which has jurisdiction to execute the decree or in some other Court must depend upon the fortuitous circumstance of the value of the attached property. In Raghunandun Pershad v. Bhugoo Lall (10) a Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that cl. 4 of Art. 179, Limitation Act of 1877, (now cl. 5 of Art. 182) contemplates an application made in the course of execution to the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree, and cannot be taken to include a suit to have an order in a claim case set aside. With all due respect, this is, in my opinion, the correct interpretation of the law. Hence execution of the decree obtained by the respondent against the appellants in Suit No. 23 of 1931 of the Sub-Divisional Court of Thaton is barred by limitation. This appeal is, therefore, allowed, the judgment and decree of the District Court of Thaton in Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 65 of 1938 are set aside, and the order of the Sub-Divisional Court of Thaton, dated August 11, 1938, in Execution Application No. 25 of 1938, is restored. The respondent must pay the appellants' costs in all Courts; Advocate's fee in this Court five gold mohurs.

s.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 936 of 1937

September 14, 1939

HARRIS, C. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.
GANESH MAHTO—APPELLANT

versus

BHAWAN MAHTO AND ANOTHER—
RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 99—Suit for contribution—Question of date of payment by plaintiff is one of fact—Held on facts that suit was within limitation.

It is not safe to lay down any rigid formula for the purpose of determining the date of payment, as the question of payment being a question of fact, must be determined with reference to the circumstances of each case.

One M had a joint decree for rent against the plaintiff and defendants, and in execution of that decree he obtained from the executing Court an order for the attachment of a sum which had been deposited into X Court by a judgment-debtor of the plaintiff, to the credit of the latter. Subsequently, on August 20, 1932, the executing Court by its order directed to transfer the money to the credit of the decree-holder and to send the payment order to X Court. On September 3, 1932, the payment order was made over by X Court to the decree-holder. The plaintiff brought a suit for contribution against defendants within three years from September 3, but beyond limitation from August 20:

Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation. The payment by the plaintiff to the decree-holder must be deemed to have been made on September 3, and time began to run from that date. Gahar Ali Howladar v. Abdul Owahab Shikdar and (1) and Palegar Meghavarnam Naidu v. A. M. Mahamad Mohideen Sahib (2), distinguished.

A. from a decision of the Subordinate Judge of First Court, Chapra, dated July 26, 1937, reversing a decision of the Munsif, Third Court, Chapra, dated September 19, 1936.

Mr. Hareshwar Prasad Sinha, for the Appellant.

Messrs Harnarayan Prasad and B. B. Sahay, for the Respondents.

Fazi Ali J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff in a suit for contribution which was decreed by the trial Court but has been dismissed on appeal by the lower Appellate Court on the ground of limitation. The only question to be decided in this Court is whether the decision of the lower Appellate Court as to limitation is correct.

It appears that one Jitan Mahto had a joint decree for rent against the plaintiff and defendants, and in execution of that decree he obtained from the third Munsif of Chapra, to whom he had applied for the execution of the decree, an order for the attachment of a sum of Rs. 163-2-6, which had been paid into the Court of the Fourth Munsif by one Parmeshwar Mahto, a judgment-debtor of the plaintiff, to the credit of the latter. On July 30, the original order of attachment was modified by the third Munsif as follows :

"Decree-holder is allowed to withdraw Rs. 40-8-3 only out of Rs. 163-2-6 and in respect of the balance amount, the attachment is withdrawn. Inform the Court concerned accordingly. Put up on the date fixed for further orders."

Subsequently on August 20, the same learned Munsif passed the following order :

"Let the attached money be transferred to the credit of decree-holder and send the payment order to the Court concerned and put up on September 2, 1932, for orders."

On September 3, 1932, the payment order was made over by the Fourth Munsif to the decree-holder's Pleader.

Article 99 of the Indian Limitation Act which is undoubtedly the proper article applicable to the present suit provides that the period of limitation in a suit for contribution by a party who has paid the whole or more than his share of the amount due under a joint decree, is three years from the date of the payment in excess of the plaintiff's own share. Thus the real question to be decided in this appeal is what was "the date of the payment" in the present case. The plaintiff's contention is that the date of the payment was September 3, 1932, when the payment order was handed over by the Fourth Munsif who held the plaintiff's money, to the decree-holder's Pleader. On the other hand, it is contended on behalf of the defendants that the date of the payment was August 20, 1932, because on that date the third Munsif directed that the attached money be transferred to the credit of the decree-holder and the payment order sent to the Court concerned. The learned Subordinate Judge whose judgment is under appeal has held that limitation began to run from August 20, and as the present suit was brought more than three years after this date, it was barred by time.

In my opinion the view expressed by the learned Subordinate Judge is not correct. It is to be remembered that the attached money was in deposit in the Court of the Fourth Munsif and that before it was paid to Jitan Mahto (the decree-holder under the rent decree), a payment order had to be sent to him by the Third Munsif who had issued the order of attachment. All that happened on August 20, was that the Third Munsif directed his office to note the transfer of the attached money to the decree-holder's account and send the payment order to the Court of the Fourth Munsif. There is nothing in the judgments of either of the two Courts below to show when the payment order was actually prepared and when it was actually sent to the Fourth Munsif, but both the Courts below are agreed that it was not until September 3, that the payment order was actually issued to the decree holder's Pleader. It further appears that the Third Munsif did not record satisfaction of Jitan Mahto's decree until September 16, and presumably he did so only after he received intimation that money had been withdrawn by Jitan Mahto. In my judgment the payment to the decree holder cannot on these facts be deemed to have been made prior to September 3, 1932.

The learned Advocate for the respondents has in support of his contention that the payment in the present case must be deemed to have been made on August 20, referred us to (1) Gahar Ali Howladar v. Abdul Owahab Shikdar (1) and Polegar Meghavarnam Naidu v. A. M. Mahamad Mohideen Sahib (2). The facts of both these cases, however, are easily distinguishable from those of the present case. In Gahar Ali Howladar v. Abdul Owahab Shikdar (1) the landlords of a certain taluk had obtained a decree for rent against the plaintiff and defendants who were co-sharers in that taluk and when the property was advertised for sale, the plaintiff deposited the entire decretal amount in Court, which was accepted by the Court and the landlord's decree was recorded as satisfied. The deposit was made by the plaintiff in Court on February 4, 1920, and the money was actually withdrawn by the decree-holders on February 14, 1920. On these facts it was held in a suit for contribution brought by the plaintiff against the defendants that the period of limitation for the suit began to run from the date on which the money was appropriated by the Court in payment of the decree-holder's dues and not from the date when the decree-holder withdrew the money. In the second case the suit for contribution was based on a payment made by the plaintiffs, who owned lands in a holding of which defendants Nos. 2 to 4 were also pattadars, in order to save the holding from sale for arrears of rent due to defendant No. 1; and it was held that the period of limitation for the suit began to run from the date on which the plaintiff had deposited the amount in question for saving the property. It is to be noted that both these cases were cases of voluntary payment, and as such, are clearly distinguishable from the present case, where the alleged payment was made under compulsion. It is contended that the test as to the date of payment is as laid down in Gahar Ali Howladar v. Abdul Owahab Shikdar (1), to find out on what date the plaintiff lost dominion over the money which he paid. But in my opinion that is not a test which can be applied to every case, and it is certainly not the correct test so far as the present case is concerned, because here the plaintiff may well be said to have lost control over the money on the date the money was attached by the third Munsif at the instance of the decree-holder. It will be perhaps more accurate to say that the true test is to find out when the money ceased to become the money of the plaintiff; but it is not safe to lay down any rigid formula for the purpose of determining the date of payment, as the question of payment being a question of fact must be determined with reference to the circumstances of each case. In my opinion it is impossible to hold on the facts of the present case that time could begin to run against the plaintiff prior to September 3, and as the present suit was brought within three years of that date, I am unable to hold that it was barred by limitation.

(1) 56 O 192; 114 Ind. Cas. 134; A I R 1928 Cal. 361; 32 O W N 1030; 49 O L J 5; Ind. Rul. (1929) Cal. 198.

(2) A I R 1936 Mad. 782; (1936) M W N 658; 44 L W 135.

I would, therefore, allow this appeal with costs, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court and decree the plaintiff's claim with interest at six per cent. from September 3, 1932, until realisation.

Harrles, C. J.—I agree.

s.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 67 of 1938

November 3, 1938

BHIDE, J.

RAJA RAM—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

ALLAHABAD BANK, LTD., PLAINTIFF

AND OTHERS, DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXIV, r. 4, O. XXIII, r. 3 — Preliminary decree under O. XXXIV, r. 4 — Terms thereof are imperative—Payment or adjustment out of Court without sanction cannot be recognized.

The terms of a preliminary decree passed according to the provisions of O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, as regards payment in Court, etc., are imperative, and payment or adjustment out of the Court without its sanction is inadmissible under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, and will not be recognized. A preliminary decree in a suit for sale is a formal adjudication of the rights of the parties with reference to the mortgage and the decree directs that the plaintiff's claim shall be satisfied by a payment in Court in a certain manner. Any adjustment out of Court would, therefore, be obviously contrary to the terms of the decree. Inayat Khan v. Harbans Lal (8), not followed.
[Case-law relied on.]

F. C. A. from the order of the Senior Sub-Judge, Delhi, dated March 21, 1938.

Mr. Achhru Ram, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Ram Kishore, B. D. Bansal and Kartar Singh, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—In a suit for recovery of Rs. 3,43,093-15-0 on the basis of a mortgage by the Allahabad Bank, Ltd., Lahore, a preliminary decree was passed on April 6, 1937, in terms of O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, directing that the defendant-mortgagors shall pay in Court the amount due by October 6, 1937, and in default of such payment the mortgaged property shall be sold on an application being made for a final decree. The necessary payment was not made in Court as ordered, but when an application was made for a final decree, it was opposed by the mortgagors on the ground that there had been a compromise out of Court. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that the alleged compromise could not be recognized in view of the terms of the preliminary decree and has therefore dismissed the application of the mortgagors for the compromise being recorded as an adjustment of the decree either under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, or s. 151, Civil Procedure Code. From this decision, the present appeal has been preferred. The learned Subordinate Judge has relied on Banarsi Das v. Nathu Mul (1), Piara Lal v. Bulatji Mul & Sons (2), Rasan Chettiar v. Rangayya Chettiar (3) and Adari Sanyasi v. Nookalamma (4), in support of his decision. It may be pointed out here that Piara Lal v. Bulatji Mul & Sons (2) is a Single Bench ruling, but is based on a Division Bench ruling of this Court reported in Durga Devi v. Nand Lal (5).

It was conceded before me by the learned Counsel for both the parties that the preliminary decree not being executable, the provisions of O. XXI, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, do not apply. It was, however, contended on behalf of the defendant-appellant that as the suit is not terminated by the preliminary decree, cf Kishen Chand v. Sohan Lal (6) at p. 97, there is no reason why the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, should not apply. As regards the Punjab rulings, it was contended that they are distinguishable as they relate only to payment out of Court, and strong reliance was placed on Harihar Prasad v. Gopal Saran (7) and Inayat Khan v. Harbans Lal (8) which support the appellant. The contention that the Punjab rulings relate merely to the question of recognition of a payment made out of Court does not appear to be correct. It appears that in Banarsi Das v. Nathu Mul (1) it was pleaded that there had been a settlement out of Court by which the "plaintiff-respondents had agreed to take over part of the property in satisfaction of the debt". There is no specific reference to O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, in the ruling, but it seems clear enough that that was the rule which the Court was considering. In Durga

Devi v. Nand Lal (5), Banarsi Das v. Nathu Mul (1) was followed. In that case the whole of the decretal amount was apparently alleged to have been paid out of Court. It was, however, remarked that the "alleged payment could not be recognized as an 'adjustment, compromise or satisfaction' under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code"

The remarks would seem to cover not only payment out of Court but any adjustment out of Court. In Piara Lal v. Bulatji Mul & Sons (2) a private adjustment contrary to the terms of the preliminary decree was alleged, but it was held (following the decision in Durga Devi v. Nand Lal (5)) that the adjustment could not be recognized under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code. It will thus appear that Banarsi Das v. Nathu Mul (1) and Piara Lal v. Bulatji Mul & Sons (2) at any rate were not mere cases of payment out of Court. But apart from this, I do not see that any material distinction can really be drawn between a payment out of Court and any other adjustment after the preliminary decree for the purpose of the point now under consideration. The payment out of Court would seem to fall under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, as part satisfaction of the subject-matter of the suit and would therefore stand on the same footing as any other adjustment. The main contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant was that if the suit remains pending till the final decree, there is no reason why the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3, should not apply. But a preliminary decree in a suit for sale is a formal adjudication of the rights of the parties with reference to the mortgage and the decree directs that the plaintiff's claim shall be satisfied by a payment in Court in a certain manner. Any adjustment out of Court would therefore be obviously contrary to the terms of the decree. In this aspect of the question, the adjustment out of Court made without its sanction, may, I think, be looked upon as 'unlawful' and therefore inadmissible under O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code.

The terms of a preliminary decree passed according to the provisions of O. XXXIV, r. 4, Civil Procedure Code, as regards payment in Court, etc., are imperative. It may further be pointed out that under the provisions of the corresponding provisions of ss. 88 and 89, Transfer of Property Act, which were in force before the provisions of O. XXXIV were enacted in the Code of 1908, payment out of Court was permitted. But the law in this respect seems to have

(1) 12 P R 1913; 16 Ind. Cas. 987; A I R 1914 Lah. 534; 376 P L R 1914.

(2) A I R 1935 Lah. 182; 158 Ind. Cas. 83.

(3) A I R 1930 Mad. 105; 120 Ind. Cas. 72; 30 L W 551; Ind. Rul. (1929) Mad. 1032; (1939) M W N 887.

(4) A I R 1931 Mad. 592; 131 Ind. Cas. 427; 54 M 708; Ind. Rul. (1931) Mad. 535; 34 L W 536.

(5) A I R 1932 Lah. 231; 136 Ind. Cas. 732; 33 P L R 138; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 268.

(6) 2 L 95 at p 97; 59 Ind. Cas. 710; A I R 1921 Lah. 270; 61 P L R 1921; 48 P W R 1921; 3 Lah. L J 126.

(7) 14 Pat. 488; 155 Ind. Cas. 976; A I R 1935 Pat. 385; 16 P L T 311; 7 R P 659.

(8) A I R 1936 AIL 9; 160 Ind. Cas. 373; 58 A 565; 1936 A L R 113; 8 R A 615.

been deliberately changed. This departure from the previous law also indicates that payment or adjustment out of Court was not intended to be recognized under O. XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code. If, of course, both the parties appear in Court and agree to a certain adjustment and the Court sees no reason otherwise to disallow it as 'unlawful', the position may be different. In such circumstances, the adjustment may be taken to have been made with the express or implied permission of the Court and consequently there will be no objection in principle to the variation of the terms of the decree: cf. Vishwanath Ayyar v. Chimmu Kutti Amma (9) at p. 330. In Lachmi Narayan v. Balmakund (10) a suit had been dismissed in default after a decree of a preliminary nature had been passed in a partition suit. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the suit could not be so dismissed after the preliminary decree and in giving their reasons remarked as follows:

"After a decree has once been made in a suit, the suit cannot be dismissed unless the decree is reversed on appeal. The parties have on the making of a decree acquired rights or incurred liabilities which are fixed unless or until the decree is varied or set aside."

It will thus appear that although a suit does not terminate till the passing of a final decree, the passing of a preliminary decree does fix the rights of the parties to a certain extent, and thus alter their position materially. In addition to the Punjab rulings, the Madras rulings relied on by the learned Subordinate Judge also seem to support his decision. The learned Counsel for the appellant relied strongly on Inayat Khan v. Harbans Lal (8) and Harihar Prasad v. Gopal Saran (7) as stated above. But in the former ruling, there is no discussion of any authorities while in Harihar Prasad v. Gopal Saran (7) the applicability of O. XXIII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, (in case O. XXI, r. 2, was held inapplicable) was apparently conceded by Counsel; see p. 503. It appears further that the preliminary decree in that case was one based on a compromise and not an ordinary one in accordance with the provisions of O. XXXIV, Civil Procedure Code. In my opinion, the Punjab rulings cover the point raised and support the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge. I am also unable to see any adequate ground for referring the case to a Division Bench, as I have been requested to do. I dismiss the appeal, but in view of the conflict of judicial decisions, leave the parties to bear their costs.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 98 of 1936

February 22, 1939

LEACH, C. J. AND SOMAYYA, J.

SRI EMBERUMANAR JEER SWAMIGAL

—APPELLANT

versus

BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR HINDU RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS,

MADRAS AND OTHERS - RESPONDENTS

Certiorari—Writ of—Order of Board established under Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, declaring distribution of honours at a temple, nature of—Writ of certiorari cannot be issued in such a case.

A question relating to the distribution of theertham or other temple honours cannot be made the subject-matter of a suit as it is not a question which affects a legal right. In settling questions relating to the allocation of honours in religious institutions over which it has superintendence, the Board acts in its administrative capacity.

Hence where the Board established under Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, determines the order of the distribution of such honours, it cannot be said that it has declared any one's legal right or deprived any one of any legal right which he had and such a decision is merely an order dealing with the internal management of the temple. A writ of certiorari cannot be issued in such a case.

L. P. A. against the order of Pandrang Row, J., reported in 163 Ind. Cas. 256.

Messrs. V. Ramaswami Ayyar and N. G. Krishna Iyengar, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. V. Rajamannar, Mr. B. Sitarama Rao for Mr. A. Srirangachari, Messrs. S. Narayana Iyengar, S. Ramanujam, S. Rajagopalachari and K. E. Rajagopalachari, for the Respondents.

Leach, C. J.—This is an appeal from an order of Pandrang Row, J. refusing to issue a writ of certiorari. The appellant is the head of a math known as the Sri Emberumanar Jeer Math, which is situate in the village of Alwarthirunagiri in the Tinnevely District. In the math is a shrine and it is said that this shrine is a subsidiary shrine of the Sri Athinatha Alwar Temple which also lies within the village limits. The Sri Embarumanar Jeer Math is one of four maths which are particularly interested in the temple, the others being the Vanamamalai, Sri Ahobila and Thirukkurangudi Maths, the heads of which are respondents Nos. 7, 8 and 9. There has been great strife with regard to the right to receive theertham and other honours in the temple on festival and non-festival days. The quarrel commenced so long ago as 1905 and in that year a suit was filed in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Tinnevely by certain persons to establish what they claimed to be their right to recite in the temple the sacred texts. The appellant and respondent No. 7 were defendants. The suit was dismissed and appeal filed against this decision met with a similar fate: vide the judgment in Athan Sadagopa Chariar v. Srinivasa Chariar (1). In the course of that suit, the question was raised whether the present appellant or respondent No. 7, who is the head of the Vanamamalai Math, was entitled to precedence in the distribution of theertham on festival days. Sadasiva Iyer, J. who delivered the main judgment on appeal considered that respondent No. 7 was entitled to precedence and said so in his judgment, which was delivered on February 18, 1913.

(9) 55 M 320 at p 330; 135 Ind. Cas. 535; A I R 1932 Mad. 115; 62 M L J 272; 34 L W 635; (1932) M W N 1141; Ind. Rul. (1932) Mad. 119.

(10) 4 Pat. 61; 81 Ind. Cas. 747; A I R 1924 P O 198; 51 I A 321; 35 M L T 143; 47 M L J 441; 20 L W 491; (1924) M W N 707; 10 O & A L R 1033; 5 P L T 633; 22 A L J 990; 26 Bom. L R 1139; 40 C L J 439; L R 5 A (P O) 171; 29 C W N 391; 1 O W N 629 (P O).

The question as to the right of precedence continued to be agitated, and in 1927 the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Board took action. By an order dated May 12, 1927, the Board settled a list setting out who should receive the honours on festival days and who should receive them on non-festival days. By this order the appellant was given the right to receive the honours first on non-festival days. Respondent No. 7 was dissatisfied with the Board's order, and on June 6, 1927 filed a suit on Original Side of this Court (O. S. No. 306 of 1927). The defendants were the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Board and the trustee of the temple. Respondent No. 7 asked for a declaration that the order of May 12, 1927, was invalid. The suit was dismissed on September 21, 1932, on the ground that it was a suit relating merely to temple honours and involved no question of civil right. Respondent No. 7 appealed against this decision, but his appeal was dismissed on November 7, 1934. In 1930 respondents Nos. 2 to 6, who are said to be the disciples of respondent No. 7, filed a petition asking the Board to set aside its order of May 12, 1927. They claimed that they were entitled to the ninth place in the order of precedence on all days. On this ground they said that the Board should cancel in its entirety the order complained of and re-open the question. This petition was heard by three members of the Board, who by order dated April 6, 1935, declined to interfere with the order of May 12, 1927. Five days later respondents Nos. 2 to 6 filed another petition asking the Board to review its order of April 6, 1935, one of the grounds advanced being that the petitioners had not been given the ninth place to which they said they were entitled. This application which was an application to review an order refusing to review a previous order, was heard by two of the three members of the Board who passed the order of April 6, 1935. This application succeeded and on May 15, 1935, the order of May 12, 1927, was set aside. The result was that the trustees of the temple were directed to follow the observations by the Court in the appeal arising out of O. S. No. 22 of 1905 in respect of non-festival days, but no change was made so far as festival days were concerned. The appellant then became the dissatisfied party and on May 30, 1935, filed an application asking the Board to review its order of May 15, 1935. This application was heard by one member of the Board who on August 7, 1935, held that the Board had no power to review its own order. The application was accordingly dismissed. This led to an application to this Court by the appellant for a writ of certiorari with a view to the order of the Board of May 15, 1935 being quashed. This was the application dealt with by Pandrang Row, J.

We consider that the decision of the learned Judge refusing to issue the writ asked was right. It is acknowledged that a question relating to the distribution of theertham or other temple honours cannot be made the subject-matter of a suit as it is not a question which affects a legal right. By s. 18, Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act, 1926, the Board is given the power of general superintendence of all religious endowments in the Presidency, excepting those within the City of Madras. The Board may do all things which are reasonable and necessary to ensure that maths and temples are properly maintained and that all religious endowments are properly administered and duly appropriated to the purposes for which they were founded or exist. It is not disputed that the Board has by virtue of this section power to settle questions relating to the allocation of honours in religious institutions over which it has superintendence, but in settling such questions the Board acts in its administrative capacity. We are in entire agreement with the learned Judge when he says that it cannot be said that the Board's decision has declared any one's legal right or deprived any one of any legal right which he had and that the order of the Board complained of was merely an order dealing with the internal management of the temple. The issue of the writ of certiorari is a matter which lies within the discretion of the Court but in a case like the present one, there is no question of discretion. It would obviously be improper to order the writ to issue. The appeal will be dismissed with costs. (One set).

N-8.

*Appeal dismissed.PATNA HIGH COURTAppeal from Appellate Decree No. 891
of 1934

July 25, 1939

FAZL ALI AND DHAYLE, JJ.

LAL TIRATHNATH SAHI DEO

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS
versus

LAL MIRTUNJOYA NATH SAHI DEO

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Decree—Nullity—Same manager representing both plaintiff and defendant whose estates were under protection of Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876)—Defendant not prejudiced—Decree passed is good one and not nullity—Court should look to substance and not form of action.

The fact that the same manager represents both the plaintiff and the defendant whose estates were under protection of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act in a suit brought in 1919 undoubtedly makes the proceedings highly anomalous but this does not make the decree passed in that suit a nullity when the defendant is not in any way prejudiced, as, the anomaly is due to the provisions of the Act as it stood at the time of the suit. In such a case the question which the Court has to ask is whether there was a genuine and bona fide contest in the suit. The utmost that can be said is that the procedure adopted in the suit is somewhat irregular, but that by itself would not make the decree passed in the suit a nullity, especially when the Court has complete jurisdiction to try the suit. After all what the Court has to look to is the substance and not the form of the action and once it is clear that notwithstanding the fact that the parties are represented by the same manager, the proceedings in the suit does not represent a mere sham contest and that the suit is properly defended the decree must be held to be a good decree. Rustomji v. Seth Purshotamdas (1), distinguished. [p. 80, col. 2]

A. from a decision of the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, dated April 28, 1934, reversing a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Ranchi, dated February 13, 1933.

The Government Pleader and Mr. K. K. Banerjee, for the Appellants.

Mr. N. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

Fazl Ali, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit in which the plaintiffs claimed partition of two annas share in a tenure known as the Badla estate. The suit was decreed by the trial Court but dismissed on appeal by the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur. Hence this second appeal by the plaintiffs.

It appears that on June 10, 1873, one Lal Gagan Nath Sahi Deo who owned a ten annas share in the estate executed two mukarrari deeds, one in respect of four annas share in favour of the plaintiffs' father and another in respect of three annas share in favour of certain other persons. Between the years 1917 and 1919 two suits were brought by the two sets of mukarraridars against defendants Nos. 1 and 2 (who alone disputed their title) for a declaration of their respective titles under the two mukarrari pattas and for possession and both the suits were ultimately decreed. The plaintiff's suit which was Title Suit No. 35 of 1919 was decreed in respect of only two annas share in the estate and it is not disputed that if the decree in that suit is held to be good and valid, the present suit must succeed. As to the legal effect of the decree, however, the two Courts below have expressed conflicting views. The trial Court has held that the decree was a perfectly valid one and both the parties were bound by it. The lower Appellate Court has on the other hand expressed the view that the decree is a nullity and the plaintiffs have therefore no subsisting title in the property sought to be partitioned. One of the main questions to be determined in this appeal is which of the two views is correct.

It appears that the plaintiffs' estate which is known as the Mesmano estate was placed under a Manager under the provisions of the Encumbered Estates Act in the year 1906. In 1919 the estate of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 also, who are khorphoshdars claiming ten annas interest in the Badla estate in spite of the decree passed against them in the suit brought on behalf of the plaintiffs in 1919, (there is no dispute with regard to the remaining six annas which is admittedly owned by defendants Nos. 4 to 10), was brought under the protection of the Encumbered Estates Act. Thus when Title Suit No. 35 was instituted on behalf of the plaintiffs in 1919, the estate of the plaintiffs as well as the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was in the hands of the common Manager named Mr. Durham Waite.

Now, s. 21-B of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VII of 1876) provides firstly that "every suit or appeal by the holder shall be instituted in his name by the manager"; and secondly that

"no person other than the Manager shall be ordered to sue or to be sued as next friend or guardian, or be named as guardian of the holder for a pending suit."

In view of these provisions Mr. Durham Waite had to represent both the plaintiffs and the contesting defendants as their next friend. The High Court in disposing of the appeal in Title Suit No. 35, noticed this anomaly and observed as follows:—

"If the plaint is accepted to be properly verified, the written statement must be held to be not verified in accordance with law. The written statement is a later document wherein the facts stated in the plaint have been contradicted. Therefore it becomes impossible to act upon the plaint also. The law requires that the pleadings must be verified by a person who either knows personally, or has reliable information as to the truth of the facts stated therein. In this view the pleadings become illegal in this case. But as the legal representatives of the parties do not press this matter and want a decision on the appeal and as the questions involved in the appeal are almost the same as those that arose in No. F. A. 65 of 1919, which we have just disposed of where the defendant was not under the Court of Wards, we do not want to throw out the pleadings. We, however, doubt if the defendants when released from the Court of Wards will not challenge the conduct of the case. This matter should be brought to the notice of the Manager and the authorities concerned."

Referring to these observations, the learned Judicial Commissioner says in his judgment:—

"It seems to me clear, therefore, that in view of these observations of the Hon'ble High Court and of the objections taken by the defendants in this present suit, that the decree of 1919 in the plaintiffs' favour cannot be held to be binding on the defendants. Further discussion of the other issues raised in this suit is, therefore, unnecessary."

Now the learned Judges of the High Court thought that any decree passed in the suit would be a nullity, they would not have upheld the judgment of the trial Court. Indeed they definitely remarked that in the circumstances of the case they did not feel disposed to throw out the pleadings which they said had not been verified in accordance with law. They have undoubtedly said that the defendants might perhaps challenge the conduct of the case after the estate was restored, but they did not state that they would be able to challenge it successfully or that the decree passed in the suit could be avoided without bringing a suit to set it aside. The learned Advocate for the respondent relies strongly on an observation made in Rustomji v. Seth Purshotamdas (1) that "It was an elementary rule of procedure that the same individual even in different capacities cannot be both a plaintiff and defendant to one and the same action."

But in my opinion those observations do not strictly speaking apply to the present case in which the parties were entirely different. The fact that the same Manager represented both the plaintiff and the defendant undoubtedly made the proceedings highly anomalous, but if we bear in mind the special circumstances of the case, it is difficult to hold that the decree is a nullity. The question which we have to ask, is whether there was a genuine and bona fide contest in the suit. I have already referred to the provisions of the Encumbered Estates Act which made it necessary that the parties should be represented by the Manager of the Encumbered Estate. Thus the anomaly which is pointed out on behalf of the appellant was to some extent due to the provisions of the Act as it stood at the time of the suit. The Manager of the Encumbered Estates had to bring the suit within the period of limitation, otherwise the plaintiff's right would have been barred. At the same time he seems to have done everything to ensure that the defendant's case was properly presented to the Court. Neither in the Court below nor before us it was suggested on behalf of the appellant that the manager did not properly defend the suit or that he failed to put forward any pleas which would have defeated the plaintiff's action. That the defendants were not in any way prejudiced in the litigation is borne out by the fact that a suit of a similar nature, which has been brought by the mukarraridars of the three annas interest to enforce their mukarrari lease was decreed both by the trial Court as well as by the High Court in spite of the fact that that litigation was contested by the defendants themselves on the same grounds as Suit No. 35 of 1919. Thus the utmost that can be said in favour of the appellant is that the procedure adopted in the suit was somewhat irregular, but that by itself would not make the decree passed in the suit a nullity, especially as the Court had complete jurisdiction to try the suit. After all what we have to look to is the substance and not the form of the action, and once it is clear that notwithstanding the fact that the parties were represented by the same Manager, the proceedings in the suit did not represent a mere sham contest and that the suit was properly defended, the decree must be held to be a good decree. It is not denied that the decree was fully given effect to and that the plaintiffs are still in possession under that decree. Thus the plaintiffs having established their title as well as possession are entitled to a decree in the suit and in this view I would allow this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the trial Court. The appellants will be entitled to their costs in all the Courts.

(1) 25 B 608; 3 Bom. L R 237.

Dhavlé, J.—I agree. The respondents challenge the decree in the suit of 1919 on the sole ground that the same individual Mr. Durham Waite acted both for the plaintiffs and for the defendants in that suit; but he did so under the express provisions of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act as it stood at the time. The Act has since been amended to get over the patent anomaly of the same individual in different capacities appearing to act for the plaintiff and the defendant in one and the same action, but the rule against permitting an individual to do so is a rule of procedure. It is not a rule of jurisdiction. Where it otherwise, a case like Rustomji v. Seth Purshotamdas (1) could not have stood for a moment. That was a case where at the appellate stage it had come to pass that the same individual figured amongst the appellants and was also the sole respondent. The Court referred to what it called "the elementary rule of procedure, too often disregarded in this country," and observed that though the Courts of Equity had strictly followed the rule that a man cannot be both plaintiff and defendant, they did not allow it to stand in the way of doing justice between the parties; for provided all interested were before the Court either as plaintiffs or as defendants, they adjusted and determined their rights. That in the circumstances of 1919 the rule could not possibly be regarded as more than a mere rule of procedure is indicated not merely by the terms of s. 21-B of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act without the proviso that has been subsequently added to it in 1924, but also by the fact that the learned Advocate for the respondents has not been able to urge that the application of the Act to an encumbered estate saves the limitation applicable to ordinary cases. The suit had therefore to be brought within the ordinary period of limitation, and it had to be brought in conformity with s. 21-B. It would have been impossible for any Court to have thrown out such a suit on the ground of jurisdiction or as not competently framed. There is also no question that if the decree in the suit of 1919 stands, the partition suit brought by the respondents must succeed, for we now have a definite finding of fact by the lower Appellate Court on remand that the plaintiff-respondents were at the date of the suit in possession of the two annas share which they had claimed as the subject of the partition, while the decree in the suit of 1919 establishes their title to that share vis-a-vis the appellant, the respondent's possession having, as a matter of fact, commenced under but some years after the passing of that decree.

3.

*Appeal allowed.BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 735 of 1936

February 14, 1939

LOKUR, J.

GANGUBAI PANDURANG DOMBE—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANTversusPAGUBAI NARAYAN KORE AND OTHERS—*DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—Family property mortgaged to satisfy ancestral debts—Subsequent suit by widow for maintenance claiming it to be made charge on property—Sale of property to mortgagees during pendency of widow's suit—Widow's suit decreed—Sale, if affected by lis pendens.

The basis of the doctrine of lis pendens is that parties to a suit cannot be allowed to shorten the arms of the Court in dealing with the suit by transfers to a third party.

Ordinarily a suit by a Hindu wife for maintenance against her husband is a personal suit, and any purchaser of the family property during the pendency of the suit is not affected by the rule of lis pendens. But the doctrine of lis pendens does apply to a suit for maintenance by a Hindu widow in which she claims to have her maintenance made a charge on specific immovable property and a decree is passed creating a charge on such property. Although in the administration of a Hindu's estate, binding debts would take precedence, over mere claims for maintenance, or residence, on the part of the female members of the family and a mortgage of family property for the satisfaction of ancestral debts binding on the family is not affected by any subsequent charge created on that property for widow's maintenance, yet the sale of the property in favour of the mortgagee during the pendency of the widow's suit for maintenance claiming maintenance to be made a charge on the property is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens and is subject to the final decree in the widow's suit. Seetharamanujacharyulu v. Venkatasubbamma (1), Somasundaram Chetty v. Unnamalai Ammal (2) and Sudhirendra Deb v. Ramendra Deb (3), relied on.

S. A. from the decision of the District Judge, Sholapur, in Appeal No. 165 of 1929.

Mr. Y. V. Dixit, for the Appellant.

Messrs. P. V. Kane and M. G. Chitale, for Respondent No. 3.

Judgment.—The facts out of which this second appeal arises are undisputed. The property in dispute belonged to one Narayan Dada Kore who died about the year 1920 or 1921, leaving behind him two sons Tatya and Malkarjun, and his widow Pagubai, the step-mother of Tatya and Malkarjun. He had left some debts, to satisfy which Tatya and Malkarjun mortgaged the property in suit to the plaintiff for Rs. 1,800 on June 1, 1922 (Ex. 84). Thereafter their step-mother Pagubai filed a suit for maintenance on April 11, 1923, in which the plaintiff also was impleaded as defendant No. 3. She claimed that her maintenance should be a charge on the property in suit. She asked for permission to file the suit in forma pauperis. The permission was granted on January 26, 1924, and the suit was duly registered. Thereafter Tatya having died, Malkarjun sold the property to the plaintiff for Rs. 2,000 on June 10, 1924 (Ex. 85). That consideration was made up of Rs. 1,800 due under the mortgage deed of 1922 and Rs. 200 paid in cash in the presence of the Sub-Registrar. In her maintenance suit Pagubai obtained a decree on January 30, 1925, and the amount of her maintenance was made a charge on the property in suit. Before the decree was passed, the plaintiff's name was struck off. In execution of the decree in darkhast No. 59 of 1935 Pagubai got the property in suit sold by auction and it was purchased by defendant No. 2 on May 10, 1926. Defendant No. 2 sold it to defendant No. 3 on May 12, 1927, and he took possession of the property. The plaintiff instituted this suit for a declaration that her sale deed from Malkarjun was for valuable consideration and taken in good faith, and that the property mentioned in the sale deed was not liable to be sold in execution of Pagubai's maintenance decree. She also asked for possession of the property from defendants Nos 2 and 3. The trial Court awarded the plaintiff's claim; but the lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff's sale deed was affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, reversed the decree of the trial Court and dismissed the suit with costs throughout.

On these facts, it is now urged on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant that as the consideration of her sale deed was utilized for the satisfaction of the debts of Narayan Dada Kore, the sale deed took priority over the auction sale in execution of Pagubai's maintenance decree. There is no doubt that when the plaintiff purchased the property from Malkarjun in 1924 under Ex. 85, Pagubai's suit for maintenance was pending. Ordinarily a suit by a Hindu wife for maintenance against her husband is a personal suit, and any purchaser of the family property during the pendency of the suit is not affected by the rule of lis pendens. But the doctrine of lis pendens does apply to a suit for maintenance by a Hindu widow in which she claims to have her maintenance made a charge on specific immovable property and a decree is passed creating a charge on such property; Seetharamanujacharyulu v. Venkatasubbamma (1). It is however urged that as the debts contracted by Narayan Dada Kore took priority over the right of maintenance after his death, the plaintiff's purchase ought to take precedence over the sale in execution of Pagubai's maintenance decree. As observed in Somasundaram Chetty v. Unnamalai Ammal (2), it may be stated as a general proposition that in the administration of a Hindu's estate, binding debts would take precedence, over mere claims for maintenance, or residence, on the part of the female members of the family; but there is no clear authority for the proposition that a charge bona fide created for maintenance can be defeated by a creditor who has lent money for family purposes. The real question in this case is whether the doctrine of lis pendens affects the plaintiff's purchase of the property on which a charge was created by the decree in that suit. The principle of lis pendens is based on the maxim ut lite pendente nihil innovatur, which means that during a litigation nothing new should be introduced. So far as the mortgage of 1922 is concerned, as the property was mortgaged for the satisfaction of ancestral debts binding on the family and the mortgage was effected before Pagubai's suit for maintenance was filed any subsequent charge created on that property for Pagubai's maintenance cannot affect the mortgage. But by selling that property Malkarjun curtailed the right of the Court to create the charge which was prayed for in that suit. As observed by Sir George Rankin, O. J. in Sudhirendra Deb v. Ranendra Deb (3), at p. 543 :

(1) A I R 1930 Mad. 824; 137 Ind. Cas. 809; 54 M 132; 59 M L J 485; (1930) M W N 625; 32 L W 416; Ind. Rul. (1930) Mad. 1019.

(2) 43 M 600; 59 Ind. Cas. 1398; A I R 1920 Mad. 722; 39 M L J 179; 12 L W 163; (1920) M W N 458; 28 M L T 317.

"The basis of the doctrine [of lis pendens] is that parties to a suit cannot be allowed to shorten the arms of the Court in dealing with the suit [by transfers to a third party]."

That is what Malkarjun did in this case by absolutely transferring the property to the plaintiff when Pagubai's suit for maintenance asking for a charge on the property was pending. The plaintiff had already a mortgage on that property which may be said to have priority over Pagubai's claim for maintenance. If a further alienation had to be created during the pendency of her suit, then the proper remedy for Malkarjun and the plaintiff was to approach the Court for permission to do so. Section 52, Transfer of Property Act, provides that during the pendency of any suit or proceeding which is not collusive and in which any right to immovable property is directly and specifically in question, the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein, except under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it may impose. Assuming that the debts of Narayan Dada Kore which had to be paid had a priority over Pagubai's claim for maintenance, still when Pagubai filed a suit asking for a charge on the property, the property became the subject-matter of that suit and even a party who has to satisfy a debt having a priority over the claim for maintenance had to alienate the property under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it might impose. If the party fails to obtain the authority of the Court for the purpose, then the alienation will be subject to the final decree in that suit. The decree in Pagubai's suit ultimately charged her maintenance on the property in suit, and for the recovery of that, the property was sold by auction. The plaintiff is therefore bound by that auction sale although his mortgage was prior to the institution of the maintenance suit and may have precedence over the claim in that suit. The present suit is based entirely on the strength of the sale deed. How the rights of the plaintiff under the mortgage deed can be enforced need not be discussed here ; but so far as the alienation during the pendency of the suit is concerned, it must be held to be subject to the result of the maintenance suit and the reliefs prayed for by the plaintiff cannot therefore be granted. The decree of the lower Appellate Court is confirmed, and I dismiss the appeal with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Miscellaneous Judicial Case No. 23 of 1938
August 24, 1939

FAZI ALI AND MANOHAR LALL, JJ.

THE COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX, BIHAR AND ORISSA

versus

JUG SAH MUNI LAL SAH—ASSEESSEE.

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), ss. 13, 31—Income-tax Authorities adopting particular method of assessment—If can subsequently change method—What the law requires Income-tax Officer to see in respect of system of account to be kept by assessee, stated.

It is open to the Income-tax Department while taxing an assessee either to adopt the cash system or to adopt accrual basis; but having adopted the first system or the second, they cannot be allowed to change their ground whenever it suits them to do so. [p. 85, col. 2.]

What the law requires the Income-tax Officer to see is not a system of account to be kept by the assessee in respect of a particular loan which may have been omitted in that account, but the system of accounting which the assessee regularly employs for his own purposes with respect to all the loans which he discloses. If any loans are deliberately left out from the account kept regularly by the assessee, then it is open to the Income-tax Department to disbelieve the accounts and to proceed in any way they choose by acting under the proviso but on exercising a judicial discretion. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency and Aden v. Sarangpur Cotton Manufacturing Company, Ltd. of Ahmedabad (3), referred to. [p. 85, col. 1.]

Misc. J. Case by the Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa, forwarded on April 7, 1938.

Mr. S. M. Gupta, for the Income-tax Department.

Sir Sultan Ahmed and Messrs. Vishundeva Narayan and Prem Lall, for the Assessee.

Manohar Lall J.—This is a reference by the Commissioner of Income-tax of Bihar asking for the opinion of this Court on the questions which have been printed at p. 24. These questions are:—

"(i) Whether on a proper construction of s. 13, the sum of Rs. 90,000 being part of the interest in respect of the three loans to Raja Muhammad Yakub of Parsauni included in the amount realised under the decree executed in the accounting year 1340 Fasli could legally be assessed in 1934-35.

(ii). Whether the interest of Rs. 90,000 referred to escaped assessment in 1934-35 within the meaning of s. 34 and could be assessed under that section."

The questions as framed are somewhat confused. The real question which arises in the present case is whether the sum of Rs. 90,000 or part thereof can be assessed as being the income of the previous year under the provisions of s. 34 of the Indian Income Tax Act. The facts which have been stated by the Commissioner to determine these two questions are these:—

On September 10, 1915, the Raja of Parsauni executed a mortgage bond for Rs. 87,500 in favour of the assessee. The annual interest payable under the terms of the bond was Rs. 8,750. On August 5, 1919, the assessee took another mortgage from the Raja of Parsauni for a sum of Rs. 10,000. Finally on April 14, 1921, the assessee advanced a sum of Rs. 2,500 on the security of a mortgage executed by the Raja of Parsauni, the rate of interest being the same. The assessee was being assessed on his money-lending transactions from sometime before the year 1921-22, but the records of these years are not available. It is, however, clear that the interests on these three loans, which I have just mentioned, were never included in any of the assessments made prior to 1924-25. In the year 1924, the Income-tax Officer discovered for the first time the existence of the first loan of Rs. 87,500, that is, the loan on the mortgage bond of September 1915. Having come to know of the existence of that loan, he must have known that no interest on this loan had ever been received by the assessee as this is the common case of the parties before us. The Income-tax Officer, however, from the year 1924 onwards proceeded to add to the assessable income of the assessee a sum of Rs. 8,750 every year calculating this amount not on the basis of what the assessee actually received but on the basis of the amount of the interest accruing to the assessee from the year 1924 onwards. The assessment was persisted in this way for a period of eleven years, namely, up to 1935, with the result that the assessee was actually taxed on a sum of Rs. 96,250 which was the calculation made on the accrued basis for the years 1924-35. In the year 1935 a fresh discovery was made by the Income-tax Officer in this way:—The assessee instituted a suit sometime before 1929 to recover his dues on all the three mortgages of 1915, 1919 and 1921. On April 5, 1929, a preliminary decree was passed in favour of the assessee for a reduced amount of Rs. 3,71,000 consolidating his aggregate dues, i. e., principal and interest on all the three documents. The final decree was passed sometime later for a sum of Rs. 4,00,000 odd. In execution of this decree the property of the mortgagors was put to sale, the sale was confirmed on December 16, 1932, which falls within the previous years of the assessee, that is, 1340 Fasli. The assessee thus realised in the shape of property a sum of Rs. 3,06,520. It will be seen that even the amount due on the first bond which we are told had swelled up to Rs. 3,40,000 on the date of the suit was not realised in full. It may be open to argument whether the amount realised should be spread over the three bonds of 1915, 1919 and 1921 in the proportion of the liabilities under those bonds, but that question has not been agitated either before the Income-tax Officers or before us. It is assumed, to answer the questions raised, that the amount realised in 1340 Fasli went to pay in part the amount due under the first bond of 1915. The Income-tax Officer had assessed the assessee for the previous year 1340 on the earlier basis adopted by him for 11 years, namely by including in the assessable income a sum of Rs. 8,750 in entire ignorance of the fact that in that year the total amount due on the bond of 1915 had been realised almost in full. This assessment was made on January 30, 1935, in the financial year ending March 31, 1935. Within one year of the end of that year, namely, on June 10, 1936, the Income-tax Officer started proceedings under s. 34 of the Indian Income Tax Act to recover the income which had escaped assessment, namely, the portion of the interest which in the view of the Income-tax Officer had escaped assessment on January 30, 1935. The Income-tax Officer overruled the contention of the assessee and held that he was liable to be taxed upon the total interest which had accrued due on the bond of 1915 and been realised in 1340 Fasli, namely, Rs. 1,91,000 after subtracting from it the amount of Rs. 96,250 which had already suffered taxation during the eleven years. In other words, he assessed the assessee on this escaped income at a figure of Rs. 95,750. The matter was taken up in appeal before the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax who by his order dated December 21, 1936, reduced the assessable income on this head by a sum of about Rs. 5,000, which we are told was in the nature of additional law expenses which were allowed by the appellate authority, thereby fixing the assessable figure at a sum of Rs. 90,345.

The questions formulated before us invite a decision of the contention raised that the assessee is not liable to be taxed upon this amount at all.

As I stated above, the questions have been framed in a somewhat confused manner. The real question which arises for decision is whether any income has escaped assessment so that the assessee can be caught by the provisions of s. 34 of the Indian Income Tax Act; and if so, how much. It is agreed before us, and indeed it is obvious, that some income by way of interest has escaped assessment. The Income-tax Officer never knew of the existence of the situation that the assessee had realised interest by the sale of the properties on December 16, 1932 and that therefore the assessee was liable to be taxed upon a higher figure than that adopted by him on the old accrued basis namely a sum of Rs. 8,750. In the circumstances whether the view taken by the Lahore High Court in Madan Mohan Lal v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Punjab, N.-W.F. and Delhi Provinces (1) or by the Rangoon High Court in Messrs. Dey, Brothers v. The Commissioner of Income-tax of Burma (2) is correct, it is clear to my mind that some income has escaped assessment within the meaning of the language of s. 34.

The question, which really falls to be determined is whether the income which escaped assessment was Rs. 90,345 as taken finally by the Income-tax Officers or a lesser sum and also when did it or a part thereof escape assessment. Sir Sultan Ahmed appearing on behalf of the assessee strongly contends that no income escaped assessment in the year in which it was sought to be assessed by the Income-tax Authorities, but that whatever income escaped, escaped assessment earlier than 1924. Mr. Gupta on behalf of the Income-tax Department on the other hand contends that as the assessee has not adopted any system whatsoever which may be said to be a system regularly employed in respect of his accounts, it was open to the Income-tax Department to consider the whole amount, which was admittedly received by the assessee, as being assessable on the cash basis because he argues that under s. 13 of the Indian Income Tax Act, it is open to the Income-tax Authorities to adopt any basis which they may choose under the proviso to that section in order to determine the assessable income. In my opinion s. 13 has no application whatsoever to the facts of the present case. The Income-tax Department had agreed that so far as the loan of 1915 is concerned, the assessee will be taxed always on the accrued system. In 1924 when the assessable income was computed by making an addition of Rs. 8,750 on the accrued basis income escaped assessment for the years prior to 1924. It was open to the department in that year either to adopt the cash system by which they could not have been able to tax any portion of the income from 1924 to 1935 or to have adopted, as they did, the accrual basis; but having adopted the first system or the second, they cannot be allowed to change their ground whenever it suits them to do so. It seems to me, therefore, that upon the facts which have been sent up by the Commissioner of Income-tax the conclusion which follows in law is that the assessee is liable to be taxed upon the sum of Rs. 90,345 after deducting from it the amount upon which he ought to have paid the tax for the years anterior to 1924 either in 1924 or within one year of the end of that financial year. The statement of the case has not worked out the figures on the accrual basis for the period from September 1915 to 1924, the year when the Income-tax Department first assessed the assessee for the sum of Rs. 8,750. That figure will be worked out by the Commissioner on receiving a copy of our order and the assessment will be reduced accordingly. The Commissioner will give a refund to the assessee of that overpaid amount so determined together with interest at such rate as he may think fit to allow under the proviso to s. 66 (7).

I wish to say a few words as to the argument of the learned Standing Counsel that no system has been regularly employed by the assessee. The Commissioner of Income-tax in para. 5 says at one place that it is clear that no method of accounting was employed by the assessee in respect of the three loans referred to. At p. 25 he again says that when

(1) 8 I T O 413.

(2) 9 I T O 313.

"the Income-tax Officer went to make the re-assessment for 1934-35; he found that no method of accounting had been regularly employed by the assessee in respect of the interest on the three loans referred to"

In my opinion the learned Commissioner was entirely in error in approaching the case in the way he did. What the law requires the Income-tax Officer to see is not a system of account to be kept by the assessee in respect of a particular loan which may have been omitted in that account, but the system of accounting which the assessee regularly employs for his own purposes with respect to all the loans which he discloses. If any loans are deliberately left out from the account kept regularly by the assessee, then it is open to the Income-tax Department to disbelieve the accounts and to proceed in any way they choose by acting under the proviso but on exercising a judicial discretion. This matter has been recently dealt with by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency and Aden v. Sarangpur Cotton Manufacturing Company Limited of Ahmedabad.⁽³⁾ which now authoritatively decides how the terms of s. 13 are to be employed by the Income-tax Department.

For these reasons I answer the questions proposed in the following way :—

The first question does not arise for our decision as I have held that s. 13 has no application whatsoever to the facts of the present case.

The second question is answered thus—Such portion only of the interest of Rs. 90,345 can be assessed now as escaped assessment within the meaning of s. 34 as remains after making a deduction for the amount of interest calculated on accrued basis from September 1915 to 1924, as has been pointed out in the course of the observations made by me above.

In the circumstances, there will be no order for costs in this Court.

Fazl Ali, J.—It is common ground that though in the year 1924-25 the assessee did not receive any interest on the mortgage bond for Rs. 87,500, yet the Income-tax Authorities proceeded to tax them as if they had actually received a sum of Rs. 8,750, that being the yearly interest payable by the mortgagor under the bond. The question is whether the Income-tax Authorities having once elected to adopt this mode of taxation, which was undoubtedly open to them, can now turn round and adopt a totally different mode. In my opinion they cannot do so and the whole matter can be tested in this way. Let us assume that the assessee's suit on the basis of the mortgage bond had not succeeded but failed either on the ground that the mortgage bond had not been duly executed or on the ground that it had not been properly attested, or that a decree had been passed for a smaller sum than that for which it was actually passed. The Income-tax Authorities could not then be made to refund either the whole or any part of the amount which they had realised during the last eleven years. Can they now, in spite of the fact that they have taxed the assessee so far on what they call mercantile basis, turn round and tax him now on the basis of the income actually accrued, especially as the interest which the assessee has now recovered includes interest prior to 1924-25. The Income-tax Authorities have already recovered taxed interest which was payable to the assessee between 1924-25 and the date of the decree. What they are now taxing is the interest which was due to them prior to 1924-25. In my opinion the clear implication of the step taken by them when they taxed for the year 1924-25 is that the so-called escaped income had already escaped prior to 1924-25. As their case is that the assessee had concealed their mortgage bond until they discovered it at the time of assessing them for 1924-25, they might have proceeded under s. 34 at that time and recovered from them whatever they could recover. Section 34 is quite clear and does not enable the department to tax escaped income more than a year after it ought to have been taxed. For these reasons I am of the same opinion as my learned brother and concur in the answer proposed by him to the reference.

B.

Reference answered.

(3) 65 I A 1; 172 Ind. Cas. 1; 1937 O W N 125; 10 R P C 121; AIR 1938 P C 1; 1937 O L R 611; 1937 A L R 978; 4 B R 171; (1938) A L J 48; 42 O W N 194; 47 L W 9; (1939) M W N 152; (1938) 1 M L J 1; 40 Bom. L R 257; 66 O L J 411; I L R (1938) Bom. 339; 32 S L R 225 (P O).

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Second Appeal No. 36 of 1936

October 3, 1938

DAVIS, J. C. AND TYABJI, J.

Musammât AISHA BIBI w/o SARDAR MUHAMMAD—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât BEGUM BIBI w/o HAKIM-UL-DIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Muhammadan Law—Succession—Rule of—Custom, if can oust personal law—Burden of proof—Custom (Punjab)—Muslim agriculturist, if can give up custom and follow Muhammadan Law—Presumption in favour of parties being governed by customary law—Migration—Agriculturist tribe migrating to another colony takes its customary law with it—Manual of customary law—Value of—Jat agriculturist of Gurdaspur District of Punjab migrating to Sind under colonisation scheme, whether governed by Punjab customary law—Widows and daughters, if excluded by sons—Right to maintenance of widow is lost on her re-marriage.

Per Tyabji, J.—In the case of Muhammadans, the rule of succession must be according to their personal law, that is, Muhammadan Law, "the system of law which naturally follows from their religion," except in so far as this personal law is modified or is ousted by a valid and actually prevailing custom. Among Muhammadans the system of law which naturally follows from their religion is Muhammadan Law, and in every case where a custom at variance with Muhammadan Law is alleged to be prevailing, it must be shown that the body of persons claiming to be bound by that custom did definitely claim to be outside the system of law governing their other co-religionists. [p. 92, cols. 1 & 2.]

A Muslim may, except in the cases of a few well-defined prohibitions, affect his entire rights by making declarations, a power given equally to men as well as to women. By the very act of professing the Muslim faith, a person embraces Islam, no matter whether he be a Christian or a Buddhist or of any other religion, and no matter what customs and practices or manner of living he may have been following up to that moment, and immediately becomes subject to Muhammadan Law. This is in no way affected by the fact that where it is proved as a matter of fact that a Muhammadan and his ancestors had for a very long period not adopted the practices enjoined by Islam, but had been governed by ancient and not invalid customs, the customs actually practised and followed would be given effect to. Hence the Muslim agriculturists who desire to give up the customs by which they had been bound in the Punjab and to adopt Muhammadan Law, can do so by an express declaration to that effect. Sardar Bibi v. Haq Nawaz Khan (5), dissented from. [p. 94, col. 1; p. 93, col. 1.]

There is not even in the Punjab any presumption in favour of parties to a suit being governed by customary as against personal law. It must be proved. It may be proved easily in the Punjab by the production in evidence of Government records, the riwaj-i-am, in which the customs of the agriculturists are recorded. Abdul Hussain Khan v. Bibi Sona Dero (1), relied on. [p. 88, col. 1.]

Obiter per Davis, J. C.—In the Punjab when a family or tribe of agriculturists moves from one canal colony to another canal colony, no question would really arise as to the binding force of their customary law. They bring with them, when they migrate, their customary laws including the customary law of succession prevailing in the district from which they migrated. Sardar Muhammad v. Satyapal Singh (2), relied on. [p. 82, cols. 1 & 2.]

The manuals of customary law prepared from official sources are of great authority. Vishno Ditti v. Rameshri (6), relied on, Beg v. Allah Ditta (8) and Fazal Hussain v. Tafasal Hussain (10), referred to [p. 89, col. 1.]

The Jat agriculturists of Gurdaspur District of the Punjab who migrated to Sind nearly forty years ago under a colonization scheme to cultivate land watered by Jamrao Canal have not adopted the system of law practised by the people of Sind but have continued to follow the Punjab customary law. Consequently amongst them widows and daughters are excluded by sons and the right of a widow for maintenance is lost by her re-marriage.

S. A. against the decision of the Second Assistant Judge, Hyderabad, February 29, 1936.

Syed M. Aslam, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. P. Fonseca, for the Respondents.

Davis, J. C.—This is an appeal against the judgment of the Second Assistant Judge at Hyderabad, dated February 29, 1936, who set aside a judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Mirpurkhas dismissing the plaintiffs' suit on the ground that they were women members of a Punjabi agricultural family governed by the customary law of the Punjab in the matter of succession and were thus excluded from inheritance. The plaintiffs are the widows and two daughters of one Hakim-ul-din. Since the death of Hakim-ul-din, the widow, who is plaintiff No. 1 has been twice married, her two daughters, plaintiffs Nos 2 and 3, are aged 21 and 19, respectively. The defendants are the widow and the infant daughter of Sardar Muhammad, the son of this Hakim-ul-din. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the plaintiffs' suit because he was of the opinion that they were governed by the customary law of succession of the Punjab according to which the widow and daughters were excluded in favour of the son and that the widow had no right of maintenance if she re-married as this widow had done. The Assistant Judge in appeal, however, was of the opinion, that it was not proved that the parties were governed by the Punjab customary law or that the Punjab customary law excluded women from succession and he awarded the plaintiffs, respectively, the shares to which they would be entitled under their own personal law as Sunni Muhammadans and decreed partition and possession as they prayed.

Now the questions for our decision are whether the parties are governed by the Punjab customary law and whether this law excludes them from succession. My answer to these questions is in the affirmative. The parties live at present in Sind. There is not even in the Punjab any presumption in favour of parties to a suit being governed by customary as against personal law. It must be proved. It may be proved easily in the Punjab by the production in evidence of Government records, the riwaj-i-am, in which the customs of the agriculturists are recorded. In Abdul Hussein Khan v. Bibi Sona Dero (1), the Privy Council laid it down that neither s. 26 of the Bombay Regulation, IV of 1827, nor s. 5, Punjab Laws Act, raises any presumption in favour of any custom as against the general or personal law. It is only when custom is established that it is to be the rule of law. It was also laid down in the same case that any special usage modifying the ordinary law of succession should be ancient and invariable and should be so established by clear and unambiguous evidence, and that the best evidence of custom is found in connection with the division of land; and the revenue records are therefore of considerable value.

Now it appears to me clearly proved that the parties to this case are agriculturists governed by the customary law of their community which excludes daughters and the mother in favour of the son. The parties are Jats from the Gurdaspur District of the Punjab and they came to Sind under a colonization scheme to cultivate land watered by the Jamrao canal nearly forty years ago. They came as members of the agricultural classes of the Punjab; it is clear, they came as agriculturists bringing their cattle and their implements and their womenfolk to live in Sind the same life as they lived in the Punjab. They passed over what was merely an artificial boundary; they tilled almost the same soil and watered their lands in all probability from the same river and lived the same lives under the authority of their village officers, the lam-bardars, as they would have done in the Punjab. Had they moved from one canal colony in the Punjab to another canal colony, no question would really arise as to the binding force of their customary law:

(1) 128 L R 104; 43 Ind. Cas. 306; A I R 1917 P C 181; 45 I A 10; 45 O 450; 16 A L J 17; 4 P L W 27; 34 M L J 48; 22 O W N 353; 23 M L T 117; 27 O L J 240; 1 P L R 1918; 20 Bom. L R 528 (P O).

Sardar Muhammad v. Satyapal Singh (2). It is unreasonable to suggest that they did not bring with them, when they came to Sind, their customary laws including the customary law of succession and that the customary law would not stand the strain of this short migration.

In Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadis Chunder (3), the Privy Council pointed out that the tenacity of customs regulating succession, even under the strain of migration, is repeatedly recognized by law. That the Punjabis bring with them, when they come to Sind, their customary law has already been recognized by this Court in Santsingh v. Raribai (4). That the parties to this suit are governed by customary law and that this law excludes females with rare exceptions in the presence of males is, I think, clearly proved from the evidence on record. The plaintiff herself admits that if she was in the Punjab, the daughters would be excluded by the son. She says (Ex. 30):

"My father is dead. He died about 20 years back. He left some land in the Punjab. He left one square. He left two sons and three daughters. We did not get a share. If we had filed a suit would have got it. In the Punjab the daughter is excluded by the son but not in Sind."

It is clear then that the plaintiff herself admits a customary law in the Punjab that would exclude daughters from succession in the presence of a son but she distinguishes between succession in Sind and succession in the Punjab. She seeks in effect to derogate from the customary law in favour of a special custom but this like a general custom must be proved to be invariable, ancient and well-established. In short, if it is to be proved that an old custom has fallen in desuetude and been replaced by a new custom, the new custom must be proved by evidence of conduct over a long period of years. I am not now considering the question of the special and particular force which may, under the Shariat, attach to a formal declaration, for it is not suggested that Sardar Muhammad sought to disavow the customary laws by any such declaration. This particular aspect of the question was not considered by the learned Judges in Sardar Bibi v. Huq Nawaz Khan (5), when Tekchand, J. in that case said: "It is not open to a man at

(2) A I R 1935 Lah. 298.

(3) 29 O 433; 29 I A 82; 6 O W N 490; 8 Sar. 205; 4 Bom. L R 365 (P O).

(4) A I R 1921 Sind 17; 76 Ind. Cas. 403; 17 S L R 206.

(5) 15 L 425; 149 Ind. Cas. 575; A I R 1934 Lah. 371; 35 P L R 760; 6 R L 708 (F B).

his pleasure to change the rule of succession to property by a mere declaration."

Now the parties have not produced the riwaj-i-am which set out the custom by which they were governed in the Punjab. It would greatly have facilitated the proof of their case if they had done so, but, it is not in the circumstances reasonable to expect them to have done so. They live in country districts and the best legal advice is not available to them. The manuals of customary law prepared from official sources of great authority. In Vishno Ditti v. Rameshri (6), Sir John Wallis delivering the judgment of the Board said (p. 299*):

"In these circumstances it has been rightly held in the Lahore Court in the case above-mentioned, Daya Ram v. Sohel Singh (7), that, where a custom is alleged, a duty is imposed on the Courts to endeavour to ascertain the existence and nature of that custom; and the Local Government has come to their assistance by establishing a riwaj-i-am or record of custom in the different parts of the Punjab, including the North-West Frontier Province which was formerly included in it. It has been held by this Board that the riwaj-i-am is a public record prepared by a public officer in discharge of his duties and under Government rule; that it is clearly admissible in evidence to prove the facts entered thereon subject to rebuttal; and that the statements therein may be accepted even if unsupported by instances: Beg v. Allah Ditta (8) and Ahmad Khan v. Channi Bibi (9). Further, manuals of customary law in accordance with riwaj-i-am have been issued by authority for each district, and in their Lordships' opinion stand on much the same footing as the riwaj-i-am itself as evidence of custom. In these circumstances their Lordships are of opinion, that, even though there be no evidence of instances, still, if the custom spoken to by the party's witnesses is in accordance with the custom applicable to his community according to the manual of the customary law of the district, there is sufficient prima facie evidence of the existence of the custom, subject, of course, to rebuttal, and that it ought not to be held insufficient merely for want of instances."

Reference may also be made to Beg v. Allah Ditta (8) and Fazal Hussain v. Tafazul Hussain (10). But though we have in this case no riwaj-i-am, reference may be made to Rattigan's Digest of Customary

(6) A I R 1928 P O 294; 113 Ind. Cas. 1; 55 I A 407; 10 L 86; 29 P L R 654; 55 M L J 746; 28 L W 908; 49 O L J 38; (1929) M W N 1; Ind. Rul. (1929) P O 4 (P O).

(7) 110 P R 1906; 31 P L R 1907; 59 P W R 1907.

(8) 44 I A 89; 44 O 749; 38 Ind. Cas. 354; A I R 1916 P O 129; 45 P L R 1917; 12 P W R 1917; 21 M L T 310; 32 M L J 615; 19 Bom. L R 388; 15 A L J 525; 21 O W N 842; 26 O L J 175 (P O).

(9) 6 L 502; 91 Ind. Cas. 455; A I R 1925 P O 267; 52 I A 379; L R 6 A P O 190; 3 O W N 93; 30 O W N 506; 50 M L J 637 (P O).

(10) 13 L 410; 136 Ind. Cas. 545; A I R 1932 Lah 222; 33 P L R 105; Ind. Rul. (1932) Lah. 225.

*Page of A. I. R. 1921 P. O.—[Ed.]

Law and to the evidence of persons who can speak with authority as to the customs of their people, and whose evidence appears to be disinterested. (After stating certain evidence the judgment proceeded further.) Upon this evidence, I think the proper conclusion that is to be drawn is that these Punjabi settlers in Sind settled in Sind for less than 40 years maintaining their connection with their homeland, even in some cases their own speech, are governed by their customary laws and these may be taken as set out in Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law referred by the Privy Council with approval in Beg v. Allah Ditta (8), at p. 96*, and other cases. In this case paras. 6, 16, 21, 22, 23, 24 and 32 may be considered. Under para. 6, sons are first entitled to the inheritance and exclude daughters. Under para. 16 a widow in the presence of a son is entitled to maintenance; under para. 21 it is not dependent upon her residence with her husband's family, but she loses the right of maintenance on her re-marriage; she also loses her life interest in her husband's estate though not future rights of maintenance: paras. 22 and 32. Under para. 23 daughters are excluded by sons or by near male collaterals of the father but a daughter may exclude male collaterals if she marries a near male collateral descended from the same common ancestor as her father, and this explains the evidence of Begum Bibi, Ex. 30, the plaintiff herself, when she says that she can only give three cases of daughters taking a share in their father's estates in the presence of a son, for, in the first case, that of Sardar Bibi there was no such son; in the second case, Emna Bibi was married to a cousin, and about the third case, Daroo's daughter, no details are known.

We think, therefore, that we have here not a case, as the learned Appellate Judge says, where it must be shown that there was no single instance when women did lose the inheritance but a case where on the admission of the plaintiff herself and on the evidence of those in authority able to speak, the parties to this case in the Punjab would be governed by the customary law, whereby sons exclude daughters and the mother. The inference is irresistible that, this law of inheritance was brought from the Punjab to Sind by the colonists and that, if the plaintiff is to succeed, she must show by reason of the fact that the burden is shifted by the evidence of the defendants and indeed by her own evidence that her family is not governed by the customary law of the Punjab but by a special custom or that the existing law has fallen into desuetude in his family in Sind. This, I think, it is clear, she fails to do. The land records relating to this very land are against her, for, when reference was made to these in this Court, it was found that the land was in the name of Sardar Muhammad, Hakim-ul-din's son. This record is important. Sardar Muhammad died some 10 or 12 years after Hakim-ul-din, his father, but the plaintiff made no claim to the land in his son's lifetime.

*Page of 44 I. A.—[Ed.]

Looking then at the evidence of the plaintiff in this light, it is impossible to say that she can show that the customary law of the Punjab in the matter of succession had been changed to the Sunni Muhammadan Law in the case of her own family. (After stating certain evidence the judgment proceeded further). It appears to me that it is clearly proved by the evidence that the parties being Punjabi agriculturists are governed by the customary law of the Punjab to an extent, at least, that is sufficient for the decision of this suit and must lead to its dismissal, that is to say, it is proved that Sardar Muhammad excludes from inheritance in his father's agricultural land both his sisters and that his mother forfeited her right of maintenance by her re-marriage. The plaintiffs claim through Hakim-ul-din as widow and daughters but if they had based their case on their relationship to Sardar Muhammad, the last male holder, that of mother and sisters, their case is no better: plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 are excluded as sisters; they will be excluded by the rule in para. 24 of Rattigan's Digest, by the widow's life interest (para. 11 ibid), and by the daughter (para. 23 ibid). Under para. 22 plaintiff No. 1 could not succeed to a life interest because she has re-married and Sardar Muhammad has left a widow. But we should limit our finding only to her case in the plaint, and that is the case of the widow and unmarried daughters seeking to succeed to the lands of the husband, and father Hakim-ul-din according to Sunni Muhammadan Law, and I think that in the presence of the son, Sardar Muhammad, the widow and daughters should be excluded by the ancient and invariable custom of the Punjab whereby the parties to the suit are governed and that the widow is entitled to a life-estate to their exclusion.

I should perhaps remark that the Advocate for defendant No. 2 stated that after full consideration he has associated himself with the arguments of the Advocate for defendant No. 1 and supported his contentions, for, it is in the interests of the infant daughter that he should do so. As to what will happen on Aisha Bibi's death or remarriage, I am not now concerned to enquire or decide. The judgment of the trial Court should, in my opinion, be restored, and the appeal allowed with costs throughout accordingly. Order accordingly.

Tyabji, J.—This is an appeal against the judgment and decree passed by the Second Assistant Judge of Hyderabad, reversing the judgment and decree passed by the Sub-Judge of Mirpurkhas who had dismissed the suit filed by the plaintiffs, and decreeing in appeal the plaintiff's suit for partition of certain agricultural lands, in Deh No. 269, Taluka Jamesabad, on the basis that the plaintiffs under Muhammadan Law were entitled to the shares claimed by them in the lands.

The parties are Punjabi agriculturists, being members of a colony of Jats, who came from Gurdaspur District to Sind about 40 years ago. They claim through one Hakim-ul-din who died about 1918. He left him surviving his widow plaintiff No. 1, Musammam Begum Bibi and his daughters, plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, Musammam Hakima Bibi and Musammam Talia Bibi, and a son Sardar Muhammad. On the death of Hakim-ul-din, mutation of the lands was effected in favour of the only son Sardar Muhammad, who remained in possession until his death in 1934. Sardar Muhammad left him surviving a widow Musammam Aisha Bibi, defendant No. 1, and a minor daughter Musammam Ahmed Bibi, defendant No. 2. Shortly after the death of Sardar Muhammad, the plaintiffs filed this suit for partition and separate possession of their shares in the land. The plaintiffs claimed that on the death of Hakim-ul-din, they became entitled under Muhammadan Law, to their respective shares as the widow and daughters of Hakim-ul-din, along with the son Sardar Muhammad, and that on Sardar Muhammad's death plaintiff No. 1 again further became entitled to a mother's share out of the property left by Sardar Muhammad. In this way the plaintiffs together will be entitled to very nearly two-thirds of the property, and the defendants to about a third.

As against this it is contended on behalf of the defendants that the parties are governed in matters of succession, not by the Muhammadan Law, but by the customary law; it is claimed that under the general custom which prevails among Punjabi agriculturists, and is also followed by the Jats of Gurdaspur District, the entire land on the death of Hakim-ul-din passed by succession to his only male child Sardar Muhammad to the exclusion of the daughters (plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3) and the widow (plaintiff No. 1), that in any case plaintiff No. 1 who had admittedly re-married after the death of Hakim-ul-din, forfeited on that account any claim she might otherwise have in the property, and that on the death of Sardar Muhammad, his widow, defendant No. 1, became entitled to a life estate in the entire land to the exclusion of the mother (plaintiff No. 1) and the sisters (plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3) of Sardar Muhammad. It has been admitted before us, although it was not so admitted at the trial, that the law applicable to the parties as Jats of the Gurdaspur District before they came to Sind was this customary law and not Muhammadan Law. The defendants claim that all these Punjabi agriculturists have brought their customary law with them and that they continue to be governed by that law, whereas the plaintiffs claim that on leaving the Punjab and settling down upon the soil of Sind, they left their customs behind, that they do not continue to be still bound by those customs, which have not in fact been followed in practice, and that the law applicable to them is their personal law, namely, Muhammadan Law.

The main issue in the case therefore was whether or not the parties were governed by customary law. A large number of witnesses were examined by both parties, and the Sub-Judge came to the conclusion that it had been established that the parties were governed by their customary law, and that by reason of the customs applicable, the plaintiffs were wholly excluded from any share in the property. He therefore dismissed their suit. He believed the oral evidence in the case regarding the prevalence of the custom among the Punjabi Jats of Gurdaspur, to which community the parties belonged, both in the Punjab as well as in Sind and he also relied upon judicial decisions of the Punjab Courts and such authorities as Rattigan's Digest of Customary Law for arriving at his conclusions. The lower Appellate Court came to a contrary conclusion. It did not regard either the decisions cited or the authority of a work like Rattigan's Digest as sufficient to prove the existence of the customs alleged in the suit even in the Punjab, and on the view which he took of the oral evidence on the records, he concluded that no such customs as alleged had been proved to prevail either in the Punjab or among those Punjabi colonists in Sind.

In dealing with this question in this manner the learned Assistant Judge has clearly been in error and this error has entirely vitiated his conclusions. There cannot to-day be any question regarding the fact that so far as the agricultural communities of the Punjab are concerned, 'custom is the first rule of decision in all questions regarding succession, special property of females....&c.' (cf. Rattigan). Apart from the very large number of judicial decisions of the Punjab Courts on the point, and the ruling of this Court in Santsingh v. Raribai (4), it is only necessary to refer to such cases as Beg v. Allah Ditta (8) and Vishno Ditti v. Rameshri (6), to show that it is impossible to disregard the prevalence of custom among Punjabi agriculturists. It is therefore not at all necessary to insist upon a great deal of fresh evidence to prove the existence of each of such customs in detail, as if they were being alleged for the first time. Besides this, there is abundant evidence including that of the plaintiff herself to prove that the parties and their relations in the Punjab were governed by custom in the Punjab. Once this has been established, it becomes very much easier for the defendants to prove that they did not give up but retained their particular customs, and continued to follow them and to regard them as being of binding force even after they settled down in Sind.

Starting therefore with the established fact that the Jat agriculturists of Gurdaspur were governed by customary law before they left the Punjab, there is a very strong presumption that they carried their customs with them when they crossed the boundaries of the Punjab and settled in Sind, especially when they did so, not as stray individuals, but, as was admittedly the case here, in groups and colonies of considerable numbers, and though they belonged to different tribes and came from different parts of the Punjab, a large body of their customs was common to them all as Punjabi agriculturists. This presumption is discussed in the Privy Council case in Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadis Chunder (3). In Sanisingh v. Raribai (4) it was held that the Sikh Jats on migration to Sind carried with them their personal law as to customs prevailing in the Punjab, and it has been held in numerous cases in the Punjab that when a family or a tribe of agriculturists migrates from one canal colony to another it continues to be governed by the provisions of customary law prevailing in the district from which it migrated: cf. Sardar Muhammad v. Satyapal Singh (2) at p. 300* and Zenab Bibi v. Nasir Ullah Khan (11) at p. 374.

It is true that apart from and in addition to the fact that these Jats from Gurdaspur were governed by custom while in the Punjab, and in addition to the presumption that they retained their customs as agriculturists when after migration they continued their occupation as agriculturists when they settled in Sind, sufficient evidence was necessary to establish the fact that at the time of the deaths of Hakim-ul-din and Sardar Muhammad, the customs alleged were prevailing in the community to which they belonged, and that they regarded themselves as bound by these customs, before the defendants could succeed on this issue. In the case of Muhammadans the rule of succession must be according to their personal law, that is Muhammadan Law, "the system of law which naturally follows from their religion," to use the words of Lord Haldane in Abdurrahim v. Halimabai (12) except in so far as this personal law is modified or is ousted by a valid and actually prevailing custom. As stated in Abdur Rahim's Muhammadan Jurisprudence (p. 137), a custom "has authority only so long as it prevails." What it is necessary to prove in cases where Muhammadans admittedly governed by a custom in one locality move to another locality, when the question arises whether the custom still continues to have binding authority over them, has been dealt with by the Privy Council in Abdurrahim v. Halimabai (12). In this case, the Board had to consider the question of succession on the death of a Memon from Cutch who with his family had settled in Mombasa for a long time. There were at least a hundred Memon families in Mombasa, and the Memons in Cutch, the country of their origin, as is well-known, had never, in their history, been governed by the Muhammadan Law of Succession and followed in practice the Hindu Law. Hamilton, C. J., the trial Judge had taken the view that under the circumstances the burden lay on the plaintiff Halimabai who claimed a share under Muhammadan Law to prove that the custom governing Cutchi Memons in Cutch had been superseded by another long-standing custom in favour of Muhammadan Law. Reliance had been placed upon certain cases dealing with the presumption in similar cases of Hindus. Lord Haldane delivering judgment pointed out the difference between the cases of Hindus and Muhammadans. He said:

"Where a Hindu family migrate from one part of India to another, prima facie, they carry with them their personal law, and, if they are alleged to have become subject to a new local custom, this new custom must be affirmatively proved to have been adopted, but when such a family emigrate to another country, and, being themselves Muhammadans, settle among Muhammadans, the presumption that they have accepted the law of people whom they have joined seems to their Lordships to be one that should be much more readily made. All that has to be shown is that they have so acted as to raise the inference that they have cut themselves off from their old environments."

And "the question is simply one of the proper inference to be drawn from the circumstances," and

"there seems to be no sufficient reason in what has been brought before the Courts in this case for regarding the Memons who have emigrated from Cutch to Mombasa as other than a number of individual Muhammadans who have settled down among a people who are of their own religion. It does not appear that these Memons have ever as a body claimed to be outside the system of law which naturally follows from that religion and so prevails among the Muhammadans at Mombasa."

It is true that the presumption in favour of the continued prevalence of a custom peculiar to agriculturists may be said to be much stronger in the case of agriculturists migrating from one province to another, than a similar presumption in the case of non-agriculturist Memons leaving India and settling in Africa, but one must remember the difference that exists between the cases of Hindus and Muhammadans, and the fact that among Muhammadans the system of law which naturally follows from their religion is Muhammadan Law, and that in every case where a custom at variance with Muhammadan Law is alleged to be prevailing, it must be shown that the body of persons claiming to be bound by that custom did definitely claim to be outside the system of law governing their other co-religionists. The learned Counsel for the appellants cited to us the case in Sardar Bibi v. Haq Nawaz Khan (5) a Full Bench decision of the Lahore High Court, and argued that even if Hakim-ul-din or Sardar Muhammad or their family had desired to give up the customs by which they had been bound in the Punjab, and to adopt Muhammadan Law, they could not have done so, even by an express declaration, and that unless and until it could be proved that the customs by which they had been bound had lost their legal force by reason of having been abandoned and having fallen into desuetude for a long period, their existence and validity could not be challenged.

(11) A I R 1935 Lah. 370 at p. 374.

(12) 43 I A 35; 32 Ind. Cas. 413; A I R 1915 P O 86; 30 M L J 227; 20 O W N 362; (1916) 1 M W N 178; 18 Bom. L R 635 (P O).

*Page of A I R 1935 Lah. [Ed].

Now in the present case before us there is no allegation of any attempt by declaration or otherwise having been made by any one of these Punjabi agriculturists we are concerned with to free himself from the customs and adopt Muhammadan Law, nor is there any such evidence on the record from which we could conclude that the customs had even for a short time been abandoned, and the question of the application of this decision does not therefore really arise. The decision, however, does appear to me to be extremely difficult to reconcile, with some of the most fundamental principles of Muhammadan Law, which do not appear to have been at all considered by the learned Judges who decided the case. They appear to have applied certain principles to the case of Muhammadans, which may be applicable to Hindus under somewhat similar circumstances, but which, as pointed out by Lord Haldane in the case above referred to, would not be applicable to Muhammadans at all. They appear to have entirely ignored the fundamental fact that by the very act of professing the Muslim faith, a person embraces Islam, no matter whether he be a Christian or a Buddhist or of any other religion, and no matter what customs and practices or manner of living he may have been following up to that moment, and immediately becomes subject to Muhammadan Law. This is in no way affected by the fact that where it is proved as a matter of fact that a Muhammadan and his ancestors had for a very long period not adopted the practices enjoined by Islam, but had been governed by ancient and not invalid customs, the customs actually practised and followed would be given effect to. The result of accepting this Lahore decision as correct would be that while, e. g. a Burmese [(cf. the case in Abdul Razak v. Aga Muhammad Jaffar Bindeneed (13)] on embracing the Muhammadan faith becomes subject to Muhammadan Law, the agriculturist Muhammadans of the Punjab are to be regarded as having been deprived, by their past subjection of custom, of the power to avail themselves whenever they so choose, of their true personal law, of that system of law which they may think to be the most perfect and which not only followed from their religion, but may be regarded as enjoined upon them by their very faith.

It also appears that Abdurrahim v. Halimabai (12) was not referred to at all, and that the learned Counsel who argued the case had conceded, it does not appear on what grounds, that it was not open to an individual whose family or tribe had for generations followed custom, suddenly to give up that custom and adopt Muhammadan Law by merely making a declaration to that effect. The declarations actually made by the parties in that case were inquired into by the learned Judges and found to lack that mature deliberation and genuine determination which if present would have induced the learned Judges to accept them. It was from a very different point of view that their Lordships of the Privy Council considered a question of conversion in Abdul Razak v. Aga Muhammad Jaffar Bindeneed (13) in which they deprecated an inquiry into the state of mind of the alleged convert, and held that no Court could test or gauge the sincerity of religious belief, and that if the alien in belief embraced the Muhammadan faith, profession, with or without conversion, was necessary and sufficient, and Mr. Ameer Ali in his Muhammadan Law, Vol. 2, p. 36, states:

"The Muhammadan Law applies to all Mussalmans whether they are so by birth or by conversion... Any person who professes the religion of Islam, in other words, accepts the unity of God and the prophetic character of Muhammad, is a Moslem and is subject to the Mussalman Law. So long as the individual pronounces the Kalma of Tauhid, the credo of Islam, it is not necessary for him or her to observe any of the rites and ceremonies, or to believe in particular doctrines which imply Iman or belief. This distinction has often been lost sight of by the British Indian Courts which have, in dealing with Muhammadan cases, assumed the position and function of Courts of conscience."

Every branch of Muhammadan Law testifies to the fact that a Muslim may, except in the cases of a few well-defined prohibitions, affect his entire rights by making declarations, a power given equally to men as well as to women. This is an outstanding feature of Muslim jurisprudence. Any decision which would take away this power from these agriculturists professing the Muslim faith, and hold them bound even against their desire by customs which, whatever their value from other points of view, relegate women to an inferior position in law, strikes, in my opinion, at the very roots of Muslim jurisprudence. It was this inferior legal status of women against which the Prophet laboured and which the Quoran abolished. I am unable therefore as at present advised to accept this decision on this point as correct or to rely upon it for the purposes of this case.

(13) 21 I A 56; 21 O 666; 6 Sar. 389; 4 M L J 131 (P O).

Bearing in mind therefore the presumption referred to above, and following the course which is indicated by the case in Abdurrahim v. Halimabai (12), we have to examine the evidence in the case to find whether these Punjabi agriculturists after migrating from the Punjab and settling down in Sind had cut themselves off from their old environments and practices and settled down as a number of individual Muhammadans among a people of their own religion and adopted the law enjoined by their religion, or whether they as a body claimed to be and continued to remain outside the system of that law practised by the people of Sind amongst whom they settled. The evidence in the case has abundantly and unmistakably proved the latter to be the case. (After examining evidence the judgment proceeded further). That these colonists did not merge themselves among the local people among whom they settled is already sufficiently indicated by this evidence, and there is a great quantity of such evidence which we are satisfied is in the main true. A great deal of the evidence naturally deals with instances which go to show that customary law and not Muhammadan Law was followed. A sufficient number of such instances have been proved to show unmistakably the prevalence of the alleged customs. As stated before, there is not a single clearly established instance to the contrary effect. The learned Assistant Judge cited two instances which he thought proved that the custom had not been followed but a reference to the evidence shows that he either did not correctly follow what the rule of custom was, or overlooked the evidence on the point. He said:

"It must also be shown that there were no instances in which woman did not take the inheritance. In the present case we have got the admission of the defendant's witnesses that K. B. Illahibuksh's daughters got the share and also Hamidali's sisters were shown in the mutation register as the sharers of the property."

Now, K. B. Illahibuksh did not leave any son and his daughters were married to his own nephews and under such circumstances even according to the customary law the daughters would be given their shares. Similarly, Hamidali's sisters got their shares because they were married in the family. In view of what has been stated above, I agree with the learned Judicial Commissioner that it has been clearly proved that the parties are governed by their customary law, that the respondents were excluded from any share in the lands left by Hakim-ul-din and Sardar Muhammad, that the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge must be restored and this appeal allowed with costs throughout.

D.

Appeal allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 1689 of 1936

December 1, 1938

R. O. MITTER and KHUNDKAR, JJ.

FAROK AHMED MEAH AND OTHERS—

APPELLANTS

versus

LALIT MOHAN CHOUDHURY AND OTHERS
—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 33—Scope—Respondent wishing to maintain decree of lower Court—Whether can challenge finding, result of which would be to destroy part decree passed by lower Court in favour of appellant, without preferring appeal or filing cross-objection.—Deed—Construction—Document to be construed as whole.

Rule 33 of O. XLI, Civil Procedure Code, gives to the Appellate Court power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made, etc. This rule contemplates modification of the decree by the Appellate Court at the instance of the appellant. It has no scope where the respondents in effect want to maintain the decree of the lower Court or where the decree under appeal is not modified in appeal. Where the respondent says that he wants to maintain the decree of the lower Court and does not want it to be disturbed, he cannot challenge a finding, the result of which would be to destroy the foundation on which the part decree made by the lower Court in favour of the appellant rests, without preferring any appeal or filing a memorandum of cross-objection. Gangadhar Muradi v. Banabashi Padihari (1), relied on.

The document, according to the well-known principles of construction must be construed as a whole and it is not legitimate to pick out one or two paragraphs and rely upon them only and to discard the rest of the document. The intention of the parties must be gathered from the whole of the document. [p. 98, col. 1.]

A. from the appellate decree of the Additional District Judge, Chittagong, dated February 10, 1936.

Messrs. Chandra Sekhar Sen and Sudhir Kumar Acharya, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Narendra Kumar Das and Durgesh Prosad Das, for the Respondents.

Mr. Harideb Chatterjee for Mr. Ramendra Mohan Majumdar, for the Deputy Registrar.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of the plaintiffs and arises out of a suit which has been pending since the year 1922. The plaintiffs are the owners of a taraf known as taraf Azim Mukim and the defendants are the owners of another taraf named taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama. Both these tarafs have lands in mouza Fatika in which there is a hat known as the Hazari Hat. The lands of the two tarafs are inter-mixed at this place so that the Hazari Hat is held on portions of land which appertain to taraf Azim Mukim and on portions which appertain to the other taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama. There were disputes between the owners of the aforesaid two tarafs which were settled by an agreement executed on Poush 12, 1236 M. E. corresponding to a date in the year 1874. This is a very important document in the case and has been marked as Ex. 3. Even after this agreement, the terms of which we will hereafter examine in detail, disputes between the parties with regard to the realizations from the hat did not end, for in 1890, the parties fell out and again in 1894. It is not necessary for us in this appeal to consider the nature of the disputes between the parties in 1890 and 1894.

The parties again fell out in the year 1917 and in that year proceedings under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, were started and on April 18, 1917, 41 plots out of 42 plots which constituted the hat were attached by the Magistrate under the provisions of s. 146, Criminal Procedure Code, and the said attachment is still in force. The profits of the hat derived from the plots so attached, are being realized by the Collector and they are in deposit with him. On January 9, 1922, the plaintiffs filed the suit. In the suit as originally filed the subject-matter was only 40 plots. The plaintiffs prayed for a declaration of their title to some of these 40 plots which they described in Sch. (1) to their plaint, as appertaining to their taraf Azim Mukim. They also prayed for a declaration that these plots should be released from attachment made by the Collector. They further prayed for an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with their possession in respect of these plots. The third prayer in the plaint is a prayer which is material for us in this appeal. Therein the plaintiffs prayed for a declaration that they were entitled to half of the moneys which were then lying with the Collector and which would in future be realized by the Collector from the hat till the attachment was withdrawn. In this plaint the plaintiffs did not include another plot which was attached by the Collector, that is plot No. 2 of the Chitta of the Maghi Survey. They did not include also another plot which had not been attached by the Collector but which was included in the hat, namely plot No. 1 of the said Chitta and of which plot the plaintiffs were in possession. The defendants had not at any time challenged the plaintiffs' title to taraf Azim Mukim and they have never disputed that the plots claimed by the plaintiffs as appertaining to the said taraf did not really belong to them. The dispute between the parties was with regard to the plaintiffs' claim to the money which was actually lying with the Collector, or which would come to his hands during the time the attachment would be there.

The Court of first instance granted the plaintiffs a decree for eight annas share of the same, overruling the defence that that claim could not be maintained unless and until the plaintiffs include in their suit all the plots of the hat, namely plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey Chitta of which they were in possession and also plot No. 2 of the said Chitta which had in fact been attached by the Collector but which had not been included in the original plaint. On appeal, the lower Appellate Court took the view that by reason of the aforesaid defects raised in the defence of the contesting defendants, the suit was not maintainable. Against the decree so passed by the lower Appellate Court, the plaintiffs preferred an appeal to this Court, being appeal from Appellate Decree No. 565 of 1926. A Division Bench of this Court allowed the appeal being of opinion that the suit ought not to have been dismissed on the aforesaid defects but that the plaintiffs should be allowed an opportunity to amend the plaint by including in their suit the said two plots so left out by them. The case was accordingly remanded to the Court of first instance in order that the plaintiffs might amend their plaint. On an amendment of the plaint being made, this Court directed a de novo trial. After the records arrived in the Court of first instance, the plaintiffs amended their plaint by including therein both these plots, namely plots Nos. 1 and 2 of the Maghi Survey Chitta. In the amended plaint they also stated that they were entitled to a moiety share of the moneys lying with the Collector or which may thereafter come into the hands of the Collector, on the basis of the aforesaid agreement, Ex. 3.

The defendants raised the following defences which are not relevant: (1) that the agreement, Ex. 3 is not a binding agreement inasmuch as some of the then owners of taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama had not joined. The persons who did not join, according to the defence, were Maniram, Rajballav and Fakir whose names appear in the genealogical tree printed at p. 20 of the paper-book; (2) that if the plaintiffs were to proceed upon the agreement, Ex. 3 they cannot get any relief unless they bring into account the profits which they have received and are receiving since the date of the Collector's attachment from plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey Chitta; (3) that inasmuch as $2\frac{1}{2}$ kanis of land appertaining to the plaintiffs' taraf Azim Mukim had been acquired by the Government out of plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey Chitta before 1917, a portion which is a part of the hat, the plaintiffs are not entitled to rely upon the terms of Ex. 3 and claim on the basis thereof a half share of the aforesaid moneys.

The last-mentioned defence, however, had taken different shapes at different times. We have stated above the nature of the defence as it appears in the written statement, but when the matter was argued before the trial Court after remand, the defendants seem to have taken the position that they were entitled to claim a half share of the compensation money awarded by the Collector for the acquisition of the said $2\frac{1}{2}$ kanis and that was the position which they originally intended to maintain before the lower Appellate Court in which they were the appellants. But at the time of the argument of the appeal before the lower Appellate Court, the defendants gave up their claim to a share of the compensation money and took up the position that by the reason of the said compulsory acquisition, the plaintiffs were not entitled to claim a moiety share in the moneys claimed by them but to a lesser share to be determined in proportion to the areas of the respective tarafs which were still left in the hat after the compulsory acquisition. The lower Appellate Court has given effect to that contention of the defendants, and in this appeal, we are mainly concerned with the point as to whether the lower Appellate Court was right in doing what it has done.

Apart from the question which has been raised by the respondents' learned Advocate with regard to the validity of the agreement, no other question of a substantial nature has been raised before us. The appellants, however, pointed out to us that the ordering portion of the learned Judge's judgment is defective and those defects ought to be removed. The learned Advocate for the respondents concurs in the prayer made to us by the learned Advocate for the appellants in this respect. In any event, therefore, whether the appeal succeeds or not, the ordering portion of the judgment will have to be made more definite.

The learned District Judge held that the plaintiffs must account for the profits in respect of plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey Chitta; but he has not given clear directions in his judgment as to the period for which the accounting is to be made. Both the learned Advocates are agreed that the account must be from the date of the attachment, namely April 18, 1917, till the other 41 plots of land are released by the Collector. With regard to plot No. 2 of Sch. (II) he has not directed any separate accounting; and at one stage of the appeal before us it was contended by Mr. Sen appearing on behalf of the appellants that that plot being in the possession of the defendants, should also enter into accounts. But on an examination of the record we find that that is one of the plots which had been attached by the Collector and therefore the rents and profits realized in respect of that plot are included in the sum of money which is in the hands of the Collector and the sum of money which the Collector will realize till the attachment is levied. We do not consider that there is any defect either in the judgment or in the ordering portion of the judgment in this respect. One point must be made clear, however, that in taking the accounts in respect of plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey. Chitta, the liability to render accounts is on the plaintiffs, because admittedly the plaintiffs are in possession of that plot which has not been attached by the Collector; and in taking these accounts the question as to whether the plaintiffs have at their own cost improved the lands, will have also to be taken into consideration; if any improvements have been made at their costs by reason of which the profits therefrom have been enhanced, the plaintiffs will be entitled to get credit for the amount so spent by them in its improvements.

The learned District Judge has, however, held that inasmuch as $2\frac{1}{2}$ kanis out of the plaintiffs' taraf Azim Mukim has been withdrawn from the hat by reason of the land acquisition proceedings, the plaintiffs would be entitled to have a declaration that they are entitled not to a half share but to $2\frac{1}{2}$ ths share of the profits of the hat. This share has been determined on the basis of the areas of the respective tarafs which are still in the hat after the acquisition of $2\frac{1}{2}$ kanis of land as aforesaid. Against this decree, the plaintiffs have preferred this appeal; but there is no appeal or memorandum of cross-objection preferred by the defendants-respondents. The foundation on which the judgment of the learned District Judge rests is the agreement of the year 1874, namely Ex. 3. He recorded a finding in the following manner: that, that agreement was not executed by some of the owners of taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama, namely Raj Chandra, defendant No. 1, Maniram, Rajballav and Fakir. With regard to defendant No. 1, Raj Chandra, he recorded a finding that he had accepted the agreement later on. After recording the aforesaid finding he remarked that the evidence was not very satisfactory on the point as to whether the defendants-appellants' predecessors-in-interest who had not executed the agreement had accepted it later on, but the onus was on the said defendants-appellants to prove that they had not subsequently accepted the agreement and that onus has not been satisfactorily discharged. Then he stated that the admission of defendant No. 1 that he was bound by the agreement, though he is not a signatory was a relevant fact and that it would not be an unreasonable inference from that fact to say that all the owners of taraf Rafi Khansama including those who are not signatories to it had accepted the same.

Mr. Das who appears for the respondents challenges this finding. He says that the onus has been misplaced and the finding therefore is a finding which is open for revision in second appeal. If it had been open to Mr. Das to argue this point, it would have carried great force; but there is a legal bar in his way. As we have stated before, he has not filed any appeal or memorandum of cross-objection against the decree. As a respondent he can support the decree as made without filing any cross-objection by challenging even the findings or some of the findings recorded against him by the lower Appellate Court. But in our judgment he cannot urge a point which, if accepted, would totally or in part destroy the decree made in favour of the appellants. If this finding is reversed, the plaintiffs' claim to the money for which they have got a part decree will have to be discharged. Feeling this difficulty, Mr. Das invokes the provisions of O. XLI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code, and says that we have power to make any order which ought to have been made in the lower Court, even if his clients have not preferred any appeal or filed a memorandum of cross-objection and so it is open to him to challenge this finding and so destroy in effect the foundation on which the part decree as made by the learned District Judge rests. In our judgment, r. 33, O. XLI of the Code, though couched in very broad language, does not contemplate a case of this description. That rule gives to the Appellate Court power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made, etc. This rule contemplates modification of the decree by the Appellate Court at the instance of the appellant. It has no scope where the respondents in effect want to maintain the decree of the lower Court or where the decree under appeal is not modified in appeal. Mr. Das made his position clear. He says that he wanted to maintain the decree of the lower Court and did not want it to be disturbed; but still he wanted to attack the finding on which the decree of the lower Appellate Court in respect of the money claim entirely rests.

The scope of O. XLI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code, has been considered in many cases by this Court. Sir Lawrence Jenkins, O. J. pointed out in Gangadhar Murari v. Banabashi Padihari (1) that the power contained in that rule should be limited to those cases where, as a result of the Appellate Court's interference with the decree in favour of the appellant, further interference is required in order to adjust the rights of the parties in accordance with justice, equity and good conscience. We hold accordingly that it is not open to the respondents, in view of the fact that they have not preferred any memorandum of cross-objections or any appeal, to attack the finding of the learned District Judge that the agreement Ex. 3 is binding on the parties to this suit. This leads us to the only substantial question raised in the appeal by the appellants, namely whether the share of the plaintiffs in the profits of the hat is to be since April 18, 1917, half or 2-5ths. This depends solely upon the construction of the agreement, Ex. 3 and so the lower Appellate Court was justified in allowing the defendants to raise the question of shares for the first time before it. The document, according to the well-known principles of construction, must be construed as a whole and it is not legitimate to pick out one or two paragraphs and rely upon them only and to discard the rest of the document. The intention of the parties must be gathered from the whole of the document.

(1) 22 O.L.J. 390; 24 Ind. Cas. 208; A.I.R. 1914 Oal.

In the first portion of the document it is recited that there is an old hat named the Hazari Hat in existence for more than 100 years within Mauza Fatika on 1 drone, 9 kanis, 3 gandas and 1 kara of land which consists of 12 kanis and 11 gandas of land which appertain to taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama and which has been described in Sch. (I) of that document, and of 12 kanis, 12 gandas, 1 kara of land which appertain to taraf Azim Mukim and which lands have been described in detail in Sch. (II) attached to the document. The document further proceeds to say that the lands of two tarafs are so mixed up that in front of the stall raised on the land of one taraf there are lands of the other taraf and by reason of that fact various disputes and litigations have been going on between the parties in respect of realization of the profits. From the recital it appears that almost equal areas of land appertaining to the two tarafs, Mahamed Rafi Khansama and Azim Mukim were included in the hat. Clauses (2) and (4) of the document are of importance. Clause (2) runs as follows:

"In reference to all the lands of all the plots (meaning all the plots included in Schs. I and II of said document) without taking into consideration the ownership of the dag in which any land is situated in the aforesaid hat whether it appertains to your (the owners of taraf Azim Mukim) maliki or mine (the owners of taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama) out of all sorts of dues such as rent, etc., which are payable in respect of all the shops situated in the hat you (the owners of taraf Azim Mukim) shall take and receive 8 annas of the entire 16 annas and we Brindaban Choudhury and Jugal Kishore Choudhury and Padmalochan Choudhury shall get and take the remaining 8 annas share."

Clause (4) provides for equal division of the selami or fees that would be realized on account of the shops or temporary stalls, etc. There is no provision in this document as to what is to happen if some of the lands which were then known as the hat lands had been acquired either under land acquisition proceedings or were not available for the purpose of the hat. The parties to the document failed to make specific provisions with regard to the same. In our judgment, the preamble to the document furnishes the indication as to why the shares in the profits were divided half and half. It is because the lands of the two tarafs which were in the hat were almost of equal area, the difference in areas being about a ganda, that is to say, the lands of taraf Mahamed Rafi Khansama in the hat were less than the lands in the other taraf in the hat by a fraction of 1-300. Clauses (2) and (4) of the agreement clearly indicate that the profits are to be divided equally between the owners of the two tarafs irrespective of the question as to where the shops or stalls were; if most of the shops or stalls were on the land of Sch. (II) of the document and few of them were on Sch. (I) and the rest of Sch. (I) were vacant, still that would entitle the owners of the lands of Sch. (I) to claim half of the rents and profits and half of the selami. The division therefore into half and half was to be irrespective of the amount of profits actually realized from the different parcels of land included in the hat.

As we have already stated the intention of the parties is quite clear as to why their shares were fixed in that proportion. It is because the lands of each of the tarafs within the hat were equal; inasmuch as $2\frac{1}{4}$ kanis of land appertaining to taraf Azim Mukim has gone out of the hat, according to the governing intention as can be gathered from the document which we have noticed above, the parties can only have shares in proportion to the areas of land left in the hat. This construction which we have put upon the document accords with the justice of the case, for, it would be unreasonable to hold that the plaintiffs would be entitled to the whole of the compensation money awarded in respect of $2\frac{1}{2}$ kanis of land acquired and would still be entitled to claim half share of the profits accruing from the entire hat after the acquisition. We accordingly hold that the shares of the plaintiffs and the defendants in the profits of the hat ought to be in proportion of the respective areas of the two tarafs, the plaintiffs' taraf and the defendants' taraf, which are in the hat after acquisition. We accordingly affirm the judgment of the lower Appellate Court that the plaintiffs are entitled to only 2-5ths share and the defendants to the remaining 3-5ths share in the profits of the hat and a declaration to that effect must be made.

The result therefore is that the appeal fails and must be dismissed. But as we have already stated the order must be made more specific. The decree therefore would be in these terms: The plaintiffs' title is declared to those lands of the Hazari Hat as are covered by the M. S. and O. S. plots in schedule as have been found by the Commissioner. It is further declared that the plaintiffs have their alleged right to enjoy all the rights in the hat as have been conferred on them by the sammatinama, Ex. 3, in respect of the lands of Schedule Ka to Oha subject to the modification that they would be entitled to 2-5ths share instead of half share, that the plaintiffs may get the attachment order passed under s. 146, Criminal Procedure Code, vacated on producing a copy of the judgment and decree; that the plaintiffs must render accounts of the rents and profits in respect of plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey Chitta from April 18, 1917 till the attachment by the Collector is withdrawn. In taking the accounts, the question as to whether the plaintiffs have made any improvements and what costs they had incurred for the same, must be taken into account.

After the said amount is ascertained, the plaintiffs' share in the same should be taken to be 2-5ths and the defendants' $\frac{3}{5}$ ths, and on the basis thereof, the amount which the plaintiffs have taken in excess of their said share from out of the profits of plot No. 1 of the Maghi Survey Chitta must be ascertained; and deducting the said excess amount which the plaintiffs have appropriated from the 2-5ths of the money that may be in the hands of the Collector, the balance would be the amount to which the plaintiffs would be entitled. Subject to the above modifications and directions, the appeal is dismissed. Each party will bear his own costs in this appeal.

B.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Miscellaneous Case No. 375 of 1937

May 8, 1939

IQBAL AHMAD AND COLLIESTER, JJ.

NANDLAL BHANDARI MILLS, LTD., CAWNPORE—APPLICANT

versus

COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX,
CENTRAL AND UNITED PROVINCES—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), ss. 42, 43—Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, Indore, managing agents of a company Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Indore, opening on behalf of latter, branch at Cawnpore under their own control under name Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore—Managing agents supplying goods to branch and receiving commission on sales effected there—Commission paid annually—Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore, held, agents of Nandlal Bhandari and Sons, Indore, within meaning of ss. 42 and 43.

It is manifest from the language of s. 43, Income Tax Act, that a person may be fictionally deemed to be an agent for the purposes of the Act who might not be an agent as that term is ordinarily understood at law. In order to show that a non-resident has a business connection with a resident of British India, it must be established that the two persons have some sort of association in a business, that is to say in a profit-making occupation or activity in British India, and when this is established, it will have to be determined whether the other conditions of ss. 42 and 43 are satisfied. [p. 101, col. 1.]

Nandlal Bhandari & Sons of Indore were the managing agents of Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Indore, a company engaged in manufacture of textiles on whose behalf they had opened a branch at Cawnpore under their own control known as Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore. Nandlal Bhandari & Sons supplied goods to the branch at Cawnpore, which were sold in British India, and they received a commission on the sales so effected. By way of remuneration it was agreed that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons should have a fixed allowance and should also be entitled to commission on the net profits of the company and to commission on the gross sale proceeds. The commission was to be paid annually when the accounts of the company were made up.

Held, that Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore, were and could be treated as the agents of the non-resident firm, i. e., Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, Indore, under ss. 42 and 43 of the Income Tax Act. Even if it be held that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons are only entitled to receive their commission when the annual accounts of the company were made up, the fact remained that their right to this commission accrued upon the sales effected at Cawnpore. This being the position, the commission was in the nature of profits or gains accruing or arising to the non-resident through or from a business connection in British India within the meaning of s. 42, and must therefore be deemed to be income accruing or arising in British India; and since there was a "business connection" between the branch at Cawnpore, representing in British India the company at Indore, and the non-resident firm of Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, the resident branch at Cawnpore must be deemed to be the agents of the non-resident firm within the meaning of s. 43, and the profits accruing in British India to the non-resident firm were chargeable in the name of their fictional agents in British India.

[Case-law discussed.]

Misc. C. from the reference submitted by the Commissioner of Income-tax, Central and United Provinces.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. S. N. Katju, for the Applicant.

Mr. N. P. Asthana, for the Opposite Party.

Collister, J.—This is a reference by the Commissioner of Income-tax, Central and United Provinces, under s. 66 (2), Income Tax Act. There is a company at Indore known as the Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Indore—hereinafter called the company—which is engaged in the manufacture of textiles. On February 27, 1922, a deed of agreement was executed whereby a firm known as Nandlal Bhandari & Sons were appointed secretaries, treasurers and agents of the company; para. 5 of that instrument provides as follows:—

"The said firm shall, at any time hereafter, upon the request in writing of the directors for the time being of the said company, but at the sole cost and charges of the said company, open and maintain in Indore or/and Bombay or/and elsewhere a shop suitable for the sale by retail of the cloth and yarn manufactured at the said company's mills, and shall from time to time out of the cloth and yarn manufactured at the said company's mills, supply the said shop with so much cloth and yarn as there shall be a demand for. The said firm shall with the assistance of the directors, have the general management of the said shop and of the business transacted therein and the engagement and discharge of all clerks and servants required in the said shop. The salaries of such clerks and servants shall be paid by the said company."

By way of remuneration it was agreed that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons should have a fixed allowance and should also be entitled to commission at 16 per cent. of the net profits of the company and to commission at Re. 1-9-0 per cent. of the gross sale proceeds. The commission was to be paid annually when the accounts of the company were made up. The instrument was in fact a contract of managing agency. In accordance with the powers which were conferred upon them, Nandlal Bhandari & Sons opened a branch of the company at Cawnpore, known as Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore; and for the years 1934-35 and 1935-36 the Income tax Officer served a notice on the Cawnpore branch to show cause why it should not be treated as the agent of the non-resident firm, i. e., Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, Indore, under s. 43 of the Act. Cause was shown on various grounds, but the contentions which were advanced did not find favour with the Income-tax Officer, who on March 3, 1936, declared the branch at Cawnpore to be agents of the non-resident firm, i. e., Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, Indore, and assessment was made accordingly. There was an appeal to the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, but it was dismissed; and thereafter an application for review under s. 33 was preferred to the Commissioner of Income-tax and also an application under s. 66 (2) requiring the Commissioner to refer certain questions of law to the High Court. The application for review was disallowed, but the Commissioner has referred the following question for the decision of this Court:

"Whether on the facts proved or admitted, Messrs. Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore, were and could be treated as agents of the non-residents Messrs. Nandlal Bhandari and Sons, within the meaning of ss. 42 and 43, Income Tax Act."

Section 42 (1) of the Act provides:

"In the case of any person residing out of British India, all profits or gains accruing or arising to such person, whether directly or indirectly, through or from any business connection or property in British India, shall be deemed to be income accruing or arising within British India, and shall be chargeable to income-tax in the name of the agent or any such person, and such agent shall be deemed to be, for all the purposes of this Act, the assessee in respect of such income-tax: Provided that any arrears of tax may be recovered also in accordance with the provisions of this Act from any assets of the non-resident person which are, or may at any time, come within British India."

Section 43 enacts:

"Any person employed by or on behalf of a person residing out of British India, or having any business connection with such person, or through whom such person is in the receipt of any income, profits or gains, upon whom the Income-tax Officer has caused a notice to be served of his intention of treating him as the agent of the non-resident person shall, for all the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be such agent: Provided that no person shall be deemed to be the agent of a non-resident person, unless he has had an opportunity of being heard by the Income-tax Officer as to his liability."

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru on behalf of the company contends that the branch at Cawnpore cannot be regarded as agents of Nandlal Bhandari & Sons for the reason that the latter are the duly appointed agents of the company at Indore, of which the firm Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore, is a branch. He also pleads that there is no business connection between the company through its branch at Cawnpore—and Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, as required by ss. 42 and 43 of the Act. He contends that the term "business connection" signifies dealings of a commercial nature between the parties concerned and necessitates the buying and selling of commodities and the relationship of creditor and debtor. The decision of the question referred to us will depend on the interpretation to be placed on ss. 42 and 43 of the Act. It is manifest from the language of s. 43 that a person may be fictionally deemed to be an agent for the purposes of the Act who might not be an agent as that term is ordinarily understood at law; and the fact that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons are the duly constituted agents of the Company at Indore will not, in our opinion, preclude the Income-tax Authorities from treating the branch at Cawnpore as agents of the non-resident firm of Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, if the condition of ss. 42 and 43 are otherwise satisfied.

In para. 6 (c) of the agreement of agency, it is provided that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons shall receive commission at the rate of Re. 1-9-0 (per cent.) on the gross sale proceeds of all sales of yarn and cloth of the company "as the selling agents." Nandlal Bhandari & Sons have authority to open branches and appoint and discharge employees, and if they manage the business of each branch as selling agents, some argument might be advanced as regards residence and non-residence of the respective parties quoad the branch at Cawnpore; but it was assumed by the Income-tax Authorities and has been assumed in argument before us by learned Counsel for the company that the company is resident at Cawnpore through its branch, i. e., through Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Cawnpore, and that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons are non-residents; and we will proceed to answer the reference on this same assumption. Learned Counsel for the company pleads that the element of "business" is wanting in the connection which exists between the branch at Cawnpore and the non-resident firm. He contends that ss. 42 and 43 are not charging sections, but machinery section: and he argues that, unless the income of Nandlal Bhandari & Sons can be expressly brought within the terms of the statute, it is not liable to be taxed. "Business" in the term "business connection" cannot, says learned Counsel, have a wider significance than "business" as used in s. 6, which is the charging section; and we have already shown what meaning he asks us to attach to the expression. Finally he contends that, according to the deed of agreement, the commission is to be paid to Nandlal Bhandari & Sons at Indore after the accounts of the company have been made up, and therefore, it cannot be said that this is an income which "accrues or arises" to them in British India.

Learned Counsel for the company and learned Counsel for the defendants have referred us to various authorities which we will proceed to discuss. None of these cases is on all fours with the facts of the present case with the possible exception of one from Bombay which, if not identical, is very nearly so, as we shall presently show.

The first of these authorities is the English case in Greenwood v. F. L. Smidth & Co. (1). In that case the respondents were a Danish firm resident in Copenhagen manufacturing and dealing in cement-making and other similar machinery, which they exported all over the world. They had an office in London in charge of a qualified engineer, who was their whole-time servant. He received inquiries for machinery such as the respondents could supply, sent to Denmark particulars of the work which the machinery was required to do including samples of materials to be dealt with, and when the machinery was supplied, he was available to give the English purchaser the benefit of his experience in erecting it. The contracts between the respondents and their customers were made in Copenhagen and the goods were shipped f. o. b. Copenhagen. The respondents were assessed to income-tax in respect of the profits derived from dealings in machinery with purchasers in the United Kingdom, but it was held by the House of Lords that they did not exercise a trade within the United Kingdom within the meaning of Sch. D, s. 2, Income Tax Act, 1853, and were therefore not assessable to income-tax either under that Schedule or under s. 31, sub-s. 2, Finance (No. 2) Act, 1915. That decision rested on the terms of the English statutes, and the basis of decision was that the respondents did not exercise a trade within the United Kingdom. There is no such expression as "exercising a trade" in the Indian Income Tax Act, as in Sch. D, s. 2 of the English Act of 1853. What we have to do is to interpret the relevant sections of the Indian Income Tax Act according to the language which the Legislature has thought fit to employ, and we do not think that we can safely apply to the Indian statute the analogy of English decisions based on the language of the Acts in force in that country.

(1) (1922) 1 A. C. 417; 91 L. J. K. B. 349; 127 L. T. 68; 8 Tax. Cas. 193; 66 S. J. 349; 38 T. L. R. 421.

The next case in chronological order is Board of Revenue v. Madras Export Co., (2). A French firm had a branch in Madras whose sole duty was to buy leather goods in India and ship them to France. The French firm was a firm of commission agents and they made their profits by being paid commission at a defined rate on the value of the goods shipped to them. It was held by a Bench of the Madras High Court that, as the profits accrued solely in France, they were not taxable in British India. It was further held that s. 33 (1) of the Indian Income Tax Act (equivalent to s. 42 (1) of the Act now in force) did not create a new category of income which could be charged under the Act in addition to the incomes mentioned under s. 5 (equivalent to s. 6 of the present Act) as chargeable under the Act, but that s. 33 (1) merely provided a machinery by which non-resident foreigners trading in British India or having a business connection in British India could be taxed on income derived by them in British India. At p. 367* Wallace, J. observed:

"The term 'business connection' has not been defined in the Act. That perhaps is not surprising in an Act which does not even define the source of gain which it sets out to tax; but when it is contended that 'business connection' was designed to mean something different from and wider than the business itself which ex hypothesi takes place outside British India, and thus to cast wider the net of the income-tax gatherer, it behoves us to be cautious and not to accept the contention, unless we find it justified by the legal maxim enunciated by Lord Stenford, M. R. in Smidh & Co. v. Greenwood (3) at p. 588 that the well-known canon of construction of taxing Acts is that no one is to be taxed except by express words."

At p. 368* this learned Judge says:

"The condition precedent to assessability is business in British India and not merely a business connection in British India, and it is not laid down in that Act that the two phrases are identical in meaning. The test, I take it, is: Is the non-resident firm by its agency out here in British India making profits in British India which pass to it through the hands of its agent? If it is, then s. 33 (1) applies. If not, not. I am therefore unable to hold, in the absence of more clear and express words, that s. 33 (1) was intended in any way to enlarge the scope of s. 5 or to bring into the net any income accruing outside British India, but not derived from business within British India, merely because that income was received through or from a business connection in British India."

Section 33 (1) then is governed and controlled by s. 5 and really applies, and was intended to apply to cases where a non-resident firm takes income or profits from business carried on by it in British India, which are transmittable and are transmitted to it through its resident agent. The agent will be taxed and will be the assessee for the purposes of the Act for the profits in British India of that business, and, in order to guard against the section being taken to mean that it is merely the agent's own profits which are chargeable, language is used implying that it is the profits of his firm accruing in or arising through its business connection in British India which are taxable through the agent.

In the present case the non-resident firm in India is merely buying raw material for shipment and sale abroad, and the profits realized from the sale are realized in Paris. There is clear authority in the leading case in Sulley v. Attorney-General (4) which is an exactly parallel case, for holding that the firm does not thereby carry on trade or business in British India."

The view taken by the High Court of Madras was dissented from by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Rogers Pratt Shellac Co. v. Secretary of State (5). The Rogers Pratt Shellac Co. was incorporated in the United States of America with its headquarters in the city of New York. The company had a branch office in Calcutta to buy gum, shellac and other Indian products and a factory at Wyndhamganj in the United Provinces. No sales were conducted in India by the company. Their transactions were limited to the purchase of shellac and other goods, some of which were purchased on account of a certain gramophone company, which paid the company a fixed percentage on the purchases plus expenses, while the balance was sold in the open market. It was held that income-tax was leviable in India under s. 33 (1) of the Act. At p. 15* Chatterjee, J. distinguished the English authorities on the ground that under Chap. XXXIV, (2), Sch. D of the Act of 1853, it was necessary to show that the non-resident was exercising a trade in the United Kingdom and that there was no provision in the English Act to the effect that profits or gains accruing or arising to a non-resident, whether directly or indirectly, thorough or from any business connection in the United Kingdom should be deemed to be income accruing or arising within the United Kingdom. It will be observed that in neither of the above two cases was there any sale of goods in British India; all that the "agents"

(2) 46 M 360; 71 Ind. Cas. 756; A I R 1923 Mad. 122; 44 M L J 290; 1 L W 181; 32 M L T 37.

(3) (1921) 3 K B 583 at p. 588; 37 T L R 949.

*Pages of 46 M.—[Ed.]

(4) (1860) 5 H & N 711; 39 L J Ex. 484; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1018; 8 W R 422; 2 L T (N.S.) 439; 120 R R 793.

(5) 52 C I; 83 Ind. Cas. 273; A I R 1925 Cal. 34; 40 C L J 110; 28 O W N 1074.

*Page of 52 C.—[Ed.]

in British India did was to purchase raw materials in British India and export them to the non-resident firm.

In the Full Bench case in Jiwan Das v. Income-tax Commissioner, Lahore (6) a person residing and carrying on business in British India purchased goods in British India and sent them for sale to his shop in Kashmir, and it was held by a Bench of five learned Judges of the Lahore High Court that such a person was not liable to be assessed to income-tax on any part of the profits derived by sale in a foreign country of the goods purchased by him in British India, when the profits had neither been received in, nor brought into British India. The view expressed by the Madras High Court in Board of Revenue v. Malras Export Co. (2) was approved and relied upon. In Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay v. Bombay Trust Corporation, Ltd. (7) a company incorporated and carrying on business at Hongkong lent large sums on deposit to a Bombay Company at 5½ per cent. interest and the company at Bombay remitted the interest to the Hongkong Company; and it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that the interest was a profit or gain accruing or arising to the Hongkong Company from a business connection in British India so as to be chargeable to income-tax under s. 42 (1), Indian Income Tax Act, 1922; and that the tax could be levied on the Bombay company, because under s. 43, they were to be deemed the agents of the Hongkong Company for all purposes of the Act and so by s. 42 (1) the tax was chargeable in their names and they were to be deemed the assessee, which by s. 2 (2) is meant the person by whom the tax was payable. Learned Counsel for the company distinguishes the last-mentioned case from the case with which we are now dealing on the ground that there was a relationship of creditor and thus a business connection between the company in Hongkong and the company in Bombay.

The next case is Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay v. Sarupchand Hukamchand (8). The facts of that case were as follows :

The assessee, acted as the secretaries, (6) 10 L 657; 117 Ind. Cas. 657; A I R 1929 Lah. 609; 30 P L R 489; Ind. Rul. (1929) Lah. 673 (F B).

(7) 54 B 316; 131 Ind. Cas. 532; A I R 1930 P O 54; 57 I A 49; Ind. Rul. (1930) P O 68; (1930) A L J 73; 34 O W N 230; 32 Bom. L R 361; 58 M L J 197; 31 L W 582; (1930) M W N 564 (P O).

(8) 55 B 231; 132 Ind. Cas. 505; A I R 1931 Bom. 236; 33 Bom. L R 382; Ind. Rul. (1931) Bom. 345.

treasurers and agents of a company named Hukamchand Mill, Ltd., which had its registered office at Indore, and as such, they were entitled to certain remuneration. The terms of the agreement between the assessee and the company provided that a further commission at a certain percentage on the gross sale proceeds of cloth produced by the mill be paid to the assessee for their services as selling agents of the company. The company opened a shop at Bombay for the sale of cloth produced by the company's mill at Indore and it was managed by the assessee. It will thus be observed that the facts were very similar indeed to the facts of the case which is now before us. It was held by the Bombay High Court that, having regard to the terms of the agreement, the income, being a commission upon sales made in Bombay, accrued or arose in British India and was liable to be taxed in Bombay, though as a matter of practice between the parties it was paid at Indore. The only respect in which learned Counsel for the company attempts to distinguish that case is that, according to the interpretation which Beaumont, O. J., placed on cl. 16 of the agreement in that case, the assessee were competent, if they so wished, to deduct their commission at Bombay before handing over to the company the proceeds of the sale of cloth at that shop. Clause 16 was more or less similar in its terms to cl. 12 of the agreement in the case with which we are now dealing; but in cl. 7 of the agreement in the present case it is provided that the commission shall become due and shall be paid to Nandlal Bhandari & Sons annually as soon as the accounts of the company have been made up. Whether any such provision found place in the agreement in the Bombay case we do not know. Section 4 (1) of the Act, is discussed in the separate judgments of Beaumont, O. J. and Barlee, J., but there is no discussion of ss. 42 and 43.

The last authority which need be mentioned is Commissioner of Income-tax v. Remington Typewriter Co., Ltd. (9). A company incorporated in the United States of America carried on business in New York and there manufactured and sold typewriter machines. The respondent company had been incorporated under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, and had purchased from the American company for shares the goodwill of that company in the Bombay Presidency and adjoining territory; the American company held all the shares except three issued to that company's nominees. No other companies had been incorporated in India, each being in substance in the same position towards the American Company as the Bombay Company; their respective business territory covered the rest of India. It was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that there was a business connection within the meaning of s. 43 and s. 42 (1) of the Indian Income Tax Act, between the American Company and each of the Indian companies, and consequently, the respondent company could be deemed, for the purposes of the Act, to be the agent of the American company, and as its agent, could be charged to tax under s. 42 (1) in respect to (a) profits made by the American company upon machines exported to British India, and (b) dividends paid to the American Company by the three Indian companies. As we have already said, our reply to the reference must depend on our interpretation of the relevant provisions of the Indian Income Tax Act. Section 4 (1) of that Act provides:

(9) 55 B 243; 130 Ind. Cas. 679; A I R 1931 P O 42; 58 I A 42; 35 O W N 349; 33 L W 301; (1931) M W N 248; 8 O W N 559; Ind. Rul. (1931) P O 87; 60 M L J 609; 33 Bom. L R 413; 53 O L J 135 (P O).

"Save as hereinafter provided, this Act shall apply to all income, profits or gains as described or comprised in s. 8, from whatever source derived, accruing or arising, or received in British India or deemed under the provisions of this Act to accrue, or arise, or to be received in British India."

We have already quoted ss. 42 (1) and 43 in an earlier part of this judgment, and it is unnecessary to repeat them. The expression "business connection" has not been defined in the Act. Section 6, is the charging section, and in it income, profits and gains from "business" is shown as a separate head of income, the other heads being salaries, interest on securities, property, professional earnings and "other sources." Section 2 (4) defines "business" in the following terms:

"Business" includes any trade, commerce, or manufacture or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture."

This definition is obviously not exhaustive, as its language shows. Now, in order to show that a non-resident has a business connection with a resident of British India it must, we conceive, be established that the two persons have some sort of association in a business, that is to say in a profit-making occupation or activity in British India; and when this is established, it will have to be determined whether the other conditions of ss. 42 and 43 are satisfied. We must therefore consider what is the position in the present case. Nandlal Bhandari & Sons of Indore are the managing agents of Nandlal Bhandari Mills, Ltd., Indore, on whose behalf they have opened a branch at Cawnpore under their own control. Nandlal Bhandari & Sons supply goods to the branch at Cawnpore, which are sold in British India, and they receive a commission on the sales so effected. It is true that according to cl. 7 of the agreement the commission does not become payable until the annual accounts of the company have been taken, but their claim to the commission is dependent upon the sale of goods in British India. Clause 12 of the agreement even suggests that they might be competent to retain their commission before transferring the profits to the company, and this is the view which was taken by the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax; but even if it be held having regard to the provisions of cl. 7, that Nandlal Bhandari & Sons are only entitled to receive their commission when the annual accounts of the company are made up, the fact remains that their right to this commission accrues upon the sales effected at Cawnpore.

This being the position, we think it must be held that this commission is in the nature of profits or gains accruing or arising to the non-resident through or from a business connection in British India within the meaning of s. 42, and must therefore be deemed to be income accruing or arising in British India; and since there is a "business connection" between the branch at Cawnpore, representing in British India the Company at Indore, and the non-resident firm of Nandlal Bhandari & Sons, the resident branch at Cawnpore must be deemed to be the agents of the non-resident firm within the meaning of s. 43, and the profits accruing in British India to the non-resident firm will be chargeable in the name of their fictional agents in British India. For the reasons given above our answer to the question referred to us is in the affirmative. Let a copy of this judgment be sent to the Commissioner of Income-tax under the seal of the Court. We assess the fee of Counsel for the Department at Rs. 200.

S.

Answer accordingly.

ODUH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 289 of 1937

October 11, 1939

ZIA-UL HASAN AND RADHA KRISHNA, JJ.
CHANDRIKA PRASAD AND ANOTHER—
PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

BHAGWAN DAS—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT

Hindu Law—Alienation—Widow—Mortgage by widow to redeem previous mortgage by husband—Subsequent mortgage by her to pay off time-barred claim under previous mortgage, whether binding on reversioners.

The payment of a husband's debt, though barred, is a pious duty on the part of the widow. The Hindu Law does not recognise any bar of limitation. According to the Hindu Law leaving a debt unpaid is a sin, the consequences of which follow the debtor into the next world. Therefore, an alienation by a widow of property of her husband in order to pay off the debt of her husband even though barred by statute, is an alienation, which is binding upon the reversioners. [p. 107, col. 1.]

A Hindu widow executed a mortgage in 1913 in order to redeem a mortgage executed by her deceased husband in 1893. The widow again in 1916 executed mortgage to redeem the mortgage of 1913 and in 1934 she executed a mortgage to pay off a claim under the mortgage of 1916 which had become barred by time:

Held, that the effect of the transaction of 1913 was that the debt of 1893 was paid off and ceased to exist. The debt of 1913 was a debt due from the widow or the estate inherited by her and hypothecated in lieu of that debt. The debt made payable by the deed of 1916, was, therefore, the debt not of the deceased husband but of the widow and, therefore, the consideration of the mortgage of 1934 was the time-barred debt of her own and not that of her husband. The mortgage of 1934 was not therefore binding on the reversioners. [p. 107, col. 2.]

S. C. A. against the order of the District Judge of Gonda, dated May 18, 1937.

Mr. Mahabir Prasad Srivastava, for the Appellants.

Mr. Hyder Husain, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is the plaintiffs appeal. The following pedigree will be helpful in appreciating the facts of the case:—

Parag Dutt shown in the pedigree was owner of sixteen annas share in village Charera and six annas share in village Chain. On his death his two sons, Bhikhari and Jadunath, succeeded to the property in equal shares. Later the two brothers separated from each other and Jadunath and his son Ram Achraj died one after the other and Musammat Parag Dei, the widow of Ram Achraj, succeeded to the eight annas share in village Charera and three annas share in village Chain as a Hindu widow.

Jadunath in his lifetime with his brother Bhikhari had executed a mortgage deed with possession for a consideration of Rs. 9,85-11-1½ in favour of one Tirbhuwan Datt in respect of the entire sixteen annas share of village Charera (vide Ex. A-16).

On August 4, 1913, i. e. after the death of Jadunath and Ram Achraj and Bhikhari, Musammat Parag Dei and the sons of Bhikhari executed a simple deed of mortgage for a sum of Rs. 5,000 in favour of Bhagwan Das Pande in respect of eight annas share of Charera (vide Ex. A-17).

It appears that this mortgage was executed by Musammat Parag Dei in respect of her eight annas share in village Charera in order to redeem the share mortgaged by her husband in 1893, and the sons of Bhikhari, who were the nearest male collaterals seem to have joined the execution of the deed merely to signify their assent to the transfer. It is admitted that the eight annas share was redeemed and came into the possession of Musammat Parag Dei. The interest stipulated in this deed was one per cent. per mensem compoundable yearly.

On August 11, 1916, Musammat Parag Dei, the widow, and the sons of Bhikhari again executed another mortgage deed (Ex. A-18) in respect of four annas share out of the eight annas share with possession for a sum of Rs. 6,000. This mortgage was executed in favour of Bhagwan Das, the defendant-respondent in this case. Out of the consideration of Rs. 6,000, a sum of Rs. 5,421 was left with the mortgagee for redeeming the earlier mortgage dated August 4, 1913. The mortgagee was put in possession of the share mortgaged. It is admitted that the defendant-respondent Bhagwan Das ultimately deposited a sum of Rs. 7,341 and succeeded in redeeming the mortgage of 1913 on December 9, 1916.

From the above narration it would appear that the defendant-respondent paid a sum of Rs. 1,920 in excess of the amount left with him for redemption.

On March 15, 1934, Musammat Parag

Dei alone executed a mortgage deed with possession in respect of the remaining four annas share of village Charera, redeemed from Bhagwan Das Pande, and three annas share of village Chain to the defendant-respondent for a sum of Rs. 12,000. This amount of Rs. 12,000 consists of the excess amount of Rs. 1,920 paid by the respondent for redemption and Rs. 10,080 interest thereon from December 1916, up to the date of the mortgage. It must be noticed that at the date of this mortgage, a claim to Rs. 1,920 and interest thereon had become barred by time.

The widow died in July, 1934, and the plaintiff filed the present suit for possession of the four annas share of Charera and the three annas share of Chain mortgaged by the deed of 1934 by the widow on the allegation that the mortgage was neither justified by legal necessity nor was executed for the benefit of the estate.

The defendant contested the suit. His defence was that the plaintiff No. 1 was not the reversionary heir of the husband of Musammatt Parag Dei and was not entitled to sue in the presence of Musammatt Bachchi, the daughter of Ram Achraj. It was further pleaded that under a family custom Musammatt Parag Dei was entitled to an absolute estate in the property of her husband and that the mortgage was made for legal necessity.

The trial Court impleaded Musammatt Bachchi as a necessary party to the suit and later as a result of the compromise between her and the plaintiff she was made a co-plaintiff as plaintiff No. 2 in the suit in consequence of which all controversy as to the plaintiff being the nearest heir disappeared. The trial Court held on other issues in favour of the plaintiffs and decreed the suit.

In appeal the lower Appellate Court maintained the finding of the trial Court to the effect that the custom relied upon by the defendant was not established. On the question of legal necessity, however, it disagreed with the finding of the trial Court and held that the mortgage was for the benefit of the estate and for legal necessity, and on that view, dismissed the suit.

In second appeal before this Court the learned Counsel for the appellants has argued that the finding of the Court below that the mortgage of 1934 was for the benefit of the estate and legal necessity is on the facts of the case wrong in law. The respondent's Counsel, while supporting the judgment of the lower Appellate Court on the question of the binding nature of the deed of mortgage, argued further that on a correct interpretation of the wajib-ul-arza, the custom set up by the defendant was established. We proceed to give our decision on the above two points argued before us.

The lower Appellate Court has held that the transaction of mortgage entered into with the defendant-respondent was more advantageous both to Musammatt Parag Dei and the reversioners on the ground that the defendant who had to pay Rs. 1,920 in excess of what was left with him had become entitled to recover that amount with interest at 12 per cent. per annum compoundable yearly from Musammatt Parag Dei and the sons of Bhikhari, who had executed the mortgage-deed in his favour. The view of the Court below that the defendant-respondent could recover the amount from Musammatt Parag Dei and the sons of Bhikhari is based upon an assumption that the claim to it was still within time. This assumption was clearly wrong as admitted before us by the learned Counsel for the respondent. Neither the widow nor the sons of Bhikhari were liable in law for the amount. The mortgage of 1916 by which money was left with the defendant-respondent for redemption of the earlier mortgage did not make any provision about any excess which the defendant-respondent had to pay for redeeming the earlier mortgage. The claim to recover the excess amount arose in 1916 at the time of its payment. Even supposing that the defendant-respondent qua the excess amount was subrogated to the rights of Bhagwan Das Pande, the mortgagee of the mortgage-deed redeemed, still the claim had become barred.

We find that by the year 1934 the claim on the basis of that deed had become barred by time. The period fixed for payment in this deed was three years, and any suit on the basis of this deed was barred at the latest after 15 years from the date thereof. It, therefore, follows that the defendant-respondent could not claim that money either from Musammatt Parag Dei or the sons of Bhikhari personally or from the properties in suit. The learned Counsel appearing for the respondent has not supported the judgment of the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the execution of the mortgage was for the benefit of the estate. There can be no doubt that a widow has got power to alienate the property inherited by her from her husband in case of need or for the benefit of the estate. On the facts mentioned above, there was no obligation of any kind whatsoever either upon Musammât Parag Dei or the estate in her possession to pay off the defendant-respondent and no necessity in the nature of any pressure on the estate. We are, therefore, of opinion, that the alienation on the ground that it was for the benefit of the estate cannot be sustained.

The other ground on which the lower Appellate Court has maintained the alienation as binding upon the plaintiff-appellant is that it was the debt of her (Musammât Parag Dei's) husband and the payment thereof, even though barred by time, was her religious and moral duty, and as the alienation was to discharge a debt of her husband, it was binding upon the reversioners. It has been held that the payment of a husband's debt, though barred, is a pious duty on the part of the widow. The Hindu Law does not recognise any bar of limitation. According to the Hindu Law leaving a debt unpaid is a sin, the consequences of which follow the debtor into the next world. Therefore, an alienation of property of her husband in order to pay off the debt of her husband even though barred by statute, is an alienation, which is binding upon the reversioners. (Vide Mulla's Hindu Law, 8th Edition, p. 182 and Mayne's Hindu Law, 10th Edition, p. 782). The question in this case is whether the debt for the payment of which the mortgage-deed of 1934 was executed was a debt of the husband. On the facts it would appear that Jadunath along with Bhikhari had incurred a debt of Rs. 9,825-11-1½ in 1893 by mortgaging sixteen annas share in village Charera. The share of Jadunath in the property mortgaged was half and the extent of his liability was also presumably to the extent of half. On the death of Jadunath the liability for this debt descended upon his son, Ram Achraj, the husband of Musammât Parag Dei, and it was Ram Achraj's debt at the time of his death. The share of Jadunath, and after him of Ram Achraj in this debt amounting to Rs. 5,000 roughly was paid off by the mortgage of 1913 executed by Musammât Parag Dei and the sons of Bhikhari in respect of eight annas share only which belonged to Ram Achraj alone in favour of Bhagwan Das Pande. It is clear that thereafter the debt of Ram Achraj, created under the deed of 1893, ceased to exist and was replaced by the liability of Musammât Parag Dei under the mortgage of 1913.

The learned Counsel for the respondent has argued that although by the transaction of 1913 there was a change in the creditor, yet the original debt of 1893 continued to subsist. The argument is ingenious but without force.

The contention of the learned Counsel for the respondent really comes to this that no payment of the debt of an ancestor can be made unless it is made in cash because when the son or the widow pays off the debt by raising money on the security of the property inherited by him or her, then according to this argument there is no payment but only a change of the creditor. In our opinion in such a case there is not only a change of the creditor but a change of the debtor also which is more important for the consideration of the question whether the original debt has been extinguished or not. In our view the effect of the transaction of 1913 was that the debt of 1893 was paid off and ceased to exist. The debt of 1913 was a debt due from Musammât Parag Dei or the estate was inherited by her and hypothecated in lieu of that debt. The debt made payable by the deed of 1916, was, therefore, the debt not of Ram Achraj but of Musammât Parag Dei, and, therefore, the consideration of the mortgage of 1934 was the time barred debt of her own and not that of her husband. On these facts the view of the lower Court that the mortgage of 1934 was executed for the payment of time-barred debt of the executant's husband is wholly incorrect. It is, therefore, not binding upon the plaintiff.

Lastly, it was argued that on a proper interpretation of the wajib-ul-arzes (Exs. A-12 and A-4) the Court below should have held that the custom relied upon by the respondent was proved and that Musammât Parag Dei had an absolute interest in the estate of her husband. We have read the two wajib-ul-arzes. The words malikana qabiz rahegi and intiqal ka bhi haq akhthar rakhti hai used therein having regard to the context in which those words have been used, are, in our opinion, quite consistent with a Hindu widow's estate. Power of adoption outside the family is denied to a widow in this family and it is further provided that on the death of a childless widow the property goes to the nearest collaterals. In our opinion, these provisions indicate an unmistakable intention to keep the property within the family. The cases reported in Durga v. Lal Bahadur and others, 5 O. W. N., 992 (1) and Sant Bakhsh Singh and another v. Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh, 7 O. W. N., 1082 (2) are fully applicable and we overrule this contention on behalf of the respondent.

We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore that of the trial Court, with costs throughout.

S. Appeal allowed.

(1) 5 O W N 992; 112 Ind. Cas. 387; A I R 1928 Oudh 509.

(2) 7 O W N 1082; 129 Ind. Cas. 328; A I R 1931 Oudh 25; Ind. Rul. (1931) Oudh 104.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 214 of 1936

October 19, 1938

NIYOGI, J.

PANNALAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

SUMRANLAL—RESPONDENT

Adverse possession—Widow—Adverse possession against widow, whether affects reversioner's rights—Hindu Law—Widow—Remarriage—Effect on rights of widow to hold property.

The adverse possession, howsoever long held, cannot impair the right of a person who was not, during the continuance of that adverse possession, entitled to possession. The right of the reversioner is spes successionis and his reversionary estate falls into possession only on the death of the intermediate owner, namely, the widow. Consequently the adverse possession against the widow can hardly be recorded as hostile to the reversioners whose right was until the widow's death only an expectancy. [p. 111, col. 1.]

[Case-law discussed.]

Obiter.—Re-marriage according to the accepted view of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, C. P. results in the forfeiture of the widow's right to hold possession of the property that devolves on her from her husband or from his lineal heir.

S. C. A. from the appellate decree of the Court of the District Judge, Jubbulpore, dated March 16, 1936, in Civil Appeal No. 8-A of 1935, reversing the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Mandla, dated February 25, 1935, in Civil Suit No. 192 of 1933.

Rao Bahadur M. B Kinkhede, with Mr. V. R. Dhoke, for the Appellants.

Mr. J. R. Mudholker, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendant's appeal from a reversing judgment of the District Judge, Jubbulpore, delivered on March 16, 1936, in Civil Appeal No. 8-A of 1935.

The appellant and the respondent are related in the way that will appear from the undermentioned genealogy :

The respondent filed the suit out of which this appeal arises for possession of the property in suit in his capacity as reversioner to Chaitram who died as far back as 1884. The plaintiff dated the cause of action for the suit on the death of Musammatt Chukho, the widow of Chaitram which occurred on November 15, 1926. The question that arose in the suit was whether the defendant Baliram who was in possession of the property in suit continuously from 1884 to the exclusion of and adverse to Musammatt Chukho acquired such a prescriptive title in respect of the property as to extinguish the plaintiff's reversionary right.

I need only refer to the material facts to elucidate the issue of law that arises in the case. Rupram's widow Musammatt Premabai was living with Chaitram as his mistress and she bore him a son by name Baliram, who was the defendant in the suit but is now represented by his son, the appellant. Some time after Chaitram's death his widow Chukho left her husband's house and lived with one Sheoram of Mouza Barela as his mistress. She died as already stated above on November 15, 1926. When Chaitram died in 1884 the mutation proceedings were started in which the mother and step-mother of Chaitram by name respectively Musammatt Dulia and Musammatt Chukho and Chaitram's widow Musammatt Chukho and his illegitimate son Baliram figured in those proceedings. The mutation officer remarked that although Baliram was an illegitimate son, there was no difference made in point of legal rights between illegitimate and legitimate sons in the family of Chaitram and he, therefore, recorded the whole property in the name of Baliram with lambardari right and provided at the same time that 2 annas share in the property would be recorded in pattidari against the names of each of the three widows above named.

The suit was contested on several grounds out of which those that are material are two : (1) that Musammatt Chukho had left her husband's house after she became a widow and began to live openly with Sheoram of Barela as his mistress, and (2) the effect of adverse possession on the part of Baliram as against the widow Musammam Chukho on the reversionary right of the plaintiff Sumran.

On behalf of the appellant it is urged that it ought to have been held that Musammam Chukho had contracted re-marriage with Sheoram and that she was not his mistress as was found by the original Court. I do not see my way to enter into this question for the reason that this question which was one of pure fact was not agitated in the lower Appellate Court as it ought to have been done. It may be conceded that if Musammam Chukho had been re-married, then a question would arise whether the plaintiff Sumran would be entitled to claim possession on the date of the re-marriage, as re-marriage according to the accepted view of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, O. P. results in the forfeiture of the widow's right to hold possession of the property that devolves on her from her husband or from his lineal heir, but obviously the appellants are not entitled to raise this question of law unless they are in a position to displace the original Court's clear finding against them that Musammam Chukho was Sheoram's mistress. This point should have been canvassed in the lower Appellate Court. It is true that the appellants in this Court were respondents in the lower Appellate Court but even as they were entitled under O. XXI, r. 22, Civil Procedure Code, to support the trial Court's decree in their favour on any points which were decided against them. As it was open to them to take that opportunity in the lower Appellate Court and they failed to avail themselves of that opportunity, they cannot now ask the Court in second appeal to go into the evidence bearing on that issue. As however I have perused the pleadings as well as the evidence, I may briefly state that the respondent's pleadings are devoid of any averment to show that Musammam Chukho had re-married Sheoram. There is no express allegation made as to the re-marriage, nor is the date of re-marriage suggested in any place. There was no issue on the point and whatever evidence there is on the records tends to discount the story of re-marriage. The first contention therefore must be overruled.

The second contention no doubt involves an important question of law. Baliram was admittedly the illegitimate son of Chaitram. He was not entitled to possession yet the mutation order was made in his favour in 1884 and he continued to be in possession all along up to the date of the suit. His possession was admittedly adverse to Musammam Chukho who died on November 15, 1926. The question is whether that adverse possession would bar the reversioner's right. That has been answered in the negative by the lower Appellate Court. It is that finding which is being challenged here. Reliance is placed on Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni (1) for the proposition contended for. It is not necessary for me to deal, at any great length with this contention as their Lordships of the Privy Council themselves have explained the scope and the effect of the decision reported in that case in Jaggo Bai v. Utsava Lal (2). Reading the decision in Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni (1) correctly, I do not understand it as laying down the rule, as contended that the principle of the Shivaganga case [Katama Natchiar v. Raja of Sivaganga] (3) should be extended to the case of adverse possession against the widow. On the particular facts of that case, their Lordships no doubt had to deal with both the questions, namely, the effect of a decree obtained against a widow and the adverse possession against her. It was in relation to the first point that their Lordships of the Privy Council referred to Shivaganga case (3) and other cases, but they treated the question of limitation on quite a different footing unconnected with any considerations of Shivaganga case (3) as is clear from the discussion of that point at p. 904*. Their Lordships took the view that they did for the reason that under Art. 129 of the second schedule of Act IX of 1871, it was incumbent on the reversioner to sue not only for a declaration as to the invalidity of an adoption but also for possession. That article ran in these terms: for a suit to set aside an adoption the period of limitation is 12 years from the date of the adoption or (at the option of the plaintiff) the date of the death of the adoptive father. The

(1) 48 M 883; 92 Ind. Cas. 85; A I R 1925 P C 249; L R 6 A (P O) 189; 49 M L J 769; 42 O L J 563; 30 C W N 313; 28 Bom. L R 173; (1926) M W N 11; 52 I A 322 (P O).

(2) 51 A 439; 117 Ind. Cas. 498; A I R 1929 P C 166; 56 I A 267; 33 C W N 809; 10 P L T 527; (1929) A L J 716; 30 L W 60; 31 Bom. L R 891; 57 M L J 160; 50 O L J 52; 6 O W N 589; (1929) M W N 762; Ind. Rul. (1929) P C 266 (P O).

(3) 9 M I A 539; 2 W R 31; 2 Sar. 25 (P O).

*Page of 48 M—[Ed.]

question naturally arose whether that Article applied also to a suit for possession, and in Jagadamba Chaudhrani v. Dakshina Mohan Roy Chaudhury (4) their Lordships of the Privy Council held that if the plaintiff could not succeed without displacing an apparent adoption by virtue of which the opposite party was in possession, a suit by the plaintiff for possession fell under that Article. That case was followed in Mohesh Narain Munshi v. Taruck Nath Moitra (5) and the view taken in Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni (1) was quite in accordance with the current of the old rulings bearing on the effect of Art. 129 of the Act IX of 1871. It was because the reversioners in that suit had failed to file a suit not only to set aside the adoption which took place in 1862 but also to claim possession for more than 12 years before the Act of 1877 was passed, that it was held that Art. 141 of the Act of 1877 had no application as the adverse possession against the widow as well as the reversioners was completed before the new Act came into force. It is therefore clear that the considerations which were applied in Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni (1) cannot be extended to a suit which is filed in terms of Art. 141 of the Act of 1877. That this is so is made clear by their Lordships themselves, in certain cases which arose after the Act of 1877, where their Lordships held that Art. 118 of the Act of 1877, which now supersedes Art. 129 of the Act of 1871, refers only to a suit for bare declaration and not to suit for possession of property, even though it may be necessary in such suits to decide that a given adoption is invalid: see Tribhuvan v. Rameswar (6), Muhammad Umar Khan v. Muhammad Niaz-ud-din Khan (7) and Kalyandappa v. Chanbasappa (8).

In Aurabinda Nath Tagore v. Manorama

(4) 13 O 308; 13 I A 84; 4 Sar. 715; 10 Ind. Jur. 307 (P O).

(5) 20 O 487; 20 I A 30; 6 Sar. 261; 17 Ind. Jur. 164 (P O).

(6) 28 A 727; 33 I A 156; 9 O O 377; 10 O W N 1065; 8 Bom. L R 722; 16 M L J 440; 3 A L J 695; 4 O L J 403; 1 M L T 265 (P O).

(7) 39 O 418; 13 Ind. Cas. 344; 39 I A 19; 15 O L J 172; 16 O W N 468; 126 P R 1912; 6 P W R 1913; (1912) M W N 77; 11 M L T 76; 9 A L J 137; 12 P L R 1912; 22 M L J 240; 14 Bom. L R 182; 16 O W N 458 (P O).

(8) 48 B 411; 79 Ind. Cas. 971; A I R 1924 P O 137; 51 I A 220; 22 A L J 508; 46 M L J 598; 28 O W N 666; 26 Bom. L R 509; (1924) M W N 414; 34 M L T 111; 20 L W 109; 11 O L J 181; 10 O & A L R 1114; L R 5 A (P O) 97; 1 O W N 553 (P O).

Debi (9) the observations made in Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni (1) were obviously misunderstood and it was thought that the question of adverse possession against the widow fell to be decided by the same considerations as would apply to a case of a decree fairly and honestly obtained against widow, namely by the principle of the Shivaganga case (3). That was a decision by a Single Judge of that Court and the erroneous view taken in that case was pointed out in Abinashchandra Ghosh v. Narhari Methar (10) but the authority which clinches the issue is the decision reported in Jaggo Bai v. Utsava Lal (2) where their Lordships of the Privy Council explained the scope of the decision in Hari Nath v. Mothurmohan (11) and Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni (1) and pointed out that those cases illustrate the application of the rule in Shivaganga case (3) where a decree found against a widow had been obtained against her in her lifetime and that they do not lay down that adverse possession against a widow per se would extinguish the reversioner's right. Their Lordships referred to the case Runchordas v. Parvatibai (12). That was a case in which the trustees had been in adverse possession against the widow and it was held that their adverse possession was not a bar to the reversioners' right to sue in terms of Art. 141 of the Act of 1877. The case in Jaggo Bai v. Utsava Lal (2) was not a case in which a decree had been obtained against a widow but a case of mere adverse possession against the widow and their Lordships pointed out that the case was governed by the dictum that was laid down in Runchordas v. Parvatibai (12). That there is a well-defined difference between a case of a decree obtained against a widow and a case of adverse possession against a widow is made amply clear in the observations made by their Lordships at p. 452* of Jaggo Bai v. Utsava Lal (2). They are as follows:

"It is therefore established by this decision that where a decree founded upon the law of limitation is obtained against the widow in her lifetime, the reversionary heir is barred and does not get the benefit of Art. 141. The question raised by the

(9) 55 O 303; 112 Ind. Cas. 496, A I R 1928 Cal 670, 32 O W N 913.

(10) 57 O 265; 123 Ind. Cas. 444; A I R 1930 Cal. 163; 50 O L J 260; Ind. Rul. (1930) Cal. 332.

(11) 21 O 8; 20 I A 183; 6 Sar. 334; 17 Ind. Jur. 481 (P O).

(12) 23 B 725; 26 I A 71; 1 Bom. L R 607; 7 Sar. 543 (P O).

present case is whether the same result follows where there has been no decree, though at the death of the widow a stranger had been in adverse possession for 12 years or more."

Their Lordships pronounced their opinion in these terms:

"In their Lordships' judgment where there has been no decree against the widow or other act in the law in the widow's lifetime depriving the reversionary heir of the right to possession on the widow's death, the heir is entitled, after the widow's death, to rely upon Art. 141 for the purpose of the determination of the question whether the title is barred by lapse of time. To hold otherwise would, in their Lordships' opinion, in effect, compel the Court in determining a question within the scope of the Article to ignore the express words of the Article."

It appears to me that this case conclusively disposed of the question now raised that the appellants' adverse possession against Musammat Chukho operated to extinguish the reversionary right of the respondent. I may in passing refer to some cases decided by the High Courts in India which sustain the view that I have taken: see Abinash-chandra Ghosh v. Narhari Methar (10), Hemendranath Roy v. Jnanendraprasanna Bhaduri (13), Bai Manchha v. Tribhawan (14).

The general principle, it appears to me, is indisputable that the adverse possession, howsoever long held, cannot impair the right of a person who was not, during the continuance of that adverse possession, entitled to possession. The right of the reversioner as is well-known is spes successionis and his reversionary estate falls into possession only on the death of the intermediate owner, namely, the widow. Consequently the adverse possession against the widow can hardly be recorded as hostile to the reversioners whose right was until the widow's death only an expectancy.

For the foregoing reasons, I agree with the lower Appellate Court and dismiss this appeal with costs. Counsel's fees Rs. 50.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(13) 63 O 155; 159 Ind. Cas. 1101; A I R 1935 Cal. 702; 40 O W N 115; 62 O L J 49; 8 R O 368.

(14) A I R 1932 Bom. 434; 139 Ind. Cas. 28; 34 Bom. L R 385; Ind. Rul. (1932) Bom. 459.

ODDH CHIEF COURT

Miscellaneous Appeal No. 54 of 1937

October 18, 1939

HAMILTON AND RADHA KRISHNA, JJ.

RAM SARUP SINGH—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

SARJU AHIR—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 108 (10), 4 (11)—Ejectment under s. 108 (10), whether means ejectment by whole body of co-sharer landlords to whom rent is payable by landlord—Suit by tenant against one of co-sharer landlords for possession of plot—Maintainability in Civil Court.

The ejectment of a tenant contemplated by s. 108 (10), Oudh Rent Act, means the ejectment by the landlord, i. e., by the whole body of co-sharers where the tenant holds his tenancy from all of them. The landlord of the tenant is the person or persons to whom the rent is payable by the tenant. Hence a suit by a tenant in Civil Court against one of the co-sharer landlords for possession of a plot does not fall within exceptions to the general jurisdiction of the Civil Courts contained in s. 108 (10) and is maintainable. Ukheda v. Achhu Singh (1), relied on.

Misc. A. against the order of the Civil Judge, Sultanpur, dated May 6, 1937.

Mr. Hyder Husain, for the Appellant.

Mr. Rameshwar Dayal, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendant's appeal against an order of remand passed by the learned Civil Judge of Sultanpur, and the sole question involved in it is whether the suit was maintainable in the Civil Courts or should have been filed under the provisions of s. 108 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act in the Rent Court.

The following facts are now admitted between the parties.

The plaintiff is a tenant of khata khewat No. 1 of Patti Nageshwar Singh and khata khewat No. 2 of Patti Mahesh Singh in village Tawakkalpur. The rent of the lands in dispute was realised by Baldeo Pande and the defendant-appellant among others in the past.

The plaintiff filed the present suit for possession against the defendant on the allegation that he was dispossessed of the plots in dispute partly in 1341 Fasli and partly in 1342 Fasli by the defendant.

The defence of the defendant was that the plaintiff had relinquished the land and further that the suit was not maintainable in the Civil Court.

A preliminary issue on the question, whether the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court or not, was framed and the learned Munsif held against the plaintiff and dismissed the suit. It should be noted that on the finding that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit, the proper course for the trial Court was to return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court.

In appeal from the decree of dismissal by the trial Court the lower Appellate Court disagreed with the view of the trial Court and held that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court. The appeal was allowed and the suit was remanded for a fresh trial.

The defendant has now come up in appeal against the order of remand passed by the lower Appellate Court. The question is whether the suit is maintainable in the Civil Court or not. The opening words of s. 108 of the Oudh Rent Act, are as follows:

"Except in the way of appeal as hereinafter provided, Courts other than Courts of Revenue shall not take cognizance of the following descriptions of suits, and those suits shall be heard and determined in Courts of Revenue in the manner provided in this Act, and not otherwise:—"

If the suit of the plaintiff does not fall within any of the descriptions of suits given in s. 108, then it is clear that the Civil Court will have jurisdiction to try the present suit. On behalf of the defendant it was contended that the suit fell within cl. (10) of the section, which runs as follows:

"(10) for the recovery of the occupancy of any land which has been treated by a landlord as abandoned or from which an under-proprietor or tenant has been illegally ejected by the landlord or for possession by a person in whose favour an ex-proprietary tenancy arises under s. 7-A."

In this case there is no dispute that the status of the plaintiff is that of a tenant but the question is whether the word "landlord" used in this clause would cover the defendant who is not the sole landlord of the plaintiff but is one of the persons to whom the plaintiff is liable to pay rent. The word "landlord" is defined in s. 3, cl. (11) of the Oudh Rent Act and means any person to whom an under-proprietor or a tenant is liable to pay rent. The lower Appellate Court has taken the view that where the tenant has wrongfully been dispossessed by one of the proprietors only, then it cannot be said that the dispossession has been caused by the landlord inasmuch as the tenant is not liable to pay rent to him alone but to the entire body of proprietors.

The learned Counsel for the appellant has argued that the word "landlord" as defined in the Oudh Rent Act is applicable to the entire body of proprietors to whom the rent is payable by the tenant as well as to each of those proprietors. It is further argued that the decisions of the Allahabad High Court, which were given under the Agra Tenancy Act of 1901, are not applicable to a case under the Oudh Rent Act.

In our opinion the view taken by the lower Appellate Court is correct and the appeal has no force. If we were to accept the contention of the appellant then certain anomalies of a serious nature will arise. Section 108, cl. (4) provides for "suits by a landlord for the ejectment of a tenant". If the word "landlord" is applicable to each proprietor of a co-parcenary body in a village, then a tenant liable to pay rent to that entire body would be liable to ejectment at the suit of such proprietor only in spite of the fact that the other proprietors may be averse to the ejectment of the tenant. On the definition of the word "landlord" as given in s. 4 (11) of the Oudh Rent Act we are of opinion that the ejectment of a tenant contemplated by s. 108 (10) means the ejectment by the landlord, i. e. by the whole body of co-sharers where the plaintiff tenant holds his tenancy from all of them. The landlord of the tenant is the person or persons to whom the rent is payable by the tenant. We have closely read the language of s. 79 of the Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901). The word used in that section is "landholder" which is defined in s. 4, cl. (5) of that Act and means the person to whom rent is, or but for a contract, express or implied, would be payable. The distinction between this definition and the definition of a landlord in the Oudh Rent Act is merely in words but not in substance, and we think that the Court below was justified in relying upon the decisions of the Allahabad High Court given on the identical question arising under s. 79 of the Agra Tenancy Act, e. g. Chheda v. Achhu Singh, I. L. R. 46, All. 690 (1). In our opinion s. 108 of the Oudh Rent Act provides exceptions to the general jurisdiction of the Civil Courts and this case does not fall within the exception contained in s. 108 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act.

We hold that the view of law taken by the lower Appellate Court is correct.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

B.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 46 A 690; 84 Ind. Cas. 117; 22 A L J 570; AIR 1924 All. 572; L R 5 A 265 Rev.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Special Bench

Letters Patent Appeal No. 48 of 1937

September 18, 1939

THOM, C. J., ALLSOP AND GANGA NATH, JJ.
SHIBBA MAL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

GULAB RAI—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT Partnership Act (IX of 1932), s. 69—Suit for dissolution by partner of unregistered firm—His right to decree for accounts, if affected—Accounting contemplated by s. 69.

If a partner of an unregistered firm sues for the dissolution of partnership, he is entitled to the ordinary decree which the Court passes in such a suit. Provision is made for this decree in O. XX, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code. The right of a partner therefore of an unregistered firm to a decree for accounts in a suit for dissolution remains unaffected by the provisions of s. 69, Partnership Act, in view of the proviso contained in sub-s. (3) thereof. A partner of unregistered firm has a right in a suit for dissolution of partnership to include a claim for accounts also and he need not bring two separate suits for them. Magan Behari Lal v. Ram Pratap Singh (1), Overruled.

The only accounting contemplated by s. 69 is the accounting which would be directed in a suit by a plaintiff who is the partner of a registered firm.

L. P. A. from the judgment of Iqbal Ahmad, J., reported in 171 Ind. Cas. 545.

Messrs. B. Malik and S. N. Misra, for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. P. Pandey and J. C. Mukerji, for the Respondent.

Thom, C. J.—This is a defendants' appeal arising out of a suit for dissolution of partnership and rendition of accounts. The appeal is against the order of a learned Single Judge of this Court who disposed of the case in second appeal. In August, 1931, the plaintiff, defendant No. 1, and one Lachman Das entered into a partnership. In November of the same year, Lachman Das left the partnership and one Nanak Ohand came in; in June 1932, Nanak Ohand left the partnership and defendant No. 2 became a partner. Differences arose between defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and the plaintiff, and in consequence the plaintiff filed the present suit for dissolution of the partnership and for accounts. The main defence to the suit was that inasmuch as the partnership was not registered in accordance with law, the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for accounts in view of the provisions of s. 69, Partnership Act. The suit was decreed by the learned Munsif. In appeal, however, it was dismissed in the lower Appellate Court. The learned Single Judge who heard the second appeal has restored the decree of the trial Court.

Before us in appeal it was maintained for the defendants that the suit as framed was incompetent inasmuch as in view of the provisions of s. 69 (1), Partnership Act, no suit for accounts by one partner against the other lies where the partnership was not dissolved. Section 69 imposes certain disabilities upon unregistered firms. An unregistered firm cannot in view of the provisions of s. 69 sue a third party on a contract. The section, however, in a proviso makes provision for suits for dissolution of a partnership and for accounts. The proviso is in the following terms:

"(3) The provisions of sub-ss. (1) and (2) shall apply also to a claim of set-off or other proceedings to enforce a right arising from a contract, but shall not affect

(a) the enforcement of any right to sue for the dissolution of a firm or for accounts of a dissolved firm, or any right or power to realize the property of a dissolved firm."

It would appear that the Legislature intended that no disability should be attached to any partner in regard to winding up and accounting as between the partners on dissolution. For the appellants it was maintained, however, that, so far as accounting was concerned, a suit would lie only where the partnership had already been dissolved. If the partnership were not dissolved, it was contended, a suit for dissolution which included a relief for accounts was incompetent at least so far as the claim for accounts was concerned. In support of this proposition, reliance was placed upon the decision in Magan Behari Lal v. Ram Pratap Singh (1). A Bench of this Court held in that case that a decree for rendition of accounts could not be granted where the partnership was unregistered because the decree to be granted under O. XX, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code, fell to be modified in view of the provisions of s. 69, Partnership Act. We are unable to agree. In our judgment, the Legislature intended to leave the right of a partner to sue for dissolution and accounts unaffected by the disabilities created by the provisions of s. 69, Partnership Act. It is not disputed that a partner of an unregistered firm in virtue of the above proviso to s. 69 may sue for dissolution of partnership. The proviso in so many words enjoins that the right to sue for dissolution shall remain unaffected. If a partner therefore of an unregistered firm sues for the dissolution of partnership he is entitled to the ordinary decree which the Court passes in such a suit. Provision is made for this decree in O. XX, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code. Rule 15 is in the following terms, viz :

(1) (1939) A L J 405; 181 Ind. Cas. 160; A I R 1939 All. 535; 1 L R (1939) All. 563; 12 R A 183.

"Where a suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, or the taking of partnership accounts, the Court, before passing a final decree, may pass a preliminary decree declaring the proportionate shares of the parties, fixing the pay on which the partnership shall stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken and other acts to be done, as it thinks fit."

We observe from the terms of this provision that it is unnecessary for a partner who seeks dissolution to include a prayer for accounts in his plaint. If the Court grants a preliminary decree for dissolution of partnership then it may in view of the provisions of O. XX, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code, proceed to order the taking of accounts. The right of a partner therefore of an unregistered firm to a decree for accounts in a suit for dissolution remains unaffected by the provisions of s. 69, Partnership Act, in view of the proviso contained in sub-s. (3) thereof. It was maintained for the appellants that the Legislature intended to impose a restriction on partners of unregistered firms who sue for dissolution and that the restriction was the denial of the right to include a claim for accounts in a suit for dissolution. It was admitted that under the terms of the section a partner could file a suit for dissolution and a second suit for accounts. The disability therefore which, it was contended for the appellants, the Legislature intended to place upon the partners of an unregistered firm in regard to their rights to decree for dissolution and rendition of accounts was that instead of bringing one suit they should bring two. We have no hesitation in rejecting this contention. We are satisfied that the Legislature intended nothing so unreasonable. Such a provision would lead simply to a multiplicity of suits and would not operate any real restriction or disability.

In our judgment the intention of the Legislature is plain. It intended that the rights of the partners of an unregistered firm in regard to dissolution of the partnership and accounting were to remain unaffected by the provisions of sub ss. (1) and (2) of s. 69, Partnership Act. It would appear from the judgment of the Bench in the case already referred to, viz. Magan Behari Lal v. Ram Partap Singh (1) that the learned Judges who constituted this Bench took the view that in the case of an unregistered firm the partner who was seeking dissolution and accounts was entitled to a more limited form of accounting than was a partner of a registered firm who had sued for dissolution and accounts under the provisions of O. XX, r. 15, Civil Procedure Code. We are unable to agree with this view which, in our judgment, finds no support in s. 69 or in any other section of the Partnership Act. The only accounting contemplated by s. 69 is the accounting which would be directed in a suit by a plaintiff who is the partner of a registered firm. To that the plaintiff in the present suit is entitled. In the result, the appeal is dismissed with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH CHIEF COURT

Miscellaneous Appeal No. 24 of 1937

October 11, 1939

THOMAS, C. J. AND RADHA KRISHNA, J.

KISHEN GOPAL—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL LATIF KHAN AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS

Mortgage—Redemption—Difference between redemption by payment in cash and by transfer of mortgaged property—Several co-mortgagors—Entire equity of redemption transferred by some of mortgagors to mortgagee—Effect of—Suit by other mortgagors is one for redemption and governed by Art. 148, Limitation Act (IX of 1908).

There is a material difference between a case where cash is paid in satisfaction of the mortgage debt and where property is transferred in satisfaction thereof. In cases where cash is paid, the moment the money is appropriated, redemption takes place in fact, but where property is transferred, the redemption depends upon whether the title in the property sold in law has passed to the mortgagee or not. Where the satisfaction of a mortgage debt is brought about by transfer of property mortgaged, the mortgage debt is extinguished to the extent to which the transfer is valid. [p. 117, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where there are several co-mortgagors and the entire equity of redemption in the mortgage is transferred to the mortgagee by some only of the co-mortgagors, the possession of the mortgagee as regards other co-mortgagors remains only that of a mortgagee. It therefore follows that a suit by such co-mortgagors would be a suit for redemption and not a suit for possession on payment and would be governed by Art. 148 of the Limitation Act. [p. 119, cols. 1 & 2.]

[Case-law referred to].

The mortgagee who comes into possession of land as a mortgagee is not in a position to deny the rights of any of his mortgagors to redeem the mortgage so long as the equity of redemption or any part of it subsists. [p. 119, col. 2.]

Misc. O. A. against an order of the District Judge of Lucknow, dated March 9, 1937.

Messrs. P. L. Banerji, H. Husain and Naziruddin, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. Rauf, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2.

Messrs. M. Wasim, Ali Hasan and A. P. Nigam, for Respondent No. 4.

Judgment—This is an appeal against an order of remand passed by the learned District Judge of Lucknow. In order to appreciate the facts of the case leading up to the present appeal, it is necessary to set forth the following pedigree :

DR. ABDUR RAHMAN KHAN

Dr. Abdur Rahman Khan, mentioned in the above pedigree, was the owner of the property in dispute and two other houses which are not in dispute, in all consisting of three houses, and two shops situated at Aminabad in the city of Lucknow. He mortgaged with possession on September 8, 1884, the entire property belonging to himself to one Shaikh Pir Bakhsh for Rs. 2,500. The names of Abdul Ghafoor Khan, Abdul Majeed Khan, Abdul Hameed Khan and Abdul Hasan Khan, the sons of Dr. Abdur Rahman Khan, under his guardianship, were also added as the executants of the deed. As regards interest, it was agreed that the mortgagor should execute a sarkhat in favour of the mortgagee for Rs. 25 per mensem by way of rent and should continue to pay that rent every month. The mortgagor failed to pay the rent stipulated in the sarkhat, whereupon the mortgagee with the consent of the mortgagee sold to one Mangal two houses out of the property mortgaged and the money received as consideration was paid to the mortgagee in respect of the rent that had accumulated and was due to him.

Subsequently on April 13, 1893, the mortgagee assigned his mortgage rights in the property in suit for a sum of Rs. 1,700 in favour of Ram Karan, the predecessor-in-interest of the defendant-appellant.

On December 7, 1894, Abdul Majeed Khan, Abdul Hameed Khan, Sughra Begum on her own behalf and as guardian of Musahib Khanam, Abdul Latif Khan and Masooma Khanam sold the entire property under mortgage to the mortgagee for an ostensible consideration of Rs. 2,850 (vide Ex. A-3). Rupees 350 out of the consideration were paid in cash and the rest, i. e. Rs. 2,500 are recited to have been left with the mortgagee as due on the mortgage. Later by a deed of August 12, 1895, (Ex. A-4) Abdul Hasan and his mother Musammat Mariyam in lieu of a sum of Rs. 150 ratified the sale deed of 1894 (Ex. A-3).

The plaintiffs, who are some of the representatives of the original mortgagor, Dr. Abdur Rahman Khan, have brought the present suit for recovery of the property in suit by redemption of the mortgage dated September 8, 1884.

It may be noted here that the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 are Abdul Latif Khan and Musammat Masooma Khanam themselves. Plaintiff No. 3 is the representative of Musammat Musahib Khanam; plaintiffs Nos. 4 to 11 are the representatives of Musammat Khudaija Begam and Musammat Qadri Khanam; plaintiffs Nos. 12 to 14 are the representatives of Abdul Majeed Khan and defendants Nos. 2 to 10 are the representatives of Abdul Hameed Khan. Thus all the representatives of the original mortgagor are parties in the suit.

The defendant contested the suit on the ground among others that by the sale deeds dated December 7, 1894, and August 12, 1895 (Exs. A-3 and A-4) he purchased the equity of redemption from all the persons interested as mortgagors and had become the absolute owner of the property mortgaged.

The trial Court framed the following Issues from which other defences will also appear.

1. Is the pedigree given in the plaint so far as it is denied genuine?

2. (a) Was the equity of redemption sold to the defendant No. 1 as alleged in para. 16 of the written statement?

(b) Is the sale binding on plaintiffs as alleged in para. 17 of the written statement?

Was Musahib Khanam a minor at the date of the sale?

3. Is the defendant No. 1 owner of the property in suit by adverse possession?

4. Is the suit barred by limitation?

5. Have the plaintiffs a right of accounting under the deed in suit?

6. Is the shape F. E. X. Y. Z also included in the mortgage in suit?

7. To what relief are the plaintiffs entitled?

On Issues Nos. 1 and 2 the trial Court held that the pedigree was correct and that Musammat Khudaija Begum and Musammat Qadri Khanam, the two daughters of Dr. Abdur Rahman Khan, who had survived him, were no parties to the deed of 1894 and that Musammat Masooma Khanam and Abdul Latif Khan were minors. Musammat Sughra Begam purported to sell the property as their guardian and, therefore, the sale in view of the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Imam Bandi v. Mutsaddi (I. L. R. 45 Cal. 878) (1), was void. As to Musahib Khanam the trial Court held that she was a major and in existence but as she did not join the sale deed it was ineffective against her interest.

On Issues Nos. 3 and 4 it held that the defendant No. 1 and his predecessor had been holding the property adversely for about 40 years and hence the suit was barred by limitation.

On Issue No. 5 it was held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any accounting.

Issue No. 6 was decided in favour of the defendants.

As a result of the findings on Issues Nos. 3 and 4, the trial Court dismissed the suit.

In appeal the lower Appellate Court agreed with the trial Court in holding that the sale deed of 1894 was not effective against the shares of Musammat Khudaija Begam, Qadri Khanam, Masooma Khanam, Abdul Latif Khan and Musahib Khanam, but on the question of limitation it held that the suit was governed by Art. 148 of the Indian Limitation Act and was not barred. The appeal was allowed and the case was sent back to the trial Court for decision after determining the shares of the plaintiffs.

The defendant No. 1 has come up in appeal to this Court against the said order and the sole point argued is that on the facts of the case the Article applicable to the suit is Art. 144 and Art. 148 of the Indian Limitation Act. The contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant is that the effect of the sale deed of 1894 was the redemption of the mortgage of 1884 in its entirety even though the sale of the property to the mortgagee may not be effective to its entire extent, that after the sale of 1894 there was a change in the nature of the possession of the mortgage and his possession thereafter was adverse and the Article applicable to the present suit was Art. 144. On the other hand, the case of the respondents is that the effect of the sale of 1894 was a transfer of a portion of the equity of redemption to the mortgagee and the mortgage subsisted in respect of the shares of Abdul Latif Khan and Masooma Khanam, plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and Musammat

(1) 45 O 878; 47 Ind. Cas. 513; 35 M L J 422; 16 A L J 800; 24 M L T 330; 28 O L J 403; 23 O W N 50; 5 P L W 278; 20 Bom. L R 1022, (1919) M W N 91; 9 L W 518; 45 I A 73; A I R 1918 P O 11 (P O).

Khundaija Begum and Musammât Qadri Khanam and Musammât Musahib Khanam, the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 11 and no redemption of the mortgage as a whole took place.

On the nature and scope of the transaction of sale of 1894 (Ex. A-3) it was argued by the Counsel for the appellant that on a proper interpretation of it the transaction was not a sale of mere equity of redemption and that it consisted of two separate transactions, one the redemption of mortgage on payment of Rs. 2,500 and the other the sale of the mortgaged property. We may note at once that this is a new case and was not put forward on behalf of the defendant in his written statement (vide paras. 16 and 17 of the written statement). A perusal of these paragraphs will show that it was not the case of the defendant that any redemption of the mortgage had taken place in fact or was contemplated as a transaction precedent to the sale. The case put forward was that as the ownership in property also vested in the mortgagee by virtue of the sale of 1894 he became the absolute owner of it. It would be too much to allow the appellant to set up a new case now outside the pleadings.

The learned District Judge observed in his judgment as regards this argument as follows:

"The theory of redemption in the case before me is only a fiction. Full ownership of the property was by the mortgage divided into two parts: the equity of redemption and the rights of the mortgagee. What the vendors did in fact (it makes no difference what were the terms of the sale deed since these terms did not come to the knowledge of the appellants) was to transfer the whole equity of redemption to the mortgagee though it did not belong to them."

We agree with his view that what the vendors did in fact was to transfer the equity of redemption. We have ourselves read the deed very carefully. In our view the ostensible consideration of the deed was fixed at Rs. 2,850 only for the purposes of fixing the value of the equity of redemption and Rs. 2,500 shown as left with the mortgagee was not intended to bring about a redemption in fact. This sum of Rs. 2,500 was not paid in cash by the vendors. There is a material difference between a case where cash is paid in satisfaction of the mortgage debt and where property is transferred in satisfaction thereof. In cases where cash is paid, the moment the money is appropriated, redemption takes place in fact, but where property is transferred, the redemption depends upon whether the title in the property sold in law has passed to the mortgagee or not. In our view where the satisfaction of a mortgage debt is brought about by transfer of property mortgaged, the mortgage debt is extinguished to the extent to which the transfer is valid. In the present case the transfer was not valid to the extent of the share of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 11 and to the extent of their shares the mortgage was not satisfied.

On the main question of law, several cases were cited by the learned Counsel for the appellant and we proceed to consider them.

Among the cases cited on behalf of the appellant in support of his contention, there were cases where the transfer of the equity of redemption by the sole mortgagor, or where there were more mortgagors than one by all the mortgagors, was invalid in law and inoperative. In such cases although the transfer of the equity of redemption failed, yet it was held that there was a change in the character of the possession of the mortgagee who after that held under a claim of full proprietorship. These cases may be dismissed from consideration as their decision may be justified on the ground that it is open to the mortgagee and all the mortgagors concerned acting together, to agree among themselves as to what the character of possession held by the mortgagee would be in future.

The cases Karnam Kandasami Pillai v. Chinnabba alias Subbaroya Pillai (L. L. R. 44 Madras, 253) (2), Mahendra Bahadur Singh v. Chandrapal Singh (24 O. C. 155) (3) and Sheo Nath and another v. Babu Tulsipat Ram (A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 385), (4), cited by the appellant's Counsel belong to this category and need not be considered. In the present case the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 or the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 11 were no parties to the sale and it is admitted that their interests did not pass by it. There is no evidence to indicate that the plaintiffs or their predecessors-in-interest ever exhibited any acquiescence on their part amounting to a release of their interest in the equity of redemption or any consent, express or implied, to the change in the mortgagee's possession from a mere mortgagee to a full owner.

(2) 44 M 253; 62 Ind. Cas. 603; 40 M L J 105; (1921) M W N 1; 29 M L T 187; 13 L W 423.

(3) 24 O C 155; 63 Ind. Cas. 284; 8 O L J 622.

(4) A I R 1925 Oudh 385; 87 Ind. Cas. 188; 12 O L J 139.

In Makhdam Khan v. Musammam Jadi and others (9 Oudh Cases 91) (5), it was held that when one of several co-mortgagors redeems the entire property, it cannot be said that he has the same rights and stands exactly in the same position as the mortgagee with regard to the share of his co-mortgagors. The debt in the case of such a payment is entirely discharged and the mortgage is redeemed; and the redeeming co-mortgagor has no right in the shares of his co-mortgagors other than that of a charge on those shares for the money paid for redemption and the proper costs incurred in so redeeming. This view is no longer law in view of s. 92 of the Transfer of Property Act as amended in 1929. This section is new and was inserted by the Amending Act XX of 1929. The effect of this section read with s. 91 is that although a co-mortgagor alone has a right to redeem the entire mortgage, yet on redemption he comes to occupy the position of a mortgagee as regards the share of the non-redeeming co-mortgagor.

So far as this Court is concerned, it has been finally held that the present s. 92 of the Transfer of Property Act has retrospective effect and that the redeeming co-mortgagor stands in the position of a mortgagee to the non-redeeming mortgagor qua his share and has as regards redemption foreclosure or sale of such property, the same rights as the mortgagee had against the mortgagors.

Great reliance was placed on two cases particularly, i. e. Mata Din v. Sheikh Ahmad Ali, L. R. 39 I. A., p. 49 at 55 = 15 O. C. 49 (6) and Janki Shah and others v. S. Mohammad Abbas and others, (25 O. C. 245) (7). We shall consider these cases at some length.

Mata Din v. Sheikh Ahmad Ali, L. R. 39 I. A. p. 49 (6).

The facts of this case were that a mortgage deed with possession of the property in dispute was executed in 1885. In this mortgage deed the important thing to note is that there was a condition by which redemption was not allowed within ten years. Two years after, the mortgagor died leaving as his heirs four grandsons, one of whom was a minor and three majors. The three major grandsons acting for themselves and as guardian of their minor brother sold the mortgaged property to the mortgagee in 1889. A suit was instituted by the fourth grandson, who was minor at the time of the sale deed, for redemption in 1905 in disregard of the sale deed. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the right of redemption did not accrue till 1885, i. e. ten years calculated from 1885, and the suit was well within limitation. Their Lordships observed that the possession of the mortgagee had not become adverse to the plaintiff. It would be observed that on the view taken by their Lordships no question of the application of Art. 144, as distinguished from Art. 148, arose. The point arising in the present case did not arise directly before their Lordships of the Privy Council and they did not hold that possession of the mortgagee in the circumstances of the case had become adverse from the date of the sale. Their Lordships probably were merely dealing with the argument raised on behalf of the plaintiff in that case that at the most the possession of the mortgagee could become adverse after the expiry of the period fixed for redemption and not earlier.

Janki Shah and others v. S. Mohammad Abbas and others, 25 Oudh Cases 245 (7).

The facts of this case were that two brothers, Mohammad Abbas and Mohammad Husain, mortgaged certain property by way of conditional sale to one Ghasite in 1880. In 1882 Mohammad Husain alone sold the entire property to Ghasite, the mortgagee, claiming that he alone was the owner of the property. In 1895 the heirs of Ghasite mortgagee, other than his widow, sold a 14 annas 3 pie share in the property mortgaged to Samsam Ali with a declaration that they were the full owners of the share of the property transferred by the deed. The plaintiff Mohammad Abbas, and his transferee brought a suit in 1917 to redeem half the mortgaged property and the main question raised in defence was that the suit was barred by the provisions of Art. 134 of the Indian Limitation Act because it was brought more than 12 years after 1895 when Ghasite's heirs transferred the property to Samsam Ali as full owners. In second appeal arising out of that case the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh set aside the decrees passed by the two lower Courts and remanded the case for a decision whether Samsam Ali had purchased in good faith without notice of the mortgage of 1880. This was done apparently on the finding that Art. 134 applied to the case. After remand the Court of first instance held in favour of the defendants and dismissed the suit. On appeal the first Appellate Court held that Samsam Ali had constructive notice of the mortgage and if he had acted with proper care and caution, he would have discovered that Ghasite was only a mortgagee of half the property and not full owner. The plaintiff's suit for redemption was decreed.

(5) 9 O C 91.

(6) 39 I A 49 at p 55; 13 Ind. Cas. 976; 15 O C 49; 16 O W N 338; 11 M L T 145; (1912) M W N 183; 9 A L J 215; 15 C L J 270; 14 Bom. L R 192; 34 A 213; 23 M L J 6 (P. O.).

(7) 25 O C 245; 70 Ind. Cas. 983; A I R 1923 Oudh 50.

In second appeal, the late Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh in view of the previous order of remand held that it was not open to the appellants to raise again the question of the interpretation of Art. 134 which was decided against them by that order. On this view the appeal was liable to be dismissed but the learned Judicial Commissioners went on further to consider the alternative case that Art. 144 barred the suit inasmuch to Ghasite, the original mortgagee, held the property adversely from the year 1882, that is the sale in his favour by one of the two mortgagors. They held that from the time of that sale deed Ghasite was holding adversely to Mohammad Abbas, the plaintiff on the ground that by virtue of that sale deed the mortgage had become extinct. A perusal of this judgment shows that the alternative point raised before the learned Judicial Commissioners was not properly argued. There is no adequate discussion of this point. The decision is based really upon an assumption that the effect of the sale deed was to extinguish the mortgage in its entirety. No case-law was cited. The point arose only incidentally, the decision of which was not required for the purposes of the case. In our view this case stands by itself and no other case has been cited before us which supports the view taken in this case. We consider that this decision on the point under discussion does not lay down correct law.

In our opinion the correct law is that where there are several co-mortgagors and the entire equity of redemption in the mortgage is transferred to the mortgagee by some only of the co-mortgagors, the possession of the mortgagee as regards other co-mortgagors remains only that of a mortgagee. If this view of ours is correct, then it follows that a suit by such co-mortgagors would be a suit for redemption and not a suit for possession on payment as urged by the appellant's Counsel and would be governed by Art. 148 of the Indian Limitation Act.

In our opinion the sale of 1894, although purporting to be in respect of the entire equity of redemption as against the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and predecessors of the plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 11, who were no parties to it, was a nullity and did not affect their share in it at all. The effect of the sale deed was to bring about a sale of the share in the equity of redemption only of those mortgagors who were properly parties to it and to that extent the mortgagee became full owner of the property, but as regards the shares of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and predecessors of plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 11, his position as a mortgagee did not undergo any change. In this view we are amply supported by a decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Khairajmal and others v. Daim and others (L. R. 32 I. A. p. 23) (8) and a Bench decision of this Court in Mst. Gujrati Kunwar and others v. Bhagwatidin Singh and others (A. I. R. 1930 Oudh, p. 17) (9). In our opinion the mortgagee who comes into possession of land as a mortgagee is not in a position to deny the rights of any of his mortgagors to redeem the mortgage so long as the equity of redemption or any part of it subsists. The share in the equity of redemption of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs Nos. 3 to 11 subsisted in spite of the sale of 1894.

We are, therefore, of opinion that the judgment of the learned District Judge is correct. The trial Court will proceed to dispose of the suit after determining the shares of the plaintiffs, who have been found entitled to redeem their shares.

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(8) 32 I A 23; 32 C 296; 9 C W N 201; 2 A L J 71; 7 Bom. L R 1; 1 C L J 584; 8 Sar. 734 (P O).

(9) A I R 1930 Oudh 17; 118 Ind. Cas. 803; 13 R D 197; Ind. Rul. (1929) Oudh 472.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Criminal Revisions Nos. 125-B and 126-B
of 1939

June 6, 1939

MYA BU, J.

MAUNG KAN—APPLICANT

versus

MAUNG PO TOK—RESPONDENT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145, 146.—Decree-holder obtaining symbolical possession in execution of decree upon delivery warrant—Judgment-debtor attempting forcible entry within two months—Application under s. 145 by decree-holder—Magistrate by order under s. 148 (1) referring back parties to Civil Court—Propriety of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O XXI, r. 35—Delivery of possession of land includes crops standing thereon.

Where in execution of a decree the Court orders delivery of possession of judgment-debtor's property to the decree-holder and the Officer of Court executing the delivery warrant gives effect to the order and since then the decree-holder is in possession both in fact and in law of the property in question but the judgment-debtor within two months of the execution of such warrant attempts forcible entry upon the land whereupon the decree-holder files a petition in Criminal Court under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate cannot go behind the decision of the Civil Court in the matter and cannot ignore the decree even though the Court passing the decree had no jurisdiction over the land. It is immaterial that the delivery of possession is symbolical only. In the enquiry under s. 145, there is only one conclusion possible for the Magistrate to arrive at with reference to the land, that is, that it was in the possession of the applicant on the date of the order passed under sub-s. (1) of s. 145. Even assuming that the applicant (decree-holder) had been forcibly dispossessed at any time after the execution of the delivery order, the first proviso to sub-s. (4) will operate in favour of the applicant. Consequently, when in such circumstances the Magistrate passes an order under s. 148 (1) referring the parties back to Civil Court for the determination of their rights, the order is highly improper and opposed to all principles of justice. Akhoy Mondal v. Basu Rai (1) and Atul Hazrah v. Uma Charan (3), relied on.

Where the decree-holder is put in possession of land, such possession includes the standing crops. The judgment-debtor cannot re-enter in order to reap and dispose of the crops which he had cultivated upon the land. Aung Baw v. Tun Gawn (2) and Atul Hazrah v. Uma Charan (3), relied on.

Or. Rs. for review of order of the Sub-Divisional Special Power Magistrate, Paungde, dated January 17, 1939.

Order.—This is an application for revision of certain orders passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Paungde purporting to act under ss. 145 and 146, Criminal Procedure Code. The proceedings before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate were initiated by a petition filed by the applicant against the respondent and five others who are described as the respondent's men. The facts that led to the filing of the petition were as follows: In Civil Regular No. 7 of 1938 of the Sub-Divisional Court of Paungde, the applicant and his wife obtained a decree against the respondent and his wife for recovery of possession of a piece of paddy land, being holding No. 109 of Mogyobyit Kwin, Paungde Township, measuring 10·53 acres. That decree was passed on September 19, 1938. In execution of the decree the Sub-Divisional Court on October 19, 1938, passed an order for delivery of possession to the applicant and his wife. Effect was given to this order by the process-server of the Court executing the delivery warrant on October 26, 1938, by affixing a copy of the same on the land and by proclamation by beat of gong in the locality concerned. On November 24, however, the respondent and his men attempted to effect forcible entry upon the land in question, with the result that two days later, the applicant filed his petition in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate for action under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code. The bases of the application were that since the execution of the delivery warrant issued by the Sub-Divisional Court, the petitioner had been in possession both in fact and in law of the land in question, and that on November 24, the respondent and his men attempted to effect forcible entry for the purpose of reaping the crops standing on the land, in consequence of which there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace concerning the land in question. On the day of the filing of the petition, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate passed a preliminary order directing the issue of a prohibitory order to both parties and of notices to the respondent and his men to appear before him on November 29, and to put in written statements of their claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the land. The prohibitory order was ignored by the respondent and his men, who, in execution of their threat, went on reaping the standing crops on the land, and it appears that by November 29, all the crops had been reaped.

When the matter came before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on November 29, arrangement was made to keep the produce in the hands of the headman and a villager of Leusu village on their signing a bond for the production of 550 baskets of paddy when required. The enquiry then proceeded in the course of which each party contested the claim of the other as to the factum of actual possession and also as to who is entitled to reap the crops. In the end, however, the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate found it, in the circumstances of the case, impossible for him to come to any "rational decision as to which party were in actual possession of the crops and the land." He, therefore, decided to proceed to act under s. 146 and appointed the Bailiff of his Court "to take charge of the properties and to credit to the Court all the moneys or proceeds of the lands." Having passed that order, the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate also instructed the Bailiff "to deduct incidental expenses regarding cultivation, reaping, etc., from the sum realized." The Bailiff not only carried out this instruction, but in his report of his having taken custody of the paddy and of his having sold the same, mentioned that he had paid to various persons to whom various sums were due for such incidental expenses. It is quite clear that the payments so made were unauthorized. It is also clear that the Magistrate's instruction to the Bailiff to deduct incidental expenses regarding cultivation, reaping, etc., from the sum realized is quite improper, because although it appears to be common ground that the crops on the land had been raised by the respondent, the question as to who is entitled to the crops or to the possession of the crops could not arise separately from or independently of the main bone of contention between the parties, viz., who is entitled to the possession of the land. While the Sub-Divisional Magistrate admitted that he was not able to decide the question concerning the crops he obviously had no right to determine which of the parties was liable to defray the expenses of cultivation.

In the face of the decree of the Civil Court in favour of the applicant and his wife, the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate referring the parties to the Civil Court for the determination of their rights under s. 146 (1) is highly improper. So far as the land is concerned, it is absurd to think that the parties should again fight out in a Civil Court the question as to who is entitled to the possession of the land which the Civil Court had not only decreed in favour of the applicant and his wife but which the Civil Court had already enforced by the execution of its delivery of warrant. When a decree is inter partes, it is immaterial whether the delivery of possession made under that decree is actual or merely symbolical: see Akhoy Mondal v. Basu Rai (1), in which it was laid down that in a proceeding between the parties to a civil decree under s. 145, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate could not go behind the decision of the Civil Court in the matter and could not ignore the decree even though the Court passing the decree had no jurisdiction over the land and it was immaterial that the delivery of possession was symbolical only. Therefore in the enquiry under s. 145, there was only one conclusion possible for the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate to arrive at with reference to the land, that is, that it was in the possession of the applicant on the date of the order passed under sub-s. (1). Even assuming that the applicant had been forcibly dispossessed at any time after the execution of the delivery order of the Sub-Divisional Court, the first proviso to sub-s. (4) will operate in favour of the applicant, as such dispossession must have taken place within two months next before the date of the order under sub-s. (1). I hold, therefore, that as regards the land the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate's order is contrary to all principles of justice. My finding is the same as regards the crops or the produce also. Where the decree-holder is put in possession of land, such possession includes the standing crops. The judgment-debtor cannot re-enter in order to reap and dispose of the crops which he had cultivated upon the land: see Aung Baw v. Tun Gaung (2). I respectfully adopt the observation of Chitty and Walmsley, JJ. in Atul Hazrah v. Uma Charan (3):

"It seems contrary to all principles of justice that a judgment-debtor should be allowed to retain possession against his decree-holder who has actually been given possession against him by a Civil Court and in a criminal proceeding, to assert that possession and by force of the order of the Magistrate, drive the decree-holder.....back to the Civil Court for a further declaration of his rights."

The order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Paungde dated January 17, 1939, is set aside and in its stead it is ordered that the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate declare that the applicant was at the date of the order under s. 145 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, in possession of the land, including the standing crops, and declaring the applicant to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and forbidding of all disturbance of such possession until such eviction. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate will take necessary steps to call into the custody of the Court the net sale proceeds of the paddy (i. e. sale proceeds less the Bailiff's commission) and to deliver the same to the applicant.

D.

Order accordingly.

(1) 3 L B R 129.

(2) 20 O W N 796; 33 Ind. Cas. 822; A I R 1916 Cal. 339; 17 Cr. L J 182; 23 O L J 555.

(3) 27 O W N 267; 73 Ind. Cas. 53; A I R 1923 Cal. 176; 37 O L J 256; 24 Cr. L J 517.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition No. 192 of 1939

June 26, 1939

RAM LALL, J.

PREM PARKASH SHARMA—PLAINTIFF—
—PETITIONER

versus

FEDERAL INDIA ASSURANCE CO., LTD., DELHI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT*Contract—Contract of guarantee—Contract held not one of guarantee.*

Relevant clauses in a contract between an insurance company and its employee were as follows:— that he should get Rs. 125 per mensem as salary. Subsequent increment was to be proportionate to the increase of business, the basis of calculation being one and half lacs. That he was expected to complete a business of Rupees one and half lacs during the first year which was to increase year by year with the expansion of organization:

Held, that this could not be construed as a contract of guarantee. The securing of business was not a condition precedent to the accrual of salary.

O. R. P. from the decree of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Lahore, dated January 11, 1939.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. Jogan Nath Aggarwal and A. N. Khanna, for the Respondent.

Order.—Prem Parkash Sharma brought a suit for the recovery of Rs. 428 on account of salary due and house rent against the Federal India Assurance Company, Limited, in the Court of the Small Cause Judge, Lahore. The allegation was that the plaintiff was appointed a Branch Secretary on a salary of Rs. 125 per mensem and that he was to get free residential quarters. He claimed that he worked with the defendant company from June 20, 1938, till September 30, 1938, for which Rs. 416 was due as salary and he also claimed Rs. 20 per mensem as house rent. After giving a credit for the sum of Rs. 55 received he claimed a sum of Rs. 428. The defence was that the plaintiff had been appointed a servant of the Company on a salary of Rs. 125 a month subject to the condition that he was to complete business of the value of Rs. 1,50,000 during the first year and that as the plaintiff did not secure any business for the Company, he is not entitled to the salary. So far as the claim of house rent is concerned, it was stated—and there is nothing to the contrary—that quarters were available in the offices of the Company and these the plaintiff could have used if he had chosen to. The Judge, Small Cause Court, held that the contract between the parties was that salary would only be paid if business to the extent of Rs. 1,50,000 was secured during the first year and as this had not been done and as the claim for house rent was not admissible, the suit brought was dismissed with costs. A revision petition has been filed by Mr. Mukand Lal Puri and the main contention raised is that on a proper construction of the contract, there was no such condition precedent as has been assumed by the learned Judge. Small Cause Court before the salary became due. The expectation of the employer that an employee will secure business is not an essential part of the contract but is merely a hope and had this not been so, the contract would clearly have been expressed as a contract of guarantee. Relevant clauses in the contract are cls. (2) and (5) which are as follows:

"2. That he should get Rs. 125 per mensem as salary. Subsequent increment shall be proportionate to the increase of business, the basis of calculation being one and half lacs.

5. That he is expected to complete a business of Rupees one and half lacs during the first year which is to increase year by year with the expansion of organization."

It appears to me that there is considerable force in the contention of Mr. Mukand Lal Puri that this cannot be construed into a contract of guarantee. If it be so construed, no salary will be payable if the agent or servant secured business to any extent short of Rs. one and half lacs. Secondly, no salary could be found to be due till after the expiry of the first year because it could not be known till the end of the year what was the amount of business secured by this servant. Thirdly, the word used is that he is expected to complete a certain amount of business, not that he is required to do so. The securing of business for the Company would depend partly on the efforts of the employee and partly on the facilities that the Company made available to the employee. In these circumstances it is difficult to find that the word 'expected' makes this contract into one of guarantee. It is, in my opinion, reasonable to construe this clause to mean that this amount of business to be secured by him has reference to the overriding commission and the renewal commission that he was to get on the business secured by him, and in this aspect, it is more in the nature of inducement to the plaintiff to enter into the service of the Company.

Then it was urged that there was evidence which apparently (though not clearly) the trial Judge believed to the effect that the plaintiff had not done any work for the Company. There is the statement of the plaintiff himself and of his father Charanjiv Lal, P. W. No. 1, that the plaintiff had been working for about two months in the Head Office at Lahore doing organization work. If a servant does not work or refuses to work it is obvious that he is not entitled to any salary but it appears to me to be clear that this was not the position that the Company ever took up. Exhibit D-1 is a receipt for a sum of Rs. 120 granted by the plaintiff to the Company as part payment of the salary for the months of June and July. This receipt is dated August 18, 1938, and it is clear that up to that date the Company was not taking up the position that the plaintiff was a servant who had refused to work and therefore was not entitled to any salary. After August 18, there is evidence that the plaintiff went to Ferozepore but apparently he was unsuccessful in securing any business for the Company. There is nothing to show that he was not working for the Company till September 30, 1938. In this view of the matter it appears to me that he is entitled to salary at the rate of Rs. 125 per mensem for three months and ten days or Rs. 416 in all. Out of this he has received Rs. 175 on account of salary, therefore a sum of Rs. 241 is still due to him. I am in agreement with the Court below that nothing is due to him on account of rent as free residential quarters were available to him and there is no evidence that he paid any rent. In these circumstances, I pass a decree for Rs. 241 in favour of the plaintiff and to that extent accept this petition for revision. In view of the partial success, I leave the parties to bear their own costs throughout.

D. Petition partly allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 12 of 1939

September 12, 1939

HARRIES, C. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.

BULAK RAM AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

GANGA BISHUN CHAUDHURI—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 39—Suit for declaration that document is void—Prayer for cancellation, if essential—Court, whether can order cancellation without such prayer.

A plaintiff may bring a suit for a declaration that a document is void without seeking its cancellation, and if he does so, it is open to the Court though there is no prayer for it, to order the document to be delivered up and cancelled. The wording of s. 39, Specific Relief Act, suggests that the Court may order cancellation, though there is no specific prayer for it, Kattiyā Pillai v. Ramaswami Pillai (1) and Kalu Ram v. Babu Lal (2), relied on.

A suit for a declaration that a certain mortgage, purporting to have been executed by the plaintiff, was a forged document and of no legal effect, and also for an injunction restraining the defendants from ever enforcing their supposed rights under such document, can be treated as a suit for a declaration simpliciter under s. 39, Specific Relief Act, in spite of the prayer for an injunction and the Court can in its discretion order the document to be delivered up and cancelled.

L. P. A. from a decision of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice S. P. Varma, dated February 10, 1939.

Messrs. S. Mehdi Imam, Baldeva Sahay, and T. K. Prasad, for the Appellants.

Messrs. B. N. Mitter and Ajit Kumar Mitter, for the Respondent.

HARRIES, C. J.—This is a Letters Patent Appeal from a judgment of Varma, J., in a second appeal.

The plaintiff-respondent brought a suit in the Court of the Munsif for a declaration that a certain mortgage, purporting to have been executed by him, was a forged document and of no legal effect. He also prayed for an injunction restraining the defendant from ever enforcing their supposed rights under such document. The learned Munsif came to the conclusion that the mortgage was a genuine one and dismissed the suit; but on appeal, the lower Appellate Court held that the document was a forgery and granted the plaintiff the declaration sought for and the injunction. The defendants preferred a second appeal to this Court, but that appeal was dismissed with costs by Varma, J., hence this Letters Patent Appeal.

It has been strenuously argued on behalf of the defendant-appellants by Mr. Mehdi Imam that the decision of the learned Single Judge cannot be sustained. It is argued that the learned Single Judge treated this suit as one under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. It is said that it was not a suit falling within that section and consequently it should have been dismissed.

Stress has been laid upon the form of reliefs sought by the plaintiff, and it is necessary to set them out in extenso. The reliefs were:

(1) On determining the above fact it may be held by the Court that the fraudulent mortgage bond dated July 10, 1935, has never been executed by the plaintiff and the aforesaid fraudulent deed forged, fraudulent, illegal and without exchange of equivalence and which is and cannot be binding upon the plaintiff and on his property.

(2) After determining the Relief No. 1 the defendants may be prohibited for ever by issuing an order or injunction to enforce the said fraudulent mortgage bond.

(3) The costs of this suit with interest till the date of realisation may be awarded to the plaintiff against the person and property of the defendants.

(4) Any other reliefs, besides the above to which, in the opinion of the Court, the plaintiff be deemed entitled, may be awarded to the plaintiff.

As pointed out by Varma, J., the translation of the reliefs is not very happily worded but there is no difficulty in understanding the nature of the reliefs sought.

The first relief is clearly for a declaration that a certain mortgage bond was a forged document creating no rights whatever in the property alleged to have been mortgaged. In short, it is a prayer for a declaration that the mortgage was null and void and not binding upon the plaintiff or his property.

It has been contended by Counsel for the appellants that such a declaration cannot be sought under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. That section provides that—

"Any person entitled to any legal character, or to any rights as to any property, may institute a suit against any person denying, or interested to deny his title to such character or right, and the Court may in its discretion make therein a declaration that he is so entitled, and the plaintiff need not, in such suit, ask for any further relief..."

The argument for the appellants is that what the plaintiff was asking for in this suit was not a declaration that he was entitled to a legal character to any right in property but rather a declaration that a certain instrument was null and void. On behalf of the plaintiff-respondent it is said that what the plaintiff is really asking for is a declaration that he is the owner of the property alleged to have been mortgaged free of all encumbrance. In both the Courts below and before the learned Single Judge, the case seems to have been argued as a case under s. 42, Specific Relief Act. It is unnecessary to consider whether or not this declaration can properly be brought within s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act because clearly it can be a claim for a declaration falling within s. 39, Specific Relief Act. This latter section deals with suits for declaration that documents are void or voidable. Section 39 is in these terms:

"Any person against whom a written instrument is void or voidable, who has reasonable apprehension that such instrument, if left outstanding, may cause him serious injury, may sue to have it adjudged void or voidable; and the Court may, in its discretion so adjudge it and order it to be delivered up and cancelled..."

The declaration prayed for in this suit is, as I have said, in effect a declaration that the mortgage bond is forged and fraudulent and void. It is, therefore, a declaration falling within the ambit of s. 39, Specific Relief Act. It has been argued, however, that the suit cannot be regarded as a suit seeking a declaration under s. 39 of the Act. because consequential relief for an injunction was sought and no consequential relief by way of a cancellation of the document is prayed for.

A plaintiff may bring a suit for a declaration that a document is void without seeking its cancellation, and if he does so, it is open to the Court though there is no prayer for it to order the document to be delivered up and cancelled. The wording of the section suggests that the Court may order cancellation, though there is no specific prayer for it. This has been expressly held in a Division Bench case, Kattiya Pillai v. Ramaswamia Pillai (1) and in a Full Bench case of five Judges, Kalu Ram v. Babu Lal (2). At p. 820 of this latter case, the learned Judge observed:—

"The illustrations to the section make it obvious that the relief is available even to persons other than parties to an instrument, and in respect of both void and voidable instruments. It is equally clear that a plaintiff need only ask for the instrument to be adjudged void or voidable and need not in express terms ask for it to be delivered up and cancelled. Even though no relief for cancellation is asked for, a Court may grant cancellation also. But this does not prevent a plaintiff from also asking in express terms a relief for its being delivered up and cancelled, if he feels that having it merely adjudged void or voidable would not be adequate for his purpose."

In the present case there is in substance a prayer that this document be declared void. The consequential relief asks for, namely, an injunction is not a very appropriate and satisfactory relief, and in my view it is unnecessary to grant the plaintiff an injunction. Even if the plaintiff had only applied for a mere declaration, it would still have been open to the Court to order this document to be delivered up and cancelled. The suit can be treated as a suit for a declaration simpliciter under s. 39 and the Court can in its discretion order the document to be delivered up and cancelled.

(1) A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 306; 119 Ind. Cas. 35; (1929) M.W.N. 286; 29 L.W. 584; 56 M.L.J. 384; Ind. Rul. (1929) Mad. 667.

(2) 54 A. 812 at p. 820; 139 Ind. Cas. 37; (1933) A.L.J. 684; A.I.R. 1933 All. 485; Ind. Rul. (1933) All. 518 (F.B.).

The findings of the lower Appellate Court are clear, that this document is a forgery and is, therefore, void. It is still in the hands of the defendants and the plaintiff must have a fear that it may be used against him. In those circumstances, it appears to me that this is a case where the plaintiff should not only have his declaration but the defendants should also be ordered to deliver up the document for cancellation. The document was required by law to be registered, and accordingly notice must be sent to the Registrar of the cancellation of the document.

The result, therefore, is that this appeal substantially fails. It is true that the learned Single Judge upheld both the declaration and the injunction, and I am of opinion that the remedy by way of injunction is inappropriate. However, in the exercise of the discretion of the Court, I am of opinion that an order calling upon the defendants to deliver up this document for cancellation and that it should be cancelled upon delivery, should be substituted for the injunction. The form of declaration will remain and the order as to cancellation substituted for the injunction. With that variation this appeal is dismissed.

It was argued by Mr. Mehdi Imam that as the decree was being varied to some extent the appellants should not be made to pay the costs. There is no merit whatsoever in the appeal and as it has been held that the defendants are holding a forged document, I see no reason whatsoever for depriving the respondent, who has substantially succeeded of his costs in this Court. The respondent will, therefore, have the costs of this appeal.

Fazl Ali, J.—I agree.

S.

Decree varied.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision No. 393 of 1939

April 21, 1939

TEK CHAND AND ABDUL RASHID, JJ.

GANESH DATTA AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

MODEL TOWN SOCIETY, LTD.—DECREE-HOLDER AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 144—Sale confirmed but subsequently set aside—Application by judgment-debtor for mesne profits whether costs under s. 144.

Section 144, Civil Procedure Code, contemplates restitution, where, and in so far as, a decree has been varied or reversed. An order of the executing Court confirming the sale, which is subsequently set aside does not amount to a decree, and, therefore, an application for mesne profits payable in consequence of that order cannot be made under s. 144. Ram Ratan Prasad v. Banarsi Lal (1), relied on.

C. R. case referred by Tek Chand, J. in C. R. No. 106 of 1938, dated February 28, 1939.

Mr. Labh Singh, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. Manohar Lal Sachadeva, J. G. Sethi and Girdhari Lal, for the Respondents.

Tek Chand, J.—This is an appeal from the order of Mr. Joshua, Subordinate Judge, Lahore, dated August 30, 1938, passed in an application purporting to be under s. 151/144, Civil Procedure Code, presented by the sons of the deceased judgment-debtor, for mesne profits at Rs. 50 per mensem from July 3, 1936, to the date of the application (April 21, 1938) and such further date on which possession of the property in dispute is handed over to them. The relevant facts are that on March 22, 1933, the Model Town Society obtained a decree for Rs. 12,000 against Rai Sahib Jinda Ram, carrying future interest at 9 per cent. per annum. In execution of this decree, the judgment-debtor's house was sold by public auction to Mr. A. R. Davar on April 15, 1935. On May 22, 1936, the sale was confirmed by the executing Court and on June 8, 1936, the sum of Rs. 7,834-8-0 out of the purchase price was paid to the decree-holder (Model Town Society). The usual sale-certificate was issued in favour of the auction-purchaser (Mr. Davar) and he obtained possession of the house on July 3, 1936. In the meantime, the judgment-debtor had appealed to the High Court against the order of the executing Court confirming the sale. This appeal was accepted by Jai Lal, J. sitting in Single Bench, on December 8, 1936. He set aside the execution sale in favour of Mr. Davar and ordered that the house be re-sold. The auction-purchaser, Mr. Davar, preferred an appeal under cl. 10, Letters Patent, but the appeal was dismissed by us on May 21, 1937. On April 21, 1938, the sons of the judgment-debtor, who had died in the meantime, presented an application in the executing Court under s. 151/144, Civil Procedure Code, praying that the auction-purchaser be directed to pay them mesne profits at the rate of Rs. 50 per mensem from July 3, 1936, to the date of the application and, till such further date on which possession was delivered to them. The executing Court has allowed the application in part and granted the applicants Rs. 120 only as mesne profits. It further ordered that the amount be not paid to them, till the final determination of the claim of the auction-purchaser against them for compensation for improvements, alleged to have been effected by him during the period that he was in possession of the house. From this order, the applicants have appealed praying that the amount of mesne profits allowed by the lower Court be enhanced.

A preliminary objection is raised on behalf of the contesting respondent, Mr. Davar, that this order of the lower Court is not appealable. In our opinion, this objection is well founded and must succeed. The application in the lower Court purported to be one under ss. 151/144, Civil Procedure Code. It is obvious, however, that s. 144, is inapplicable to the facts of this case, and the application could not have been made under it. That section contemplates restitution, where, and in so far as, a decree has been varied or reversed. Admittedly, the order of the executing Court confirming the sale, which was set aside by Jai Lal, J. did not amount to a decree, and, therefore, the application for mesne profits payable in consequence of that order could not possibly be made under s. 144; Ram Ratan Prasad v. Banarsi Lal (1). The application was one made under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, and against an order passed under that section, no appeal lies under the Code. The preliminary objection must, therefore, be upheld. We, however, grant the prayer of Counsel for the petitioners and treat the memorandum of appeal as a petition for revision.

On the merits, the revision is without any substance. The applicants claim mesne profits from July 3, 1936, when Mr. Davar was put in possession of the house, till the date when he actually surrendered it. There is a dispute between the parties as to the latter date. But assuming that the applicants' contention was correct that Mr. Davar did not give up possession till June 1, 1938, when the house was re-sold to the Model Town Society, the total period for which mesne profits are payable would be nearly 23 months (July 3, 1936, to May 31, 1938). The lower Court has assessed the mesne profits at Rs. 40 per mensem, but the petitioners claim at Rs. 50 per mensem. Even at this latter rate, the total amount due according to the applicants' own showing, comes to Rs. 1,150. But on June 8, 1936, the sum of Rs. 7,834-8-0, out of the purchase price paid by Mr. Davar, was received in the judgment-debtor's account by the decree-holder, Model Town Society, and this amount remained with the Society till December 23, 1937, i. e., for 18 and half months approximately. During this period, the judgment-debtor benefited by the cessation of interest at 9 per cent, on Rs. 7,834-8-0 as allowed in the decree. This benefit he is bound to restore to Mr. Davar. If to this is added the sum of Rs. 120, allowed by the lower Court, the judgment-debtor has received much more than the amount claimed by him as mesne profits. His sons, therefore, are not entitled to receive anything more from Mr. Davar. Indeed, if he had preferred a counter-petition for revision, we would have been constrained to reduce the amount allowed by the lower Court; but as no such petition has been preferred by him we would leave the order to stand. The petition for revision fails and is dismissed. In the circumstances, parties are left to bear their own costs.

D.

*Petition dismissed.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 672 of 1937

January 31, 1939

MOHAMMAD ISMAIL, J.

HARI RAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT*versusMUNSHI SINGH—DEFENDANT AND ANOTHER —PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 101—Suit on mortgage by subsequent mortgagee—Prior mortgagee who purchased equity of redemption and in possession of property made party—Subsequent mortgagee, if can sell property subject to prior encumbrances, without redeeming them—Prior mortgagee, whether can remain in possession until prior mortgages are redeemed

Where in a suit on mortgage by the subsequent mortgagee, the prior mortgagee who has purchased the equity of redemption and is in possession of the property, is also made a party, the subsequent mortgagee can sell the property mortgaged to him subject to the prior encumbrances under the earlier mortgages without redeeming them. The prior mortgagee is, however, entitled to remain in possession until the prior mortgages are redeemed irrespective of the question of limitation.

(Case-law discussed.)

S. A. from the decision of the Additional Civil Judge, Muzaffarnagar, dated January 27, 1937.

(1) 9 Pat. 685; 122 Ind. Cas. 589; AIR 1930 Pat. 280; 11 P. L. T. 156; Ind. Rul. (1930) Pat. 237.

Messrs. Panna Lal and Jagnandan Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. N. C. Vaish, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit brought for the enforcement of a mortgage dated November 29, 1930, executed by Bhartu in favour of the plaintiff. Munshi Singh was impleaded in the suit as a defendant as on May 20, 1932, he had purchased the mortgaged property in execution of a simple money decree No. 726 of 1930. The suit was resisted mainly by Munshi Singh who pleaded inter alia that the mortgaged property could not be sold without his mortgages being paid first. The trial Court decreed the suit. On appeal the learned Civil Judge modified the decree of the Court of first instance and directed that the plaintiff shall not be entitled to sell the mortgaged property in suit unless and until he pays the money due to Munshi Singh under the prior mortgages standing in favour of Munshi Singh. The plaintiff has preferred an appeal from the decree of the Court below. It is contended that the view of law taken by the Court below is erroneous and that the right to redeem enjoyed by a subsequent mortgagee is a right which can be exercised only at his option and at will. He cannot be forced to redeem against his will. It appears that there are three mortgages standing in favour of Munshi Singh. The first is a usufructuary mortgage dated May 3, 1909; the remaining two are simple mortgages dated July 22, 1925, and May 4, 1926. Munshi Singh by virtue of his possessory mortgage has been in possession of the property ever since 1909 and since he purchased the equity of redemption in execution of a simple money decree he has become full proprietor of the property subject to certain obligations under the mortgage dated November 29, 1930, in favour of the plaintiff.

A large number of authorities have been cited by the learned Counsel on behalf of the parties. Before examining the Case law I proceed to consider the statutory provisions on the subject. It is not disputed that the plaintiff is a subsequent mortgagee and his mortgage is the last in point of time. It is open to a subsequent mortgagee to redeem a prior mortgagee. It is also open to him to sue for foreclosure or for sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit. Nor is it necessary for a puisne mortgagee to implead a prior mortgagee in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgagee : see O. XXXIV, r. 1; Explanation. In the present case, however, the prior mortgagee is a party and the question is whether it is permissible for the plaintiff to sell the property mortgaged to him subject to the prior incumbrances under the earlier mortgages without redeeming those mortgages. Section 101, Transfer of Property Act, provides :

"Any mortgagee of or person having a charge upon, immovable property, or any transferee from such mortgagee or charge holder, may purchase or otherwise acquire the rights in the property of the mortgagor or owner, as the case may be, without thereby causing the mortgage or charge to be merged as between himself and any subsequent mortgagee of or person having a subsequent charge upon the same property and no such subsequent mortgagee or charge holder shall be entitled to foreclose or sell such property without redeeming the prior mortgage or charge, or otherwise than subject thereto."

It will be observed that under the first part of the section, the prior mortgagee, namely the respondent, can set up his prior mortgages as a shield against the subsequent mortgagee and the mere fact that the equity of redemption has been purchased by the respondent will not be deemed to extinguish the mortgages in his favour. Even if some of the mortgages are barred by limitation, the prior mortgagee can insist on their being paid by the subsequent mortgagee if the latter wants to dispossess him. The latter part of the section deals with the right of the subsequent mortgagee and the section provides that the subsequent mortgagee shall not be entitled to sell such property as is mentioned under the earlier part of the section without redeeming the prior mortgage or otherwise than subject thereto. It has been contended by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the law provides two alternatives for his client. The one alternative is to redeem the prior mortgages and the other is to sell the property subject to those prior mortgages. It is contended that the Court below has erred in limiting the right given to the subsequent mortgagee under the section by directing him to redeem the mortgages. Several cases have been cited by the learned Counsel in support of his contention. In Chinnu Pillai v. Venkatasamy Chettiar (1) it was held :

"Where a prior mortgagee sued for sale on his mortgage without making a puisne mortgagee a party to the suit and obtained a decree and in execution of the decree property was sold and purchased by a third person, the puisne mortgagee is entitled to sue for sale on his mortgage subject to the prior mortgage after making the purchaser a party to the suit."

(1) 40 M 77; 34 Ind. Cas. 507; A I R 1917 Mad. 751; 30 M L J 347; (1916) 1 M W N 245; 19 M L T 217.

The principle laid down in this case helps the contention of learned Counsel for the appellant, but this ruling is prior to the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act of 1929 when the present s. 101 of the Act was enacted. In Sarju Kumar v. Dwarka Prasad (2) it was held that the subsequent mortgagee on the foot of the mortgage of 1918 could sell the mortgage property subject to the mortgage of 1895, that the only right obtained by the prior mortgagee was a right to the security furnished by the mortgage of 1895, that he could not insist on being paid and that he must allow the property to be sold subject to the mortgage in his favour. In that case, like the present, the prior mortgagee insisted that his mortgages must be redeemed before the property mortgaged could be sold. This contention did not find favour with the Bench deciding that case. Here again s. 101 of the present Act was not considered as the suit was instituted prior to the passing of the Amendment Act. The facts in Lachmi Narain Das v. Hirdey Narain (3) are distinguishable and do not help the plaintiff. In that case the subsequent mortgagee purchased the mortgaged property in enforcement of his mortgage and obtained possession of it. The prior mortgagee brought a suit on the basis of his mortgage without impleading the subsequent mortgagee and obtained a decree thereon. Only formal possession by virtue of his purchase was given to the prior mortgagee. He thereupon brought a suit for possession against the defendant (subsequent mortgagee) offering the defendant an opportunity to redeem the plaintiff. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the mortgages in favour of the prior mortgagee were time-barred and that they could be set up as a shield only against the subsequent mortgagee for defensive purposes and could not be the basis of a suit after the expiry of the time allowed for the enforcement of the mortgage. That ruling, therefore, is no authority for the proposition advocated by the learned Counsel. In the Full Bench case in Debendra Narain Roy v. Ramtaran Banerji (4) it was held:

"A puisne mortgagee is entitled to a sale of the property secured by his mortgage subject of the rights of the first mortgagee even if the property has been sold in execution of a decree obtained by the first mortgagee in a suit to which the puisne mortgagee was not a party."

(2) (1929) A L J 492; 119 Ind. Cas. 507; A I R 1929 All. 296; Ind. Kul. (1929) All. 1035.

(3) 24 A L J 661; 97 Ind. Cas. 4; A I R 1926 All. 420.

(4) 30 C 599; 7 C W N 766 (F.B.).

This case no doubt helps the plaintiff but this was also before the passing of the Amendment Act. In Salig Ram v. Jangjit Bahadur Singh (5), Srivastava and Zia-ul Hasan, JJ. had to interpret s. 101 of the present Act. The learned Judges held that "this section allowed two alternative courses to the subsequent mortgagee, namely either to redeem the prior mortgage, or to take the property subject to that mortgage. The words 'or otherwise than subject thereto' refer to the second eventuality mentioned in the section, namely that of the subsequent mortgagee trying to sell the property and not to that of his seeking foreclosure. No doubt a subsequent mortgagee who has obtained a decree for sale can avail himself of the two alternatives provided for in the second, namely he can either redeem the prior mortgage or sell the property subject to that mortgage."

This case goes the whole length in supporting the contention put forward by the learned Counsel for the appellant. The learned Counsel for the respondent has relied on several cases of this Court in support of the decree of the Court below. All of these cases were instituted before the Transfer of Property Amendment Act came into force; see Manohar Lal v. Ram Babu (6), Sarda Prasad v. Kanhaiya Lal (7) and Phul Chand v. Surji (8). It is possible to distinguish the facts of some of these cases, but it appears to me unnecessary to do so because the present s. 101, Transfer of Property Act, has prescribed the procedure to be followed by a subsequent mortgagee who brings a suit for the enforcement of his mortgage. There is no doubt that before the passing of the Act, there was considerable amount of conflict of judicial opinion on this point. The section apparently was enacted to clarify the law and to lay down the correct procedure to be followed in future. Under these circumstances, the earlier authorities do not furnish a true guide to the Courts. I am bound to interpret the law as it stands at present, and in my opinion, the plaintiff cannot be compelled to redeem the earlier mortgages as directed by the Court below. Learned Counsel for the respondent contends that his client is likely to suffer if the property is allowed to be sold subject to the earlier mortgages. He apprehends that the plaintiff will redeem only the usufructuary mortgage and will not redeem the subsequent mortgages which have become

(5) A I R 1935 Oudh 411; 155 Ind. Cas. 498; (1935) O W N 684; 11 Luck. 270; 7 R O 595.

(6) 34 A 323; 14 Ind. Cas. 674; 9 A L J 323.

(7) (1933) A L J 934; 145 Ind. Cas. 301; A I R 1933 All. 412; 6 R A 53.

(8) A I R 1923 All. 457; 74 Ind. Cas. 684.

time-barred. This apprehension, in my opinion, is not well-founded. It is settled law that a prior mortgagee who has purchased the equity of redemption is entitled to remain in possession of the property until the subsequent mortgagee has redeemed the prior mortgages irrespective of the question of limitation. In Ram Sarup v. Ram Lal (9) at p. 662 Lindsay and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ. observed:

"The shield of a subsequent mortgagee who acquires the right of a prior mortgagee is essentially different in character from the shield of a mortgagee who acquires the rights of a mortgagor. The former can protect himself so long as the rights under the earlier mortgage subsists. In the case of the latter, his rights as a mortgagee merge in those of the mortgagor, or remain in suspense, as it were, till they are needed for purposes of defence. So long as he represents the rights of the mortgagor, he is not affected by any question of limitation for, as pointed out in Lazman Ganesh v. Mathurabai (10) at p. 372 he cannot be required to sue for the recovery of the money due on his mortgage from his own property. Indeed, being both the mortgagee and the mortgagor, he cannot have any cause of action against him."

There are several other authorities to the same effect. It is manifest therefore that the respondent has nothing to lose if the properties in suit are allowed to be sold subject to the prior mortgages. The prior mortgagee will not be disturbed in his possession unless all the prior encumbrances have been fully satisfied by the plaintiff, the subsequent mortgagee, or his representative. The procedure which, in my opinion, should be followed as adopted in the Full Bench case reported in Tota Ram v. Ram Lal (11). In that case a third mortgagee kept in his own hand a part of the mortgage money in order to pay off the first and second mortgages but paid only the first mortgage. The second mortgagee brought a suit to enforce his mortgage. It was held that the third mortgagee was subrogated to the position of the first mortgagee and he was allowed to sell the property subject to the charge created in favour of the prior mortgagee. It is not possible to dispose of this appeal finally because the Court below has not determined the amount due under the mortgages of May 3, 1909, July 22, 1925, and May 4, 1926. I therefore remit the following issues to the lower Appellate Court: What is the exact sum due under the mortgages dated May 3, 1909, July 22, 1925 and May 4, 1926, for which the property in suit is liable. The interest should be calculated up to the date of delivery of possession under the auction sale in favour of Munshi Singh. The parties shall be allowed to produce fresh evidence. The finding should be returned within two months. The usual ten days shall be allowed for objection.

s.

Issue remitted.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 345 of 1938

August 10, 1939

HARRIES, C. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.

BISHUN SINGH—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR

—APPELLANT

versus

PALAKDHARI SINGH AND ANOTHER—

DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS

Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (VII of 1939), s. 13—Application under s. 16, Bihar Money-lenders Act (III of 1938) rejected—During pendency of appeal to High Court, Amending Act coming into force—S. 13 of Amending Act applies—Practice—Precedent—Federal Court.

Where during the pendency of an appeal to the High Court against an order rejecting an application under s. 16, Bihar Money-lenders Act of 1938, the Amending Act of 1939 has come into force, s. 13 of the Amending Act applies to the application. The fact that after rejection of application under s. 16 no stay was ordered and sale took place makes no difference and does not affect rights of parties in appeal. Shyama Kant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2), applied.

High Court is bound to follow the Federal Court decision and to give effect to it.

A. from the original order of the Sub-Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated November 21, 1938.

Mr. T. N. Sahi, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. N. Lal, for the Respondents.

Harries, C. J.—This is a judgment-debtor's appeal from an order of the learned Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarpur allowing in part the judgment-debtor's application. In his application, the judgment-debtor prayed that the Court should convert the decree into a decree for instalments under s. 15, Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938, and value the judgment-debtor's property under s. 16 of that Act. The learned Subordinate Judge was prepared to grant instalments provided the judgment-debtor paid a sum of Rs 3,000 within a week. The learned Subordinate Judge, however, did not indicate what the further instalments would be if this sum of Rs. 3,000 was paid. With regard to such part of the application as was concerned with s. 16, Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938, the learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that this section was repugnant to the general law, and accordingly could not be enforced. The learned Subordinate Judge was in fact following a decision of this Court, namely Vishwanath Narayan Singh v. Harihar Gir (1). The judgment-debtor failed to pay the sum of Rs. 3,000 within the stipulated time, and accordingly the whole of the property was put up for sale and was purchased in the main by third parties though a small portion was purchased by the decree-holders. Against the order of the learned Subordinate Judge dismissing the application in so far as it was concerned with s. 16, Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938, the judgment-debtor has appealed to this Court. The only point for consideration is whether or not s. 13, Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act, 1939, has any application to the case. Section 16, Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938, is in these terms:

(9) 44 A 659 at p. 662; 75 Ind. Cas. 472; A I R 1922 All. 394; 20 A L J 596.

(10) 38 B 369 at p. 372; 23 Ind. Cas. 121; A I R 1914 Bom. 25; 16 Bom. L R 26.

(11) (1932), A L J 627; 139 Ind. Cas. 107; A I R 1932 All. 489; 54 A 897; Ind. Rul. (1932) All. 524 (F B).

"(1) When an application is made for the execution of a decree passed in respect of a loan or the interest on a loan by the sale of the judgment-debtor's property, the Court executing the decree shall, notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other law or in anything having the force of law, hear the parties to the decree and estimate the value of such property and of that portion of such property the proceeds of the sale of which it considers will be sufficient to satisfy the decree:

Provided that the Court may order the whole property of the judgment-debtor to be sold if it is satisfied that by reason of the nature of such property or any other special circumstances such property cannot reasonably and conveniently be sold in part;

(2) Any person aggrieved by an order passed under sub-s. (1) may appeal to the Court to which appeals from the Court executing the decree ordinarily lie."

Section 17, which followed, directed that only so much property should be included in the proclamation of the intended sale as the Court considered the proceeds to be sufficient to satisfy the decree. The application, as it originally stood, was under s. 16 of the 1938 Act and was rejected. While this appeal was pending in this Court, the Amending Act of 1939 was passed, and ss. 16 and 17 were repealed and were replaced by ss. 13 and 14 of the Amending Act. Section 13 (1) of the Amending Act in terms applies to applications made before or after the commencement of the Act, and it has been held by the Federal Court in Shyamakant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2) that s. 13 of the Amending Act of 1939 is retrospective in the sense that it applies to proceedings pending at the time when the Act came into force.

It has been argued by Counsel on behalf of the appellant that s. 13 of the Amending Act must be given effect to by this Court. He has argued that this section applies to pending applications, and his application, which was rejected by the learned Subordinate Judge, is still pending in this Court. We are bound to hold that the application of the judgment-debtor is pending, and accordingly it must now be decided in the light of the provisions of the Amending Act of 1939. In my view this case cannot be distinguished from the case in Shyamakant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2) to which I have already referred. In that case an application under s. 16, Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938, had been dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge. On appeal this Court had upheld the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge upon the ground that this section being repugnant to the general law was null and void. During the pendency of the appeal to the Federal Court, the Amending Act of 1939 came into force, and the Federal Court unanimously held that the provisions of s. 13 of the Amending Act applied to the application, and their order is based upon this view. In my judgment this Court is bound to follow the Federal Court decision and to give effect in the present appeal to the provisions of s. 13 of the Amending Act.

It has been argued that there is one very material difference between the present case and the case in Shyamakant Lal v. Rambhajan Singh (2) decided by the Federal Court. In the present case after the rejection of the judgment-debtor's application the properties were put up to sale and purchased and possession given. In the proceedings which terminated in the Federal Court case the property was apparently not put up for sale because of a stay order, presumably, given by this Court during the pendency of the appeal. In my view there is no difference in principle between the two cases. In the present case, if we hold that the learned Judge was wrong in not valuing this property as directed by s. 16, Bihar Money-lenders

(1) (1938) P W N 765; 178 Ind. Cas. 279; 19 P L T 760; 11 R P 231; 5 B R 73; A I R 1939 Pat. 90; 17 Pat. 714.

(2) 20 P L T 473; 182 Ind. Cas. 161; A I R 1939 F C 74; 1939 O L R 399; 12 R F C 1; 5 B R 756; (1939) M W N 674; (1939) F O R 193; 43 C W N F O 68 (F O).

Act, 1938, and s. 13 of the Amending Act, 1939, then the whole of the proceedings taken thereafter are liable to be set aside when the order of the learned Subordinate Judge is reversed. The sale took place subject to the result of this appeal, and the fact that no stay was granted and that the sale took place cannot affect the rights of the parties in this Court. In my judgment, the order of the learned Subordinate Judge cannot now be sustained and must be set aside. The case must be sent back to the learned Subordinate Judge to be decided according to law. He will bear in mind that ss 13 and 14 of the Amending Act now apply. We make no order as to costs of this appeal.

Fazi Ali, J.—I agree.

s.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Rule No. 583 of 1939

June 2, 1939

B. K. MUKHERJEA AND ROXBURGH, JJ.

TARAK NATH KUNDU—

JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—PETITIONER

versus

PANCHANON DUTT—DECREE-HOLDER

—OPPOSITE-PARTY

Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act (VII of 1938), ss. 2 (8), 34—Debt payable under decree of original side of High Court, whether debt within meaning of Act—Proceedings in respect of such debt, if can be stayed under s. 34.

The expression "Civil Court" as used in the various sections of the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act means a Court of civil jurisdiction separate from and subordinate to the High Court and does not include High Court. The expression "or otherwise", in s. 2 (8) means debt not founded on a decree, and even if it includes decretal debts, they would be decrees passed by other Courts, e. g., the Revenue Court, but not by the High Court. Hence, a debt payable under the decree of the original side of the High Court would not be a debt within the meaning of the Agricultural Debtors Act. It would not be within the competence of the Debt Settlement Board constituted under the Act to settle such debts, and no proceeding in respect of the same could be stayed by a notice under s. 34. Much the same result would be produced even if the view that the expression "Civil Court" includes the High Court is accepted. The assumption of jurisdiction by the Debt Settlement Board over debts payable under decrees of the High Court, is ultra vires and it was outside the competence of the Legislature to include a liability based upon a decree of the High Court within the definition of a debt as given in s. 2 (8), Agricultural Debtors Act. Narsing Das v. Chogemull (1), relied on. [p. 133, col. 1]

O. Rule directed against an order of the Munsif, First Court, Howrah, dated April 19, 1939.

Mr. Chandra Sekhar Sen, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Gopendra Nath Das, for the Opposite Party.

B. K. Mukherjea, J.—This Rule is directed against an order of the Munsif, First Court, Howrah, dated April 19, 1939, by which he refused to stay certain proceedings in execution of a decree in spite of a notice sent to him by the Jagadishpur Debt Settlement Board under s. 34, Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act. The decree was one for a sum of Rs. 1,200 only, obtained by the opposite party against the petitioner, on the basis of a promissory note in the original side of this Court. On the application of the decree-holder it was transmitted for execution to the Court of the Munsif, First Court, Howrah, and the decree-holder applied for attachment and sale of certain immovable properties, belonging to the judgment-debtor which were situated within the jurisdiction of that Court. The judgment-debtor thereupon presented an application under s. 8, Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, to the Jagadishpur Debt Settlement Board for settlement of his debts, and the latter issued a notice under s. 34 of the Act, requesting the executing Court to stay further proceedings in execution of the decree. The Munsif has refused to stay the proceedings on the ground that the decree being passed by the High Court, s. 34, Agricultural Debtors Act, did not apply, and he has relied upon the Special Bench decision of this Court in Narsing Das v. Chogemull (1). The propriety of this view has been challenged by Mr. Chandra Sekhar Sen who appears in support of the rule and his contention is that the Special Bench decision has no application to the facts of the present case where the proceedings sought to be stayed are not before the High Court but before a Civil Court which is subordinate to this Court. In the Special Bench case undoubtedly the proceedings in execution were pending in the original side of this Court in respect of a decree passed by itself, and as according to the opinion expressed by the majority of the Judges who composed the Bench, the expression "Civil Court", as used in the Agricultural Debtors Act, was held not to include the High Court, the operation of s. 34 of the Act was necessarily excluded. In the opinion of the other two Judges who did not accept this view, the expression "Civil Court" did include the High Court, but the provisions of s. 34 of the Act, so far as they related to proceedings of the High Court in its original side, were ultra vires and hence inoperative. The Special Bench decision, therefore, does not directly touch the present case, where the proceedings are not before the High Court itself.

(1) 43 O W N 613; 183 Ind. Cas 113; A I R 1939 Cal. 435; 69 O L J 458; 18 R O 128; I L R (1939) 2 Cal. 93 (S B).

I think, however, that if the expression "Civil Court" as used in the various sections of the Agricultural Debtors' Act be taken to mean a Court of civil jurisdiction separate from and subordinate to the High Court, as held by the majority of the Judges in the Special Bench case, the conclusion would be irresistible that a debt payable under the decree of the original side of this Court would not be a debt within the meaning of the Agricultural Debtors Act. It would not be within the competence of the Debt Settlement Board constituted under the Act to settle such debts, and no proceeding in respect of the same could be stayed by a notice under s. 34. In no other way I think we can consistently explain the various sections of the Act, and find out a rational basis for the scheme which underlies it. Agreesably with the view taken by the majority of the Judges in the Special Bench case, we must assume that the Legislature when it passed this enactment was aware of its own limitations, that it did not intend to trench upon the jurisdiction of the High Court derived from Parliament and that in all the sections where the words "Civil Court" were used, it intended to exclude the High Court. If this is the correct position, the Legislature, in my opinion, never intended that a debt which was payable under a decree of the original side of the High Court would come within the purview of the Agricultural Debtors Act at all. I will first of all examine the definition of 'debt' as given in s. 2 (8) of the Act. 'Debt' as defined in that subsection includes all liabilities of a debtor in cash or in kind, secured or unsecured, whether payable under a decree or order of a Civil Court or otherwise, and whether payable presently or in future. Then follow certain exceptions which we need not mention at this stage. If a debt is payable under a decree, then to come within this definition it must be under a decree or order of a Civil Court and a decree passed by the High Court must, in my opinion, be deemed to have been excluded

The expression "or otherwise", I think would mean debt not founded on a decree, and even if it includes decretal debt, they would be decrees passed by other Courts, e. g., the Revenue Court, but not by the High Court. This view is fortified by the provision of s. 18 (1) which provides that a decree of a Civil Court relating to a debt shall be conclusive evidence as to the existence and amount of the debt as between the parties to the decree. It might sound absurd that a decree passed by an inferior Court would be held final by the Debt Settlement Board, whereas no value need be attached to a decree of the High Court. But this incongruity will disappear if we hold that a decree of the High Court being outside the Act, the Debt Settlement Board would have no jurisdiction to consider it at all or appraise its value.

This interpretation would not be in any way inconsistent with the object of the Act as explained in the Preamble. The object was undoubtedly to give relief to certain classes of debtors, but not certainly in respect of all their liabilities. There are exceptions stated in the section itself, e. g., public demands and debts due to a Scheduled Bank. Other debts must also be deemed to be excluded which were beyond the competence of the Legislature to deal with, if the Legislature acted with full sense of its limitation and wanted to avoid anything which would be in excess of its powers. This conclusion would be irresistible if we come to the provisions of ss. 25 (3), 33, 35 and 36 of the Act, which are aimed at ousting the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in cases where the Debt Settlement Board can deal with the matters exclusively under the provisions of the Act. The result of the Special Bench decision is that the High Court would have jurisdiction in spite of s. 33 of the Act to entertain a suit or proceeding in respect of a debt, even though it is included in an application under s. 8 of the Act. A decree passed by the High Court could be executed though the matter is before the Debt Settlement Board, and such decree would be operative and binding even if it is against the decision of the Debt Settlement Board. An award under s. 25 would not prevail over a decision of the High Court and nothing but confusion and anomaly would result if both the award of the Board and the decree of the High Court are deemed to be valid and binding. I hold therefore that the Legislature definately intended to exclude a debt founded on a decree of the High Court from the scheme of the Act, and s. 2 (8) should be interpreted in such a way as would give effect to this intention of the Legislature. This would prevent anomalies and place all the provisions of this Act on a consistent and logical basis. In this view of the case, s. 34 of the Act would have no application inasmuch as there is no proceeding in respect of a debt, even though the Court is a Civil Court within the meaning of the Special Bench decision. The object of s. 34 is to stay proceedings in Civil Courts pending settlement of debt by the Debt Settlement Board. It helps to avoid conflicts which would otherwise result from the operation of ss. 35 and 36. But if these other sections are not applicable, there can be no sense in applying s. 34 which is merely ancillary to the other provisions. I hold therefore that s. 34 would not apply to this case and the Munsif could not be called upon to stay the proceedings.

I think that much the same result would be produced even if we proceed on the view adopted by the minority of the Judges who composed the Special Bench. Their view is that the expression "Civil Court" includes the High Court and those provisions in the Act which affect the jurisdiction of the High Court and the validity of its decrees are ultra vires. We cannot say that the only offending provisions are those contained in s. 25 (3) or ss. 32 to 36. These are provisions intended to enable the Debt Settlement Board to carry on its work of settling debts, without any interference from the Civil Courts whose decrees and orders are made nugatory when they come into conflict with the decisions of the Board. They are all parts of and interwoven with the scheme which enables the Debt Settlement Board to settle debts founded upon decrees of the High Court, and as I have shown above, this scheme would fail altogether if these sections are made inapplicable. What is ultra vires therefore is the assumption of jurisdiction by the Debt Settlement Board over debts payable under decrees of the High Court and it must be said that it was outside the competence of the Legislature to include a liability based upon a decree of the High Court within the definition of a debt as given in s. 2 (8), Agricultural Debtors Act. It is, however, not necessary in the present case to discuss this matter in further details. For the reasons given above I hold that the Rule must be discharged with costs, hearing fee being assessed at two gold mohurs.

Roxburgh, J.—This Rule has been issued on the ground that the Munsif of the First Court, Howrah, on receipt of a notice under s. 34, Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, 1936, has refused to stay proceedings in execution of a decree passed on the original side of this Court, and transferred to the Howrah Court for execution. The learned Munsif has based his decision on the recent case in Narsing Das v Chogemull (1), decided by a Special Bench of this Court. Mr. Sen arguing the case for the petitioner, has contended that the Special Bench decision has no application to the present which is a case of execution under ss. 39 and 42, Civil Procedure Code : and further that the present proceeding is before a "Civil Court" even on the restricted view of the meaning of those words as found by the majority of the learned Judges who decided the Special Bench case. Similarly, if the view of the minority of the Judges is followed, namely, that the words "Civil Court" include the High Court, that the latter is not involved in the present matter as the proceeding stayed is not that of the High Court, and that in any event the powers given under ss. 39 to 42 to the High Court are not conferred by Act of Parliament, but by Act of the Indian Legislature. Mr. Das, appearing for the decree-holder opposite party, urges that ss. 32 to 36, Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, provide a complete scheme for excluding the Civil Courts by staying and rendering infructuous any of their proceedings in respect of a debt, and he contends that the definition of "debt" in sub-s. 8 of s. 2 of the Act is to be read as excluding a debt based upon a decree of the High Court. He endeavoured to found his argument on the restricted interpretation of "Civil Court" taken by the majority of the Judges in the Special Bench case and contended that the words "all liabilities... whether payable under a decree or order of a Civil Court," must exclude a liability payable under a decree of the High Court. Mr. Sen, of course, has retorted by the contention that the latter debt is included in the phrase "or otherwise" appearing in the definition. It must be conceded that the interpretation that "Civil Court" in s. 34 and other sections of the Act does not include "High Court" is alone not sufficient to support the order challenged here; but it would appear that the reasons for that view will suffice to justify the interpretation of "debt" contended for by Mr. Das. It seems also that if we treat the matter on the ground of ultra vires, the result will be the same. To understand this it is necessary to consider the general scheme and real purpose of the Act.

The scheme of the Act which has been framed for the purpose of giving relief to agricultural debtors, is first to divide his debts into two classes, those which can be dealt with by Debt Settlement Boards, and those which cannot be so dealt with. The important exclusions which shall not be subject to the operations of the Boards are amounts recoverable as public demands, and debts due to scheduled banks : [s. 2 (8) (iv) and (vi)]. Broadly speaking the scheme was to leave the recovery of these to the ordinary law, while other debts were to come under the jurisdiction of the Boards. The scheme then provides for bringing before the Board intimation of all debts subject to its jurisdiction (ss. 8 to 13). An important provision is included in s. 13 (2) by which a Board may pass an order that no debt of which the creditor has failed to submit a statement to the Board other than a debt which the debtor has included in his statement of debt shall be payable, and that such order shall not be questioned in any Civil Court or in any manner other than that provided in the Act. The Board is then to attempt amicable settlement of the debts (s. 15) and if it is a Board so empowered it can compel the remaining creditors to accept an amicable settlement on terms equivalent to those agreed to by creditors to whom not less than 40 per cent. of the total debt is owing [s. 19 (1) (b)]. The "total debt" means the total of the debts of which the Board has cognizance and excludes, for example, debts to scheduled banks of amounts recoverable as public demands. A creditor who refused to accept the terms offered may take a certificate and wait in accordance with the terms of s. 21, for the recovery of his dues. When the debts have been determined and settlement has been made fixing how payments are to be made, the whole culminates in the award under s. 25 and this is to be binding on the debtor and his creditors in supersession of all previous decisions of a Civil Court. It is contemplated that payment will be made by instalments, and if the full amounts due under the award are paid, the debtor will be duly discharged of all the debts dealt with by it.

There is a special "insolvency procedure" provided in s. 22, under which in certain circumstances the Board can compulsorily reduce the debts of the debtor to such amount as it considers he can pay within a period not exceeding 20 years, or else it may order his property (with some exceptions) to be sold. When the amounts have been paid or the property has been sold, the debtor will receive under s. 22 (5) a certificate of discharge which will release him from all debts which were or might have been included in the application under s. 8. Provision for the enforcement of an ordinary award under s. 25 is made in ss. 28 and 29. If any amount payable under the award is not paid in time or in the extended time allowed by the Certificate Officer, he is to proceed to sell the property of the debtor and to distribute the proceeds according to the order of priority laid down in s. 29. Amounts due under Civil Court decrees are to be paid in full if there are assets available [s. 29 (2) (a)]; mortgaged properties may be sold subject to mortgage, unless there is a decree of a "Civil Court" for the recovery of the debt outstanding in which case the property will be sold, and the mortgage debt as decreed will take priority [ss. 28 (6) and 29 (2) (a)]. Finally, if the Certificate Officer fails to recover as a public demand any amount payable under the award, the award shall cease to subsist and any amount payable under it shall be recoverable within three years from the date on which the award ceased to subsist as if a decree of the Civil Court had been passed for its payment on such date [s. 29 (5)]. Alternatively the Certificate Officer may put in force the insolvency procedure of s. 22.

The provisions then in ss. 32 to 36 relating to Civil Courts are merely ancillary to the above scheme in order that there shall not be two concurrent agencies at work for the determination and collection of a person's debts. It is an essential corollary to the jurisdiction of the Boards to deal with a debt that concurrent proceedings by the Civil Courts shall not take place or shall be of no effect if they do. If there are debts which the local legislature cannot deal with for lack of jurisdiction, they cannot give jurisdiction to the Boards in respect of those debts, or if they can and do so, the result will only be confusion. It is unnecessary to labour by giving numerous examples, it is perhaps sufficient to consider the effect on an award in s. 25 of the Act if it contains a debt due on a High Court decree. The amount is both recoverable under the decree and at the same time under the award. Similarly, under s. 19 if the creditor to whom more than forty per cent. of the total debt were owing were a decree-holder of a decree of the High Court in its original jurisdiction, he would be able to impose his settlement on the remaining creditors, but would be under no restriction as to recovery of his full dues by execution proceedings. Examples of such anomalies could be multiplied.

If we assume then that the Act was drafted with the knowledge that provisions affecting the jurisdiction of the High Court in respect of decrees passed in its original jurisdiction would be ultra vires, and that it was drafted to avoid including any such ultra vires provisions, we must conclude that the intention was to exclude debts founded on such decrees. We must conclude therefore that it was intended to exclude such debts from the definition of "debt" in s. 2, sub-s. (8) of the Act: that is to say, the interpretation contended for by Mr. Das must be accepted. Following the judgments of the majority of the Judges who decided the Special Bench case, I think such an assumption is to be made, and hold that "debt" as defined in the Act does not include one payable under a decree or order of the High Court exercising its original jurisdiction. Though the point has not been argued before us, it may be noted that even treated as a case of ultra vires, the result is, probably the same. In applying the doctrine, the Act is to be interpreted as a whole; it is then seen that what is ultra vires in the Act is, as already discussed, the whole of the scheme by which jurisdiction is given to the Boards to settle debts payable under decrees of the High Court in its original jurisdiction, and not merely the ancillary provisions directly giving power to the Boards to interfere with the High Court. Full consideration of this question would involve considering what provisions of the Act were ultra vires, and whether they could be excluded from the Act without making the Act a substantially different law from that enacted; in other words the question of severability discussed in such cases as In re Initiative and Referendum Act (2) and Attorney-General for British Columbia v. Attorney-General for Canada (3). It would probably be found that the result would be very similar to that now arrived at, and that by interpreting "debt" to exclude amounts payable under decrees of the High Court, all the provisions in the Act which are ultra vires of the local legislature and all that are so interwoven with those provisions as to require exclusion along with them would be severed together, leaving a valid Act dealing with matters within the competence of that Legislature. In other words a draftsman, given the defective Act and asked to exclude the provisions that were ultra vires, would have done so by the simple method of amending the definition of "debt" to exclude these decrees.

As already stated I base my conclusion on the view that the draftsman in fact did exclude the decrees in question though not as explicitly as might have been done. I therefore hold that the debt in this case which is before the Board is not a debt within the meaning of the Act, and the notice under s. 34 is therefore erroneous and the Munsif is not required to stay the proceedings in execution pending before him. I agree therefore that the Rule should be discharged.

s.

Rule discharged.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Civil Revisions Nos. 30, 52 and 59 of 1939

May 11, 1939

MOHAMAD NOOR AND CHATTERJI, JJ.

Syed RAZAUH RAHMAN AND OTHERS—

PETITIONERS

versus

UDIT SINGH AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY

Bihar Restoration of Bakasht Lands and Reduction of Arrears of Rent Act (IX of 1938), s. 15—S. 15, if repugnant to any existing Indian Law—Whether applies to execution proceedings—Order of executing Court refusing to execute decree for amount mentioned in it and proceeding to execute it after reducing amount under s. 15, whether falls under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908)—Revision, if lies.

The Civil Procedure Code by itself does not apply to suits for rent. It is s. 143, Bihar Tenancy Act, which, with certain reservations, makes the Civil Procedure Code applicable to rent suits and the procedure and regulation of Rent Courts and Revenue Courts are exclusively within the purview of the Provincial Legislatures. It was quite open to the Provincial Legislature to amend s. 143, Bihar Tenancy Act, and provide new procedure for the trial of rent suits. If by implication they authorized the Court not to execute decrees beyond a certain sum specified in s. 15, Bihar Restoration of Bakasht Lands and Reduction of Arrears of Rent Act, they had full power to do so. Section 15, Bihar Restoration of Bakasht Lands and Reduction of Arrears of Rent Act, is not therefore repugnant to any existing law relating to the Concurrent List No. 3 of Sch. VII Government of India Act.

(2) (1919) A O 935; A I R 1919 P O 145; 88 L J P O 142.

(3) (1937) A O 391; 156 L T 313; 106 L J P O 67; 81 S J 115; 53 T L R 334.

The directions given to Court in s. 15, apply to the proceeding for the execution of the decrees also.

Revisional powers are not exercised by the High Court in those cases in which a party entitled to appeal has not appealed. An order of the executing Court refusing to execute the decree for the sum which was mentioned in it and proceeding to execute it only after reducing it according to the direction given in s. 15 of Act IX of 1938 relates to a question of execution, satisfaction and discharge of decree and comes under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, and is appealable and where no appeal has been preferred from such order revisional powers of the High Court cannot be invoked.

O. Rs. from the order of the Munsif, Second Court, Patna, dated December 7 and 19, 1938, and from order of the Munsif, Second Court, Gaya, dated January 24, 1939, respectively.

Messrs. B. N. Mitter and R. S. Sinha (in No. 30), A. H. Fakhruddin (in No. 52) and Raj Kishore Prasad (in No. 59), for the Petitioners.

The Advocate-General and Government Pleader (for the Crown in No. 30), Messrs. G. N. Mukherji, Advocate-General and Government Pleader (for the Crown in No. 52), and Kanhaiyaji, Advocate-General, and Government Pleader (for the Crown in No. 59), for the Opposite Party.

Mohamad Noor J.—These three applications in revision arise out of proceeding for execution of rent decrees. They are against three different orders of three different Courts in three different cases between different parties. They have been heard together as the question involved in all of them is the same. In each of them the executing Court has reduced the amount of decree for the purpose of execution according to the directions given in s. 15 of the Bihar Restoration of Bakasht Lands and Reduction of Arrears of Rent Act, 1938 (Act IX of 1938). The decree-holders in each case have come up in revision. The Provincial Legislature by amending the Bihar Tenancy Act and the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act have made provisions for reduction of rents of raiyyats. The raiyyats under certain circumstances have been authorized to apply for reduction of rents and the officer deputed for the purpose is directed to reduce rent on certain basis. Act IX of 1938 provides among others that when rent has once been reduced under the provisions of s. 112 or s. 112-A, Bihar Tenancy Act or under s. 85, Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, the landlord will not be entitled to recover in any proceeding rent at a rate in excess of the rate which has been fixed after reduction under the provisions mentioned above. It goes further and provides that even if no application has been made for reduction of rent and that rent has not been reduced by revenue authorities, the landlord in any suit or proceeding will not be entitled to realize more rent than would have been fixed after reduction if the raiyyat had applied under s. 112-A, Bihar Tenancy Act, and s. 85, Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. This, however, applies for arrears of rent due up to a certain year. Thus, on the one hand they have provided machinery for reduction of rent on the application of the raiyyat and on the other by Act IX of 1938 they have made it impossible for the landlord to realize for the previous years also rent at a higher rate than has been fixed after reduction or would have been fixed if the tenant had put in an application. In all these three cases the rent of the raiyyat has been reduced and the learned Munsif in each case has reduced the decree on the basis of the reduced rent. In other words he has refused to execute the decrees for previous years for a sum in excess of the amount which was payable after the reduction of the rent.

In the first place in my opinion these applications are not maintainable. It is the settled practice of this Court that revisional powers are not exercised in those cases in which a party entitled to appeal has not appealed. In all these three cases, the orders of the learned Munsifs were appealable. They obviously came under s. 47, Civil Procedure Code, Mr. B. N. Mitter who appears for one of the petitioners contended that the learned Munsif amended the decree and that the order of amendment was not appealable. In whatever form the order of the Munsif may be, in fact the effect was that he refused to execute the decree for the sum which was mentioned in it and proceeded to execute it only after reducing it according to the direction given in s. 15 of Act IX of 1938. It was really a question of execution, satisfaction and discharge of decree, and as I have said, obviously come under s. 47 and an appeal lay to the District Judge. The petitioners not having appealed, cannot invoke the revisional powers of this Court.

I now come to the merits of the applications. Mr. Mitter argues (1) that s. 15 had no application to execution proceedings, and (2) that if it did apply, it was repugnant to s. 38, Civil Procedure Code, an existing Indian Law and to the extent of that repugnancy it was void under s. 107, Government of India Act. Now, as to the first part of the argument s. 20 makes it perfectly clear that the directions given to Court in s. 15 apply to the proceeding for the execution of the decrees also. No doubt the word 'decree' is not mentioned in the section, but the execution proceedings can refer to no other proceedings than proceedings for execution of a decree. Then the Civil Procedure Code by itself does not apply to suits for rent. It is s. 143, Bihar Tenancy Act, which, with certain reservations, makes the Civil Procedure Code applicable to rent suits and the procedure and regulation of rent Courts and Revenue Courts are exclusively within the purview of the Provincial Legislatures. It was quite open to the Provincial Legislature to amend s. 143, Bihar Tenancy Act, and provide new procedure for the trial of rent suits. If by implication they authorized the Court not to execute decrees beyond a certain sum specified in s. 15, they had full power to do so. In my opinion, this provision is not repugnant to any existing law relating to the Concurrent List No. 3 of the Sch. VII, Government of India Act. For these reasons the petitions fail. I would reject them. There will be no order for costs.

Chatterji, J.—I agree.

s. Petitions rejected.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 351 of 1937

June 17, 1937

BHIDE, J.

GHULAM HUSSAIN AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE—DEFENDANT

—RESPONDENT

Custom (Punjab)—Person described in school register and other documents as Rajput—Some documents describing him as Pandit or Kashmiri—Person held Rajput—Second appeal—Finding based on conjecture and misunderstanding of evidence.

Where a person is entered in school register and other documents as Rajput though in some documents he is described as Pandit or Kashmiri, the latter description not being a caste description, the person must be considered as a Rajput.

Finding of fact based partly on conjectures and partly on a misunderstanding of the evidence is liable to be set aside in second appeal.

S. A. from the decree of the District Judge, Rawalpindi, dated January 6, 1937.

Dr. Shuja-ud Din, for the Appellants.
Mr. Mohammad Monir, for the Advocate-General, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—The plaintiffs who are brothers sued in this case for a declaration that they were Rajputs by caste. The trial Court granted the declaration but the learned District Judge has dismissed the suit on appeal. From this decision the plaintiffs have appealed. The learned District Judge's finding appears to me to be based partly on conjectures and partly on a misunderstanding of the evidence and is therefore liable to be set aside. Plaintiff Ghulam Hussain produced a school certificate of the year 1900 showing that he was then entered as a Rajput in the school register. The learned District Judge has discarded this important evidence on a pure conjecture that the description may have been given with a view to take advantage of the Punjab Land Alienation Act, which was then passed or with a view to claim a higher status than what the plaintiffs possessed. The plaintiffs are described in various other documents as Rajputs. In some they are described as "Pandits" or "Kashmiris". But it is well-known that these are not castes and even the learned Counsel for the respondent did not urge that these were caste names. It is quite likely that the plaintiffs were described as "Kashmiris" owing to their having come from Kashmir and they have been described as Pandits owing to some of their ancestors being Sanskrit scholars. The description as "Pandit" or "Kashmiri" was, therefore, of no significance at all so far as the issue in this case was concerned. It is not suggested that the plaintiffs belong to any other caste.

In my opinion the trial Court's decision was correct. I accept the appeal and restore the trial Court's decree with costs throughout.

D.

Appeal allowed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 122 of 1936

September 26, 1939

ZIA-UL HABAN AND HAMILTON, J.J.

PATIPAL SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

RAMPAL SINGH MINOR AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Widow—Possession by, of property not legally entitled to possess—Criterion as to whether she prescribed to absolute or limited estate—Widow held prescribed to absolute estate—U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), s. 233 (k)—Question of title not raised in partition proceedings—Partition completed—Question cannot be raised subsequently in Civil Court.

Mere possession by a Hindu widow of property to which she is not legally entitled is not sufficient to create an absolute title in her. The criterion is her own intention and conduct and the question whether she prescribed to an absolute estate or to a limited estate must be decided on the facts and circumstances of each case. [p. 139, col. 2]

A Hindu widow had obtained mutation of certain property in the teeth of opposition by the other heirs and there was absolutely nothing to show that she claimed to be in possession as a limited estate holder:

Held, that the widow prescribed to an absolute estate and not to a limited estate.

[Case-law referred to.]

If a question of title affecting the partition of a mohal which might have been raised in the partition proceedings is not raised and the partition is completed, s. 233 (k) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act, debars the parties to the partition from raising the question subsequently in a Civil Court. Rai Bajrang Bahadar Singh v. Rai Beni Madho Bakhsh Singh (11), followed. [p. 141, col. 2.]

S. C. A. against the order of the District Judge, Hardoi, dated March 17, 1936.

Messrs. M. Wasim and Ali Hasan, for the Appellants.

Mr. Hyder Husain, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiffs' second appeal against a decree of the learned District Judge of Hardoi upholding the decree of the learned Civil Judge of that place by which the plaintiffs' suit for possession of property left by one Musammat Parbati was dismissed.

Musammat Parbati who died on March 3, 1931, was the widow of one Jutta Singh, who had a separated brother Dal Singh. Jutta Singh died about the year 1910 but some eight years before his death he had executed and got registered a will in respect of his property by which he bequeathed all his property in equal shares to five legatees, namely:

- (1) His wife Musammat Parbati,
- (2) His daughter Musammat Tejni,
- (3) His brother Dal Singh's daughter's son Subedar Singh,
- (4) Dal Singh's other grandson Ajrail Singh, and

(5) Kundan Singh, a cousin of Subedar and Ajrail's father, Puran Singh.

The will provided that Musammat Parbati would hold the property for her life and that after her death the remaining four legatees would be entitled to the entire property in equal shares. Of the five legatees Musammat Tejni and Subedar died in the lifetime of the testator but when Jutta Singh died, his widow Musammat Parbati somehow or other came into possession of the entire property. On Dal Singh's death his property came into the possession of his widow, Musammat Jitni and when the latter died in 1914, some of the collateral relations of Dal Singh including Sumer Singh, father of one of the present plaintiffs-appellants, applied for mutation of names. Musammat Parbati also claimed the property left by Dal Singh and the Revenue Court ordered mutation in her favour, so that she remained in possession of Dal Singh's property also without any attempt on the part of the collaterals to dispossess her.

On November 14, 1930, Musammat Parbati executed two deeds of gift in favour of Rampal Singh and Banke Singh, defendants-respondents, and some others. After her death in 1931, two suits were brought in the Court of the Civil Judge of Hardoi for possession of the property left by Parbati against the present defendants-respondents. One of the suits, i. e. No. 57 of 1934 was brought by the present appellants and the other No. 77 of 1934, by some others. As both the sets of the plaintiffs claimed to be reversionary heirs of Jutta Singh and Dal Singh, the suits were consolidated and the plaintiffs in each suit made defendants in the other. As between the two sets of the plaintiffs, the learned Civil Judge held that the present appellants were the reversioners of Jutta Singh and Dal Singh but both the suits were dismissed on the ground that Musammat Parbati was in possession of the property not as a Hindu widow but that she held the property left by Jutta Singh under the will and the property left by Dal Singh as an absolute owner by adverse possession. The plaintiffs in both the suits appealed to the learned District Judge but he dismissed both the appeals so far as it related to possession of the property in suit. The plaintiffs in suit No. 77 have submitted to the decree of the learned Judge but those of suit No. 57 have filed this appeal.

So far as the property left by Jutta Singh is concerned, it is argued that Parbati was in possession of the property merely as a Hindu widow and not in pursuance of Jutta Singh's will. It may be mentioned that the plaintiffs-appellants' case in the Courts below was that Jutta Singh had revoked his will and that the will was never acted upon. Both the pleas were, however, repelled by both the Courts below and the evidence produced by the appellants disbelieved. The findings that the will was not revoked and that it was acted upon are findings of fact, and as such, binding on this Court. It was, however, argued that the Courts below have not given full weight to Ex. 33, which is a copy of a goshwara relating to the mutation case that arose on Jutta Singh's death and showing that it was a case of mutation by wirasat, but we find that the learned Judges of both the Courts below have considered this document but have rejected it as evidence of the allegation that Parbati succeeded to the property as heir to her husband and not on his will. We are of opinion that the lower Courts were right in their view. In First Civil Appeal No. 74 of 1932 decided by this Court on February 4, 1935 also, the entry of wirasatan in a similar register was not accepted as proof of mutation having been made as heir. Moreover, there was in the present case the statement of Puran Singh, father of Ajrail Singh, made in the mutation Court to the effect that he on behalf of his minor son Ajrail Singh and Kundan Singh, the other surviving legatee, had consented to the property being mutated in favour of Parbati alone and the learned Judge finds that as both Puran Singh and Kundan Singh were well off, they could well afford to let the widow remain in possession of the entire property for her life. It was conceded that so far as the shares of the legatees who survived Jutta Singh, namely, Ajrail Singh and Kundan Singh were concerned, the plaintiffs can lay no claim to them and that they can only claim the remaining one-third of the property. The learned Counsel for the appellants finally relied on s. 105 of the Indian Succession Act and argued that so far at least as the shares of Tejani and Subedar Singh were concerned, they must be deemed to have reverted to the estate of the testator and to have been left intestate by him. No doubt s. 105 lays down that if the legatee does not survive the testator, the legacy shall ordinarily lapse and form part of the residue of the testator's property: but we have seen that in the present case the legacy bequeathed to all the five legatees was in equal shares so that on Jutta Singh's death, the entire property left by him went to the three remaining legatees in three equal shares.

We not only accept the lower Courts finding but are ourselves of opinion that Parbati was in possession of Jutta Singh's property under the latter's will, and this being so, her own share of the property must on her death go to the surviving legatees according to the terms of the will. Therefore the plaintiffs-appellants' claim to Jutta Singh's property cannot succeed.

As regards Dal Singh's property, it was argued that merely from the fact that Parbati remained in possession of that property, it cannot be presumed that she prescribed to an absolute estate and it was urged that she prescribed only to a limited estate and the property must on her death pass to the reversioners. It is true that mere possession by a Hindu widow of property to which she is not legally entitled is not sufficient to create an absolute title in her. The criterion is her own intention and conduct and the question whether she prescribed to an absolute estate or to a limited estate must be decided on the facts and circumstances of each case.

In Deo Datt v. Raj Bali (5 O. W. N., 653) (1), it was held that it cannot be laid down as a rule that in no case can the possession of a Hindu female without title mature into absolute ownership and that the determination of the question must be based upon the circumstances of each case.

In Chandra Shekhar Singh v. Jagjiwan Bakhsh Singh (A. I. R. 1929 Oudh, 215) (2), it was held that it is a settled rule of law that the possession of a Hindu female, in respect of the property to which he has come into possession, but is not entitled to it by way of inheritance under the Hindu Law, must be deemed to be adverse to the reversioners and cannot be considered to be that of a mere life estate holder, unless an arrangement or an agreement to that effect is proved to have been arrived at between her and the reversioners or unless she has herself declared that she held only as a limited owner possessed of a life estate and that the mere fact that a Hindu female declares that she is in possession of such property by way of inheritance does not show that she declares herself to be in possession as a limited owner and the real view in such a case would be that she not being entitled to possession by way of inheritance her possession must be deemed to be that of a trespasser and consequently adverse against the reversioners, unless they prove that it was with their consent.

(1) 5 O W N 653; 113 Ind. Cas. 266; A I R 1928 Oudh 411.

(2) A I R 1929 Oudh 215; 115 Ind. Cas. 279; Ind. Rul. (1929) Oudh 231.

Similarly in Sant Bakhsh Singh v. Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh (7 O. W. N. 1082) (3), a Bench of this Court held that when a widow not entitled to anything more than maintenance out of her husband's estate is given possession of her husband's share, her possession would be prima facie adverse unless it can be shown that it was the result of any arrangement with the reversioners or that she took possession of the property prescribing only for the limited estate of a Hindu widow.

In Hubraji v. Chandrabali Upadhiya (8 O. W. N. 6) (4), also it was held that where mutation in favour of a widow is not proved to have been effected with the consent of the other members of the family with a view to console her and she remains in continuous possession of the property for more than twelve years without any right whatever, her acts and the circumstances attending the possession showing that she intends to hold the property as of right, she acquires title to the property by adverse possession and further that property acquired by a Hindu female by adverse possession becomes her stridhan and must go to her stridhan heirs.

The Allahabad High Court in Uman Shankar v. Musammatt Aisha Khatun (I. L. R. 45 All. 729) (5), held that where a Hindu widow took possession of the share of her deceased husband, had her own name recorded in respect thereof and dealt with the property for a series of years as if it were her own absolute property, then in the absence of any admission on the part of the widow that her possession was no more than that of the widow of a separated Hindu in possession as such her possession must be taken to be adverse to the surviving brothers.

In the case of Chaudhri Satgur Prasad

(3) 7 O W N 1082; 129 Ind. Cas. 338; A I R 1931 Oudh 25; Ind. Rul. (1931) Oudh 104; 6 Luck 365.

(4) 8 O W N 6; 130 Ind. Cas. 849; A I R 1931 Oudh 89; Ind. Rul. (1931) Oudh 161.

(5) 45 A 729; 74 Ind. Cas. 869; A I R 1924 All. 88.

v. Kishore Lal (L. R. 46 I. A. 197) (6), the widow of one of two joint brothers after the death of the surviving brother and his widow, successfully applied for mutation of names in respect of the property of which she was in possession alleging that she was owner of it as heir to her husband's separate property. Subsequently, she put forward the same claim in suits and she also made a gift of part of the property to religious uses. It was held by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee that the above-mentioned acts were public assertions by the widow of a right to exclusive possession and ownership and made her possession adverse within Sch. II, Art. 144 of the Indian Limitation Act. The case would, we think, be still stronger when the widow comes into possession of the separate property of her husband's brother.

In Sham Koer v. Dah Koer (L. R. 29 I. A. 132) (7), their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that a possession as of right by the widow and daughter-in-law of a member of an undivided Mitakshara family of a portion of the undivided estate for twelve years bars the heirs of the deceased unless they can show that the possession was permissive.

In the present case so far from Parbati's possession over Dal Singh's property being permissive or proceeding by consent of the heirs, she obtained mutation in the teeth of opposition by the father of one of the present appellants and there is absolutely nothing to show that she claimed to be in possession as a limited estate holder. We are therefore of opinion that Parbati prescribed to an absolute estate and not to a limited estate in the present case.

The learned Counsel for the appellants relies on the case of Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (L. R. 51 I. A. 171) (8), in which it was held that a title acquired through adverse possession by a widow who claims and holds a widow's estate inures to the estate of her deceased husband and descends upon her death accordingly, but we have already said that there is nothing in the present case to show that Parbati claimed Dal Singh's property, or held it as a widow. Reliance was also placed on behalf of the appellants on Sant Bakhsh Singh v. Bhagwan Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R. 6 Lucknow, 365) (3), but in that case Musammatt Lachhmin, widow of Pancham Singh obtained mutation in respect of property left by her husband's brother Bahadur Singh on the statement made in the mutation Court by Baldeo Singh, the surviving brother, that he and Musammatt Lachhmin were entitled as heirs to equal shares in Bahadur Singh's property which means that she came into possession by consent of Baldeo Singh. Reference was also made in this case to the case of Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (L. R. 51 I. A. 171) (8), and the learned Judges remarked:—

(6) 46 I A 197; 75 Ind. Cas. 486; 11 L. W. 384; (1920) M. W. N. 3; 24 O. W. N. 394; 38 M. L. J. 259; 18 A. L. J. 235; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. O.) 55; 23 Bom. L. R. 451; 43 A. 152; 27 M. L. T. 200; A. I. R. 1919 P. O. 60 (P. O.)

(7) 29 I. A. 132; 29 O. 664; 6 O. W. N. 657; 4 Bom. L. R. 547; 8 Sar. 280 (P. O.)

(8) 51 I. A. 171; 80 Ind. Cas. 788; 23 A. L. J. 304; A. I. R. 1924 P. O. 121; 5 L. 192; (1924) M. W. N. 442; 20 L. W. 10; 2 Pat. L. R. 245; 28 O. W. N. 960; 26 Bom. L. R. 1117; 47 M. L. J. 935; 6 P. L. T. 1; L. R. 5 A (P. O.) 94 (P. O.)

"In Lajwanti v. Safa Chand (8), it was held that title acquired through adverse possession by a widow who claims and holds a widow's estate inures to the estate of her deceased husband and descends upon her death accordingly. In Deo Datt v. Raj Bali (5 O W N 653) (1) one of us discussing the decision of their Lordships just quoted held that it could not be regarded as authority for the broad proposition that in every case whenever a Hindu widow is found in possession of property without title her possession must be regarded as that of a widow's estate but that the determination of the question as regards adverse possession must be based upon the circumstances of each case. In the present case we find that when Bahadur Singh died, Baldeo Singh was the person legally entitled to succeed to the estate. However, mutation was made in his name as well as in the name of Musammatt Lachhmin at his request and with his consent. . . . When Baldeo Singh stated that Musammatt Lachhmin succeeded to a moiety share as an heir he could not possibly mean anything else than that she was to hold it as a limited owner. It is further to be noted that Musammatt Lachhmin herself in the deed of gift Ex 1 refers to her possession both with regard to the share which came in her possession on her husband's death as well as in regard to the share which she obtained on the death of Bahadur Singh as possession as an heir. This seems to us to show beyond all doubt that she never regarded herself as in possession of an absolute estate."

This quotation from the judgment in Sant Bakhsh Singh's case clearly shows that the decision in that case proceeded on facts entirely different from what we have in the case before us.

The learned Counsel for the appellant also relies on the case of Thakur Gaya Bakhsh Singh v. Deo Singh (I. L. R. 9 Lucknow, 484) (9) and Musammatt Ram Raji v. Balbhaddar (95 Ind. Cas. 432) (10), but we do not think these cases lay down any rule contrary to what we have stated above and which was laid down in the cases referred to above.

We are therefore definitely of opinion that Musammatt Parbati cannot, in the present case, be held to have prescribed to a limited estate only.

For reasons given above, the plaintiffs-appellants' claim fails in regard to both the properties. There is, however, another ground on which their claim is barred. It appears that during the pendency of the plaintiffs' appeal in the Court of the District Judge certain co-sharers applied to the Revenue Court for partition of the mohals in which the property in suit is situated and that the appellants were impleaded in that partition case. They, however, failed to put up any claim in the partition Court and the partition was confirmed in 1938. The plaintiffs' claim is now barred under s. 233 (k) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act. In the case of Rai Bajrang Bahadur Singh v. Rai Beni Madho Bakhsh Singh (I. L. R. 13 Lucknow, 503) (11), their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that if a question of title affecting the partition of a mohal which might have been raised in the partition proceedings is not raised and the partition is completed, s. 233 (k) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act debars the parties to the partition from raising the question subsequently in a Civil Court and that the word "partition" is not used in the Act in the narrow sense of mere arrangement into units of area but that it imports and includes the distribution of rights in the units among the sharers. It is true that at the time when the partition suit was brought, the appellants' suit had been dismissed by the trial Court but this did not relieve the appellants of the necessity of putting forward their claim in the partition Court. Had they put forward their claim in the partition Court, partition would probably have been stayed till final decision of their suit in the Civil Court. In any case as the plaintiffs' claim title to the property, it was incumbent on them to bring a claim in the partition case to which they were parties but not having done so, their claim is barred by s. 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act. We have allowed the respondents to file papers relating to the partition

(9) 9 Luck. 484; 150 Ind. Cas. 495; 11 O W N 351; A I R 1934 Oudh 190; 7 R O I.

(10) 95 Ind. Cas. 432; A I R 1926 Oudh 497.

(11) 13 Luck. 508; 175 Ind. Cas. 775; 1938 O L R 321; 1938 A L R 558; 10 R P O 17; 4 B R 713; A I R 1938 P O 210; 1938 O W N 606; (1938) R D 606; (1938) A L J 786; (1938) 2 M L J 596; 68 O L J 193; 33 S L R 845; 65 I A 314 (P.C.)

case in this Court, as they are papers that were not in existence and could not therefore be filed in the trial Court.

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

B.

Appeal dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 178-B of 1939

June 2, 1939

MOSELY, J.

THE KING—PROSECUTOR

versus

NGA BA SAING—RESPONDENT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 370, 421, 439 (5), (6), 369—Appeal against conviction dismissed—Recommendation for enhancement made subsequently—Accused asked to show cause—Whether can show cause against conviction—Sub-s. (6) of s. 439 only refers to sub-s. (5)—Scope—Construction of s. 369.

When an appeal is preferred and it appears to the Judge that there is reason to believe that an enhancement of the sentence should be considered, it is the practice of the Rangoon High Court to issue notice in revision to the accused to show cause against enhancement, and the appeal and the revision are heard at one and the same time. Where a recommendation for enhancement of sentence has been made to the High Court after the decision of the appeal, the accused when called upon to show cause against the enhancement of the sentence cannot be allowed to show cause against his conviction, but may only show cause against enhancement of the sentence. The order of the High Court in appeal must be regarded as final, and the accused person cannot be heard to show cause against his conviction. It does not make any difference that the accused's appeal from jail was dismissed summarily. Such appeals are dismissed summarily after consideration of the grounds of appeal, in addition to the judgment and, if necessary, the evidence. Emperor v. Jorabhai Kisanbhai (3), Emperor v. Sher Singh (5) and Emperor v. Dhanna Lal (6), relied on.

Sub-s. (6) of s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code, can only refer to sub-s. (5) of the section, and means that, although a party who has not appealed cannot be allowed to make an application in revision, yet, if proceedings are taken against him in revision and notice to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced is issued to him, he shall, in showing cause, be entitled also to show cause against his conviction. Sub-s. (6) is intended to operate as an exception to what is otherwise laid down in the section itself.

Section 369, Criminal Procedure Code, must be read with s. 430 of the Code.

Or. R. for review of the order of the Headquarters (S. P.) Magistrate, Sagaing, dated February 22, 1939.

Order.—The respondent, Nga Ba Saing, was convicted under the second part of s. 307, Penal Code, and sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment. The learned District Magistrate, Sagaing, has submitted the case in revision with the recommendation that the sentence be enhanced. The accused had preferred an appeal (No. 267 of 1939) before this, and that appeal was summarily dismissed about a month before receipt of the District Magistrate's recommendation. The respondent, when called upon to show cause against enhancement of sentence, has endeavoured, in addition, to show cause against his conviction, and the first question to be considered in this case is whether that can be done, having regard to the fact that the accused's appeal has already been dismissed.

When an appeal is preferred and it appears to the Judge that there is reason to believe that an enhancement of the sentence should be considered, it is the practice of this Court to issue notice in revision to the accused to show cause against enhancement, and the appeal and the revision are heard at one and the same time. I do not know of any previous case in this Court where a recommendation for enhancement of sentence has been made after the decision of the appeal, and there is certainly no reported case in the rulings of this Court on the subject. There is, however, considerable authority in the Indian High Courts for the view that in such a case the accused person cannot be allowed to show cause against his conviction, but may only show cause against enhancement of the sentence.

The High Court's power in revision are laid down in s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code. Sub-s. (1) enacts that the High Court may exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by certain sections, of which the only one in point, s. 423 (1) (a), lays down that the Appellate Court in an appeal from an order of acquittal may, inter alia, find the accused guilty and pass sentence on him according to law, and s. 439, sub-s. (1), goes on to provide that the Court may enhance the sentence. This power to enhance the sentence is subject to sub-s. (2), namely notice to the accused person, and to sub-s. (3) in regard to the maximum enhancement in certain cases. Sub-section (4) prevents a finding of acquittal being converted into a conviction. Sub-s. (5) says that where under this Code an appeal lies and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision should be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed. This sub-section prevents a revision application being treated as an appeal when no appeal has been brought. Sub-section (6), which is the one in question in this case, says:

"Notwithstanding anything contained in this section, any convicted person to whom an opportunity has been given under sub-s. (2) of showing cause why his sentence should not be enhanced shall, in showing cause, be entitled also to show cause against his conviction."

This last sub-section was only added when the Code was revised in 1923. It is important to note that the initial words are "notwithstanding anything contained in this section," and not "notwithstanding anything contained in this Code." It would seem clear therefore that sub-s. (6) can only refer to sub-s. (5) of the section, and means that, although a party who has not appealed cannot be allowed to make an application in revision, yet, if proceedings are taken against him in revision and notice to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced is issued to him, he shall, in showing cause, be entitled also to show cause against his conviction. Had it been otherwise, it could have been contended in the case of an accused to whom notice had been issued and who had not appealed or in a non-appealable case had not applied for revision of his conviction, that he could not question the correctness of his conviction, and that was in fact decided under the old Code in Emperor v. Chinto (1). It would seem therefore that sub-s. (6) is intended to operate as an exception to what is otherwise laid down in the section itself.

It is only by virtue of the provisions of this sub-section that the accused can show cause against his conviction, and, as I have said, under the words of the section itself it would seem that the accused is not entitled to do so where his appeal has been previously dismissed. It is laid down elsewhere in the Code that judgments once passed cannot be altered or revised except as provided for by this section. Section 369 of the Code says:

"Save as otherwise provided by this Code..... no Court, when it has signed its judgment, shall alter or review the same, except to correct a clerical error."

This section must be read with s. 430 of the Code where it is said that "judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final, except in the cases provided for in s. 417" (appeals against an acquittal by the Government) "and Chap. XXXII" of which s. 439 is a part. It appears therefore to me that the order of this Court in appeal must be regarded as final, and that the accused person cannot now be heard to show cause against his conviction. Another view was taken incidentally in Emperor v. Mangal Naran (2) where it was remarked that it was the practice of the Bombay High Court to issue notice against enhancement in revision after the disposal of the appeal, and that the accused then still had the right to show cause against his conviction, though any attempt to set aside his conviction would not have much chance of success.

This view, however, was dissented from in Emperor v. Jorabhai Kisanbhai (3) a case on all fours with the present one, where it was said that such a case where the appeal had already been heard on the merits was not provided for in sub-s. 6, and was outside the purview of that sub-section. It was also remarked that to allow cause to be shown against the conviction would be to re-hear the appeal on the merits, and that that would be a proceeding which is against the ordinary principle of finality of judgments, such as has often been referred to by the Privy Council; for instance, in Hook v. Administrator-General of Bengal (4) at p. 508. This ruling was followed in Emperor v. Sher Singh (5). In that case a petition by the accused for revision of his conviction and sentence was dismissed, whereupon the Crown presented an application in revision for enhancement of the sentence. It was held there that the accused was no longer entitled under s. 439, sub-s. (6), to re-open the question of his guilt in the face of the previous finding by the High Court. Emperor v. Dhanna Lal (6) a similar case, also followed Emperor v. Jorabhai Kisanbhai (3). It was said there:

"Sub-section (6) was meant to give an accused person to whom a notice of enhancement of sentence was issued and who has not appealed, or if no appeal lay, has not applied for revision of his conviction, an opportunity to question the correctness of his conviction if it was proposed to enhance his sentence."

(2) 49 B 450; 87 Ind. Cas. 424; A I R 1925 Bom 268; 26 Cr. L J 968; 27 Bom. L R 355.

(3) 50 B 783; 97 Ind. Cas. 803; A I R 1926 Bom 555; 27 Cr. L J 1173, 28 Bom. L R 1051.

(4) 48 O 499 at p. 508; 60 Ind. Cas. 631; A I R 1921 P O 11; 48 I A 187; 19 A L J 366; 40 M L J 423; 29 M L T 336; (1921) M W N 313; 33 O L J 405; 3 U P L R (P O) 17; 23 Bom. L R 648; 25 O W N 915; 14 L W 221 (P O).

(5) 8 L 531; 100 Ind. Cas. 234; A I R 1927 Lah. 217; 28 Cr. L J 266; 28 P L R 559.

(6) 10 L 241; 117 Ind. Cas. 669, A I R 1929 Lah. 797; (1929) Cr. Cas. 429; 30 Cr. L J 815; 30 P L R 409; Ind. Rul. (1929) Lah. 685.

Another case on all fours with the present one is Emperor v. Abdul Qayum (7) which also followed the decision in Emperor v. Jorabhai Kisanbhai (3). It does not appear to me to make any difference that the accused's appeal from jail was dismissed summarily. Such appeals are dismissed summarily after consideration of the grounds of appeal, in addition to the judgment and, if necessary, the evidence. As to the merits of the case for enhancement, I am afraid that I cannot see any. This was a case of an assault with a dah by one ex-convict on another ex-convict, apparently arising out of a sudden quarrel. It is true that the person assaulted was unarmed. He had six injuries, two of which were on the head. The other four were on the hand, arm and fingers, and might have been caused when the complainant was defending himself. The evidence given only referred to the first blow struck. Both the accused and the complainant appear to have been drunk at the time. The main ground of the learned District Magistrate's recommendation for enhancement was that the accused person had made a previous attempt to murder the same man, Maung Po An, but I find that the previous case in which this accused, Nga Ba Saing, was convicted (Criminal Regular Trial No. 98 of 1935 of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Myinmu) was a case of an assault against a totally different person, Maung San Htaik, who gave a different father's name. It does not appear to me to be necessary to take any steps to enhance the sentence, and that will be ordered accordingly.

D.

Order accordingly.

(7) 55 A 715; 146 Ind. Cas. 157; A I R 1933 All. 483; (1933) Cr. Cas. 830; 34 Cr. L J 1205; (1933) A L J 957; L R 14 A 248 Cr.; 6 R A 268 (2).

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 48 of 1938

December 23, 1938

WORT, J.

NRIPENDRA NATH CHATTERJI—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

JUGAL PRASAD MANDAL AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Bihar Tenancy Act (VIII of 1934), ss. 52, 180—S. 52 is wider than s. 180—Under former section tenure-holders are entitled to abatement—Second appeal—Finding as to whether lands were totally unfit for cultivation—Interference in second appeal.

Section 52, Bihar Tenancy Act, is much wider than s. 180 inasmuch as it deals with every class of tenants. S. 52 undoubtedly gives right of abatement to tenure-holders.

The question whether the lands were totally unfit for cultivation for the years in suit, is a matter for the Court below and the High Court cannot interfere in second appeal, when the lower Appellate Court has accepted the finding of the trial Court that the entire land has been diluviated and no area was cultivable in the years of the suit.

A. from the appellate decree of the Additional Sub-Judge, Bhagalpur, dated November 8, 1937.

Mr. Subal Chandra Mazumdar, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. C. Misra, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of an action for rent in which the defendants claimed abatement and in the result appears to have claimed total abatement on the ground that the lands in suit were covered with water of the Ganges for the years for which rent was claimed. It is contended by Mr. Mazumdar appearing on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant that the learned Judge is in error both in law and on the facts of the case, inasmuch as in the first instance, the claim by the defendants was merely for an abatement in the sense that the lands were less fit for cultivation than they would have been but for the fact that the lands had become diluviated and when they re-appeared, sand was deposited on them. I must say that it looks very much as if it had been the defendants' original case, because an application was made for the appointment of a Commissioner for the purpose of ascertaining these facts; but that appears to have been abandoned and ultimately the Judge refused to appoint a Commissioner. In the result, the Judge came to the conclusion that the lands were totally unfit for cultivation for the years in suit. Whether this was so or not was a matter for the Court below and I cannot see how this Court can interfere, although I must say, if I had to try this case in the first instance, that I should have very grave doubts whether the defendants' case in this regard was made out. Not only is the evidence vague but it appears to be somewhat contrary to the case that was made out at first. But this much is to be said for the defendants that in para. 5 of the written statement defendant No. 1 does state that "the rent-claimed land was entirely washed away by the Ganges" in two years. This appears to have entitled the landlord to rent at least for some of the years in suit. The Appellate Court accepted the finding of the trial Court which was to this effect :

"On this point the evidence is ex parte and unchallenged. Defendant has pledged his oath and has examined a boundary man to say that the entire land has been diluviated and no area was cultivable in the year in suit."

Strictly speaking I suppose he should have amended the defence before being allowed to make a case of that kind. But it has been accepted, as I have said by the trial Court and the Appellate Court and I have no jurisdiction to interfere as much as I feel inclined to. As regards the point of law, the matter seems to be perfectly clear. Mr. Mazumdar relies upon s. 180, Bihar Tenancy Act, which amongst other things provides as follows :

"A raiya...until he acquires a right of occupancy in the land, shall be liable to pay such rent for his holdings as may be agreed upon between him and his landlord."

Mr. Mazumdar contends that that section applies and not s. 52. Now, s. 52 is a much wider section than s. 180, inasmuch as it deals with every class of tenants. The words of the section are "Every tenant shall ..." and we know from the definition of tenant in s. 4 of the Act that a raiya is simply one class of tenant. Section 52 undoubtedly gives right of abatement, and as these defendants are not *raiya*s but tenure-holders, as has been held by the Judge in the Court below, it seems to me on the question of law that the learned Judge was right in holding that, if the facts were established, the tenants would be entitled to abatement. In the paragraph of the written statement to which I have referred, the defendant agrees to pay one anna per bigha for the purpose of fixing his rights in the land when it should re-appear from water. Ordinarily stated the Judge would have given judgment for the plaintiff for this amount; but he points out that he is unable to assess that as the area has not been shown. If it had been a matter of any great value to the landlord, I might incidentally say in parenthesis that it is of greater value to the defendants, I might have remanded the case for this question to be determined. But as it is of no particular value to the plaintiff-landlord, I do not propose to adopt that course. With these observations I hold that the appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Appeal No. 70 of 1937

June 28, 1938

EDGLEY, J.

Kazi ABDUL SATTAR—DEBTOR—

APPELLANT

versus

DINAJPUR TRADING AND BANKING CO.,

LTD., AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), ss. 42, 53, 54, 17—Powers of Court under s. 42, extent of—Transfers effected long before insolvency petition but having considerable effect on insolvency—Order refusing discharge, if can be based on such transfers—Questionable transactions falling under s. 42 but not avoidable under ss. 53 and 54—Review of—Fraudulent transfer—Onus to prove fraud—Insolvency—Appeal—Procedure—Creditor dying during discharge proceedings—Substitution of heirs—Criterion.

Section 42, Provincial Insolvency Act, gives the Court wide authority to examine the insolvent's conduct whether before or after the insolvency. Fraudulent transfers by the insolvent prior to insolvency come within the purview of s. 42 (1) (i). But there must be some limit regarding the alleged fraudulent transfers upon which the order of discharge can be refused and the Judge ought not to take into his consideration conduct which could not have had anything to do with the bankruptcy either in producing it or in affecting it in any way after its commencement. Only such conduct or affairs as may or can have had some effect upon the bankruptcy ought to be taken into consideration. But where the transfers have considerable effect upon the insolvency then an order refusing discharge can be based on such transfers although they might have been effected long before the application for insolvency. G. C. Moses v. A. C. Oakeshott (3) and Ex parte Constable; In re Barker, (3), referred to. [p. 147, col. 2.]

In view of the wide powers conferred upon the Court by s. 42 of the Act, the Court has power generally to review any questionable transactions covered by that section which are in any way relevant to the insolvency even if such transactions could not be expressly avoided under ss. 53 and 54 of the Act. [p. 148, col. 1.]

In an application by debtor for discharge, if the creditors allege that the debtor's case comes under s. 42 (1) (i) by reason of some fraudulent transfers effected by him, the onus would lie upon the creditors to prove fraud, if any, in respect of the transaction. [p. 148, col. 2.]

The procedure as regards the issue of notices on creditors is prescribed primarily in order to afford them a reasonable opportunity to appear at the time of the hearing of the application for discharge. [p. 147, col. 1.]

Where during the course of discharge proceedings started by the insolvent, a creditor who is a party to such proceedings dies, the criterion which should be adopted for the purpose of deciding whether the heirs of such creditor should be substituted is to ascertain whether or not the interests of such persons are likely to be adversely affected by their non-substitution :

Held, that the non-substitution of the heirs did not adversely affect their interest and therefore the failure to substitute did not render the appeal incompetent. Thakur Singh v. Ganga Singh (1), referred to.

O. A. from the original order of the District Judge, Dinajpur, dated September 25, 1936.

Messrs. Bijali Bhusan Sanyal and Sudhansu Bh. Sen, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Girija Bh. Sanyal and Nirmal K. Sen, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is directed against an order of the learned District Judge of Dinajpur, dated September 25, 1936, under which he directed that the application for discharge of the appellant should be disallowed. In the case with reference to which this appeal arises, the appellant filed his application for insolvency on April 10, 1935. An adjudication order was passed on August 29, 1935, and the appellant applied for his discharge on February 8, 1936. This application was contested and was disallowed by the learned District Judge in his order, dated April 25, 1936, against which this appeal is directed. The first point that arises for consideration in connection with this appeal is whether or not this Bench has jurisdiction to hear it. With regard to this question, it appears that the appellant, at the time when he filed the appeal, valued it at Rs. 5,400. It is, however, provided in Item No. 4 (iii), s. 1, Chap. II of the Appellate Side Rules that a Judge sitting singly may hear all appeals against orders made in insolvency proceedings in cases where the property of the insolvent does not exceed Rs. 1,000 in value. In the case out of which this appeal arises, it appears from the record that the total value of the insolvent's property as realized by the Receiver amounts to Rs. 279-8-0. It is therefore clear that this Bench is competent to hear the appeal. A preliminary objection has been urged to the effect that no appeal lies in this case, as there is a note at p. 25 of the paper-book to the effect that the appeal has abated as against the heirs of the deceased respondents Nos. 9, 11 and 13. The deceased respondents were creditors upon whom notices of the date of the hearing of the application for discharge were served in accordance with the provisions of r. 9 framed under s. 79 of Act V of 1920. This procedure has been prescribed primarily in order to afford the creditors a reasonable opportunity to appear at the time of the hearing of the application for discharge. It is argued, however, on behalf of the respondents that the procedure prescribed by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure in the matter of substitution of parties should be followed in insolvency proceedings and as the heirs of the three respondents mentioned above have not been substituted, the appeal to this Court must be regarded as incompetent.

When the insolvent's application for discharge was being considered by the lower Court it appears from the record that the requisite notices as required by r. 9 of the rules framed under s. 79, Provincial Insolvency Act, were duly served upon creditors Nos. 9 and 11. As regards creditor No. 13 there is a note in the order-sheet dated March 18, 1936, that creditor No. 13 was reported to be dead. Her heirs were, however, substituted on March 22, 1936, and there is also a return of service on the record which shows that her heirs were duly served with the requisite notices. Apparently, the original creditors Nos. 9 and 11 died during the pendency of this appeal in this Court and as regards the original creditor No. 13, owing to some mistake, which has not been explained, her name was shown in the memorandum of appeal instead of her heirs. The question therefore which has to be considered is whether or not the failure to make the heirs of the original creditors Nos. 9, 11 and 13 parties to this appeal renders the appeal incompetent. With regard to this matter, it is significant that the only creditors who took part in the proceedings in the lower Court with reference to the insolvent's application for discharge were creditors Nos. 1 and 2. It is true that certain other creditors proved their debts. Those who did so prove, were creditors Nos. 1 to 12, 19 and 22 to 25; and it is admitted that it is only these creditors who would be entitled to partake in the ultimate distribution of the assets of the insolvent. As regards creditors Nos. 9 and 11, beyond proving their debts in the lower Court, they appear to have taken no interest in the proceedings there and although the notices required under r. 9 of the rules framed under s. 79, Provincial Insolvency Act, were duly served upon them, they did not put in an appearance during the course of the proceedings in connection with the application of the insolvent's discharge. Similarly, as regards creditor No. 13, her heirs were duly served with the requisite notice but they did not think it fit to appear in those proceedings in the lower Court. There is a provision in the Provincial Insolvency Act (s. 17) which provides for the procedure to be followed in the case of the death of the insolvent himself. There is also a specific provision to the effect that in certain circumstance the procedure in the Civil Procedure Code shall specifically apply to the insolvency proceedings: see s. 18, Provincial Insolvency Act. The Act is, however, silent with reference to the procedure which should be adopted in the matter of substitution of the heirs of deceased creditors.

This being the case, in my opinion, the criterion which should be adopted for the purpose of deciding whether such heirs should be substituted is to ascertain whether or not the interest of such persons are likely to be adversely affected by their non-substitution. In this connection it was pointed out by the Lahore High Court in Thakur Singh v. Ganga Singh (1), that the death of a creditor not really interested in the proceedings does not necessarily cause an appeal to abate. In the case now before us, it cannot be said that the heirs of the deceased respondents mentioned above are likely to be adversely affected owing to their non-substitution. As stated above, the original creditors Nos. 9 and 11 took no interest in the matter in the lower Court beyond proving their debts. Their names have been entered in the schedule of creditors and their heirs have admittedly received such shares of the assets of the appellant as would be finally payable at the time of the distribution of the assets. As regards the heirs of creditor No. 13, this creditor and her heirs even failed to prove their debts and it is therefore difficult to say how her heirs could possibly be affected by the fact of their non-substitution in these proceedings. As stated above, the procedure as regards the issue of notices on creditors appears to have been prescribed primarily in order to afford them a reasonable opportunity to appear at the time of the hearing of the application for discharge. In my opinion, this procedure cannot be said to constitute such persons parties to the proceedings in the same sense that plaintiffs and defendants are parties in a civil suit. I do not think that the heirs of the deceased respondents can be affected in any way by their non-substitution; and in my view, the fact that the heirs of the deceased respondents Nos. 9, 11 and 13 have not been impleaded in the case cannot in any way affect the competency of the appeal. The learned District Judge refused the application for discharge, because he was inclined to think that the insolvent shortly before applying for his discharge fraudulently transferred certain properties to his wife and son for the purpose of cheating his creditors. The transfers in question were effected by three kobalas: the first was dated February 19, 1933, and was in favour of his wife and the remaining two kobalas were dated October 21, 1933, and they were in favour of his wife and his son, respectively.

The first point urged on behalf of the appellant is that the Court below should have only considered the conduct of the insolvent subsequent to the date of his insolvency. The language of s. 42, Provincial Insolvency Act, is clearly against this contention and gives the Court wide authority to examine the insolvent's conduct whether before or after the insolvency. The order of the learned Judge appears to have been passed mainly with reference to the provisions of s. 42 (1) (i) of the Act, which empowers the Court to refuse to grant an absolute order of discharge on proof of the fact that the insolvent has concealed or removed his property or any part thereof or has been guilty of any other fraud or fraudulent breach of trust. In this connection, it may be observed that the provision of s. 39 (2) (j), Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, is somewhat similar in its terms to s. 42 (1) (i), Provincial Insolvency Act. With reference to the provisions of the former Act, it was held in G. C. Moses v. A. C. Oakeshott (2) that a fraudulent transfer by the insolvent prior to the insolvency came within the purview of s. 39 (2) (j) of the Act and rendered the insolvent guilty of a breach within the meaning of the subsection. The same principle must be held to be applicable in the case before us; and this contention which has been raised on behalf of the appellant cannot, therefore, be accepted. It was next urged that some limit should be imposed with regard to the time of the alleged fraudulent transactions upon which an order for discharge can be refused, and that it is not open to the Court to base an order of refusal upon transactions which took place long before the application for insolvency. In support of the contention, reliance is placed upon the observations of Lord Esher in Ex parte Constable; In re Barker (3). His Lordship stated with regard to similar transactions in England that:

"It seems to me that there must be some limit and I think the Judge ought not to take into his consideration conduct which could not have had anything to do with the bankruptcy either in producing it or in affecting it in any way after its commencement. Only such conduct or affairs as may or can have had some effect upon the bankruptcy ought to be taken into consideration."

(2) 30 O W N 518; 95 Ind. Cas. 522; A I R 1928 Oal 794.

(3) (1890) 25 Q B D 285; 59 L J Q B 331; 38 W R 609, 7 Morrell 111.

(1) A I R 1927 Lah. 424; 103 Ind. Cas. 623; 9 L L J 257.

In my view, this is the principle which should certainly be adopted in cases which fall under s. 42 (1) (i), Provincial Insolvency Act. But, in the case now before us if these particular allegations of fraud against the insolvent can be maintained, there is no doubt that the transfers upon which the order of the learned District Judge was based must have had some considerable effect upon the insolvency. This contention must, therefore, fail. The next argument put forward on behalf of the appellant is that the application for discharge should not have been refused unless the transactions mentioned in the order of the learned District Judge could be brought within the provisions of ss. 53 and 54, Provincial Insolvency Act. These sections mention certain specific transactions which may be treated as voidable or void provided they took place within a certain definite period before the presentation of the petition, for insolvency. But it is quite clear that in view of the wide powers conferred upon the Court by s. 42 of the Act the Court has power generally to review any questionable transactions covered by that section which are in any way relevant to the insolvency even if such transactions could not be expressly avoided under ss. 53 and 54 of the Act. I, therefore, do not consider there is any substance in this argument put forward on behalf of the appellant. It is next argued that in any event, having regard to the nature of the transactions represented by the three kobalas mentioned above, it cannot be said that these transactions were fraudulent in such a way as to make him guilty of fraud or of fraudulent breach of trust under s. 42 of the Act.

With regard to the first kobala dated February 19, 1933, it purports to convey to the appellant's wife certain immovable properties belonging to him in satisfaction of a debt due to her in respect of her dower, which amounts to Rs. 2,200. No evidence was given in the Court below to the effect that no such debt was due from the appellant to his wife on account of dower; and this being the case, the transaction would appear to be prima facie genuine. The learned District Judge appears to have proceeded upon the view that the value of the property conveyed by the kobala, dated February 19, 1933, was very much greater than the value as stated in the kobala, but the evidence with regard to the actual value of this property does not appear to be sufficient to indicate that it was undervalued at the time when the transaction took place. The kobala in question purports to convey to the appellant's wife property of about 21 bighas and 17 cottas in area besides a one-third share of a jama of Rs. 51-9-1. The average price of this land according to the kobala would be about Rs. 33 a bigha. The appellant admits that part of the land covered by the transfer appertained to some property held by him at Fatepur which would sell at Rs. 50 or so per bigha, but in view of the fact that the transfer was made by the appellant to his wife in lieu of her dower, it is not unreasonable to suppose that he made the transfer at a price somewhat lower than the ordinary value of the land. In any case, having regard to the provisions of s. 42, Provincial Insolvency Act, it is clear that the onus would lie upon the respondent to prove fraud, if any, in respect of the transaction. In my opinion, this onus has not been discharged and it has not been proved that this transaction was fraudulent.

Similarly, as regards the second kobala, dated October 21, 1933, it cannot be said to have been proved that this transaction was in any way fraudulent. The transfer was made for the purpose of reducing further the debt due by the appellant to his wife on account of dower and he transferred to her certain property the value of which was said to be Rs. 1,000. The first item consisted of the equity of redemption in respect of an area comprising 2 bighas 2 kottas and 6 dhurs. This was valued at Rs. 200. The second item comprises the equity of redemption in respect of the appellant's house and garden. According to his evidence, the total value of this property was Rs. 2,000 and, as it has been mortgaged the equity of redemption was stated to be Rs. 700. It is significant that as regards this item of property, the Receiver subsequently sold one-third of the house and the garden transferred for a sum of Rs. 200. This is, therefore, an indication to the effect that the property was actually overvalued at the time of the execution of the kobala. As regards the last item covered by this document, it comprises certain household articles and domestic articles, the total value of which was estimated at Rs. 100. It is true that with regard to this item, the estimate given in the schedule seems to be very low; but there is no satisfactory evidence on the side of the respondents to the effect that the proper valuation of these articles should have been greater and, in view of the fact that the articles in question were probably in daily use by the insolvent himself and his wife, it cannot be said that it has been established that this part of the transaction was fraudulent. The third kobala mentioned in the order of the learned District Judge is dated October 21, 1933. The transfer of the properties mentioned in this document was effected for the purpose of repaying a debt due by the appellant to his son, which appears to have amounted to Rs. 900. There is no evidence to the effect that such a debt did not exist; and, having regard to the nature of the immovable properties mentioned in the kobala, some of which were mortgaged, it does not appear to have been established that the properties were sold by the appellant to his son at an inadequate price.

In my opinion, therefore, it has not been proved that the appellant committed any fraud in connection with the transfers mentioned above. Although admittedly the insolvent's assets were not of a value equal to 8 annas in the rupee of his unsecured liabilities, he gave evidence which, in my opinion, was sufficient to show that the fact that the assets were not of such value had arisen from circumstances for which he could not justly be held to be responsible. In view of the circumstances stated above, I am of opinion that the order of the learned District Judge cannot be maintained. The appeal is accordingly allowed with costs throughout. The order of the lower Court set aside and the appellant is discharged. The hearing fee in this Court is assessed at three gold mohurs. With regard to the circumstances of the case, it is not necessary, in my opinion, to attach any conditions to the insolvent's discharge under s. 42 (3), Provincial Insolvency Act. The prayer for leave to appeal under s. 15 of the Letters Patent is rejected.

D.

*Appeal allowed.BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Sut No. 410 of 1938

July 18, 1938

ENGINEER, J.

KARBALAI GULAM AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS

versus

Haji EBRAHIM BUSERI & Co.—

DEFENDANTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908 as amended in 1938),

Sch. I, Art. 5—Summary suit instituted before amendment more than one year after accrual of cause of action is barred and is not revived by amendment.

Where before January 15, 1938, a summary suit instituted more than one year after the accrual of the cause of action is barred under Art 5, Limitation Act, as it originally stood, the suit is not revived by the amendment of January 15, 1938, which prescribes a period of three years. Appasami Odayar v. Subramanya Odayar (1); Mohesh Narain v. Taruck Nath (2); Vinayak Govind v. Babaji (3) and Mahomed Mehdi v. Sakinabai (4), relied on. Gopaldas v. Tribhawan (5), distinguished.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, Advocate-General, for the Defendants.

Judgment.—This is a summons for judgment and the first point that arises is whether as submitted by the defendants, the suit as a summary suit is barred by the Law of Limitation. The Article applicable in summary suits is Art. 5 which as it originally stood provided a period of one year. That Article was amended by an amendment which came into force on January 15, 1938. By this amendment the period of limitation is increased to three years. It is common ground that before January 15, 1938, more than one year had expired from the accrual of the cause of action, so that if the original Article applies, the plaintiffs are not at liberty to file this suit as a summary suit. The plaintiffs, however, contend that the amendment is retrospective and that the Limitation Act in force when the suit was filed was the Act as amended and therefore the period of limitation applicable is three years.

The Limitation Act of 1859 provided by s. 18 that all suits that might then be pending or that should be instituted within the period of two years from the date of the passing of that Act should be tried and determined as if that Act had not been passed, but all suits to which the provisions of that Act were applicable and which might be instituted after the expiration of the said period should be governed by that Act and no other law of limitation, any statute, Act or Regulation then in force notwithstanding. In the Limitation Act of 1871 which received the assent of the Governor-General on March 24, 1871, and which came into force on July 1, 1871, it was expressly provided that nothing contained in ss. 2 and 3 or in Parts 2 and 3 applied to suits instituted before April 1, 1873, ss. 2 and 3 and Parts 2 and 3, Limitation Act of 1871, make up the whole of that Act except the last Part, viz. Part 4, which refers to the acquisition of ownership by possession.

Thus, in both the Acts of 1859 and 1871, express provision was made for cases where suits were filed after the coming into operation of the respective Acts up to a certain period. When we come to the Limitation Act of 1877, we find that it provided in s. 2 that all references to the Limitation Act of 1871 should be read as if made to the Act of 1877, and that nothing contained in the Acts of 1871 and 1877 should be deemed to affect any title acquired or to revive any right to sue barred under the Act of 1871 or under any enactment thereby repealed. In Appasami Odayar v. Subramanya Odayar (1) their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that if the later Acts of Limitation altered the law, they would not revive the right of suit. The Limitation Act under which the suit was barred was the Act of 1859. In Mohesh Narain v. Taruck Nath (2) at p. 38 the Privy Council held that on April 1, 1873, the plaintiffs' suit was barred by the law of limitation under the Act of 1871, and that the Act of 1877 could not revive the plaintiffs' rights so barred. The provision aforesaid no longer appears in the Limitation Act, but there is a general provision now appearing in the General Clauses Act of 1897, s. 6 of which provides that the repeal of an enactment shall not revive anything not in force or existing at the time when the appeal takes effect, or affect the previous operation of any enactment so repealed. In Vinayak Govind v. Babaji (3) at p. 233 the Appeal Court held that a claim barred by limitation when Act IX of 1871 came into force was not revived by the passing of that Act. In the Limitation Act of 1859, the period of limitation for recovering a deposit was three years from the date of the deposit. The deposit was made on December 12, 1864, and the accounts in question were adjusted in July 1865. In 1871, a new Act of Limitation came into force which provided a period of three years from the date of the demand as the period of limitation for recovering a deposit. The plaintiffs made a demand in April 1877, and filed a suit on June 25, 1877. It was held that the suit was barred by the law of limitation.

This decision was followed in Mahomed (1) 12 M 26; 15 I A 167; 5 Sar. 255; 12 Ind. Jur. 370 (P O).

(2) 20 I A 30 at p. 38; 20 C 487; 6 Sar. 261; 17 Ind. Jur. 164 (P O).

(3) 4 B. 230 at p. 233.

Mehdi v. Sakinabai (4). That was a suit for restitution of conjugal rights. The husband demanded restitution by his letter of July 11, 1906, and the wife refused the demand on July 19, 1906. In the Limitation Act of 1871 there was an Article, viz. Art. 35, which provided a period of two years from the date of demand and refusal as the period of limitation for suits for restitution of conjugal rights. In 1908 the present Limitation Act came into force by which Art. 35 was repealed. On June 16, 1911, the husband made a fresh demand, and the demand not being complied with by the wife, he filed a suit on June 20, 1911. It was held that the plaintiff's right to sue had become barred under Act XV of 1877, and that it could not be revived by Act IX of 1908 which repealed Art. 35 of the earlier Act. Heaton, J. who decided the suit in the first instance, considered himself bound by the authority in Vinayak Govind v. Babaji (3) although he himself was of a different opinion. The matter was taken to the Appeal Court and the Court of Appeal consisting of Sir Basil Scott, C. J. and Chandavarkar, J. affirmed the law laid down in Vinayak Govind v. Babaji (3). On behalf of the plaintiffs, Gopaldas v. Tribhawan (5) was cited in support of their submission. In that case it was held that s. 48, Civil Procedure Code, 1908, has a retrospective effect but this decision proceeded on the ground that s. 154 of the Code clearly contemplated a retrospective effect of the Code and an interference with rights acquired under the old Code, and that therefore there was a different intention within the meaning of s. 6, General Clauses Act. I therefore hold that it was not competent for the plaintiffs to file the suit as a summary suit.

The question then arises as to what order I should make in the matter. In my opinion, it is not necessary to dismiss the suit. The filing of the suit is not barred, only the right to file a summary suit is barred. If the Prothonotary had refused to accept it as a summary suit, the plaintiffs could have got it put on the file as a short cause or a long cause. The order I therefore make is that the suit be transferred to the list of long causes. As regards the merits of the defence, it is not necessary for me to say more than that the defence is of such a character that the Court would be justified in directing an early hearing of the suit. I direct the defendants to file their written statement within four weeks. Parties to make their respective affidavits of documents within ten days thereafter, usual inspection forthwith thereafter, and the suit to be on some board for hearing on November 14, 1938. As regards the costs of the Chamber Summons, the plaintiffs have chosen a wrong method of procedure and I direct the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the Chamber Summons. Counsel certified,

(4) 37 B 393; 17 Ind. Cas. 629; 14 Bom. L. R. 908.

(5) 45 B 365; 59 Ind. Cas. 790; A I R 1921 Bom. 40; 22 Bom. L. R. 1420.

D.

Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 274 of 1939

July 26, 1939

MULLA, J.

NAND KISHORE AND ANOTHER—

APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 423, 236, 237, 238—Powers of Appellate Court under s. 423, if limited by ss. 236, 237 and 238—Accused not charged under s. 424, Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860)—His conviction under that section held wrong in law—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 424—Scope—If applies where property is openly seized by person in exercise of alleged right.

Section 423, Criminal Procedure Code, is to be read with ss. 236, 237 and 238. The powers conferred upon the Appellate Court by s. 423, Criminal Procedure Code, are limited by the provisions of ss. 236, 237 and 238. Mahabir Prasad v. Emperor (1), relied on.

Where the complainant who had put forward a very clear and definite case of cheating under s. 418, Penal Code, never alleged that the accused had either concealed or removed the property within the meaning of s. 424, Penal Code, and no evidence was produced on behalf of the prosecution to show that the property had been concealed or removed by the accused; to such a case ss. 236 and 237, Criminal Procedure Code, are not applicable and the conviction of the accused by the Appellate Court under s. 424, Penal Code, even though they were not charged with that offence, is wholly wrong in law. [p. 153, col. 1.]

The removal referred to in s. 424, Penal Code, is ejusdem generis with concealment which precedes it. Section 424 is designed to meet a special class of cases, and has no application to a case where property is openly seized by a person in the exercise of an alleged right. [p. 154, col. 1.]

Cr. R. from an order of the Sessions Judge, Agra, dated December 23, 1938.

Mr. B. S. Darbari, for the Applicants.

The Deputy Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Order.—This is an application in revision by two persons, Nand Kishore and Hemraj against an order passed by the learned Sessions Judge of Agra in appeal, convicting them of an offence under s. 424, Indian Penal Code. It appears that the applicants were convicted by the trial Court under s. 418, Indian Penal Code, but the learned Sessions Judge found that an essential ingredient of that offence had not been established by the evidence for the prosecution and he thereupon set aside the applicants' conviction under that section and proceeded to convict them under s. 424, Indian Penal Code, maintaining the sentence of fine imposed upon them. As the conviction by the learned Sessions Judge has been challenged mainly on the ground that it is wholly illegal, it is necessary to set out a few relevant facts in order to develop the points of law which arise for consideration.

The applicant Nand Kishore is the manager of the local branch of the Motor and General Finance Company, Limited, at Agra. The head office of the company is at Delhi. The other applicant Hemraj is also an employee of the local branch at Agra and works under Nand Kishore. A part of the business of this company is the sale of motor cars and lorries on the hire-purchase system. It appears that some years ago the company sold three motor lorries on that system to one Bhagwan Das and a person named Shiv Dayal, who is the complainant in the case, out of which the present application arises, stood surety for Bhagwan Das. Bhagwan Das failed to pay the instalments on the due date, with the result that one of the lorries was seized by the company under the terms of the agreement between it and Bhagwan Das. Later on, Bhagwan Das again defaulted in paying the instalments due in respect of the other two lorries, one of which was numbered 1865-AA and is the subject of dispute in the case out of which this application arises. The company gave a notice to Bhagwan Das of its intention to seize the motor lorries under the terms of the agreement. In reply to this notice Bhagwan Das gave a counter-notice to the company saying that if his lorries would be seized by the company, he would prosecute them in the Criminal Court as well as sue them in the Civil Court. It is alleged that this notice was given by Bhagwan Das at the instigation of Shiv Dayal, who was in fact the principal person. The result, however, was that the company stayed its hands and tried to settle the dispute by an agreement between the parties. For that purpose they called Shiv Dayal to the company's office at Agra where some conversation took place between him and one Ved Prakash, an official of the company attached to the head office at Delhi. Now the case set up by Shiv Dayal is that the company agreed to take one of the two lorries regarding which default had been made by Bhagwan Das and to leave the other No. 1865-AA with Shiv Dayal, leaving him to adjust the matter between himself and Bhagwan Das. In pursuance of that arrangement Shiv Dayal executed a fresh agreement on the hire-purchase system on his own behalf in respect of the lorry No. 1865-AA and one Badri Prasad stood surety for him.

It is further alleged that Shiv Dayal settled the matter between himself and Bhagwan Das by paying a sum of Rs. 300. Now the case for the prosecution is that after the execution of the above-mentioned agreement by Shiv Dayal, which was signed on behalf of the company by the applicant Hemraj, the latter suggested that the former should send the lorry to the company's office at Agra after repairs with a view to get a permit from the Police with the company's assistance. Acting upon this assurance Shiv Dayal sent the lorry a few days later from Shamshabad, where he lives, to the company's office at Agra. Having thus secured the lorry, Hemraj and the other applicant, who is the manager of the local branch of the company at Agra, seized it on behalf of the company. Upon these facts Shiv Dayal charged the applicants with an offence under s. 418, Indian Penal Code. The prosecution case very clearly was that the applicants had given a false assurance to Shiv Dayal and he, acting upon that assurance, had sent the lorry to the company's office at Agra, where the applicants seized it, so that he lost his property. If Shiv Dayal's allegation is true, there can be no doubt that the applicants committed an offence of cheating, though the application of s. 418 is very doubtful. The learned trying Magistrate, however, found upon the evidence that Shiv Dayal's allegation relating to the circumstances in which he was induced to send the lorry to Agra, was false. Upon that finding the learned trying Magistrate could not but have acquitted the applicants, because an essential ingredient of the offence of cheating had not been established. In spite of that, the learned Magistrate somehow persuaded himself into convicting the applicants, though the process of reasoning by which he arrived at that conclusion is rather difficult to understand.

The applicants then went up in appeal to the learned Sessions Judge of Agra, who found that the conviction under s. 418, Indian Penal Code, could not be maintained because the lorry had not been obtained by the applicants by means of any false representation such as that alleged by Shiv Dayal. Having arrived at that conclusion, the learned Judge ought to have allowed the applicants' appeal, but instead of doing so he proceeded to consider the facts of the case and ultimately reached the conclusion, that they disclosed an offence under s. 424, Indian Penal Code. In arriving at that result, the learned Judge was influenced by the statement made by the applicants in their defence in which they admitted the fact that the lorry had been seized on behalf of the company, though they clearly said at the same time that this seizure had taken place at the shop of one Chiranjil Lal at Agra and not at the office of the company, as alleged by Shiv Dayal. The learned Sessions Judge argued that the fact of the seizure of the lorry having been admitted by the applicants, their act clearly amounted to an offence under s. 424, Indian Penal Code, because they had no right to seize the lorry, and as they did so and removed it to their office, their action must be deemed to amount to a dishonest removal of the lorry within the meaning of s. 424, Indian Penal Code. It appears further that the learned Judge did not consider it necessary to send the case back for re-trial because he thought that in view of the admission made by the applicants any such proceeding would be wholly unnecessary. In these circumstances the applicants have been convicted under s. 424, Indian Penal Code. The first point which arises for consideration upon the facts mentioned above is whether the learned Judge was legally entitled to convict the applicants of an offence under s. 424, Indian Penal Code, even though they were never charged with it. Upon a careful consideration I think the answer must be in the negative. It is an elementary principle of criminal law that a person cannot be convicted of an offence without being definitely charged with it. This principle is embodied in s. 233, Criminal Procedure Code, which runs as follows :

"For every distinct offence of which any person is accused, there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately."

The same section, however, lays down the exceptions to the general rule which are to be found in the succeeding ss. 234, 235, 236 and 239. The only one of these four sections which can possibly be applied to the present case is s. 236 which runs as follows :

"If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once; or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences."

The next section, namely 237, which is governed by s. 236 provides for the conviction of an accused person of an offence with which he has not been charged and runs as follows :

"If, in the case mentioned in s. 236, the accused is charged with one offence, and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section, he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed, although he was not charged with it."

Let us now examine whether the provisions of these sections could possibly apply to the facts with which we are concerned in the present case. The complainant Shiv Dayal had put forward a very clear and definite case of cheating. There was absolutely nothing in that case even to suggest that the applicants could be guilty of an offence under s. 424, Indian Penal Code. He never alleged that the applicants had either concealed or removed the lorry. Upon the facts alleged by him there could be no case under s. 424, Indian Penal Code. What is still more important is that no evidence was produced on behalf of the prosecution to show that the lorry had been concealed or removed by the applicants. The fact that the lorry was seized at the shop of one Chiranji Lal and was removed from there to the office of the company is to be found only in the statement made by the applicants in their defence in the trial Court. The statement made by the accused persons in their defence cannot, by any means, be said to be evidence as contemplated by s. 237, Criminal Procedure Code. It is thus clear that ss. 236 and 237, Criminal Procedure Code, were wholly inapplicable to the facts in this case and hence the conviction of the applicants by the learned Judge under s. 424, Indian Penal Code, even though the applicants were not charged with that offence, was wholly wrong in law. It is true that s. 423, Criminal Procedure Code, which defines the powers of an Appellate Court lays down that "in an appeal from a conviction the Court may . . . alter the finding maintaining the sentence." But this is to be read with ss. 236, 237 and 238, Criminal Procedure Code. The powers conferred upon the Appellate Court by s. 423, Criminal Procedure Code, are limited by the provisions of ss. 236, 237 and 238, Criminal Procedure Code. In this connection I may refer to a decision of this Court in Mahabir Prasad v. Emperor (1). In that case a person was charged with a substantive offence but was convicted by the Appellate Court for abetment thereof, and it was held that :

"It is not open to a Court to find a man guilty of abetment of an offence on a charge of the offence itself. The only section which empowers an Appellate Court to alter a finding and base a conviction for abetment is s. 423, Criminal Procedure Code, but this section must be read with ss. 237 and 238 of the Act, and as abetment is not a minor offence, it can only come under s. 237 if there is no element in the abetment which is not included in the charge."

I would therefore hold that the learned Sessions Judge in this case erred in law in convicting the applicants under s. 424, Indian Penal Code, though they had not been charged thereunder. Again it appears to me that even upon the merits the conviction recorded by the learned Judge cannot be maintained. The whole basis of the conviction is obviously the fact that the applicants stated in their defence that they had seized the lorry at the shop of Chiranji Lal. It is however to be borne in mind that this was no part of the prosecution case and there was nothing in the prosecution evidence to support it. The learned Judge has, therefore, relied merely upon the statement of an accused person without taking that statement as a whole, as he was bound to do. Read as a whole, the statement of the applicants was that they were entitled, under the agreement between the parties, to seize the lorry. The complainant Shiv Dayal asserted his title to the lorry only on the basis of a written agreement executed by him which had been signed on behalf of the company by the applicant Hemraj. It is obvious that the validity of such an agreement can easily be questioned. There is nothing to show that Hemraj was duly authorized by the company to enter into any such agreement on their behalf. If that agreement was not legally valid and binding on the company, it necessarily follows that the applicants in their capacity as servants of the company, were entitled to seize the lorry and, if they did so, they cannot possibly be said to have dishonestly or fraudulently concealed or removed any property as contemplated by s. 424, Indian Penal Code. If the company was entitled to seize the lorry as urged by the applicants, there could be no element of dishonesty because there could be no wrongful loss to Shiv Dayal. Lastly, it appears to me that the learned Judge has not correctly interpreted the removal referred to in s. 424, Indian Penal Code. It is to be borne in mind that this removal is ejusdem generis with concealment which precedes it. Section 424 is designed to meet a special class of cases and has, in my opinion, no application to a case where property is openly seized by a person in the exercise of an alleged right.

(1) 24 A L J 998; 97 Ind. Cas. 430; A I R 1927 All. 35; 42 A L J 120; 37 Cr. L J 1118.

The result, therefore, is that I allow this application and set aside the conviction and sentence of the appellants. The fine, if any paid by the applicants, may be refunded.

S.

Application allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Miscellaneous Petitions Nos. 2992, 450 and 3619 of 1938

November 22, 1938

LEACH, C. J. AND KRISHNASWAMI

LYENGAR, J.

GOPU CHINA JOGAYYA, GOPU
SESHAVATHARAM AND COMPANY—

PETITIONERS

versus

MANAPALLI BAPANAYYA AND OTHERS

—RESPONDENTS

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 56—Court, if can appoint additional Receiver (other than Official Receiver) for special purpose.

Section 56, Provincial Insolvency Act, does not operate to prohibit the Court appointing an additional Receiver (other than Official Receiver) for a special purpose. The Act contemplates the appointment of some one other than the Official Receiver in special circumstances and the Court has power to appoint an additional Receiver when the case demands it. All that the law requires is that the estate shall be represented by a Receiver appointed in the insolvency proceedings.

O. Misc. Ps. praying that in the circumstances stated in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to post Appeal No. 331 of 1938 preferred to the High Court against the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bezvada in O.S. No. 79 of 1932 for dismissal under O. XXII, r. 8, Civil Procedure Code, declaring that it had abated so far as the first Appellant (first Respondent herein) is concerned.

Messrs. K. Rajah Ayyar and N. Vasudeva Rao, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. K. V. Gopalaswamy and V. Parthasarathy, for the Respondents.

Order.—After this appeal had been instituted, the first appellant was adjudicated an insolvent in the District Court of Kistna at Masulipatam and Mr. V. Rama Rao, the Official Receiver of that Court, was authorized under an order dated August 25, 1938, to continue the appeal in the place of the first appellant. The insolvent was not able to furnish the necessary security, but his brother-in-law Mr. Venkatakrishniah, was prepared to furnish it himself if he were appointed a Special Receiver for the purpose of conducting the appeal. This was brought to the notice of the learned District Judge in a formal application later in the day, whereupon the learned District Judge cancelled his previous order and appointed Mr. Venkatakrishniah as Receiver for the purpose of the appeal. The first respondent in the appeal has filed a petition (No. 2992 of 1938) asking the Court to declare that the appeal has abated so far as the first appellant is concerned, the contention being that the District Court had no power to appoint anyone the Official Receiver to take the place of the insolvent.

Section 56 of the Provincial Insolvency Act state, Court may, at the time of the order of adjudication or at any time afterwards, appoint a Receiver for the property of the insolvent and such property shall thereupon vest in the Receiver. It is conceded that under this section the Court, if it wished, could appoint two or more persons as Receivers, but it is said that, when a Receiver or Receivers have been appointed under the section, only he or they can act on behalf of the insolvent. In our opinion, the section does not operate to prohibit the Court appointing an additional Receiver for a special purpose. Section 57 of the Act confers upon the Local Government the power to appoint Official Receivers to act within such local limits as it may prescribe and states that, where any Official Receiver has been so appointed for the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Court having jurisdiction under the Act, he shall be Receiver for the purpose of every order appointing a Receiver or an interim Receiver issued by any such Court, unless the Court for special reasons otherwise directs. Therefore the Act clearly contemplates the appointment of some one other than the Official Receiver in special circumstances and we consider that the Court has power to appoint an additional Receiver when the case demands it. The Court has passed an order appointing a Special Receiver to represent the estate in the present appeal. All that the law requires is that the estate shall be represented by a Receiver appointed in the insolvency proceedings and the appointment has been made. In these circumstances, we refuse the application filed by the first respondent for an order declaring the abatement of the appeal. The appeal has not abated and as there is before us a petition by Mr. Venkatakrishnaiah, the Special Receiver, asking that he be added an appellant, we direct that his name be brought on the record in the place of the name of the insolvent.

There is also before us an application by the first respondent for an order directing the new appellant to furnish security for costs. This application is unopposed. The first respondent asks that the security be ordered in the sum of Rs. 2,235 of which Rs. 1,735 represents the costs awarded to him in the trial Court and the balance of Rs. 500 the estimated costs of the appeal. By an order of the trial Court the costs awarded to the first respondent were made a charge on certain properties of the insolvent. The first respondent asks for a further order in respect of the trial Court costs as he states that a petition for a revision of that order has been filed in this Court. We are informed by the learned Advocate for the insolvent that that application has been returned to him by the Court and that it is not intended to refuse it. In these circumstances, we consider that the proper order to make now is that the Special Receiver shall deposit in this Court a sum of Rs. 500 as security for the costs in the appeal of the first respondent. Ten days' time will be allowed for the payment of the money.

The Special Receiver is entitled to his costs in the application by the first respondent for an order declaring that the appeal has abated and the first respondent will get his costs as against the Special Receiver in the application for an order directing him to furnish security for costs. There will be no order as to costs in the formal application made by the Special Receiver for an order directing that his name be brought on the record.

(Memo of costs will follow).

N.D. Order accordingly.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 27 of 1937

May 16, 1939

DAVIS, J. C. AND TYABJI, J.

LALUMAL DHOLUMAL AND OTHERS—

APPLICANTS

versus

HARUMAL LALSING AND OTHERS—

OPPONENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1909), O. XXXII, r. 5 (2)—Minor without guardian applying for execution of rent decree—Court, if can allow Receiver appointed in proceedings to execute decree on his behalf.

Sub-r. (2) to r. 5 of O. XXXII, Civil Procedure Code, does not say that an order on any application made by a minor where no next friend or guardian is appointed 'shall' be discharged; it says 'may' be discharged. The sub-rule cannot be construed to deprive the Court of its discretion to allow proceedings, which are in the interests of the minor to go on, or to permit them to be frustrated by mere accident or technicality.

So where an application for execution of rent decree is made by the minor without a guardian being appointed, the Court may allow the Receiver appointed in the proceedings to recover rent on behalf of the minor.

O. R. App. to revise the judgment and decree of Judge of the Small Cause Court, Sukkur, dated December 12, 1936.

Mr. Fatehchand Assudomal, for the Applicants.

Davis, J. C.—This is an application in revision against the judgment of the Judge of the Small Cause Court, Sukkur, in which he granted plaintiff, who was appointed Receiver in Suit No. 3 of 1924, a decree for Rs. 49 being the rent of the house in suit. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 who were tenants, some time after the suit was instituted, paid the rent into Court and said they were not concerned to whom it was paid. So the dispute rested ultimately between the Receiver in Suit No. 3 of 1924 appointed in execution proceedings in Suit No. 3 of 1924 and defendants Nos. 3 to 5 in this suit. Defendants Nos. 3 to 5 in this suit were Narainibai, wife of Dholomal, and her two minor sons by Dholomal while the plaintiff in Suit No. 3 of 1924 was Sobhomal, the son of Dholomal by another wife. The learned Advocate for the applicants Narainibai and her two minor sons contended that the learned Judge was wrong when he relied on s. 64, Civil Procedure Code, to oust Narainibai and her two minor sons, for that section applies only to a private transfer and not to any transfer made under a decree, even if the decree be an award in execution proceedings and the learned Advocate relied upon the Privy Council case in Muhammad Afzal Khan v. Abdul Rahman (1). The learned Advocate argues that it matters not if Ex. 42 which purported to be an assignment of the suit property by Dholomal to his wife Narainibai, was not a genuine document and did not evidence a genuine assignment, because under the award decree, Ex. 37 dated October 21, 1935, Narainibai and her two minor sons had a good title to the property in suit. But Sobhomal, the plaintiff in Suit No. 3 of 1924, was not a party to the award decree of October 21, 1935, and he is not, therefore in any way affected by its provisions. We cannot see, then, that it affects his title or his claim to recover rent in these execution proceedings.

The learned Advocate for the applicant then, however, falls back on the position that the Receiver was not validly appointed; he was not entitled to sue as a plaintiff, and it does appear that the learned Judge has in his judgment said that once he is satisfied that Narainibai and her two minor sons have no title, the question of title does not concern him. Obviously the plaintiff must succeed upon his own rights upon the strength of his own case and not upon the weakness of the defence. But the learned Judge was bound to accept as valid the decree in Suit No. 3 of 1924. Therefore the only point he really had to consider was whether the plaintiff as Receiver was entitled to execute that decree. The learned Advocate for the applicant contends that he was not so entitled, because he was appointed in proceedings brought by Sobhomal, when under the law, he was still a minor. Therefore, these proceedings under O. XXXII, r. 5, being void ab initio, the Receiver's appointment was void and he could not recover the rent for the property in suit. But O. XXXII, r. 5, was intended for the benefit of a minor and was not intended to enable a father to defraud his minor son of his rights; and we observe that sub-r. (2) to r. 5, does not say any order on any application made by a minor where no next friend or guardian is appointed 'shall' be discharged; it says 'may' be discharged. We cannot construe that sub-rule to deprive the Court of its discretion to allow proceedings, which are in the interests of the minor to go on, or to permit them to be frustrated (1) 13 L 702; 139 Ind. Cas. 85; A I R 1932 P C 235; 59 I A 405; Ind. Rul (1932) P C 285; 9 O W N 629; 36 C W N 1129; 36 L W 456; (1932) M W N 1063; 63 M L J 664; (1932) A L J 909; L R 13 A 350; 16 R D 522; 53 O L J 324; 35 Bom. L R 1; 34 P L R 63 (P C).

by mere accident or technicality, such as in this case would deprive Sobhomal of the right to recover these rents through the Receiver. The learned Advocate for the applicant relies upon the fact that the execution application was brought by Sobhomal when he was over 18 years of age but under 21 years and that as a guardian had been appointed to his property, his age of majority was 21 years. We do not think, however, that this argument seriously concerns us in these proceedings. We see no reason why, we should hold all the proceedings in which the Receiver was appointed void, because the execution application was brought by Sobhomal when he was over 18 years and not yet 21 years of age. Under O. XXXII, r. 5 (2) we are not compelled to do so and we do not think that justice in any way requires that we should do so; justice, in fact, requires quite the contrary.

It turns out, then, that these proceedings are really in the nature of Small Cause Court proceedings, and that if Narainibai and her two minor sons wish to prove their title to property in dispute, it is perfectly open to them to file a suit based upon title for that purpose. We therefore dismiss their revision application with costs.

D.

*Application dismissed.NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 224 of 1937

March 27, 1939

NIYOGI, J.

R. S. Pandit KRISHNA CHANDRA
SHARMA—APPELLANTversusSeth RISHABHA KUMAR—*RESPONDENT

Minor—Contract of sale by guardian on behalf of minor—Purchaser, if can seek specific performance against minor—Conveyance and contract of sale—Distinction pointed out.

A guardian's contract for sale or purchase made on behalf of the minor is not enforceable by or against the minor. The principle underlying is that a minor is not personally bound by any contract made on his behalf by his guardian. A contract for sale of immovable property does not of itself create an interest in or charge on such property. If it is a contract of purely personal nature and no personal liability can be imposed on the minor, it must logically follow that the minor cannot be compelled to perform the contract; for the same reason he cannot take advantage of the contract and ask for specific performance. There is another aspect to the question. In every case when there is refusal to implement the contract of sale by the guardian, the breach is committed by the guardian and never by the minor. The purchaser therefore can only claim compensation against the guardian and not against the minor or his property except in the case where the guardian uses the money obtained from the purchaser for the improvement of the minor's estate, a case which stands on a separate footing. The purchaser is not entitled to hold the minor personally responsible for the breach of contract of sale made by his guardian and he is not therefore entitled to claim compensation from him. Consequently s. 24-A of the Specific Relief Act, debars the purchaser from claiming the relief of specific performance against the minor. [p. 159, col. 1.]

[Case-law reviewed.]

There is a distinction between a conveyance and a contract of sale of minor's property. When the minor's property is already alienated, the Court is required only to find whether the alienation is binding on the minor or not. In such a case, no consideration of equity arises. The relief of specific performance is a relief in equity and the question which the Court is faced with is whether it should compel the minor to perform the onerous act of alienating his property in consequence of the contractual obligation incurred by his guardian. Brahmadeo v. Haro Singh (12), dissented from, Venkatachalam Pillai v. Bethuram Rao (13), relied on. [p. 158, col. 2.]

S. A. from the appellate decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, Saugor, dated November 28, 1936, in Civil Appeal No. 24-A of 1936 confirming the decree of the Court of Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Khurai, dated February 29, 1936.

Mr. J. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. V. V. Kelker, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff's appeal from the concurring judgment of the Additional District Judge, Saugor, in Civil Appeal No. 24-A of 1936 delivered on November 28, 1936.

The suit out of which this appeal arises was to enforce specific performance of a contract of sale, in respect of a house belonging to the minor defendant, made by his mother acting in her capacity as his guardian. The sale deed had in fact been executed on October 14, 1934, but the guardian mother changed her mind and refused to have it registered. The sale deed was not, however, produced in Court as it was alleged to have been lost. The plaintiff had at first claimed the relief that the defendant be directed to get the sale-deed registered and also for rectification of the contract, but subsequently he withdrew these reliefs and prayed for a decree for specific performance.

The plaintiff averred that the sale was justified by legal necessity and also for the minor's benefit. The original Court did not formulate the issues of fact arising out of the pleadings but tried the suit only on the preliminary issue whether on the facts pleaded by the plaintiff, he was entitled to a decree for specific performance. It held that he was not, and dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court agreed with that view and affirmed the decision.

The general rule is that a contract to be specifically enforced by the Court must be mutual, that is to say, such that it might, at the time it was entered into, have been enforced by either of the parties against the other of them. When, therefore, whether from personal incapacity to contract, or the nature of the contract, or any other cause, the contract is incapable of being enforced against one party, that party is, generally, incapable of enforcing it against the other, though its execution in the latter way might in itself be free from the difficulty attending its execution in the former: see Fry on Specific Performance, Sixth Edition, Chap. VIII, p. 219. In Lumley v. Ravenscroft (1), Lindley L. J., observed "You cannot get specific performance against an infant." The doctrine has, no doubt, some limitations which it is not necessary to indicate here. The weight of authorities in India is opposed to the granting of specific performance in favour of or against a minor. In Fatima Bibi v. Debnath Shah (2), Norris, J., following Flight v. Bolland (3) held that a minor could not maintain a suit for specific performance of a contract entered into on his behalf by his guardian on the ground of mutuality. That view was not accepted by the Madras High Court in Krishnasami v. Sundarappayar (4) in which it was held, following the opinion of Mr. Whitley Stokes, that the doctrine of mutuality had no application in India. The same view was taken in Khairunnessa Bibi v. Loke Nath Pal (5). In Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed (6) the Calcutta High Court held that if a contract is validly entered into on behalf of a minor and there is mutuality in such contract, it is capable of being specifically enforced. In that case the manager of an infant's estate entered into an agreement to purchase certain property on behalf of the minor and the question was whether the minor on attaining majority could sue

(1) (1895) 1 Q B 683; 64 L J Q B 441; 14 R 347; 72 L T 382; 43 W R 584; 59 J P 277.

(2) 20 O 508.

(3) (1828) 4 Russ. 298; 23 R R 101.

(4) 18 M 415; 5 M L J 164.

(5) 27 O 276.

(6) 34 O 163; 11 O W N 34; 4 O L J 431 (F B).

for specific performance of the agreement. The appeal was taken to the Privy Council in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed (7). Their Lordships approved of the application of the doctrine of mutuality but reversed the decision on the ground that it was not within the competence of the manager of a minor's estate to bind the minor or the minor's estate by a contract for the purchase of immovable property, and further that as the minor in that case was not bound by the contract, there was no mutuality and that he could not obtain specific performance of the contract. It is pertinent to notice that although the minor being a Muslim, the guardian's contract was void, their Lordships did not rest the non-enforceability of the contract on its being ab initio void but on the ground that the guardian's contract, valid or void in itself, did not affect the minor or the minor's estate. Their Lordships applied the doctrine of mutuality and refused specific performance on the ground of want of mutuality notwithstanding that the contract sought to be enforced was advantageous to the minor. In Narayan Chetty v. Muthiah Chetty (8) Ramesam, J., held that where a guardian of a minor enters into a contract on behalf of the minor that contract cannot be specifically enforced though it may be for the purpose of necessity or for the minor's benefit. In Swarath Ram Ram Saran v. Ram Ballabh (9) the Allahabad High Court declined to recognise the distinction between a case where a minor is a purchaser and a case where he is a vendor on the ground that in either case there is absence of the element of mutuality. In Nripendra Chandra Sarkar v. Ekbarali Joardar (10) which was a case of a contract by the manager of a joint family to sell land belonging to joint family including a minor, it was held that the application of the principle laid down in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed (7) was not limited to the case of a contract for the purchase of immovable property and that consequently the contract was not enforceable against the minor's share. In Abdul Haq v. Yehia

Khan (11), it was pointed out that no distinction could be drawn between a contract of purchase and a contract of sale and that the decision of the Judicial Committee was based on the broader ground that it is impossible for the Court to decree specific performance against a minor. Das, J., rested his decision on the ground of mutuality which Foster, J., was not prepared to accept although for other reasons he agreed with the decision of Das, J. A different view was taken by Wort, J., in Brahamdeo v. Haro Singh (12). The criterion which the learned Judge appears to have adopted was whether the sale of the minor's property was justified by legal necessity or benefit and acting on the principle that a guardian's alienation made for legal necessity or benefit of the minor is binding on the minor he decreed specific performance. With due respect, the learned Judge overlooked the distinction between a conveyance and a contract. When the minor's property is already alienated, the Court is required only to find whether the alienation is binding on the minor or not. In such a case no consideration of equity arises. The relief of specific performance is a relief in equity and the question which the Court is faced with is whether it should compel the minor to perform the onerous act of alienating his property in consequence of the contractual obligation incurred by his guardian. This was pointed out by Sundaram Chetti, J. in Venkatachalam Pillai v. Sethuram Rao (13). The Madras High Court, with the exception of Krishnasami v. Sundarappayar (14) which was decided before the clear pronouncement of the principle by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed (7), has been quite consistent in declining specific performance against a minor on the ground of want of mutuality as is evident from the two cases cited already, and Chidambara Swamigal v. Ramakrishna Reddiar (14), M. Nageswara Rao v. Mandava (15). I may in passing

(7) 39 O 232; 13 Ind. Cas. 331; 39 I A 1; 16 O W N 74; (1912) M W N 22; 9 A L J 33; 15 O L J 69; 14 Bom. L R 5; 21 M L J 1156; 11 M L T 8 (P O).

(8) 47 M 692; 80 Ind. Cas. 658; A I R 1924 Mad. 680; 48 M L J 575; 34 M L T 350; (1924) M W N 482; 20 L W 103.

(9) 47 A 784; 89 Ind. Cas. 27; A I R 1925 All. 595; 23 A L J 625.

(10) 57 O 268; 127 Ind. Cas. 66; A I R 1930 Cal. 457; 34 O W N 272; Ind. Rul. (1930) Cal. 818.

(11) A I R 1924 Pat. 81; 78 Ind. Cas. 483; 4 P L T 553; 2 Pat. L R 181.

(12) A I R 1935 Pat. 237; 157 Ind. Cas. 327; 1 B R 747; 8 R P 117.

(13) 56 M 433 at p. 441; 142 Ind. Cas. 315; A I R 1933 Mad. 322; 64 M L J 354; 37 L W 340; Ind. Rul. (1933) Mad. 219; (1933) M W N 315.

(14) A I R 1924 Mad. 863; 82 Ind. Cas. 926; 47 M L J 683; 20 L W 559; (1924) M W N 878; 35 M L T 110.

(15) A I R 1928 Mad. 830; 110 Ind. Cas. 492; (1928) M W N 214.

refer also to Malla v. Muhammad Sharif (16) which applied Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed (7), in the wider sense indicated by the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council cited ab.ve.

The review of the authorities shows that barring Wort, J. all the High Courts are unanimous on the view that a guardian's contract for sale or purchase made on behalf of the minor is not enforceable by or against the minor.

The principle underlying the view enunciated by their Lordships of the Privy Council evidently appears to be that a minor is not personally bound by any contract made on his behalf by his guardian as was laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Waghela Rajsanji v. Sheikh Masluddin (17) see also Ramajogayya v. Jagannadham (18). A contract for sale of immovable property does not of itself create an interest in or charge on such property (see s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act). If it is a contract of purely personal nature and no personal liability can be imposed on the minor, it must logically follow that the minor cannot be compelled to perform the contract; for the same reason he cannot take advantage of the contract and ask for specific performance. There is another aspect to the question; Can the purchaser recover compensation from the minor for a breach of contract by the guardian? In every case when there is refusal to implement the contract of sale by the guardian, the breach is committed by the guardian and never by the minor. The purchaser, therefore, can only claim compensation against the guardian and not against the minor or his property except in the case where the guardian uses the money obtained from the purchaser for the improvement of the minor's estate a case which stands on a separate footing. The purchaser is not entitled to hold the minor personally responsible for the breach of contract of sale made by his guardian and he is not, therefore, entitled to claim compensation from him. If that is so, s. 24-A of the Specific Relief Act debars the purchaser from claiming the relief of specific performance against the minor.

(16) A I R 1927 Lah. 355; 99 Ind. Cas. 684; 8 L 212; 28 P L R 492.

(17) 11 B 551; 14 I A 89; 5 Sar. 16 (P O).

(18) 42 M 185; 49 Ind. Cas. 872; A I R 1919 Mad. 641; 36 M L J 29; 25 M L T 23; 9 L W 229; (1919) M W N 148 (F B).

The appeal is dismissed with costs. Counsel's fees Rs. 25.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 168 of 1936

February 9, 1939

LEACH, C. J. AND SOMAYYA, J.

RM. AR. AR RM. ARUNACHALAM
CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

SABARATNAM CHETTIAR AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 28—Hindu father adjudged insolvent—Son's share in family property, if vests in Official Assignee—Creditor of son, whether can attach son's share without leave of Insolvency Court—Such attachment, if defeats Official Assignee's right to sell son's share to discharge father's lawful debts.

Section 28 (2), Provincial Insolvency Act, refers only to the property of the insolvent and the prohibition against the institution of legal proceedings without the leave of the Court refers to proceedings with regard to the insolvent's property. Although the right of an insolvent Hindu father to sell his son's share in the family property to discharge his own lawful debts vests in the Official Assignee or the Official Receiver, the son's share does not vest in him and hence proceedings can be taken in respect of the son's interest in the family property without the leave of the Insolvency Court. The right to sell the son's interest only exists so long as the son's interests in the family property exists. If the interest has been sold or if there has been a lawful attachment, which has the same effect, there exists no property over which the power can be exercised. While the interest of the son remains unsold or unattached, the Official Assignee has the right to sell the properties for the lawful debts of the insolvent father, but unless he exercises his right, he may lose it and he loses it if the interest of the son is attached by a creditor of the son. Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (1), Bala Venkata Seetharama Chettiar v. Official Receiver, Tanjore (2), Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das (3), Gopalakrishnayya v. Gopalan (4), Chinna Veeriah v. Guriva Reddi (5) and A. A. No. 253 of 1938, relied on, Balusami Naidu v. Official Receiver (6), dissented from. [p. 161, col. 2]

A. against an appellate order of the District Court, Ramnad at Madura, dated July 2, 1936.

Messrs. M. Patanjali Sastry and T. K. Sundararaman, for the Appellants.

Messrs. C. S. Venkatachariar and M. Murugappa Chettiar, for the Respondents.

Leach, C. J.—On September 24, 1931, the appellant obtained a decree for Rs. 19,383-10-1 with interest against one Ramaswami Chettiar and his five sons. The father and the sons constituted a joint Hindu family. In 1926, the father was adjudicated an insolvent by the Subordinate Judge of Tinnevely. The Court of the Subordinate Judge of Devakottah subsequently obtained seisin of the insolvency proceedings and the estate of the insolvent vested in the Official Receiver of Ramnad. The Official Receiver sought to bring the whole of the family properties to sale for the benefit of the creditors on the ground that the sons' shares in those properties were available for the discharge of the father's debts on the principle of Hindu Law that sons are liable for their father's debts. The Official Receiver received bids for the various items of property in March, 1932, but he did not accept any bid and adjourned the sale until April 9, 1932. Meanwhile the appellant had filed in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Devakottah proceedings in execution of his decree and asked for the attachment of the shares of the sons in the family properties. An order was issued and the properties were attached. The appellant then filed an application asking the Court to restrain the Official Receiver from proceeding to sell the shares of the sons in the attached properties. By consent, on April 9, 1932, an order was passed by the Subordinate Judge allowing the Official Receiver to proceed with the sale of the properties, but subject to his paying five-sixths of the proceeds (the amount representing the sons' shares) into Court pending the decision of the main application. In pursuance of this order, the Official Receiver sold the properties in June 1932 and realized a total sum of Rs. 17,400. Of this amount, Rs. 14,500 representing the shares of the sons was deposited in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The Subordinate Judge having heard the parties held that the appellant was entitled to an order for payment to him for the Rs. 14,500 on the ground that the Official Receiver's power to sell the interests of the sons in the properties for the discharge of the father's debts was defeated by the order of attachment. The Official Receiver appealed to the District Judge, who reversed the decision of the Subordinate Judge on the ground that the right to sell the properties had vested in the Official Receiver either at the time of adjudication or sometime before the sale of the properties took place. The learned District Judge failed to understand the question which was before him. The fact that the right to sell the son's share had devolved on the Official Receiver was not the only factor. The present appeal is from the order of the District Judge.

The appellant contends that the Official Receiver merely stands in the shoes of the father. He says that as the attachment would be valid against the father and would prevent him from exercising his power to sell his son's interests in the family properties in order to discharge his own debts, the attachment puts an end to the right of the Official Receiver to sell as he has no greater rights than the father. The Official Receiver does not attempt to support the decision of the District Judge on the ground given by the District Judge, but he says that there cannot be a valid attachment without the leave of the Insolvency Court and in this connection relies on the provisions of s. 28, Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920. Before examining the effect of s. 28, it will be convenient to refer to certain authorities which lay down principles which have application here. In Sat Narain v. Behari Lal (1), the Privy Council held that when a Hindu is adjudicated an insolvent under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1901, his sons' interests in the joint family property do not thereby become vested in the Official Assignee, although under s. 52, or in some other way their interest in the family property might be available for the payment of the father's debts. There is no provision in the Provincial Insolvency Act which renders the position any different to the position under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. In Bala Venkata Seetharama Chettiar v. Official Receiver, Tanjore (2), a case governed by the Provincial Insolvency Act, a Full Bench of this Court expressly held that on the insolvency of a Hindu who is subject to the Mitakshara Law, the insolvent's power to sell his sons' shares in the family property for paying his just and proper debts vests in the Official Receiver but that the sons' shares do not vest in him. This principle was re-affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Sat Narain v. Sri Kishen Das (3). There their Lordships pointed out that although s. 52 (2)(b), Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, entitles the Official Assignee to exercise the father's powers to sell the share of his son in the family property to discharge his debts, such powers are subject to limitation. Section 28 (2), Provincial Insolvency Act, states :

(1) 6 L L 1; 84 Ind. Cas. 883; A I R 1925 P O 18; 53 I A 22; 47 M L J 857; 10 O & A L R 1332; (1925) M W N 1; 23 A L J 85; L R 6 A P O 1; 26 P L R 81; 27 Bom. L R 135; 21 L W 375, 1 L C 500; 1 O W N 916; 29 O W N 797 (P O).

(2) 49 M 818; 97 Ind. Cas. 825; A I R 1928 Mad. 994; 51 M L J 269; 24 L W 345; (1928) M W N 743 (F B).

(3) 17 L 644; 164 Ind. Cas. 6; A I R 1936 P O 277; 63 I A 381; 1936 O L R 474; 9 R P O 62; 1936 O W N 681; 2 B R 757; 44 L W 417; 40 O W N 1382; 17 P L T 717; 61 O L J 80; 38 Bom. L R 1129; 1936 A L R 795; (1936) M W N 1204; 33 P L R 976; 71 M L J 813; (1937) A L J 414 (P O).

"On the making of an order of adjudication, the whole of the property of the insolvent shall vest in the Court or in a Receiver as hereinafter provided, and shall become divisible among the creditors and thereafter except as provided by this Act, no creditor to whom the insolvent is indebted in respect of any debt provable under this Act shall during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings have any remedy against the property of the insolvent in respect of the debt, or commence any suit or other legal proceedings, except with the leave of the Court and on such terms as the Court may impose."

This section refers only to the property of the insolvent and the prohibition against the institution of legal proceedings without the leave of the Court refers to proceedings with regard to the insolvent's property. Although the right of an insolvent Hindu father to sell his son's share in the family property to discharge his own lawful debts vests in the Official Assignee or the Official Receiver as the case may be, it does not follow that proceedings cannot be taken in respect of the son's interest in the family property without the leave of the Insolvency Court. The right to sell the son's interest only exists so long as the son's interests in the family property exists. If the interest has been sold or if there has been a lawful attachment, which has the same effect, there exists no property over which the power can be exercised.

The right of a creditor to proceed to attach a son's property notwithstanding the father's insolvency has been recognized by two Benches of this Court. In Gopalakrishnayya v. Gopalan (4), Ramesam and Devadoss, JJ. held that notwithstanding that on the insolvency of a Hindu father joint with his son the power of the father to sell the son's share in the family property passed to the Official Receiver in the insolvency, the Official Receiver is not entitled to exercise that power after there has been an attachment of the son's share by a creditor. The attaching creditor is entitled to proceed with the execution by selling the share of the son. In A. A. O. No. 253 of 1936, Manickam Pillai v. Vallayya Naicken a decision which has not yet been reported, King and Krishnaswami Ayyangar, JJ. had to consider the direct question whether s. 28 (2), Provincial Insolvency Act, prohibits an attachment of a son's share without the leave of the Insolvency Court.

(4) 51 M 342; 111 Ind. Cas. 505; A I R 1928 Mad. 479; 54 M L J 674; 27 L W 420.

They held that it did not. The learned Judges in that case pointed out that all that the Official Receiver can do in respect of the property of the undivided sons of an insolvent is to exercise the power of the insolvent himself and sell that property to meet the insolvent's debt; but that power can be defeated at any time by any action taken by the sons themselves to dispose of their property or by any action taken by the sons' creditors against them. This principle was also recognized by Krishnan Pandalai, J. in Chinna Veeriah v. Guriva Reddi (5). In that case, after the adjudication of the managing member of a joint Hindu family a creditor filed a suit on a promissory note executed by the managing member. The suit was dismissed as against the insolvent and the Official Receiver but was decreed as against the other members of the joint family. It was argued on appeal that the suit could not even be maintained as against the other members of the family on the ground that on the insolvency of the managing member the power to sell the whole of the family property to discharge the debts of the family vested in the Official Receiver as the property of the insolvent. The Court held that the creditor was not resorting to any property of the insolvent or trying to interfere with the power of the Official Receiver. The creditor was only seeking to realise his debt from the share of the son in the family property and therefore the suit was maintainable.

The learned Advocate for the Official Receiver has quoted the decision of Pandurang Row, J. (sitting alone) in Baluswami Naidu v. Official Receiver, Madura (6). The learned Judge does appear to have formed the opinion that in the case of the insolvency of a Hindu father, s. 28 (2), Provincial Insolvency Act, does prevent the creditors of a son from attaching the son's share in the family property without the leave of the Insolvency Court. As I have indicated, I do not share this view and as I have also indicated it is opposed to the decisions of two Benches of this Court: Gopalakrishnayya v. Gopalan (4) and A. A. O. No. 253 of 1936 Manickam Pillai v. Vallayya Naicken. The position is that while the interest of the son remains unsold or unattached, the Official Assignee has the right to sell the properties for the lawful debts;

(5) 66 M L J 277; 148 Ind. Cas. 831; A I R 1934 Mad. 223; 39 L W 347; (1934) M W N 622; 6 R M 541.

(6) (1938) 1 M L J 824; 179 Ind. Cas. 584; A I R 1938 Mad. 752; 47 L W 587; (1938) M W N 455; 11 R M 599.

of the insolvent father, but unless he exercises his right he may lose it and he loses it if the interest of the son is attached by a creditor of the son. For these reasons I hold that the decision of the District Judge is wrong and the decision of the Subordinate Judge should be restored. Accordingly I would allow the appeal with costs against the Official Receiver here and below.

Somayya, J.—I agree.

N.—8.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeals Nos. 171 and 173
of 1939

September 13, 1939

HARRIES, O. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.
CR. A. No. 171 RAMBRICHH SINGH —ACCUSED—APPELLANT, CR. A. No. 173
JADU JHA AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal trial—Duty of prosecution—Defence story untrue—Prosecution must still establish truth of their story—Conviction—Fight between two mobs—Mere suspicion that accused were present is not sufficient for conviction—Court doubting truth of prosecution version—Benefit of doubt.

Even if the version put forward by the defence be wholly untrue, yet the prosecution must establish beyond all reasonable doubt that the case put forward by them is true. [p. 168, col. 2.]

If a fight has taken place between two armed mobs, but there is no evidence as to what actually occurred, a mere suspicion that the accused were present can form no basis for a conviction. [p. 169, col. 1.]

Once the Court has any doubt about the truth of the version even as first recorded in the first information report, then the accused is entitled to the benefit of that doubt. [ibid.]

Cr. As. from the decision of the Sessions Judge, Bhagalpur, dated July 20, 1939.

Sir Sultan Ahmed and Mr. K. K. Banerji, in Cr. A. No. 171, Messrs. Jafar Imam, S. N. Sahay, B. N. Rai, S. Mehdi Imam and R. J. Bahadur (in Cr. A. No. 173), for the Appellants.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.

Messrs. Binoy Bhusan Ray and G. C. Das, for the Complainant.

Harries, C. J.—These are two connected appeals arising out of a criminal case tried by the learned Sessions Judge of Bhagalpur. The appellants in the two appeals are Jadu Jha, Bhukhan Jha, Satyadeo alias Sahdeo Missir, Rama Dhanuk, Shaikh Gafoor, Mahabir alias Jung Bahadur Gope and Rambrichh Singh. The two appeals arise out of the same matter and can be disposed of in one judgment. The seven appellants together with three other persons, who were acquitted, were tried on a number of charges arising out of a riot which took place on January 16, 1939, in village Singhar, P. S. Kishunganj, in the District of Bhagalpur. Jadu Jha was charged under ss. 302 and 148 of the Indian Penal Code; the appellants Bhukhan Jha, Satyadeo, Rama Dhanuk and Mahabir were charged under s. 148 and s. 302 read with s. 149 of the Indian Penal Code; and the appellants Shaikh Gafoor and Rambrichh Singh were charged under s. 147 and s. 302 read with s. 149 of the Indian Penal Code. Jadu Jha was found not guilty of the charge under s. 302 of the Indian Penal Code, but was convicted under s. 302 read with s. 149 and s. 148 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to transportation for life under s. 302 read with s. 149 of the Indian Penal Code and to two years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 148 of the Indian Penal Code, the sentences to run concurrently. The remaining appellants were found guilty under s. 302 read with s. 149 and s. 147 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to transportation for life under s. 302 read with s. 149 and to one year's rigorous imprisonment under s. 147, the sentences to run concurrently. It is against these convictions and sentences that the present appeals have been preferred.

There can be no doubt that a riot took place in the village of Singhar on January 16, 1939, and that during the course of that riot one Jhapta Tiar was killed and another person Mukhlal Chaudhuri severely injured. It is in respect of the death of Jhapta Tiar that the seven appellants have been convicted under s. 302 read with s. 149 of the Indian Penal Code.

The case for the prosecution can be shortly stated as follows:—In the village of Singhar there was a plot No. 657 of an area of about $1\frac{1}{2}$ bighas. This plot formed part of a larger area of 16 or 17 bighas, which was the bakasht land of Mahant Sundar Gir. This land has formerly formed part of a larger area which had been owned by one Sundar Mahto and his nephew Gorelal. These two persons partitioned the land, and Sundar Mahto got the bakasht land on the north-west of the patti and Gorelal the land in the south-east portion. The appellant Jadu Jha and his brother Janardan Jha purchased the land of Sundar about eight years ago in execution of a money decree and the entire interest of Gorelal was purchased by Mahant Sundar Gir in 1933. The plot in question, it is said, formed part of the land allotted to Gorelal in this partition and, therefore, became the property of the mahant. In 1934 the mahant obtained dakhaldhani of the property and since then, it is said, he has been in khas possession of the same. In the year 1935 the appellant Jadu Jha undoubtedly laid claim to this bakasht land of Gorelal alleging that the latter had given it to him in raiyati settlement. There were proceedings under s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure between the appellant Jadu Jha and the mahant; but these proceedings were eventually compromised and the appellant Jadu Jha gave up all claims to the area of 18 bighas of bakasht land which included plot No. 657 which is the important plot in this case.

According to the prosecution, on the morning of January 16, 1939, Satto Kuar, the Mahant's Tahsildar, sent off ten ploughs and ploughmen together with two peons Jhapta Tiar and Mukhlal to plough the bakasht land. According to the prosecution, Jhapta Tiar was a man of another village who had been in the mahant's employ as a sipahi for about two months. The party arrived at Singhar and commenced to plough plot No. 657. The prosecution allege that shortly afterwards Jadu Jha at the head of a mob of about forty or fifty men came from Jadu Jha's Basa, about a quarter of a mile to the north-west of the field, and approached Jhapta Tiar. Jadu Jha is said to have asked Jhapta Tiar why he was ploughing the land, and the latter replied that he was entitled to plough his master's land. Thereupon, it is said, Jadu, who was armed with a spear, came towards Jhapta, who ran towards the south. The mob pursued him, caught him up and Jadu speared him below the right arm pit, and the appellant Mahabir struck him on the head with a garasa. Jhapta fell down whereupon the mob joined in beating him. After disposing of Jhapta, it is said that the mob turned their attentions to Mukhlal and that Jadu Jha speared him in the stomach, whereas others struck him with pharsa, bhala and lathi. After Mukhlal had fallen down, the mob attempted to lift him up, but this they failed to do. The learned Sessions Judge remarks that "Mukhlal is a man of altogether unusual physique and of colossal bulk", and for this reason it is suggested that the mob could not move him. The appellant Jadu and his followers then returned to Jhapta Tiar, who was by then dead and picked up the body and carried it to an orchard of Bhubneshwar Singh. There, it is said, they wrapped the body in a cloth, placed it in a bullock cart and took it to the Basa of Jadu Jha. After that four or five members of the mob returned to the field which was covered with long paddy stubble, and they set fire to it. It is suggested by the prosecution that they did this in order to conceal the blood marks caused by the attacks on Jhapta and Mukhlal.

The two peons, Jhapta and Mukhlal were seated on the boundaries of the plot some distance from each other and some distance from the ploughmen who were actually ploughing. The latter, it is said, ran away some little distance and witnessed the whole occurrence. One of them, namely Shyamlal (P. W. No. 1), went to Sonbarsa, where Satto Kuar, the Mahant's Tahsildar, was and reported to him what had occurred. Satto Kuar, it is said, immediately proceeded on horseback to the Police Station at Kishunganj, which was about six miles away, and at 11-30 A. M. he made a first information report. In this report Satto Kuar mentions that he had sent the ploughmen together with Jhapta and Mukhlal to plough the land and that the appellants Jadu Jha, Bukhan Missir, Gafoor Mia, Sahdeo Missir, Mahabir Gop and another person Uma Missir who was acquitted together with forty or fifty men came on to the plot armed with bhala, garasa and lathi and began to assault the two peons. He mentions that this mob caused injuries to Mukhlal with bhala and garasa and assaulted Jhapta with the same weapons. He further mentioned that he could not say where they had carried Jhapta from the spot and said that the latter was so severely injured that he might well be dead. He added that the accused persons were grievously hurt and that the ploughmen were witnesses of the occurrence.

According to the prosecution, just as the Assistant Sub-Inspector had completed the recording of this report, the appellant Mahabir arrived at the thana and made other report. According to Mahabir's report, Satto Kuar together with about a hundred men came to Singhar armed with bhalas, garasas and lathis and went to the house of the appellant Jadu Jha. It is said that they used force, whereupon the appellants Gafoor Mia, Jhapta Tiar, Bukhan Jha, Bago Missir and the informant defended themselves. In this assault Jhapta Tiar is said to have been struck down and killed. Mahabir alleged that he had been struck with a spear and that he had an injury on the left thumb.

It will be seen that according to this report the deceased man Jhapta Tiar was said to be a servant of Jadu Jha and not of Mahant Sundar Gir.

The Police took up investigation and visited the scene of the riot and found that part of the stubble had been burnt as alleged by the prosecution. According to the Police, blood-stained earth was found in places in spite of the fires, and this earth was later found to be stained with human blood by the Chemical Examiner and Imperial Serologist. The Police came to the conclusion that the version given in Satto Kuar's report was the correct one, and accordingly proceedings were brought against the seven appellants and three others.

According to the prosecution, the occurrence took place between a mob of forty or fifty led by the appellant Jadu Jha on the one hand and two peons of Mahant Sundar Gir on the other hand. It is not alleged that the ten ploughmen took any part in the proceedings. The motive for the attack is said to be the appellants' desire to recover this bakasht land which he had claimed in 1935 to be his property.

It is difficult to believe that the riot was the result of any claim made by the appellant Jadu Jha to this property. As I have stated earlier, it was the case for the prosecution that this property had given rise to proceedings under s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and that those proceedings had been compromised. By that compromise Jadu Jha acknowledged that the mahant was entitled to khas possession of this land, and that being so, there appears to be no reason why the appellant Jadu Jha should have suddenly laid claim to the land. There are indications in this case which suggest that the trouble between the villagers of Singhar and the mahant was far more acute than the prosecution suggest. It was admitted by the witnesses for the prosecution that the mahant's land had been previously cultivated by bataidars and that the mahant over a period of time had succeeded in ejecting these persons. Further, it must be remembered that Jadu Jha and some of the other appellants were prominent members of the Local Congress organization and were taking an active part in the Kisan movement. There was undoubtedly enmity between Jadu Jha and the mahant and litigation had taken place between them. In such circumstances it may well be that the occurrence which took place on the morning of January 15, 1939, was something different from that suggested by the prosecution. It is more likely that this was an occurrence between Kisans demanding possession of bakasht lands and the malik who was denying such possession. From the evidence of Satto Kuar (P. W. No. 2) it would appear that he did not expect any trouble on the morning in question: hence he only sent two peons Jhapta Tiar deceased and Mukhlal. It is to be observed, however, that these two persons were of somewhat unusual character. Jhapta Tiar is admitted to have been an absconder in a murder case, whereas, according to the Sessions Judge, Mukhlal was a man of extraordinary physique who might well have been a retired wrestler, though Mukhlal denied this. However, if only two peons were sent, it does suggest that no trouble was anticipated on the morning in question.

I am, however, far from satisfied that this was an occurrence between a mob on the one hand and two peons on the other. At 11 a.m. that is half an hour before Satto Kuar made his report, Lalji (P. W. No. 20) chaukidar of the village reported at the thana that there was an apprehension of a breach of the peace between Jadu Jha and Mahant Sundar Gir and that both parties had collected lathials. He concluded by saying that he could not say what was the cause of the trouble. Lalji had gone to the thana on foot, and it is fairly clear that he must have left the village immediately before the riot started. In the report he clearly says that both sides had collected lathials. The learned Sessions Judge does not attach any great importance to this report and he regards it as an exaggeration on the part of the chaukidar. The learned Judge thought that Lalji having seen Jhapta Tiar and Mukhlal with the ploughmen might well have thought that the mahant had gathered together lathials. Lalji chaukidar gave evidence, and he undoubtedly resiled from his earlier statement. In the witness box he said that he had seen a number of men at Jadu Jha's house and more men on the mahant's land.

According to him, this was the sole reason why he went to the thana to make a report. When it was put to him that he had mentioned that both sides had collected lathials, he denied having ever made such a statement. The Police, on the other hand, had to admit that such a statement had been made and recorded. If both sides had collected lathials on this particular morning, then it is clear that the prosecution have given a false version of what occurred.

That the occurrence was something different from that suggested by the prosecution is also indicated in the first information report made by Satto Kuar. The names of the accused are given as Jadu Jha, Gafoor Mian, Bhukhan, Satdeo Missir, Mababir Gop, Uma Missir and forty or fifty men more, residents of villages Karawan, Sonbarsa and Tilakpur. These are villages lying at a distance of two or three miles from Singhar, and if the mob consisted of persons from other villages, the probabilities are that this was part of the Kisan agitation and not a private quarrel between Jadu Jha and the mahant.

Another important statement in the first information report is that the accused persons have been grievously hurt. It is not suggested now by the prosecution that any of the accused persons were hurt, and indeed they could not have been hurt if the prosecution version be true. As I have stated, the account now given by the prosecution of the affair is an unprovoked attack by a large mob upon two persons who attempted to run away. There is, however, the clearest statement in the first information report that "the accused persons have been grievously hurt. The Assistant Government Advocate who appeared for the Crown attempted to explain away this difficulty by saying that the word used was not "accused" but "injured." In short, he says the sentence ought to read "the injured persons have been grievously hurt"; and it is to be observed that the first information report was so translated in the Court below and that was the translation which was placed before the Sessions Judge. Accordingly the Sessions Judge does not deal with this aspect of the case. The word used in this sentence is mojrim, and there can be no doubt whatsoever that that word means "accused" or "offenders." It cannot possibly mean "injured". The Assistant Government Advocate suggested that the word might be majrooh which means "injured"; but it is clear that the word written is not majrooh but mojrim.

Mr. Jafar Imam, who has argued this case with great ability on behalf of the main appellants, has contended that the word majrooh is not a word which any person in that locality would be likely to use and that in any event an Assistant Sub-Inspector would never use the word mojrim when he meant injured persons. According to Mr. Jafar Imam, mojrim is a word in common use, whereas majrooh is not. It would be impossible for me to arrive at any decision upon this question but for the fact that I had the advantage of sitting with my learned brother Fazl Ali, J., who has a wide knowledge of the language and of all districts in this province. He is satisfied that a Sub-Inspector could never use the word mojrim to mean injured. It has only one meaning and that is "accused person or offenders."

If Satto Kuar stated that accused persons had been grievously hurt, then it is obvious that there were lathials on the side of the Mahant and that a fight had taken place between two armed mobs. This is, of course, denied by the prosecution; but, in my view, the statement that accused persons had been grievously hurt can only be explained on the ground that there had been a fight between armed parties. If such was the occurrence, then it is clear that the case for the prosecution is wholly false.

There are other indications in the first information report that the document is not a genuine one. Counsel who appeared with Counsel for the Crown in the Court below also appeared with the Assistant Government Advocate in this case, and according to him, the original document was never inspected thoroughly by anybody in the Court below. As I have stated, a translation had been prepared which was before the learned Sessions Judge. A mere glance at the first information report will show that additions have been made to it. The report of the occurrence is written on both sides of the page, and the first page ends with these words "after one hour Shyamlal Missir came running to the muth and reported that Mukhlal Singh peon and Mohan Mandal alias Jhapta Tiar had gone to get the land ploughed". On the reverse side of the sheet the report was continued, and it is clear that the first word on the reverse side is usme. The opening sentence on the reverse side of the sheet can be translated "thereupon or in that affair the accused persons Jadu Jha and others caused injuries to Mukhlal Singh by assaulting him with bhala and garasa, &c., &c." However, above the first line on the reverse side of the page have been inserted three lines which have been written very close together. The lines in the remainder of the report are well and evenly spaced; but these three lines are squeezed in in the narrow space between the line beginning with usme and the top of the page. What appears in the three lines written in that narrow space are the words "Jadu Jha, Bhukhan Missir, Gafoor Mian, Sahdeo Missir, Mahabir Gop, Uma Missir and forty or fifty men more came armed with bhala, garasa and lathi and began to assault him." In short, the names of the accused other than Jadu Jha all appear in these three lines which have been squeezed in at the very top of the page. As I have stated, a cursory glance at this document is enough to show that these three lines could never have been written by a person taking down Satto Kuar's statement in the ordinary course of his duty. The spacing is entirely different and the handwriting is smaller, and it is clear that when these three lines were written it was obvious to the mind of the writer that he had very little space in which to write them.

It is inconceivable that, if Satto Kuar knew the names of the accused, he would have omitted to mention them when the report was first recorded. If this report as originally recorded did not contain the names of Bhukhan Missir, Gafoor Mian, Sahdeo Missir, Mahabir Gop and Uma Missir, then it must have been deliberately altered in order to strengthen the case for the prosecution. It cannot be overlooked that after this report was recorded the appellant Mahabir arrived and made another report, and in that report he mentions not only that he was present but also that the appellants Gafoor Mian and Bhukhan Jha were also there. It was strongly urged by Mr. Jafar Imam that the names of these appellants were added in the thana after it became known from Mahabir that Bhukhan, Gafoor and Mahabir were present in the occurrence. It is quite impossible for me to come to any conclusion as to when and why these names were added; but I am perfectly satisfied in my own mind that the only name which appeared in this report when it was first recorded, was the name of Jadu Jha. The report has undoubtedly been altered and the names of other appellants interpolated therein.

Column 2 on the front page of the first information report also shows that alterations had been made. This is the column in which the names and residences of the accused are given; and it is clear that the name of Mahabir Gop was added in this column. Whoever filled this column first wrote five names, Jadu, Bhukhan, Gafoor, Sahdeo and Uma, and numbered them 1 to 5. Between the name of "Sahdeo" and "Uma" the name of "Mahabir Gop" has been added and numbered 5, and the original No. 5 which stood opposite Uma's name has clearly been altered to 6. This also shows that there were alterations made in this report of which the prosecution have offered no explanation whatsoever. The attention of the Court was also drawn to another addition on the first page. On the last line of the first page of the report it is stated that Mukhlal Singh peon and Mohan Mandal had gone to get the land ploughed. Underneath the name "Mohan Mandal" appears the words "uruf Jhapatu Tiar". According to the prosecution, the deceased Jhapatu Tiar was also known as Mohan Mandal, and it may well be that this was an honest mistake. No attempt seems to have been made to alter the words first written in the report and the words "uruf Jhapatu Tiar" are written just under the words Mohan Mandal. I, therefore, do not attach any great importance to this alteration. However, the insertion of names in this first information report does throw the very gravest doubt upon the genuineness of the case for the prosecution.

That some of the names of the appellants mentioned in the report could not have been given by Satto Kuar, is, in my view, clear from the evidence. It must be remembered that Satto Kuar was not an eye-witness and that he merely stated what Shyamlal Missir (P. W. No. 1) had reported to him. Shyamlal in evidence had to admit that he had not named either Sahdeo or Uma to the Police. He stated that he did not know their names at that time and then said that he forgot whether he gave their names to Satto Kuar or spoke of them as the sons of Khuddar. If he did not know their names at the time, he could not have named them to Satto Kuar, and if he made any reference to these two men he could only have mentioned them as the sons of Khuddar. Even if he had said that the sons of Khuddar were there, such could not account for Uma being named by Satto Kuar because he is not a son of Khuddar. Shyamlal, when he was called to identify Uma and Sahdeo, could not distinguish between them, and before the Committing Magistrate he wrongly pointed out Bhubhan for Satyadeo, which suggests that he knew neither. It seems clear from Shyamlal's evidence that he could not have named either Satyadeo or Uma, yet both names appear in the interpolation in the first information report. The prosecution can offer no explanation as to how these names appear except that Shyamlal must have given them to Satto Kuar. It is clear from Satto Kuar's own evidence that he had no information whatsoever except that given him by Shyamlal; but in spite of that names appear in the first information report, which Shyamlal could never have given and those names appear in the most suspicious circumstances. That being so, I cannot accept this first information report as a genuine document; and that being so, grave doubts arise in my mind about the truth of the case for the prosecution.

The Assistant Sub-Inspector came on to the scene later in the afternoon, and during night he recorded the statements of the various ploughmen. These ploughmen are all servants of the mahant, and therefore, their evidence must be scrutinized with great care. If some one in authority had determined to make out a case against the appellants, these unfortunate ploughmen would have no alternative but to support it. I would, therefore, not attach any great weight to the evidence of the ploughmen unless it is corroborated by independent testimony. As I have stated, the ploughmen all support the prosecution version that this was an unprovoked attack upon two peons; and this version, as I have already pointed out, is most unlikely having regard to the report made at the thana at 10-30 A. M. that morning by Lalji chaukidar (P. W. No. 20). The fact that Lalji chaukidar in the witness-box denied having stated that both sides had collected lathials, also suggests that the prosecution, for reasons best known to themselves, were not putting forward a true version.

Three witnesses made it clear that in this mob were men from Karawan, though they undoubtedly tried to resile from that version later. Jahuri (P. W. No. 19), a *raiya*t of the village, in a statement on oath made under s 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure mentions a mob from Karawan which was joined by Jadu's men. In evidence in the Sessions Court he denied the truth of this and could not remember whether he had ever told the Magistrate when his statement was recorded under s 154. Medni (P. W. No. 21), another *raiya*t of the village, also stated to the Magistrate that a mob from Karawan also surrounded the deceased man Jhapta Tiar. In the Sessions Court he says that what he meant was that a mob came from the Karawan side of the Basa which joined Jadu's mob. Shyamlal (P. W. No. 1) mentioned to the Magistrate in his examination under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that a mob of forty or fifty men came from Karawan and Singhar. Before the Committing Magistrate he said that the mob came from Jadu's Basa, and in the Sessions Court he said that the mob came with Jadu from the north-west and denied that he had stated in his examination under s. 164 that the mob came from Karawan as well as Singhar. It is clear that these witnesses did at first say that the mob consisted of men from Karawan as well as of Singhar but that they have denied this, presumably, with a view to supporting the case of the prosecution that this was a mob assisting Jadu in a personal quarrel.

All the indications show that this was a riot between kisans on the one hand and the zamindar's men on the other. Unfortunately at that time feelings were running high between the parties, and such an occurrence might well have taken place. If that be the true view of the occurrence, then there is the real danger that Jadu might be mentioned as the leader whether he was present or not.

The learned Sessions Judge fully realised the danger of acting on the evidence of interested witnesses, but, in his view the main case for the prosecution was supported by the evidence of witnesses upon whom reliance could properly be placed. The first witness upon whom he relies is Nageshwar Singh (P. W. No. 32). This witness stated that he was a Congress worker and that he witnessed the occurrence. The appellant Jadu was a prominent Congress worker, and at first sight there seems to be no reason why Nageshwar should testify against him and against other appellants who were prominent in the Congress and Kisan movements. The learned Sessions Judge has referred to certain letters which had passed between Jadu and Nageshwar from which it would appear that Jadu was sympathetic towards Nageshwar. These letters were written some time before this occurrence, and it would appear that Nageshwar in the meantime had ceased to be a Congress worker. For some reason or another the prosecution called two witnesses, namely Kirti Narsin Singh (P. W. No. 33) and Sukhdeo Chaudhury (P. W. No. 34) to prove the bona fides of the witness Nageshwar Singh. I am not clear why this evidence was admitted; but as it was admitted, I must pay due regard to it. These two witnesses were prominent Congress men, and they stated that, though Nageshwar had been a Congress worker, he had been expelled from the Congress owing to some complaint made against him. These witnesses undoubtedly say that they did not know the nature of the complaint, but they are quite clear that Nageshwar was at this time not a Congress worker and had actually been expelled from the organization. The witness still posed as a Congress worker apparently with a view to showing that he was quite independent and even sympathetic to the accused. When I find that he was an expelled member and did not admit it frankly, then I cannot regard him as an independent witness. Further, this occurrence took place on a Monday, and though Nageshwar admitted that the Police were investigating on the following Tuesday, he made no statement to them on that day. It was on Wednesday that he first made a statement that he had seen what had occurred and had recognized a number of the appellants. Had Nageshwar Singh been the honest man that he poses to be, I should have expected him to have made a statement on the first possible opportunity. In my view, it would be extremely dangerous to act on the evidence of such a witness.

Another witness, who at first sight appears to be independent, is Kunjo Ohhabi (P. W. No. 35). This witness makes a remarkable statement that he never mentioned to anyone in the village what he had seen, and if that be so, it is difficult to understand how the Police ever heard of him. Later, however, he said he met Agbori Ohhabi near his house on his way home and told him what he had seen. I am doubtful whether this witness can be regarded as an independent witness. He admits that he brought a criminal case against the servants of Jadu Jha in 1341 F. when he was bataidar of land in the village, and later said that he had forgotten if he gave evidence for Mahant Sundar Gir in his case against Gorelal. The witness could not possibly forget whether he had given such evidence and he was obviously lying when he said that he had forgotten. In my view, the witness is under the influence of the mahant and accordingly cannot be regarded as an independent witness.

The last so-called independent witness is Prayag Singh (P. W. No. 40) who stated that he saw the body of Jhapta Tiar being brought to the Basa of Jadu Jha in a bullock cart. He recognized Jadu, Gafoor, Bhukhan, Mahabir and Rambrichh in the mob which was accompanying the cart. He stated in evidence that he named these five persons to the Police when he was examined; but Sub-Inspector Kamla Prasad Singh (P. W. No. 45) stated that Prayag Singh did not mention to the Police which of the accused persons had accompanied the cart. He now definitely states that five of the appellants whom he named were with the cart. Further this witness admitted that he was present when the Assistant Sub-Inspector came to the village on January 16, yet he made no statement until the following day.

The injured peon Mukhlal is obviously an interested witness, and the Sessions Judge very rightly points out that it would be dangerous to act upon his evidence without corroboration. It appears to me that there is no independent evidence corroborating any of these prosecution witnesses, and, therefore, in the circumstances of this case it would be dangerous to act upon the evidence of the eye-witnesses.

It is unnecessary to consider at any length the various versions put forward by the accused. As I have stated earlier in the judgment, Mahabir, in the report which he made, alleged that the deceased man, Jhapta Tiar, was a peon of the appellant Jadu Jha. The learned Sessions Judge was satisfied upon the evidence that this was untrue and that Jhapta Tiar was in fact a servant of the mahant. In my view, the learned Sessions Judge was right in holding that Jhapta Tiar was a servant of the mahant and that he was killed on the plot in question and not at the Basa of Jadu Jha. However, even if the version put forward by the defence be wholly untrue, yet the prosecution must establish beyond all reasonable doubt that the case put forward by them is true.

In my judgment, the riot which took place on the mahant's land on the morning of January 16, 1939, was riot between a body of leians on the one hand and lathials of the mahant on the other. It may be that some of the appellants, if not all of them, were present in that affair; but on the evidence before me I cannot hold positively that their guilt has been established. Once the case, as presented by the prosecution, is found to be false, there is no evidence before this Court upon which any of the appellants can be convicted. If a fight took place between two armed mobs, then there is no evidence as to what actually occurred. A mere suspicion that the appellants or some of them were present can form no basis for a conviction. It is true that even before the interpolations in the first information report, the name of Jadu Jha is mentioned; but once the Court has any doubt about the truth of the version even as first recorded, then Jadu Jha is entitled to the benefit of that doubt. In my view the guilt of the appellants has not been established beyond reasonable doubt, and that being so, they must be acquitted.

In the result, therefore, I would allow these appeals, set aside the convictions and sentences passed upon the appellants and acquit them on all the charges. They must be set at liberty forthwith unless required by the authorities upon any other charge.

Fazi Ali, J.—I agree.

S. Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 563 of 1936

January 31, 1939

NIYCGI, J.

SHOBHALAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

SIDHELAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 55 (4) (b)—Unpaid vendor's charge—English and Indian law, difference between—Title passing to vendee—His suit for possession—Court, while decreeing possession, if can incorporate statutory charge under s. 55 (4) (b)—Vendor, how can enforce that charge—Recourse to separate suit—Second appeal—Court's duty is only to see whether evidence is admissible and proper for consideration.

The equity which arises in favour of the vendor who has not received his purchase money is no doubt recognised in English Law which gives him a lien, that is a right to enforce payment out of the interest he has transferred and this lien continues even after he has parted with the legal estate. The reason is that as soon as the contract of sale is made, the seller is deemed to part with the equitable estate, but in India contract of sale does not of itself create interest in or charge on such property, (s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act). In India the vendor is no doubt entitled to a charge for unpaid purchase money but that is a right which comes into existence not at the date of the contract for sale but on the completion of the conveyance. This charge is created by the statute. Thus while in England the vendor's lien is a creature of equity and is capable of being moulded to suit the circumstances of each case, the statutory charge is rigorous and inflexible. Webb v. Macpherson (4), relied on [p. 171, col. 1]

Where title in the property has passed to vendee notwithstanding the non-payment of part of purchase money, although in a suit for possession by the vendee of immovable property it is not competent to the Court to pass a decree for possession conditional on the vendee paying the balance of the purchase money, it is open to the Court, while decreeing possession to the vendee to incorporate in the decree the statutory charge under s. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, in favour of the vendor for the unpaid purchase money. It is true that the unpaid vendor in India is only entitled to a statutory charge provided for under s. 55 (4) (b) and that the vendee under s. 55 (1) (f) is entitled to possession, but there is no reason why the unpaid vendor should be driven to a separate suit to recover his unpaid purchase money. When he has a charge on the property which he is called upon to deliver to the purchaser, that charge continues to operate upon the property even when the possession of it passes to the vendee. It would therefore obviously be the proper course, to avoid multiplicity of litigation, to declare in the decree granting possession to the vendee that it is subject to the charge of the vendor to the extent (if the purchase money that remains to be paid. If the decree incorporates this charge it would be open to the vendor to enforce it by seeking execution of that decree Bastigara v. Chinnava (7), followed. [p. 171, col. 2.]

The Court is not concerned in second appeal with the weight that is to be attached to the evidence but whether the evidence is admissible and proper for consideration.

S. A. from the appellate decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, Damoh, dated October 31, 1936, in Civil Appeal No. 20-A of 1936, modifying the decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, Damoh, dated July 24, 1936, in Civil Suit No. 79-A of 1935.

Mr. D. N. Choudhary, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. R. Mudholker, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff's appeal from a varying judgment of the Additional District Judge, Damoh, delivered on October 3, 1936, in Civil Appeal No. 20-A of 1936.

The respondent Siddhelal executed a sale-deed on October 7, 1932, affecting 8 pies share of Mouza Tigra Fatehpur, Tahsil Hatta, in favour of the appellant. The consideration as recited in the sale-deed was Rs. 400 and the vendee undertook to satisfy certain Taccavi loans which were charged in the property amounting to Rs. 639-12-6. The conveyance was duly executed and registered but there arose some hitch during the mutation proceedings and the vendor declined to deliver possession with the result that the appellant instituted the suit out of which this appeal arises for a declaration of his ownership and for possession of the property. The defendant raised various contentions out of which the one that is material for the disposal of this appeal is that he did not receive the consideration which was stated to be Rs. 800 out of which Rs. 160-3-6 were intended to be paid in cash and the balance of Rs. 639-12-6 was to be paid as stated above. The lower Appellate Court found that the real consideration was Rs. 800 and that the vendee, namely the plaintiff, did not pay Rs. 160-3-6. It, however, held that the title to the property had passed to the vendee and decreed that the property should be delivered to him subject, however, to his depositing Rs. 160-3-6 into Court for payment to the vendor, the defendant. This appeal is directed mainly against the form of the decree as passed by the lower Appellate Court.

It is contended in the first instance that the lower Appellate Court's finding that the real consideration of the sale was Rs. 800 was at variance with the pleadings and the evidence in the case. I cannot assent to this contention in view of the fact that the defendant in his written statement dated August 7, 1935, clearly averred that as a result of an award by the arbitrators the plaintiff was to pay to the defendant Rs. 160-3-6 in cash and he was further to undertake the liability to pay Taccavi loans of Rs. 639-12-6. He further expressly denied receipt of Rs. 160-3-6. The plaintiff pleaded that the consideration was only Rs. 400 but he did not affirm that he had paid this amount to the vendor, but contended that the failure to pay the purchase money did not prevent transfer of title to the vendee and that the appropriate course for the defendant was to file a separate suit to recover the purchase money if not paid. It is true that the evidence regarding the arbitration is not clear or complete but to the extent that there is evidence bearing on the issue, it fully sustains the lower Appellate Court's finding. In second appeal I am not concerned with the weight that is to be attached to the evidence but whether the evidence is admissible and proper for consideration. It is not shown that the facts and circumstances considered by the lower Appellate Court were not relevant and proper for consideration. I therefore see no reason to dissent from the lower Appellate Court's finding that the real consideration was Rs. 800 out of which the vendee agreed to pay Rs. 160-3-6 in cash and bear the burden of the Taccavi loan amounting to 639-12-6.

Since the vendee failed to pay the consideration which he agreed to pay in cash the question which arises is whether he is entitled to possession of the property without having to pay the part of the purchase money which he stipulated to pay in cash as a condition precedent to his obtaining possession of the property. In such a case as the present the points which require to be considered are: (1) whether the parties intended that the title should not pass to the vendee unless the vendor received the consideration, and (2) if it is found that there was no such intention and that the title passed to the vendee notwithstanding the non-payment of the purchase money whether the vendee is entitled to unconditional possession of the property purchased by him and the remedy of the vendor for recovering the purchase money lies in a separate suit.

As to the first point, the respondent indeed contends in support of the lower Appellate Court decree that the title did not pass to the vendee. In the absence of any pleading to that effect, I cannot listen to any such contention. It is also negatived by the plain recitals of the sale-deed. I must, therefore hold that the title in the property passed to the vendee notwithstanding non-payment of the part of the price as agreed.

As to the next question it was held in Bajjnath Singh v. Paltu (1) that although the non-payment of the purchase money does not prevent the passing of the ownership of the purchased property from the vendor to the purchaser and the purchaser is entitled to possession, it is open to the Court to subject the decree to restrictions and conditions appropriate to the circumstances of the case. On that view the learned Judges ordered the purchaser in that case to pay to the seller the amount of the purchase money as a condition precedent to the delivery of possession to him. This case was followed in Bal-

(1) 30 A 125; A W N 1908, 38; 5 A L J 96.

Krishna v. Shripat Singh (2) in a case of sale to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was not applicable. The case Bajinath Singh v. Paltu (1) was not followed in Velayutha Chetty v. Govindaswami Naicken (3) and for good reasons. The equity which arises in favour of the vendor who has not received his purchase money is no doubt recognised in English Law which gives him a lien, that is a right to enforce payment out of the interest he has transferred and this lien continues even after he has parted with the legal estate. The reason is that as soon as the contract of sale is made, the seller is deemed to part with the equitable estate, but in India contract of sale does not of itself create interest in or charge on such property: see s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act. In India the vendor is no doubt entitled to a charge for unpaid purchase money but that is a right which comes into existence not at the date of the contract for sale but on the completion of the conveyance. This charge is created by the statute. Thus while in England the vendor's lien is a creature of equity and is capable of being moulded to suit the circumstances of each case the statutory charge is rigorous and inflexible. The distinction was pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Webb v. Macpherson (4) where they observed that the charge which the vendor obtains under the Transfer of Property Act is different in its origin and nature from the vendor's lien given by the Courts of equity to an unpaid vendor. The law in India does not recognise the distinction between legal and equitable property in the sense in which that was understood when the equity was administered by the Court of Chancery in England and the Transfer of Property Act gives a statutory charge upon the estate to an unpaid vendor unless it be excluded by contract. In Velayutha Chetty v. Govindaswami Naicken (3) it was held that the only remedy which the unpaid vendor in India could avail himself of is to counter-claim for the enforcement of his charge. As there is no equitable lien recognised in India and though it is recognised in England it is held to be non-possessory, their Lordships of the Madras High Court held that the defendant was bound to deliver possession unconditionally and he was relegated to a separate suit to recover his purchase money. That case was followed in Kandasami Pillai v. Ramasami Mannadi (5) and Krishnamma v. Mali (6). In Baslingawa v. Chinnava (7) it was held that although in a suit for possession by the vendee of immovable property it is not competent to the Court to pass a decree for possession conditional on the vendee paying the balance of the purchase money, it is open to the Court, while decreeing possession to the vendee to incorporate in the decree the statutory charge under s. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, in favour of the vendor for the unpaid purchase money.

(2) 6 N L R 98; 7 Ind. Cas. 511.
 (3) 34 M 543; 8 Ind. Cas. 364; (1910) M W N 637; 9 M L T 108.
 (4) 31 O 57 at p. 72; 30 I A 238; 8 O W N 41; 8 Sar. 554 (P.O.).

It is true that the unpaid vendor in India is only entitled to a statutory charge provided for under s. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, and that the vendee under s. 55 (1) (f) is entitled to possession, but there is no reason why the unpaid vendor should be driven to a separate suit to recover his unpaid purchase money. When he has a charge on the property which he is called upon to deliver to the purchaser, that charge continues to operate upon the property even when the possession of it passes to the vendee. It would therefore obviously be the proper course, to avoid multiplicity of litigation, to declare in the decree granting possession to the vendee that it is subject to the charge of the vendor to the extent of the purchase money that remains to be paid. If the decree incorporates this charge, it would be open to the vendor to enforce it by seeking execution of that decree. I have therefore no hesitation in following the course adopted in the Bombay case declaring in the decree that the property is subject to the charge in favour of the vendor and that he is entitled to enforce it in execution of the decree against the appellant.

The lower Appellate Court's decree will now be modified in the form described above. As the appeal virtually fails, the appellant will pay the respondent's costs of this appeal. Costs of the lower Courts will be paid as ordered by the lower Appellate Court.

D.

Appeal allowed partly.

(5) 42 M 203; 51 Ind. Cas. 507; A I R 1919 Mad. 188; 36 M L J 313; (1919) M W N 194.

(6) 43 M 712; 56 Ind. Cas. 530; A I R 1920 Mad. 164; 38 M L J 467; 11 L W 563; (1920) M W N 320; 28 M L T 88.

(7) 56 B 556; 138 Ind. Cas. 534; A I R 1932 Bom. 247; 34 Bom. L R 427; Ind. Rul. (1932) Bom. 405.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 507 of 1939

August 16, 1939

MULLA, J.

SAT NARAIN AND ANOTHER—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 144
 (1), (2), (3)—Order under first two clauses of s. 144 cannot be issued to general public—Order under cl. (3), when can be issued to general public.

The first two clauses of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, do not invest the Magistrate with any power to issue an order to the general public. They are confined to the case of an individual person or persons to whom a notice may be issued directing them to refrain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in their possession or management.

It is clear from the terms of sub-cl. (3) of s. 144, that no order under s. 144 can be issued to the public generally except when "frequenting or visiting a particular place" and any order which ignores this limitation must be held to be bad in law.

[Case-law relied on.]

Or. R. from an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Allahabad, dated March 8, 1939.

Mr. M. L. Chaturvedi, for the Applicants.

The Deputy Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Order.—This is an application in revision by two persons Sat Narain and Munni Lal who have been convicted under s. 188, Indian Penal Code. The first applicant was admittedly the editor of a paper styled the Punch which was being published in Allahabad in April, 1938, while the second applicant, Munni Lal, was the printer and publisher of the same paper. It is a matter of common knowledge that in the month of April, 1938, serious communal riots took place in Allahabad resulting in the deaths of several persons. The District Magistrate of Allahabad found soon after those disturbances that some people were engaged in circulating false and alarmist reports which had the effect of promoting communal tension and causing fear and alarm to the public. He therefore thought it necessary to stop the publication of such reports, and with that object in view, he issued an order under s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, in the following terms :

"To the General Public.

Whereas in Allahabad City serious rioting resulting in the deaths of eleven persons and injuries to many others had just recently subsided, but communal ill-feeling and panic are still prevalent, and whereas irresponsible persons are circulating communally biased or alarmist or false reports and statements and false or alarmist rumours by words written or spoken, which are likely to cause fear or alarm to the public or some section of the public whereby any person may be induced to commit some offence against human life or against the public tranquillity, and whereas in my opinion there is sufficient ground for proceeding under this section and immediate prevention and speedy remedy are desirable.

I hereby prohibit the printing or publication or circulation in Allahabad Municipality and Cantonment of any such report, statement or rumour by any written word, in newspapers or in leaflets, or by any other means."

This order was promulgated all over the city of Allahabad by means of loudspeakers fixed to motor lorries. The fact that this order came to the knowledge of the applicant Sat Narain is not denied. The other applicant pleaded ignorance of this order but the point has not been raised in this Court and it may therefore be taken for granted that he also had notice of the order. In spite of this knowledge, a statement appeared in an issue of the Punch dated April 14, 1938, setting out that a certain Hindu shrine had been destroyed and razed to the level of the ground. The shrine in question was in fact a very small temple about a cubit in height situated on a masonry platform under a pipal tree. It is not denied that this temple was destroyed but it is said that it was razed only to the level of the chabutra upon which it stood and not to the level of the ground as alleged in the statement published in the paper. The District authorities were of opinion that this statement was false and alarmist and also communally biased within the meaning of the order under s. 144 referred to above, and as the publication of the statement was a defiance of that order, they filed a complaint against the applicants charging them with an offence under s. 188, Indian Penal Code. The applicants were tried on that charge and were eventually convicted.

Two principal pleas were taken in defence : firstly, that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to issue the order under s. 144, and secondly, that the statement contained in the paper to which objection had been taken was not false and hence it did not involve any disobedience of the order under s. 144. I shall confine myself to the first contention which is the real contention in the case. Upon a careful consideration of the terms of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, I am constrained to hold that the order under s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, to which objection has been taken on behalf of the applicants did not conform to the provisions of the law, however desirable, it may have been in view of the public situation. A careful perusal of the first two clauses of s. 144 leaves no doubt in my mind that they are confined to the case of an individual person or persons to whom a notice may be issued directing them to refrain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in their possession or management. Under these two clauses no order can be issued to the general public. It is significant to note in this connection that the order is required to be "served in manner provided by s. 134." Now s. 134 provides for the service of the order in the "manner herein provided for the service of a summons," and makes a definite reference to "such person," showing thereby that some individual person or persons have to be served with the order. The incorporation of these provisions in sub-cl. (1) of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, in relation to the service of an order passed thereunder leaves no doubt in my mind that the said clause confers no jurisdiction upon the Magistrate to issue any such order to the general public. The point is further clarified by reference to sub-cl. (2) of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, which runs as follows:

"An order under this section may in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed be passed ex parte."

It is thus clear to my mind that the first two clauses of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, do not invest the Magistrate with any power to issue an order to the general public. A provision for such an order is, however, made in sub-cl. (3) of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, which runs as follows:

"An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place."

The obvious conclusion from the terms of this sub-clause is that no order under s. 144 can be issued to the public generally except when "frequenting or visiting a particular place." This is a clear limitation placed by the law upon the power given to the Magistrate to issue an order to the general public under s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code, and any order which ignores this limitation must be held to be bad in law. I have therefore no hesitation in holding that the order passed by the learned District Magistrate of Allahabad in the present case was one which he had no power lawfully to promulgate within the meaning of s. 155, Criminal Procedure Code. It necessarily follows that the conviction of the applicants under s. 148, Indian Penal Code, is bad in law and must be set aside. My attention has not been drawn to any case decided by this Court either for or against the interpretation which I have placed upon the terms of s. 144, Criminal Procedure Code. But I find that the view that I have taken is fortified by several decisions of other High Courts. I need only refer to the following cases: Queen-Empress v. Lakshmidas Makandas (1), Emperor v. Bhagubhai (2), D. V. Belvi v. Emperor (3), Motilal Gangadhar v. Emperor (4), Ashutosh Roy v. Harish Chandra (5), Abdul Majid v. Nripendranath (6) and Ponnappa Aiyangar v. Venamamalai Ramanuja Jeer (7). The result, therefore, is that I allow this application in revision and set aside the conviction of the applicants. The fine, if any paid by them, shall be refunded.

s.

Application allowed.

- (1) 14 B 165.
- (2) A I R 1914 Bom. 198; 27 Ind. Cas. 146; 16 Cr. L J 98; 16 Bom L R 684.
- (3) A I R 1931 Bom. 325; 134 Ind. Cas. 344; (1931) Cr. Cas. 581; 32 Cr. L J 1144; 33 Bom. L R 673; Ind Rul. (1931) Bom 456.
- (4) A I R 1931 Bom. 513; 134 Ind. Cas. 1237; (1931) Cr. Cas. 945; 33 Cr. L J 75; 33 Bom. L R 1178; Ind. Rul. (1932) Bom. 21.
- (5) 29 O W N 411; 86 Ind. Cas. 810; A I R 1925 Cal. 625; 26 Cr. L J 874.
- (6) 38 O W N 556; 148 Ind. Cas. 773; A I R 1934 Cal. 393; (1934) Cr. Cas. 534; 35 Cr. L J 861; 6 R O 480.
- (7) A I R 1920 Mad. 817; 53 Ind. Cas. 483; 20 Cr. L J 755; 10 L W 480; (1919) M W N 872.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal Against Appellate Order No. 56 of 1935

December 8, 1938

VARADACHARIAR AND ABDUR RAHMAN, JJ.
NINKILERI LAKSHMIKUTTY KETILAMMA—APPELLANT

versus

THEKKA MADATHIL VISHNU
NAMBISAN—RESPONDENT

Insurance—Assured assigning policy to wife—Effect—Creditor of assured; if can attach moneys in hands of wife—Construction of assignment endorsement—Reverter clause—Held amount not assets of deceased assured—Deed—Construction.

The policy in question was an endowment policy obtained by the deceased. The assured assigned this policy in favour of his wife by an endorsement on the policy itself. This assignment was duly communicated to the Insurance Company and there registered. The endorsement, which appeared in a usual form suggested by the Company provided that the benefit of all moneys to become payable under the policy was assigned to wife and declared that her receipt shall be a sufficient discharge to the Company for the same, provided, however, that in the event of her predeceasing the assured or in the event of his surviving, the date on which the said policy would mature, the benefit of the policy and the right to receive moneys thereunder should revert to the assured as if the assignment had not been made. Before the policy had matured and during the lifetime of the assignee the assured died. In execution of a decree obtained against the deceased assured, the decree-holder sought to attach the policy amount as assets of the assured in the hands of the assignee:

Held, that on its true construction the endorsement in this case operated as a present transfer in favour of the assignee, though provision had also been made for a reverter to the assignor, in certain contingencies. It did not amount to a power-of-attorney or a transfer in future. The provision for reverter only emphasised the immediate operative-ness of the transfer. If the events that happened had brought the reverter clause into operation, the creditors of the assured would no doubt have been entitled to treat the policy amount as having become part of the estate of the assured. But in the events that happened the assignee was entitled to recover the policy amount and there was no scope for the operation of the reverter clause. Consequently the policy amount did not form the part of the assets of the deceased and could not therefore be attached and sold. Yacoob Sahib v. Pacha Bibi (1) and Shamdas v. Savitri Bai (2), relied on, In re Williams, Williams v. Ball (3) and Manu v. Ma Gun (4), distinguished, Haridas Lalji v. Narottam Raghavji (5), referred to.

A. against the order of the District Court of North Malabar at Tellicherry, dated September 24, 1934, and made in A. S. No. 111 of 1934, preferred against the order of the Court of the District Munsif of Kuthuparamba in R. E. P. No. 791 of 1933 (Summary Suit No. 5444 of 1933, District Munsif's Court, Cannanore).

Messrs. O. T. G. Nambiar and N. T. K. Nambiar, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. Govinda Menon, for the Respondent.

Varadachariar, J.—The only question for decision in this Miscellaneous Appeal is whether certain insurance policy amount which has been sought to be attached by the respondent decree-holder can be held to be "assets" of the late Kerala Varma Raja in the hands of the appellant.

The appellant is the widow of Kerala Varma Raja. The policy in question was an endowment policy obtained by the deceased in 1927 and was payable on April 5, 1952, or on the death of the assured earlier. On July 3, 1933, the assured assigned this policy by an endorsement on the policy itself. This assignment was duly communicated to the Insurance Company and there registered, though as usual the Company guarded itself from admitting the validity of the assignment. The assured died in 1933 and the decree under execution was passed against the appellant as his legal representative. The question does not now arise between the Company, and the assignee and a person who has obtained a decree against the assets of the assured.

The Court of first instance released the policy amount from attachment on the ground that by reason of assignment, the policy amount belonged to the assignee and did not form part of the estate of the assured at his death. The learned District Judge reversed this decision on the ground that the assignment was not an absolute or outright assignment taking effect at once but was only contingent; he thought it followed that the amount due to the assured under the policy formed part of the estate of the deceased. The decision of the learned District Judge is opposed to the judgment of this Court in Yacoob Sahib v. Pacha Bibi, 38 Ind. Cas. 248 (1). The only other reported decision on the point which has been brought to our notice is a decision of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court in Shamdas v. Savitri Bai (2) and the principle of that decision is also in favour of the appellants' contention.

Learned Counsel for the respondent has contended that the endorsement on the policy is no more than a mandate or at best it operates only as a testamentary transfer and that no interest in the policy passed to the assignee during the lifetime of the assignor. He also repeated the argument which had found favour with the lower Court that the words of transfer did not amount to an absolute interest. The endorsement which appears in a usual form suggested by the Company, runs as follows:—

"In consideration of natural love and affection, I do hereby assign the benefit of all moneys to become payable under the policy (reserving to myself the right to receive in cash or apply in reduction of premia any bonuses that may be declared upon such policy from time to time) to my wife and declare that her receipt shall be a sufficient discharge to the Company for the same, provided, however, that in the event of my wife predeceasing me or in the event of my surviving the date on which the said policy, if so expressed, would mature, the benefit of the policy and the right to receive moneys thereunder shall revert to me as if this assignment has not been made."

(1) 38 Ind. Cas. 248; A I R 1917 Mad. 20; 4 L W 339.

(2) A I R 1937 Sind 181; 170 Ind. Cas. 225; 31 S L R 48; 10 R S 39.

In support of the first contention, respondent's learned Counsel relied upon the judgment of the Court of Appeal in England In re Williams, Williams v. Ball (3) and on some observations of the Rangoon High Court in Manu v. Ma Gun (4). The language of the document which the Court had to construe in the English case was quite different, the very point made in that connection in the English case was that the endorsement relied on did not purport to assign at all but only purported to authorise the named person to draw the insurance amount in the event of the assured predeceasing her. It was significant that no notice of the so-called assignment had even been given to the Insurance Company in that case. Ashbury, J., held that there were no present words of gift at all. In the Court of Appeal, the learned Judges were inclined to construe the so-called endorsement as a mere power-of-attorney. Alternatively, they added that at best it might have operated to give to the named person an interest on the death of the assured if it had complied with the formalities required by law for a will. No help can be derived from that judgment in the construction of the terms of the endorsement in the present case, because the words here used are that the assured doth "hereby assign the benefit of all money, etc., to the wife". On these words it cannot be said that the endorsement amounted to a mere power-of-attorney or that the transfer was one in future. In the Rangcon case, Manu v. Ma Gun (4) the argument turned on the effect of mere nomination. Reliance was placed by the learned Counsel before us on the way that the observations In re Williams, Williams v. Ball (3) had been understood by the learned Judges of the Rangoon High Court. As we have dealt with the English case ourselves, the observations of the Rangoon High Court on that case cannot carry the matter further.

It was next argued that because in certain contingencies the assignee will not, on the terms of the endorsement, be entitled to receive the policy amount or the assignor might become entitled to recover the same, the transaction was only revocable and in that sense the disposition, if any, was only testamentary. This argument seems to us to confound a contingent transfer with a revocable transfer. Even this distinction is immaterial here, because on its true construction, the endorsement in this case operates, in our opinion, as a present transfer in favour of the assignee, though provision has also been made for a reverter to the assignor, in certain contingencies. The provision for reverter only emphasises the immediate operativeness of the transfer. If the events that have happened have brought the reverter clause into operation, the creditors of the assured would no doubt be entitled to treat the policy amount as having become part of the estate of the assured. But it cannot be disputed that in the events that have happened, the assignee is entitled to recover the policy amount and there is no scope for the operation of the reverter clause.

It was finally contended that an assignment of an actionable claim within the meaning of s. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act must be "absolute" and that the assignment in the present case is not absolute. Reliance was placed in this connection on the observations of Beaman, J., in Haridas Lalji v. Narottam Raghavji (5). The learned Judge has not expressed any final opinion on this point, in the case referred to. The question of the 'absolute' character of the transfer may be material when there is a dispute as to the transferee's right to sue the Insurance Company, no such question arises here. We may however, observe that there is no possibility in this case, of the assignor and the assignee having fractional rights in the policy amount at one and the same time. The only qualification on the rights of the transferee (apart from the bonus amount with which we are not now concerned) is by way of a defeasance clause (cf. s. 31 of the Transfer of Property Act and s. 134 of the Succession Act). The result is that so long as the transferee's interest exists, she has the whole interest and when the defeasance clause comes into operation, the interest of the person who takes under the defeasance clause is equally an absolute interest. We do not find anything in the terms of s. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act or in the principle underlying it that excludes a transfer of this kind from its scope.

As desired by Mr. Govinda Menon, the learned Counsel for the respondent, we wish to make it clear that this judgment will not apply to any amount that the

(3) (1917) 1 Ch. 1; 86 L. J. Ch. 36; 115 L. T. 689; 61 S. J. 42; (1919) W. O. & I. Rep. 122.
(4) 2 B. 388; 84 Ind. Cas. 385; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 8.

(5) 14 Bom. L. R. 237; 14 Ind. Cas. 769.

deceased might be entitled to receive by way of bonus in respect of the policy, because the endorsement expressly reserves to the assignor the right to the bonus, so that he may, if he so desired, apply it to reduction of premia. If the bonus has been appropriated by the assured himself towards premia due on the policy, there will be nothing left for the assured or his creditors to claim. If on the other hand there is any sum remaining payable by way of bonus, that cannot be held to have passed under the assignment.

We set aside the decision of the learned District Judge and restore that of the District Munsif with costs here and in the Court below.

N.D.

Decision set aside.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Original Case No. 256 of 1938

December 19, 1938

YOUNG, C. J. AND MCNEOR, J.

In the matter of MUSLIM BANK OF INDIA, LTD., IN (LIQUIDATION), LAHORE—

Company—Contributories—Father purchasing shares for minor sons by signing application form on their behalf—Father held owner of shares and contributory—Benami transaction.

In India, the presumption in law is that if a person buys property in the name of another but with his own money, the transaction is benami and that the property in what is bought is in the person whose money was used for the transaction. So where a father with his own money purchases shares of a company for his minor sons and signs the application form on behalf of his sons, the father must be considered as owner of the shares and must be placed on the list of contributories. The same principle applies where the father purchases by transfer shares by signing his minor son's name on the transfer form as transferee through himself. In re Hercules Insurance Co. (1) and Gopikrishn Gosain v. Gunga Persaud Gosain (2), relied on.

Mr. Nazir Ahmad (Official Liquidator), for the Petitioner.

Mr. Allah Din Malik for Messrs. Rafiq Ahmad and Bashir Ahmad and Mr. Parkash Chandra, for Abdul Rashid, for the Respondents.

Young, C. J.—This judgment will cover applications by Bashir Ahmad, Rafiq Ahmad and Abdul Rashid to be removed from the list of contributories of the Muslim Bank of India, Ltd., in liquidation. It will also cover the application of the Official Liquidator of the Muslim Bank to place upon the list of contributories the name of the father of Bashir Ahmad and Rafiq Ahmad and also the name of the father of Abdul Rashid. The ground of the applications of the three applicants is that they were minors at the time of the transactions which resulted in their names being put upon the list of contributories. The Liquidator admits that they were minors and therefore seeks to put on the list of contributories the names of their respective fathers. In the case of Bashir Ahmad and Rafiq Ahmad with which we will deal first, Tahir ud-Din, their father, applied for one share for each of them. He signed the application form "on behalf of" his sons. Tahir ud-Din had opened saving bank accounts in the names of his sons in the Muslim Bank. Tahir ud-Din paid the purchase money by his own cheque out of these accounts. Dividends were credited to these accounts and the balance in these accounts was drawn out by the minors when they became of age. It is argued by the Official Liquidator that in these circumstances the father Tahir ud-Din is liable to be placed upon the list of contributories on the ground that when he signed the applications on behalf of his minor sons he must be taken to know that the sons were incapable of acting or contracting being minors and that therefore he must be treated as the owner of the shares. In support of this proposition he refers us to the well-known Pugh and Sharman's case: In re Hercules Insurance Co. (1). In that case Sharman not being allowed to take more shares in the company applied for shares in his daughter's name. His daughter was a married woman, and at the date of the transaction, was under a disability as she could not before the Married Women's Property Act of 1881 acquire property without the consent of her husband. The learned Vice-Chancellor in deciding this case remarked as follows:

"It is very remarkable that the point has not arisen before, whether a man is liable to be treated as the owner of the shares by applying for them in a false or fictitious name; for I must treat this as a false or fictitious name. I must attribute to Mr. Sharman the knowledge that his daughter being a married woman was incapable of contracting."

Further on the Vice-Chancellor says: "I think, on general principles, that Mr. Sharman by applying for shares in the fictitious name of his daughter, is as liable to take the share as if he had taken them in his own name. I call Mrs. Pugh's name fictitious, because Mr. Sharman knew perfectly well that she could not bind herself. If he had applied in the name of a person capable of contracting, the case would be different."

(1) (1872) 13 Eq. 566; 41 L J Ch. 580.

It is argued by Counsel for Tahir-ud-Din in this case that Pugh's case (1) is distinguishable as there it was held that Mr. Sharman really applied for the shares for himself. In the case of Tahir-ud-Din it has not been proved that the application for the shares on behalf of his minor sons was not bona fide and that the shares must be held therefore to have been applied for on behalf of his sons and not for himself. On this point, it is clear that the learned Vice-Chancellor in Pugh's case (1) according to the extracts we have given above, decided this matter on a question of general principles that Mr. Sharman was liable because he applied in what in law was a fictitious name. In addition we would add that in India, the case would be even stronger as the presumption in law is that if a person buys property in the name of another but with his own money the transaction is benami and that the property in what is bought is in the person whose money was used for the transaction; see Gopiekrish Gosain v. Gunga Persaud Gosain (2). It is clear therefore that the father Tahir-ud-Din in this transaction must be treated as the owner of the shares. We allow therefore the applications of Bashir Ahmad and Rafiq Ahmad and we also allow the application of the Official Liquidator and add Tahir-ud-Din's name to the list of contributories as regards the two shares.

With regard to the case of Abdul Rashid, the facts were that Salamat Ullah, the father, signed an application for 25 shares 'for Abdul Rashid.' He paid 50 per cent. of the value of the shares by his own personal cheque. He attended a shareholders' meeting and signed the proceedings on behalf of Abdul Rashid. Dividends were credited to Salamat Ullah in his banking account and money was used by him. As regards this particular transaction, therefore, the same principles apply as in the case of Tahir-ud-Din with which we have just dealt. The application of Abdul Rashid must be allowed and the application of the Official Liquidator also will be allowed and the name of Salamat Ullah will be put on the list of contributories as regards these 25 shares. There is, however, another transaction entered into by Salamat Ullah on behalf of Abdul Rashid. He purchased by transfer 12 shares. He signed Abdul Rashid's name on the transfer form as transferee through himself. Equally the dividend on these shares was paid to Salamat Ullah's account and the money was drawn by him. It appears to us that the principle laid down in Pugh's case (1) would also apply to this case. Salamat Ullah had signed his son's name in the transfer form. He must therefore equally be taken to know that his son being a minor could give him no authority to sign the transfer on his behalf. In these circumstances we may apply the interpretation in Richardson's case, [In re Imperial Mercantile Credit Association] (3) as given in Massy and Giffin's case, [In re National Bank of Wales, Ltd.] (4) as follows:

"In the other case, In re Imperial Mercantile Credit Association (3) it was simply a case where the transferee whom they sought to put upon the register had actually signed the transfer but had signed it in the name of another who had given him no authority to do it, namely an infant. Therefore they treated him as the real person who had signed the contract and consented to go on the register in respect of the shares."

In this case therefore we must treat Salamat Ullah as the real person who signed the contract of transfer and order therefore that his name be placed upon the list of contributories as the owner of these 12 shares. The applications of Bashir Ahmad, Rafiq Ahmad and Abdul Rashid are allowed. The application of the Official Liquidator is allowed. In the circumstances, we allow no costs to any of the parties.

D. Applications allowed.

(3) (1875) 19 Eq. 588; 44 L J Ch. 252; 32 L T, 18; 23 WR 467.

(4) (1907) 1 Ch. 582; 76 L J Ch. 290; 96 L T 943; 14 Manson 66; 51 S J 266.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 63 of 1939

February 9, 1939

EDGLBY, J.

BABURALI SARDAR AND OTHERS—

ACCUSED—PETITIONERS

versus

KALA CHAND BEPARI AND OTHERS—

COMPLAINANTS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 345 (5-A)—No impropriety in order of lower Courts—Case heard and determined by competent Court—High Court, if can record compromise—Use of discretion—Aggrieved person must be before High Court.

It is clear from the language of s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code, read with s. 345 (5-A) of the Code that the High Court can, in certain circumstances allow a compromise to be recorded in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction in the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself or which has been reported for orders or which otherwise comes to its knowledge. The language of s. 439 is very wide and it does not limit the jurisdiction of the High Court to interfere in revision merely in cases in which the High Court has called for the record of a case on the ground of some alleged illegality or impropriety in the order made by an inferior Criminal Court. The High Court is competent to record the compromise having regard to the provisions of s. 345 (5-A) even although there is no impropriety in the order of either of the lower Courts in suitable circumstances; the parties can be allowed in such cases to compromise their disputes even after the cases in which they were concerned had been heard and determined by the Courts competent to try them. But the exceptional powers conferred by s. 345 (5-A) should not be used where the proceedings before the lower Court disclose no irregularity or impropriety, except where the record indicates that the parties made some attempt to compromise their differences while the matter was still before the trial Court and before the Court passed final orders.

Ordinarily the party who seeks to invoke the jurisdiction of the High Court under sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345, must be the person aggrieved by the offence which has been committed and not an accused person or a person who has been convicted in respect of that offence. In any event it would not be competent for the High Court to allow a compromise to be recorded under sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345, unless the aggrieved persons were actually before the High Court and had expressly recorded their consent to such a compromise being recorded.

Mr. Nimal Chandra Das Gupta, for the Petitioners.

Syed Nausher Ali, for the Crown.

Mr. Santosh Kumar Basu, amicus curiae.

Order.—In this case the petitioners were convicted by Mr. H. N. Bose, Deputy Magistrate of Narayanganj, on August 15, 1938, in respect of offences under s. 323, Indian Penal Code, and were sentenced to pay fines of Rs. 30 each or in default to undergo rigorous imprisonment for six weeks. On November 9, 1938, the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Dacca was asked to refer this case to the High Court on the ground of certain alleged illegalities in the order of the trial Court, but he declined to do so. This Court was then moved in revision on January 19, 1939. The main ground urged in support of the petitioners' application was to the effect that the dispute between the petitioners and the complainant had been compromised. A rule was therefore issued upon the District Magistrate of Dacca and the complainant to show cause why the order of the trial Court should not be set aside on the ground that, even although there was no suggestion that the case should be compromised before the Courts below recorded their orders of August 15 and November 9, respectively, it was nevertheless competent for the High Court to allow the parties to compromise the case and to acquit the petitioners having regard to the provisions of s. 345 (5-A), Criminal Procedure Code.

In this connection it may be mentioned that the allegation in the petition before this Court with regard to the compromise is to the effect that this compromise was made on November 15, 1938, that is six days after the petitioners' application in revision had been rejected by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Dacca.

The first point for consideration in connection with this case is whether or not this Court has jurisdiction under s. 345 (5-A), Criminal Procedure Code, to allow the parties to compromise a dispute of this nature, although there was no proposal before either of the Courts below to the effect that any such compromise should be made. With regard to this question, it has been argued that the matter has come before this Court in its revisional jurisdiction by reason of this Court having sent for the record in the exercise of its powers under s. 435, Criminal Procedure Code. Section 435 empowers this Court to call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed and as to the regularity of any proceeding of such inferior Court. In the case with which we are now dealing, it is quite clear that the orders passed by the Courts below contained no illegality or irregularity with reference to the suggested compromise, inasmuch as no question with regard to any such compromise was ever raised before either of the Courts while they had seisin of the case. It has therefore been suggested that, in these circumstances, this Court can have no jurisdiction to modify the order of the trial Court under s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code. At the same time it is clear from the language of s. 439, Criminal Procedure Code, read with s. 345 (5-A) of the Code that this Court can in certain circumstances allow a compromise to be recorded in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction in the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself or which has been reported for orders or which otherwise comes to its knowledge. The language of s. 439 is very wide and it does not limit the jurisdiction of this Court to interfere in revision merely in cases in which this Court has called for the record of a case on the ground of some alleged illegality or impropriety in the order made by an inferior Criminal Court. In the case with which we are now dealing, it is therefore suggested that this Court is competent to record the compromise having regard to the provisions s. 345 (5-A), Criminal Procedure Code, even although there is no impropriety in the order of either of the Courts below and although neither the trial Court nor the learned Judge while they were still in seisin of the case rejected any proposal to the effect that the case should be compromised. With this contention I am inclined to agree and I think that one of the objects of the Legislature in enacting sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345, Criminal Procedure Code, was in suitable circumstances to allow the parties in such cases to compromise their disputes even after the cases in which they were concerned had been heard and determined by the Courts competent to try them.

At the same time sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345 of the Code is a section which should be interpreted very strictly and with regard to which, in my view, the discretion which has been conferred upon the High Court should be exercised sparingly and only in suitable cases. The sub-section in question reads as follows :

"A High Court acting in the exercise of its powers of revision under s. 439 may allow any person to compound any offence which he is competent to compound under this section."

This sub-section must be read subject to the preceding sub-sections of s. 345 of the Code especially sub-ss. (1) and (2). These sub-sections in col. 3 of the tables annexed hereto set forth lists of persons by whom the offences in col. 1 may be compounded. In other words, the persons mentioned in col. 3 of these tables are the persons competent to compound the offences mentioned in col. 1. It follows, therefore, that sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345 of the Code merely confers jurisdiction on the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision under s. 439 of the Code to allow the aggrieved persons mentioned in col. 3 of the tables attached to sub-ss. (1) and (2) to compound the various offences mentioned in those sub-sections. This section, however, does not empower the High Court to allow a convicted person to compromise an offence in the absence of the complainant or aggrieved person mentioned in sub-ss. (1) and (2). It would follow therefore that ordinarily the party who seeks to invoke the jurisdiction of this Court under sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345, Criminal Procedure Code, must be the person aggrieved by the offence which has been committed and not an accused person or a person who has been convicted in respect of that offence. In any event it would, in my opinion, not be competent for this Court to allow a compromise to be recorded under sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345, Criminal Procedure Code, unless the aggrieved persons were actually before this Court and had expressly recorded their consent to such a compromise being recorded.

In the case with which we are now dealing, the complainant is not before this Court. The Rule was issued upon the application of the convicted persons and although it would appear that a copy of the rule was served upon the complainant, it is impossible from this fact alone to infer that the complainant wishes to invoke the jurisdiction of this Court for the purpose of recording a compromise under s. 345 (5-A), Criminal Procedure Code. In any event in a case such as that which is now before me, I do not think that the jurisdiction of this Court should be used for the purpose of allowing a compromise to be recorded. It is clear from the record of the case that there was no suggestion that any compromise should be made until six days after the learned Additional Sessions Judge had rejected the petitioners' application for revision and I do not think that where the proceedings before the Courts below disclose no irregularity or impropriety, the exceptional power which has been conferred upon this Court by sub-s. (5-A) of s. 345 should ordinarily be used except in a case in which the record indicates that the parties made some attempt to compromise their differences while the matter was still before the trial Court and before that Court passed final orders in the case. Having regard to the considerations set forth above, this Rule must be discharged.

D.

Rule discharged.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeals Nos. 62, 63, 64, 69, 139 and 197
of 1935

May 9, 1939

WORT AND AGARWALA, JJ.

KUMAR RAGHAVA SURENDRA SAHI AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

BABUI LACHMI KOER AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS

Hindu Law—Succession—Mitakshara School—Test of propinquity or nearness of blood, if excluded from consideration—Religious efficacy, when to be considered—Stridhan of maiden—Order of succession, stated—Succession to stridhan of maiden and of woman married in unorthodox form—Widow—Dedication by, powers of—Dedication of husband's property for spiritual benefit only of widow—Validity—Adverse possession—Plea of—If can be entertained in appeal—Will—Bequest to dharma.

The Mitakshara whilst holding that the right to inherit does not spring from the right to offer oblations, does not exclude from consideration the test of propinquity or nearness of blood. The test of the right of capacity to offer religious oblations is a test of the Dayabhaga School, whereas in the Benares School, the test is propinquity. Only in competitions between persons of the same class is the matter determined on the footing of religious efficacy. [p. 186, col. 2.]

The stridhan of a maiden according to Mitakshara School goes first to her uterine brothers, on failure of them to her mother and if the mother is dead, to her father. After the father's death succession will go to father's heirs determined according to Mitakshara rules regarding succession to a male. A step-mother being an heir of the father according to Mitakshara, is entitled to succeed after father's death. The succession after her death will go to an agnate even if remote and not to cognate even if nearer.

[Case-law discussed.]

The rules relating to the succession to stridhan are the same in the case of a maiden who has no brothers and a woman married in an unorthodox form and dying without issue [p. 185, col. 2.]

Under Hindu Law although a widow has power to dedicate a portion of her husband's estate to religious and charitable object, the widow's act must be reasonable, having regard to the value of the estate, and its object must be such as according to the notions prevalent in Hindu society conduce to the spiritual benefit of her husband. Where a widow dedicates a part of her husband's estate for the maintenance of a deity not installed by her deceased husband and it is found that the dedication is prima facie for the spiritual benefit of the widow herself and not for that of her husband, the dedication is invalid. Ram Kawai Singh v. Ram Kishore Das (28), relied on. [p. 201, col. 2.]

Where the question, of adverse possession was not pleaded nor decided in the Court below, depending as it does on questions of facts, it cannot be entertained in appeal. [p. 191, col. 2.]

A bequest for dharma is too vague and uncertain to be given effect to. Ranchordas Vandrahandas v. Parvatibai (20), relied on. [p. 201, col. 2.]

As, from the original decrees of the Sub-Judge, Gaya, dated June 5, 1934.

Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter and Mr. Harnarayan Prasad (in Nos. 62, 63, 64 and 69) and Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherjee, Messrs. P. R. Das, L. K. Jha, S. N. Bose and J. N. Sahai (in Nos. 139 and 197), for the Appellants.

Sir Sultan Ahmad, Messrs. P. R. Das, S. M. Mullick, S. N. Bose, B. N. Rai, Syed Ali Khan, Messrs. A. H. Fakhruddin, S. I. Hasan, S. N. Rai, K. Dayal, Gulam Mohammad and S. S. Rakshit (in Nos. 62, 63 and 64) Sir Sultan Ahmad, Messrs. P. R. Das, S. M. Mullick, S. N. Bose, Syed Ali Khan, Messrs. L. K. Jha, A. S. S. Sinha, S. I. Hasan, Jadubans Sahay, S. S. Rakshit, Ghulam Mohammad, B. N. Roy, D. L. Nandkeolyar, K. Dayal and Ganesh Sharma (in No. 69), Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter, Messrs. Ganesh Sharma, Harnarayan Prasad, B. N. Rai and Golam Mohammad (in No. 139) and Sir Sultan

Ahmed, Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter, Messrs. S. M. Mullick, B. N. Mitter, Gulam Mohammad, Syed Ali Khan, Messrs. B. N. Rai, A. H. Fakhruddin, Ram Chandra Prasad and S. I. Hasan (in No 197), for the Respondents.

Wort, J.—These six appeals arise out of five suits which were brought claiming various interests in certain property, the last male holder of which was one Mahabir Prasad Singh. The genealogical table appended (see next page) states the relationship between some of the parties to the suit as found by the learned Subordinate Judge. It appears that Mahabir was the son of one Bachu Singh. Mahabir died on June 21, 1894, leaving him surviving two widows, namely Bhagwat Kuer and Rupkali Kuer, and what has been held by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdhari Prasad Singh (1) a vested remainder in favour of a posthumous daughter Ramdulari who died about six months after birth. Ramdulari Kuer, the posthumous daughter died in 1894 and Rupkali died in 1899 and Bhagwat Kuer a co-widow survived till 1925. On the death of Rupkali, Bhagwat came into possession of the whole estate including the vested remainder of Ramdulari. On Bhagwat's death in 1925 the succession opened and disputes arose with regard to the properties. Of the suits brought suit No. 38 of 1932 out of which Appeal No. 69 of 1935 arises, raised all the questions in dispute. But as an order was made on January 21, 1927, attaching the properties in dispute and some of the parties succeeded in obtaining the registration of their names in the land registration department as regards some of the other properties, the various claims were made and six suits in all were brought. In addition to the attachment to which I have referred, defendant No. 1 in the principal suit got his name recorded as mutwalli of some of the properties which had been dedicated to an idol by Bachu Singh, the father of Mahabir Singh, and also as regards properties dedicated for religious and charitable purposes by Bhagwat. Defendant No. 8, the daughter of Dhanukdhari Prasad Singh, one of the persons through whom the claim of defendant No. 1 of the principal action was made, got her name recorded with regard to the properties situate in the Saran District. This was in 1926. The parties therefore deemed it necessary to start the various suits.

(1) 48 I A 259, 53 Ind. Cas. 347; A I R 1919 P O 75, 47 O 468; 37 M L J 513; 17 A L J 1036; (1919) M W N 860; 1 P L T 1; 2 U P L R (P O) 27 (P O).

BAKHTOUR SINGH

Some of the parties to these suits do not appear in the genealogical table. They come into the litigation by reason of assignments or other transactions to which reference is decided during the course of this litigation, but after the decision of the Subordinate Judge in the Court below, whose decision on questions of fact is not disputed in this Court, the main question involved in these appeals is the right to succeed to the stridhan of Ramdulari Kuer. The other questions are, first as to the validity of certain endowments by Bachu and his daughter-in-law Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer, and secondly, the right to the office of mutwalli in respect thereof. The learned Judge has held that the three brothers Srikishun, Bachu and Jugal

Kishore were separate. He has held that the Lakhaipur mukrarrari estate was a grant to Bachu Singh alone and to his brothers. He has held that the transactions carried out by the documents of 8th, 9th and January 10, 1921, by which Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer claimed to have obtained an absolute estate in the property were invalid. The suggestion that these transactions could not be attacked as being res judicata was not pressed in the Court below and was not urged in this Court. He has held that the kobala of 1907 in favour of Ambica Prasad, the deed of gift of July 2, 1907, and the sale deeds of April 10, 1924, were invalid and not binding upon the heirs of Ramdulari's estate. He has held that the properties Nos. 1 to 8 of

Sch. 1-O to the principal suit were not accretions to the estate of Mahabir but were self-acquisitions of Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer and therefore formed a part of her stridhan. He has held that the deed of September 8, 1924, in favour of Raghava Surendra Sahi was invalid, and this is not now disputed. As regards the endowments, there was the endowment by Bachu Singh of six villages out of the Lakhaipur mukarrari to the deities in the temple at Ajodhya under the deed of September 2, 1873, which endowment was admitted by the parties to be valid. The endowment created by Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer was held to be invalid. He has found that none of the contesting parties to the mutwalliship of the properties endowed by Bachu had any rightful claim. The Judge having held that the endowment of Bhagwat Kuer was invalid, the question of mutwalliship did not arise.

The principal question of law is whether Sarabjit Protap Sahi who was a near cognate to Mahabir Prasad Singh, the last male-holder, being the great-grandson (through this mother who married the Raja of Tomkoti) of Mahabir Prasad Singh's paternal grandfather, or a distant agnate Sia Prasad Singh, plaintiff No. 1, in the suit, being the great-great-great-grandson of one Bakhtour Singh, the common ancestor of Mahabir Prasad Singh and Sarabjit Protap Sahi, is entitled to succeed to the properties in suit which by the terms of the will of Mahabir Prasad Singh were left to his two widows for life and under which the posthumous daughter Ramdulari Kuer had on a true construction of the will a vested remainder. The question shortly stated is, who is, in the events which have happened, entitled to succeed under the Mitakshara Law to the stridhan property of Ramdulari Kuer after the decease of Rupkali, her mother, and Bhagwat Kuer, her stepmother.

The remaining question, so far as defendants Nos. 1 and 2 are concerned, whether Dhanukdhari Singh who was the great-grandson of Tribeni Singh, who was the grandson of Bakhtour Singh is entitled as heir of Mahabir Prasad Singh, depends entirely upon the question whether the co-wife of Mahabir was entitled to inherit after the death of his second wife under the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law. The other question is as to the rights of these defendants who are plaintiffs in Suits Nos. 30/1930 and 41/1930 to be mutwallis of the endowments of Bachu and Bhagwat Kuer. This question, so far as it relates to the mutwalliship of Bhagwat's endowments depends upon the validity of these endowments. The relationship disclosed in the genealogical table I should have said has been proved by the plaintiff in the Court below and, after contest with regard to the matter, has been accepted by the trial Judge and not disputed in this Court. The last male-holder of the properties in suit, as I have already said, was Mahabir Prasad Singh. The properties in dispute consist in the first instance of mukarrari interest granted by the Maharani Indrajit Kuer of Tikari in the name of Bachu Singh in 1863. This property is known as Goshwara Mahal, Lakhaipur, Lodipur and Saidpur to be described hereafter as the Lakhaipur mukarrari property. There are ancestral properties, also some self-acquired properties of both Mahabir and Bhagwat Kuer. It may be stated at once that the Judge in the Court below has held that the properties acquired by Bhagwat Kuer were not accretions to Mahabir's estate but were the stridhan properties of Bhagwat.

In the year 1864 separation took place between the branch of the family represented by the three sons of Jagatpati and the other branch represented by Ramacharya. Srikishun, Bachu and Jugalkishore died within a short time of each other: Jugal on July 5, 1872, Srikishun on the 18th of the same month and Bachu on January 26, 1874. Bachu Singh before his death established a temple at Ajodhya in the Fyzabad District and endowed it with six villages out of the Lakhaipur mukarrari. This was by a deed dated September 2, 1873, by which he constituted a line of succession to the mutwalliship, making himself the first and then his son Mahabir; the succession thereafter was to go to his descendants male and female. In the year 1872, after the death of his two brothers Jugalkishore and Srikishun, Bachu filed an application for succession certificates to the estates of his brothers on the footing that they were joint with him. Ram Kewal Kuer, the daughter of Srikishun objected and filed a counter-application, and Anandi Kuer, Jugalkishore's widow, also objected on the ground that the brothers were separate. Kamalbas Kuer, Srikishun's widow, made no objection. The objections were overruled and Bachu was granted succession certificates. On July 9, 1873, Bachu gave certain villages to Kamalbas Kuer by way of maintenance. Anandi Kuer on May 17, 1874, executed an ekrarnama by which she admitted the jointness of the three brothers. This was some four months after Bachu's death and Bachu's son Mahabir Prasad executed the ekramnama with Anandi Kuer. Ram Kewal Kuer, however, filed a suit in 1880 against Bachu's son Mahabir by which she claimed the Lakhaurpur property as belonging to her father. But this suit was ultimately compromised, Sarabjit Protap Sahi, the grandson of Srikishun, joining in the compromise. By this compromise Ram Kewal Kuer obtained three villages out of the Rusbi ancestral estate. Then on March 21, 1881, Mahabir raised funds by sale of six of the villages endowed by his father to the Ajodhya temple: this was while Mahabir was the mutwalli of the endowment.

On June 21, 1894, Mahabir died having left a will dated September 26, 1893. On January 5, 1895, Bhagwat Kuer and her co-wife Rupkali Kuer obtained probate of the said will. On October 11, 1894, Rupkali gave birth to a posthumous daughter Ramdulari Kuer who lived for a few months only dying on June 3, 1895. By the will estates for life were given by Mahabir Prasad to his widows and the will was construed ultimately by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as giving a vested remainder to the posthumous daughter Ramdulari Kuer. Rupkali, the second wife of Mahabir, died on January 8, 1899. It is to be noted that Bhagwat Kuer, after the death of her husband, acted as the mutwalli of the temple instituted by Mahabir's father Bachu. On September 7, 1899, Kamalbas Kuer died and Anandi Kuer died on August 4, 1904. Bhagwat Kuer was therefore in possession of the whole estate commencing in the year 1900. She made endowments six in number to a pathsala known as Bhagwat pathsala at Ajodhya. These endowments date from March 7, 1900, to September 14, 1925. In the meantime Bhagwat purported to adopt Raghava Surendra Sahi, defendant No. 1 in the principal suit. This was on February 13, 1906. The adoption was eventually held to be invalid by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. In 1907 Dhanukdhari (father of defendants No. 8 and 9) claimed to be the nearest agnate of Mahabir and commenced a suit and in February of that year executed a sale of 10 annas 2 pies of the mukarrari property and 2 annas 8 pies of the chapra property to one Ambica Singh, the father of Maharaj Kumar Gopal Saran Narain Singh of Tikari who was defendant No. 6 in the very suit. The Rusbi and Maher properties were excluded. The shares of the properties which Dhanukdhari purported to sell by this deed were alleged to belong to Jugal Kishore and Bachu, the contention being that the mukarrari properties belonged to the three brothers. Three suits were commenced, namely suits Nos. 198, 199 and 200 of 1907. The first related to 5 annas 1 pie of Mahabir's property which he got from Bachu, the second related to 5 annas 4 pies which Mahabir got from Jugal Kishore, his uncle, and the object of the third suit was to set aside the adoption by Bhagwat of defendant No. 1.

Again in 1911 Sarabjit Protap Sahi who was defendant No. 4 in the principal suit, brought a suit against Bhagwat Kuer claiming one-third share of Mahabir's property as the share of his maternal grandfather Srikishun who, he alleged, separated from his two brothers Bachu and Jugal Kishore. The suit was dismissed eventually by the High Court in 1913 but pending the appeal to the Privy Council there was a compromise by which one-third share of the estate of Mahabir being the share of Srikishun was released. The suit was against Bhagwat Kuer and in 1921 as the result of the compromise Bhagwat and others entered into transactions which the Subordinate Judge in the Court below has held to be invalid, which decision Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter on behalf of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 contended was wrong; but ultimately it was conceded that the transactions could not be supported. The question relating to them therefore does not enter into our consideration in this case. But the transactions were these.

Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer by an ekramnama dated January 3, 1921, released one-third share of Mahabir's property as the share of Srikishun Singh. Rajkishore Kuer then executed by way of gift a deed dated January 9, 1921, by which she gave to Sarabjit Protap Sahi, defendant No. 4 substantially the same property. Sarabjit in his turn made a gift to Bhagwat Kuer of the properties excluding 13 villages which he retained and one which he gave to Rajkishore Kuer the balance being given to Bhagwat Kuer as an absolute estate. Another deed was executed the same time undertaking to abide by the compromise even although the Privy Council did not approve of it. In 1917 Ambica Prasad had made a gift of what he had purchased from Dhanukdhari and two of the suits of 1907 were compromised between Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer on the one side and Maharaj Kumar Gopal Saran Narain Singh on the other side. Ultimately, on April 10, 1924, Ambica conveyed what he had got from Dhanukdhari on February 8, excepting nine villages to Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer for a consideration of Rs. 1,50,000. Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer in her turn executed a kobala in favour of the Maharaj Kumar (defendant No. 6) in respect of 10 annas 8 pies of the property which she obtained under the deed of April 10, 1924, and 5 annas 4 pies of the nine villages the subject-matter of the deed of February 8, 1907, she making a gift of 10 annas, 8 pies in 52 villages, which she got from Maharaj Kumar Gopal Saran Narain Singh and his father Ambica Prasad Singh to defendant No. 2, Surendra Sahi. This was by a deed of July 1, 1924. On September 19, 1924, Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer died. The various transactions to which I referred in the earlier part of my judgment and various orders of the High Court and of the Land Registration Department led to the litigation out of which these appeals arise.

The principal plaintiff is Babu Sia Prasad Singh who, as I have said, claims to be the nearest agnate of Mahabir Prasad through whom succession to the stridhan property of Ramdulari Kuer is traced. The principal contesting defendants are defendants Nos. 1 and 2 and defendants Nos. 4 and 17. In the result the main contest is between the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 4 and 17 which depends entirely upon the question of Hindu Law as to who is entitled to succeed to the stridhan property of Ramdulari Kuer. As I have already indicated defendants Nos. 1 and 2 also claim the property through various transactions entered into by Bhagwat Kuer to which I have referred but it is unnecessary to trace the title of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 as they have abandoned any personal claim to the property excepting a 10 annas 8 pies interest, title to which they claim through Dhanukdhari by reason of the transaction referred to above, namely the sale in February of 1907 to Ambica Singh and the conveyance by Ambica Singh to Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer as also the gift by Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer to defendant No. 2, Surendra Sahi, and on the assumption that Bhagwat Kuer as co-wife was not entitled under the Hindu Law to inherit the stridhan of her step-daughter Ramdulari Kuer and the property of Rupkali through Mahabir. But it is to be noticed shortly that the other suits were the suit of 1930 brought by defendants Nos. 4 and 6 (4 and 17 of leading suit) out of which Appeal No. 139 of 1935 was preferred. The result of this appeal depends upon the main contest between the plaintiff and defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in the principal suit. Then Suits Nos. 39, 40 and 41 were filed by defendants Nos. 1 and 2 of the leading suit out of which Appeals Nos. 64, 63 and 62 of 1935 arise.

The claim in the principal suit was allowed by the Subordinate Judge subject to the properties acquired by Bhagwat Kuer which had been held not to be accretions to Mahabir's estate; that is in Suit No. 38 of 1932. Sarabjit's Suit (No. 30 of 1930) was dismissed, but in this appeal no claim has been made as regards the properties of Bhagwat Kuer which had been held to be self-acquisitions—Items Nos. 38 to 44 and 48 of Sch. O and the properties which were the subject-matter of Bachu's endowment. Suit No. 39 of 1932 by defendants Nos. 4 and 17 claiming 10 annas 8 pies of the property through Dhanukdhari was dismissed and again suit No. 40 of 1932 claiming 5 annas 4 pies being the claim through Srikishun was dismissed. The same results would obtain in this appeal having regard to the acceptance by the parties of the decision of the learned Judge in the Court below on questions of fact, and the respective claims of the appellants to the estate or portions of it of Ramdulari would be decided against them. As has been seen, certain of the plaintiffs' claims in the suit depend upon the rights of the various parties to whom I shall refer as heirs to Ramdulari Kuer's estate. For the purposes of this appeal, the claims of the latter only will be referred to and not of those claiming under them by reason of assignment or otherwise. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 claim through Dhanukdhari Prasad now represented by Bhagwat Kuer, his widow, in the litigation. Dhanukdhari's claim depends upon whether Bhagwat Kuer, the first wife of Mahabir Prasad Singh, was entitled to the property after the death of Rupkali Kuer, the second wife of Mahabir Prasad Singh. The respective claims of Sia Prasad (plaintiff No. 1) and Sarabjit Protap Sahi are claims to succeed as the nearest heir to the stridhan of Ramdulari admittedly a succession which is traced through her father Mahabir Prasad Singh. The right of Bhagwat Kuer to take a woman's estate in Ramdulari's property after the death of Rupkali Kuer is admitted by defendant No. 4 Sarabjit Protap Sahi and Sia Prasad and will be dealt with later, but will be disposed of incidentally in discussing the right to succeed as between Sia Prasad and Sarabjit. The learned Judge in the Court below has held that the right of succession to the vested remainder of Ramdulari Kuer's estate is to be traced first through her mother Rupkali Kuer, then Mahabir Prasad, her father, and then to Bhagwat Kuer, the heir of Mahabir. On the death of Bhagwat in 1925, Rupkali, Ramdulari's mother, and Mahabir, Bhagwat's husband, having pre-deceased her, the succession opened. That this is the position is admitted by the respondent to the principal suit as also by the appellants (defendants Nos. 4 and 17), but denied by the other appellants (defendants Nos. 1 and 2) who deny the right of Bhagwat as a co-widow of Mahabir to succeed. The claim of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 which is now limited to 10 annas 8 pies of the property, depends as I have already said upon the right of Dhanukdhari to succeed after the death of Ramkali Kuer to the exclusion of Bhagwat Kuer. This claim in my judgment fails based as it is on exclusion of the co-widow Bhagwat as will hereafter be shown, and on that assumption the way is clear for the disposal of the respective claims based on the one hand upon the right of Sia Prasad, a remoter agnatic relation of Mahabir, and on the other hand on the right of Sarabjit Protap Sahi, a nearer cognatic relation.

Mr. P. R. Das's argument on behalf of Sarabjit shortly stated is that the scheme of succession to the stridhan is different from that of succession to males, and that after tracing it through Mahabir (which is admitted on all hands) it goes to the nearest sapinda, sapinda a generic term being in this connection used in a special sense including agnates up to the 7th degree and cognates to the 5th degree gotraja sapindas, somanodakas and bhinna-gotra sapindas: see West and Buhler, Hindu Law, Mitakshara Verse 53 and Ram Chandra v. Venayak Venkatesh (2) at p. 300. It is contended that the word 'sapinda' has a special meaning and not adopted in the Mitakshara in the case of succession to males where the expression is gotraja sapindas and that the Judge in the Court below was in error in relying upon the text (2) 41 I A 290 at p. 300; 25 Ind. Cas. 290; A I R 1914 P O 1; 42 O 384; 10 N L R 112; 18 O W N 1154; 27 M L J 323; 1 L W 831; 16 M L T 447; (1914) M W N 835; 16 Bom. L R 863; 12 A L J 1281; 20 O L J 573 (P O).

of Kamalkara for the solution of this problem, the relevant text regarding a woman's property being as follows:

"Her kinsmen take it if she die without issue (Colebrooke's placitum cxliv-a). "If a woman died without issue that is leaving no progeny, in other words, having no daughter's daughter, etc., the woman's property as above described shall be taken by her kinsmen (sapindas), namely her husband and the rest as will be (forthwith) explained. (Colebrooke's Mitakshara, Chap. II, s. 11, para. 9);" and in para. 30 as the statement of Bandyayana given by Vigyaneshwara of the Mitakshara is as follows: "The wealth of a deceased damsel let the uterine brethren themselves take." On failure of them it shall belong to the mother: or if she is dead, to the father (Chap. II, s. 11, verse 30 p. 388 of Colebrooke's translation; Edn. 1-70). The text remains silent as to succession after the father, but Veeramitrodaya, an authority in this School, Gridhari Lal Roy v. Bengal Government (3) and Ram Chandra v. Venayak Venkatesh (2) at p. 304*, supplies the omission to some extent. It says: "On failure of the mother and the father it goes to the nearest relations" (Gopal Chandra Sarkar's translation, 241). It is clear that the succession to the stridhan of a maiden is the same as the succession to the stridhan of a woman married in an unapproved form with this difference that in the case of a maiden the uterine brothers come in. In the first place it was argued that the ordinary rule of the Mitakshara that agnatic relations succeed before cognatic does not obtain in the case of stridhan and the fallacy upon which the Judge in the Court below has decided the case is that after the succession is traced through the father Mahabir, it proceeds on the same lines as succession to males.

It was contended that Veeramitrodaya used the term 'nearest relation' advisedly, and that other and more technical terms such as 'gotraja' were used in the case of succession to males (see Setlur's translation, Edn. 1911, Part VII.1 at p. 421) "On failure of brother's sons the (heirs are) the gentiles (gotrajas) who are to be taken to be other than the father," and that this being intentional, it must be construed as meaning the nearest in relationship in the ordinary sense. That being so, Sarabjit being admittedly nearer (although cognate) than Sia Prasad (being a somanodaka), his claim must prevail. Further, the nearness is not to be determined, as the Judge in (3) 12 M I A 442; 10 W R 31; 2 Sar 332; 2 Suther 159; 1 B L R 44 (P O).

*Page of 41 L. A.—[Ed.]

the Court below has held, by the rules given in the Mitakshara with regard to succession to males as stated by Kamalkara, but by the test of religious efficacy, in other words, the capacity to offer oblations; again, that sapindaship in this regard is the same as in the case of ceremonials. Further, it is contended that the rule of religious efficacy is the ability to offer (in this case) oblations to the agnatic ancestor of Mahabir, and that as Sarabjit is the great-grandson (through his mother) of Jugatpati Singh, an agnatic ancestor (grandfather of Mahabir), he could offer two undivided cakes to that ancestor, also undivided cakes to another common ancestor of them both, namely Tribeni Singh, whereas Sia Prasad Singh can only offer divided cakes to an ancestor who was common to himself and Mahabir, being Bakhtour Singh, of whom Sia Prasad Singh is the great-great-grandson, the rule being that to three ancestors undivided cakes may be offered and after that to three more remote ancestors, divided cakes.

It has been decided in the Court below that the Mitakshara being one whole work cannot be taken to have applied different schemes of succession with regard to different subjects unless expressly so, and that therefore there being no enumeration of the heirs in default of the father, the rule as to males in the case of obstructed succession would apply which in this case is the same as succession to stridhan in default of enumerated heirs in the case of a woman married in one of the blamed or unapproved forms; this rule depending on the principle that a woman married in an unapproved form remains in the gotra of her father as in the case of a maiden. In support of the argument that in using the term sapinda the rule that agnatic relations are to be preferred to cognatic is ignored, a solitary passage in the decision of the Calcutta High Court is relied upon. Chitty, J. in dealing with a case in which the contesting parties claiming succession in the properties in suit were sisters of the propositus (father's daughters; and father's brother's sons, asked the question why agnates should be preferred to cognates in the case of succession to a maiden stridhan, and stated that there was no authority for that proposition. The judgments in that case both of Chetty and Mukherji, JJ., are in conformity with the view expressed by all the text-book writers of authority. But it is argued that although the decision in that case must be considered right yet the reasoning was to a great extent obiter as the test which the appellants seek to apply in this case was adopted in that case and was sufficient to dispose of the matter. But it is to be remembered that the remark relied upon is limited to the facts of that case in which the rule of propinquity was applied, the successful parties (father's daughters) being in any event the nearest relations: I refer to Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra (4). Reliance was placed upon the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Buddha Singh v. Lattu Singh (5) at p. 217 for the proposition that the test of religious efficacy applies equally to the Benares as to the Dayabhaga Schools. Their Lordships observe:

"It is well settled by decisions of this Board that under the Mitakshara the sapinda relationship arise "between two people through their being connected by particles of one body," namely that of a common ancestor, in other words, from community of blood in contradistinction to the Dayabhaga notion of "community in the offering of religious oblations."

But as it will be shown later on, the Mitakshara whilst holding that the right to inherit does not spring from the right to offer oblations, does not exclude from consideration the test of propinquity or nearness of blood. But it is to be observed that their Lordships were applying the rule of religious efficacy to persons of the same class and towards the end of the judgment made this statement in referring to Mitra Misra, the author of Veeramitrodaya (Gopal Chandra Sarkar's translation p. 91, Chap. II, Part I, s. 23-a) an authoritative commentary on the Mitakshara which lays down in express terms the rule:

"He says when there are many claimants to the heritage among gotrajas and the like, then the fact of conferring benefits on the proprietor of the wealth by means of offering oblations and the like excludes those that do not confer such benefits," and later:

"In Ram Singh v. Ugur Singh (6), the Board affirmed this rule in the following words: 'When a question of preference arises, as preference is founded on superior efficacy of obligations, that principle must be applied to the solution of the difficulty.'

I think it is clear that the test of the right of capacity to offer religious oblations is a test of the Dayabhaga School whereas

(4) 39 O 319; 11 Ind. Cas. 872; 15 O L J 23; 15 O W N 1036.

(5) 42 I A 208 at p. 217; 30 Ind. Cas 529; A I R 1915 P O 70; 37 A 604; 29 M L J 434; 2 L W 897; 13 A L J 1007; 18 M L T 409; 17 Bom. L R 1023; 20 O W N 1; 22 O L J 281; (1915) M W N 772 (P O).

(6) 13 M I A 373; 14 W R 1; 2 Sar. 566; 2 Suther 330; 5 B L R 293 (P O).

in the Benares School the test is propinquity. Only in competitions between persons of the same class is the matter determined on the footing of religious efficacy. As I have said the Judge in the Court below has relied for decision of the question on the Kamalakara as an authority in the Benares School. In Ghosh's Vivada Tandava of Kamalakara, p. 1142, in dealing with succession to stridhan it is stated as follows:

"In default of the husband, the estate is obtained by his near relation beginning with the lawfully married wife and daughter, etc., as prescribed in the text of Yagnavalkya in the rule about succession to sonless men. According to Vijyaneshwara it is taken by the husband's wife, her co-wife's daughter and the maiden daughter of the co-wife."

It is contended by Mr. P. R. Das that Kamalakara has not been correctly understood and that although it would appear that Yagnavalkya's text (which is a text dealing with succession to males) is relied upon, it is for a limited purpose and is not adopted in the case of stridhan generally. We are invited to look at p. 1145 of the same work where the final conclusion is arrived at by applying the test of religious efficacy. Again, it is argued that if the rule as stated in p. 1142 is applied it is contrary to the Mitakshara and that being so the Mitakshara must prevail. Again reverting to Veeramitrodaya it is contended that the rule of religious efficacy is the true test as will be seen by reference to s. 14 where cognates are mentioned as heirs (G. Sarkar's Veeramitrodaya, p. 243). But when there is a failure of the above-mentioned heirs of a childless woman's property, Brihaspati ordains:

"The mother's sister, maternal uncle's wife and the paternal uncle's wife, etc., are pronounced similar to mother. If they leave issue of the body, nor son (of a rival wife) nor daughter's son, etc., shall take the property."

Here in the term aurasa or "issue of the body" both sons and daughters are included: for they debar all (other heirs) and the order in which they debar others has previously been mentioned; and then explaining what Manu declares, the meaning of the term son as not being in apposition with the term aurasa, proceeds:

"Hence on the failure of heirs down to the daughter's son first, the aurasa inherits, after him his sons and grandsons. For it is proper that succession should devolve on them inasmuch as they are competent to present pinda and are liable to discharge debts, etc."

Apart from the argument on the text, it is contended that the rule of propinquity upon which the plaintiff relies is a rule applicable to the case of succession to males

(and there is no reason to apply it to females) which is admittedly based on sapindaship. Mitakshara, Chap. II. Ss. 3 and 4, provides, "Propinquity is the great regulating principle in determining the order of succession among heirs." The rule is based on the following text of Manu: "To the nearest sapinda the inheritance belongs." In further development of this argument the contention is that the Mitakshara used 'sapinda' in one sense only. Sapinda relationship arises "between two people through being connected by particles of one body": See Baddha Singh v. Lattu Singh (5) at page 217*. But when dealing with the males, the term 'gotraja' is used. "The wife, daughter, both parents, brothers likewise their sons gotrajas (gentiles), bandhu (cognates) a pupil and a fellow student" (Mitakshara, Chap. II Sec. 1, Verse 2, Mandlik's Translation of Institutes of Yagnavalkya p. 220). The Hindu jurists in their text books deal with this question, and in a manner contrary to the argument put forward by the appellant and the learned advocate does no more than to argue that the views which are thus unanimously expressed are mistaken. Mulla's Hindu law, Edn. 8, sec. 147 deals with the matter in these words:

"If there be none of these, in other words, if the woman dies without leaving issue, her stridhana, if she was married in an approved form, goes to her husband, after him to the husband's heirs in order of succession to him. But if she was married in an unapproved form, it goes to her mother and then to her father and then to the father's heirs."

If this statement of the law be correct, the matter is concluded against appellant-defendants No. 4 and 17. It also defeats the case of the other appellants-defendants No. 1 and 2, who claim through Dhaunkdari, as it is clear that amongst the heirs of the father would be the co-widow under the text of Mitakshara Chap. II s. 11, placita 8, 9 and 11.

8. A woman's property has been thus described. The author next propounds the distribution of it. 9. If a woman die 'without issue' that is, leaving no progeny, in other words, having no daughter, nor daughter's daughter, nor daughter's son, nor son, nor son's son, the woman's property, as above described, shall be taken by her kinsmen, namely her husband and the rest, as will be (forthwith) explained. 11. Of a woman dying without issue as before stated, and who had become a wife by any of the four modes of marriage denominated brahma, &c. the property of a childless woman goes to her parents, that is to her father and mother."

These passages are taken from Stokes' Hindu Law Books, pp. 460, 461 and were adopted by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Bai Kesserbai v. Hunsraj Morarji (7) at p. 187. This case is a direct authority against appellants No. 1 and 2, the decision in the case being that a co-widow is entitled to succeed to the stridhan of a widow dying without issue in preference to her husband's brother or brother's son. Their Lordships agreed with the learned editor of the Vyavastha Chandrika and Lord Davey at p. 197* of the Report stated that "the words 'and the rest' therefore must mean, or include, the other relations of the husband or father." The case is also important for our purpose for their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council refer to Kamalakara. As is already pointed out there is no dispute, the problem in this case as to what the nearest relation of the father being the same as the nearest relation of the husband. The author makes this observation at p. 142 of his work :

"When the marriage is in an unapproved form, the stridhan goes in default of issue not to the husband and the heirs but to the mother, father, and father's heirs—the succession after the father would be the deceased woman's brother, brother's son, stepmother, sister, sister's son, grandmother, paternal uncle and her father's other sapindas samanodakas and bandhus."

This statement, it is argued, is incorrect as the Mitakshara uses the word sapindas only, and not 'heirs' and Veeramitrodaya as we have seen in the words 'nearest relations.' The Mitakshara in dealing with succession to males provides :

"The wife and the daughters also, both parents, brothers likewise and their sons, gentiles, cognates, a pupil and a fellow student. (verse cxxxv). "On failure of the first among these, the next in order is indeed the heir of the estate of one, who departed for heaven leaving no male issue"

This rule extends to all (persons and) classes (verse CXXXVI, Colebrooke, Chap. II, s. 1). Reliance was placed on Sarkar's Hindu Law, Edn. 7, p. 830 where dealing with succession to stridhan this statement is made :

"It should be noticed that the nearness or propinquity is the principle on which the order of succession is worked out in the Mitakshara. Hence the relations are to a woman's property in the same order in which they would become heirs to her husband or father or mother: Janglubai v. Jetha Appaji (8)."

Again Mulla, Edn. 8, p. 27 in this connection states :

"Under the Mitakshara the right to inherit arises from propinquity that is proximity of relationship."

(7) 33 I A 176 at p. 187; 30 B 431; 3 A L J 424; 1 M L T 211; 16 M L J 446; 10 C W N 802; 8 Bom. L R 446; 4 O L J 9 (P O).

(8) 32 B 409; 10 Bom. L R 522.

*Page of 33 I A—[Ed.]

and relies upon the authority of Lulloobhoy v. Cassabai (9) at p. 121. There being no difference in principle between marriage in an approved form or an unapproved form excepting that in the former, succession is traced through the husband, in the latter through the father and therefore raises the same problem as I have just stated. The statement by the same author "that it descends in the same way as if it had belonged to the husband himself" is relied upon; see Sarkar's Hindu Law, p. 832. Again, Shyama Charan Sarkar on Vyavasta Chandrika, Vol. II, p. 839, dealing with succession to stridhan states :

"So according to his own exposition in the case of the 'women being married in the Brahma, Daivai, Asura, etc. form,' if there be no husband there then such of the above-mentioned heirs as are nearest to her in his family succeed in due order," and

"in the case of her being married in the asura, etc., (unapproved forms of marriage) if her father do not exist, then such of the aforesaid heirs as are nearest to her in her father's family succeed in due order."

Likewise, Banerji in his Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhan (Tagore Lectures, Edn. 5, p. 424) makes this statement :

"In the absence of any provision in the Mitakshara for determining the order of proximity among the husband's (father in the present case) sapindas, we turn to the Veeramitrodaya, a work of high authority in the Benares School. But the work does not help much. The order of succession, there is different from that in the Mitakshara as far as there are express provisions in both and where the express enumeration of heirs in the latter treatise stops, Veeramitrodaya does not carry it much further."

Then dealing with succession as to enumerated heirs observes :

"The order of succession is no doubt in accordance with the text of Brihaspati. And there is this additional argument in his favour that it is the same as given in the Vyavahara Mayukha, (Chap. XIV, s. 10 "30") and the Smṛiti Chandrika (Chap. IX, s. 111 "38"). But being in conflict with that indicated by Vigyaneshwara it cannot be accepted as law in the Benares School which recognizes the Veeramitrodaya only when it is not contradicted by the superior authority of the Mitakshara."

Then observing that it would be useless to refer to the Bengal authority for elucidation of the point, as the founder of the Bengal School controverts almost every doctrine of the Mitakshara on the subject, states that according to Kamalakara the "nearness" of sapindas in the above rule of Vigyaneshwara is to be determined by the rule given in the Mitakshara for the devolution of the property of a male owner dying without male issue. The same learned (9) 5 B 110 at p. 121; 7 I A 212; 4 Sar. 164; 7 O L R 446 (P O).

author relying upon West and Buhler, Vol. I, at p. 213 quotes this passage :

"This opinion seems to be based on the consideration that as sapindas inherit only through the husband, they virtually succeed to property coming from him and that consequently they must inherit in the order prescribed for the succession to a male's estate."

The same learned author is of the opinion that Kamalkara being entitled to be followed as an author in the Benares School when it is not in conflict with that of any higher authority has its further recommendation being simple as it makes the order of succession to stridhan correspond after a certain point to that applicable to man's property and if that were not Vigyaneshwara's meaning, and if he had not referred to this known order of succession after the husband, he would, in all probability, have been explicit. The text of Kamalkara has already been referred to in Ghosh's Vol. II, p. 1142 :

"In default of the husband the estate is obtained by his near relation—as prescribed in the text of Yagnavalkya in the rule about succession to sonless men."

The argument that Yagnavalkya was used by Kamalkara merely for the purpose of bringing into the succession the wife and daughter is one which, in my judgment, is not justified and certainly is not supported by authority, although in support of this argument it is contended that Kamalkara does not incorporate the whole of Yagnavalkya but relies upon this for support on the particular point only, and in that sense, has not stated what he is supposed to have stated by certain learned authors including Banerji on Hindu Law of Marriage and stridhan. Reliance was also placed upon Mayne's Hindu Law Edn. 9 at p. 979 where the author dealing with this subject observed that in either case (a maiden and woman married in an unapproved form) in default of the specifically enumerated heirs, the estate goes to the sapindas of the parents or husband as the case may be. The terms 'nearest relations of the parents' in this context means 'sapindas of the father,' and proceeds to state "so it was held that a sister (father's daughter) sister's son (father's daughter's son, etc.)" (see table at p. 836-a). It is argued by Sir Sultan Ahmed that if the meaning which is sought to be attached to the word 'sapindas' by the appellants is adopted, reference to the table at p. 836-a of Mayne's work would be erroneous. Again, Macnaghten deals with the question in the following way at p. 38 of his Hindu Law,

Edn. 2 :

"To such property left by an unmarried woman, the heirs are her brother, her father, and her mother successively, and failing those her paternal kinsmen in due order."

As regards the authorities Mr. Das, in the first place in support of his contention that the point is to be tested by the capacity to offer funeral oblations, relies upon the case in Guru Gobinda Shaha Mandal v. Anand Lal Ghose (10) where the claim was by a father's brother's daughter's son, and the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court dealing with the point made this observation at p. 39* of the report :

"We wish to draw particular attention to it as an instance of the extreme solicitude evinced by the author of the Dayabhaga to provide for the spiritual welfare of a deceased proprietor. Again when we come to look at the internal arrangement of each of these classes, so far as the details of such arrangement are actually given in the Dayabhaga, we find that the same principle is always kept in view. Thus among the sapindas, those who are competent to offer funeral cakes to the paternal ancestors of the deceased proprietor are invariably preferred to those who are competent to offer such cakes to his maternal ancestors only; and the reason assigned for the distinction is that the first kind of cakes are of superior religious efficacy in comparison to the second. Similarly, those who offer larger number of cakes of a particular description are invariably preferred to those who offer a less number of cakes of the same description; and where the number of such cakes is equal, those that are offered to nearer ancestors are always preferred to those offered to more distant ones. The same remarks are equally applicable to sakulayas and samanodakas."

It is said that is a true rule, but there was an attempted departure from the rule in Kashee Mohun Roy v. Rai Gobind Chuckerbutty (11) but the matter, it is argued, was put right in the later Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court Digumber Roy Chowdury v. Moti Lal Bundopadhyaya (12), where it was held that the brother's daughter's son is a sapinda and is therefore a preferable heir to the great-great-great grandfather's great-great-great-grandson. But these cases were cases of Dayabhaga or the Bengal School of the Hindu Law in which admittedly the final test is capacity to offer funeral oblations. Defendants Nos. 4 and 17 gain no support from these cases. In Nanja Pillai v. Sivabhagayathachi (13) there was a contest between the daughter of a co-wife of a deceased woman married in one of the approved forms and the sapindas

(10) 5 B L R 115; 13 W R 49 (F B).]

(11) 21 W R 329.

(12) 9 O 563; 12 O L R 204 (F B).

(13) 36 M 116; 13 Ind. Cas. 128; 21 M L J 850;

(1911) 2 M W N 168; 10 M L T 494.

*Page of 5 B L R—[Ed.]

of her husband such as his father's brother's son. It was held, relying upon Kamalkara, that nearness was to be determined by the rule given in Mitakshara in regard to succession to the property of a male who died without descendants and consequently first the wife, i. e. the rival wife of the deceased, succeeds, next the daughter, i. e. the deceased step-daughter and so on. In Kanakammal v. Ananthamathi Ammal (14) it was held that the brother's widow, although a gotraja sapinda was not entitled to succeed as an heir under the Madras system of inheritance. In a later decision, in Kamala Bai v. Bhagirathi Bai (15) it was held that the rule that in the case of succession to stridhan property, a daughter inherits as sapinda where the succession is to be traced through the father or the husband, applies also to the case of a wife or widow. Sundara Ayyar, J. delivering the judgment of the Court stated:

"We see no reason for not accepting the view of the Bombay High Court in Tukaram v. Narayan (16), that the sapindas, both of the father and mother, must be understood to mean the same persons as the mother becomes a member of the father's family on her marriage. In this view, the defendant, as the wife of the deceased maiden's father, would be a nearer heir than the plaintiff (the maternal aunt of the deceased maiden").

This is a direct authority against the argument of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 who depend, as I have already stated, on the exclusion of the co-widow Bhagwat Kuer for the purpose of establishing their title to the 10 annas 8 pies through the transactions of Dhanukdhari who claimed to be the next in succession to Ramdulari. It is also indirectly an authority against the other appellants represented by Mr. P. R. Das unless he could successfully contend that Kamalkara introduced the rule laid down by Yagnavalkya merely for the purpose of putting in wife and daughter. In Sundaram Pillai v. Ramasamia Pillai (17) the conflict was between the father's paternal uncle's son and father's sister. The question discussed was what was the nearest relation? After referring to the text Napier, J. in delivering the judgment of the Court dealt with the argument that the decision reported in Kamala Bai v. Bhagirathi Bai (15) had followed the decision in Tukaram v. Narayan (16) and was wrong in doing so as the Bombay High Court had acted upon Veeramitrodaya, a work which is not followed in Madras, but pointed out in answer to this argument that the learned Judges of the Madras High Court, although not expressly following the language of Veeramitrodaya, which was definite on the subject, proceeded by way of analogy and arrived at the same result.

The argument on behalf of defendants Nos. 4 and 17, as will be seen from the above considerations, has always been rejected. The authorities, so far as they dealt with the specific points, are entirely against the appellants. The argument is supported neither by authority nor by the authoritative authors of the text-books, who are unanimous that sapindaship in the case such as we have before us and in the case of succession to males depends entirely upon the same rule. The argument, although attractive in some of its aspects, is one which cannot be accepted. In my judgment, therefore the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below was right in rejecting it, and the appeal, so far as these defendants are concerned, fails. That disposes of appeal No. 69 of 1935 in favour of the plaintiffs.

The next case is by the appellants who are defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in the action. They do not now press their claim which was given up at the end of the argument accepting the Subordinate Judge's conclusion that the decisions in the suits commencing in 1907 did not operate as res judicata, and that the principal property in dispute, the Lakhaipur mukarrari, was Bachu's separate property. The remaining claim is as to 10 annas 8 pies share which, as I have already pointed out, depends upon the right of Dhanukdhari to succeed as heir after Rupkali, the junior wife of Mahabir Prasad Singh, to the exclusion of Bhagwat Kuer, the co-widow. One of the contentions is that Veeramitrodaya (Sarkar, at para. 15, p. 244) deals with wife and daughter of the propositus and, therefore, the passage could not be of any assistance to those who contend that the co-wife is entitled. But it is to be observed that Ghosh, in his Principles of Hindu Law, at p. 1142, expressly mentions co-wife. It is further argued that the mention of "parents" in the Mitakshara does not include stepmother. Kamala Bai v.

(14) 37 M 293; 25 Ind. Cas. 901; A I R 1915 Mad. 18.

(15) 38 M 45; 16 Ind. Cas. 939; A I R 1916 Mad. 925; 23 M L J 518; 12 M L T 499; (1912) M W N 1186.

(16) 36 B 339; 14 Ind. Cas. 438; 14 Bom. L R 89.

(17) 43 M 32; 52 Ind. Cas. 821; A I R 1920 Mad. 728; 26 M L T 115; (1919) M W N 615; 10 L W 664.

Bhagirathi Bai (15) a case to which I have already referred, this point was expressly decided against the contention now put forward; so also the case in Krishna Bai v. Shripati (18) is a direct authority on the point. Also by reason of the decision at which I have arrived as regards the respective claims of Sia Prasad and Kuar Sarabjit Protap Sahi, the right of Dhanukdhari Prasad to exclude Bhagwat Kuer, the co wife, is necessarily decided against the contention. This appeal, therefore, so far as it relates to the claim of 10 annas 8 pies share of the property, through Dhanukdhari, fails.

The next questions to be disposed of are the endowments of Bachu and Bhagwat Kuer. Bachu during his lifetime in 1873 endowed a temple at Ajodhya in Faizabad with six villages and also with Rs. 40,000 in cash; this was on September 2 of that year. Bachu constituted himself the mutwalli and provided for the devolution of the office after his death. Mahabir Prasad Singh held the office after the death of his father Bachu and on Mahabir's death, Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer remained in office till her death. Plaintiff No. 1 in the principal suit claimed the office of mutwalli as the nearest of kin. There was a further transaction by Mahabir Prasad by which he sold six of the villages of the Lakhaipur mukarrari estate to the Thakurji on March 21, 1884. Bhagwat Kuer, when in possession, purporting to act under the provision of the will of her husband, dedicated by six deeds, properties of which she was in possession through the waqf. These transactions were of March 7, 1900, May 19, 1905, February 10, 1906, November 3, 1913, and June 29, 1924. This last dedication was, as the Judge in the Court below has pointed out, merely a fictitious endowment for the purpose not of the waqf of defendants Nos. 1 to 3. On July 2, 1924, Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer purported to change the order of succession to the office of mutwalli and provided that after her death defendant No. 1 must be the mutwalli. The right of Bachu to endow the property is not disputed and the Judge has decided accordingly. As regards the mutwalliship, Mahabir, it has been pointed out, remained a mutwalli during his lifetime. As will be seen from the genealogical table, Mahabir was the last of the male line of Bachu. The deed of endowment dated September 2, 1873, provided:

"As long as I live the tasliat and management of the waqf, properties shall remain vested in me personally and thereafter it shall be vested in my son Babu Mahabir Prasad Singh, and after him, it shall continue from generation to generation, to be vested in the eldest son found fit in the line of each of my children one after another, both in the male and female lines."

There was neither male nor female issue surviving and the line of succession laid down by Bachu came to an end. The right of management therefore, reverted to the founder or to his heir. Mahabir Prasad made appropriate provisions by which the mutwalliship should go to his descendants, male and female and Ramdulari, therefore, on her birth was entitled to the office. It was the opinion of the Judge in the Court below that that being so, the right again reverted to Bachu, the founder, or his heir, and both of them being dead, it devolved upon Dhanukdhari Prasad Singh, who, unaware of his right, failed to take action. On the findings at which I have arrived, and in the events which have happened, a right would devolve upon Sia Prasad Singh. But again this right was, not exercised by him. No one being nominated nor coming within the line constituted by the founder, the parties in these proceedings can establish no right to the mutwalliship. The learned Judge relies upon the deed of gift by Kuar Sarabjit Protap Sahi to Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer admitting Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer's right as mutwalli of this endowment and making no claim to the office himself and also upon the fact that defendant No. 1 can only lay claim through Dhanukdhari. Dhanukdhari did not exercise his powers and again, as there was nothing to show that Bhagwat Kuer was nominated, she had no power to nominate defendant No. 1.

One of the points put forward by the appellant, however, is that rightly or wrongly Dulhin Bhagwat Kuer was in possession and therefore obtained a right to nominate by adverse possession. She, however, was in possession as executor of the will of her husband and for a limited estate also. This question of adverse possession was not pleaded nor decided in the Court below, depending as it does on questions of fact such as the claim of the persons to whom I have referred either to nominate a line of holders of the office or to claim the mutwalliship themselves. In my judgment the contention of adverse possession cannot now be entertained. The learned Judge has disposed of the matter on the conclusion that none of the persons enumerated was entitled to hold the office of mutwalli of the properties endowed by Bachu, and, as the claims made in the suits were not claims for appointment to the office by the Court, it was sufficient to hold that none of the claimants were entitled in these suits to succeed.

There remain two other questions to be determined; first as to the validity of the endowment by Dulbin Bhagwat Kuer, and secondly, the claim by defendant No. 1 to the office of mutwalli. The Judge in the Court below has held that the endowments were beyond the power of Bhagwat Kuer. The question therefore as to the mutwalliship does not arise. It is obvious that if the Judge is right as regards the validity of the endowment, the second question does not arise. These endowments, as I have already said, are of March 7, 1900, May 19, 1905, February 10, 1906, November 3, 1913 and June 29, 1924. Reliance was in the first place placed upon the will of Mahabir Prasad Singh which in para. 5, after referring to the dedication by Mahabir's father of considerable property to Sri Thakurji installed in the temple at Ajodhya provides :

"5: My father has dedicated considerable property to six Thakurji installed at the temple at Ajodhya for purposes of raj-bhog and charity and he also has executed a wakfnama. It is my wish also to do one or two acts of dharam to perpetuate my name and fame, and this is known to my both wives. If I fail to fulfil my desire during my life-time, I authorize my wives who might survive to fulfil this desire of mine as set forth in para 2 and the wakfnama, etc., which might be executed by them for this charitable act shall be operative and effectual to the same extent as the one which might have been executed by myself."

The translation before us omits the words "one or two acts of dahram" which are taken from the translation by the Subordinate Judge which all parties admit as correct. Under that clause of the will (which I have just read) and by reason of the general law it is contended that Bhagwat Kuer had power to make these endowments. The law on the subject is expressed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Sardar Singh v. Kunj Bebari Lal (19) at p. 394, thus :

"In their Lordships' opinion the Hindu Law recognizes the validity of the dedication or alienation of a small fraction of the property by a Hindu female for the continuous benefit of the soul of the deceased owner."

Against the argument in support of the validity of the endowment, it is contended first that the provisions of the will are too vague: Ranchordas Vandravandas v. Parvatibai (20). The first of the documents of March 7, 1900, mentions no less than five acts of charity, and it is contended that if she had power to make the endowments of fractions of the property, she had exhausted that power completely by some of the purposes for which the endowment was made—admittedly about one-tenth of the whole property being the subject of these endowments. Again, in the dedication of 1905 a statement is made "by way of carrying out my husband's wish" In this case the property endowed was of the value of Rs. 40,000 and it is contended that if this was the true purpose, the purpose had already been carried out by the earlier dedication of March 7, 1900. Further in the document of February 1906 Bhagwat Kuer purports to create more endowments on the ground that the properties already endowed were not sufficient to defray all the expenses of the temple and she denied that the two documents of March 1900 and of May 1905 were acts by which she carried out the object of perpetuating the memory of her husband. It would appear that the authority, if it was the authority of her husband upon which she was relying, had long since been exhausted, and it is impossible to contend that the lady was acting under the general rule of the Hindu Law which would entitle her to dedicate a small fraction of the property of her husband for the benefit of his soul. It must be remembered her interest was limited, and no valid reason is put forward to support the transaction to which I have already referred quite apart from the document of 1913 and 1924. It is frankly conceded that the purpose of the 1913 endowment was for a pathsala at Ajodhya which she herself had inaugurated. No mention is made of her husband and therefore it is impossible to say that she was continuing to carry out the authority of her husband under the will. The other deed suffers from the same infirmity. Again in this transaction a property of the value of Rs. 40,000 was transferred.

(19) 49 I A 383 at p. 394; 69 Ind. Cas 36; A I R 1922 P O 261; 44 A 503; 18 L W 871; 31 M L T 253; 37 O L J 383, 44 M L J 766; 27 O W N 653; 25 Bom. L R 648; 2 P W R 1923 (P O).

The Judge in the Court below has held that the authority in the will was vague and void for uncertainty and that the endowments were not in accordance with the authority such as it was, given under the will. For that reason it was held that the endowments were inoperative against the plaintiff in the principal action. It is not an unreasonable view held by the Subordinate Judge that the purpose of these transactions was to benefit defendant No. 1 Raghava Surendra Sahi whom she adopted in 1906. In my judgment the learned Judge was correct in this view. The decision on all these points being against the appellants the result is that all the appeals fail and must be dismissed with costs to the respondents being plaintiffs Nos. 1-a, 1-b, 2, 3 and 4 in the principal suit No. 38 of 1932. There will be two sets of hearing fees, one payable by the appellants in Appeals Nos. 62, 63, 64 and 69 of 1935 and the other payable by appellants in Appeals Nos. 139 and 197 of 1935.

(20) 26 I A 71; 23 B 725; 1 Bom. L R 607; 3 O W N 62; 7 Sar. 54 (P O).

Agarwala, J.—These six appeals which have been heard together, arise out of five suits which were tried together by the Subordinate Judge of Gaya. The following genealogical table will explain the relationship of the principal parties :—

In 1863 Inderjit Kuer, daughter of Tirbeni Singh and wife of Maharaj Hit Narain of Tikari, made a grant known as the Lakhaipore mukarrari to Bachu Singh, one of the three sons of Jagatpati Singh, who was one of her two brothers. At the time the grantee was a member of an undivided Hindu family consisting of himself, his two brothers; Shrikishun and Jugal Kishore and Ramrachya Singh, one of the sons of Kailaspati, brother of the grantee's father. In 1864 Ramrachya separated from Jagatpati's branch of the family taking with him a half share of the ancestral properties but no share in the mukarrari. Jugal Kishore died on July 5, 1872, and Srikishun on the 29th of the same month. Bachu, the grantee of the mukarrari, died on February 8, 1874, after obtaining succession certificates empowering him to collect the debts due to his brothers, Jugal Kishore and Srikishun, respectively. Kamalbas Kuer, widow of Srikishun, and Rajkishori Kuer, one of his daughters, had not opposed Bachu Singh's application for a succession certificate in respect of the debts of Srikishun and received from him, the widow a maintenance grant, and the daughter an absolute gift of certain properties. The application, however, so far as the debts of Srikishun were concerned, was opposed by his other daughter, Rani Ramkewal Kuer, and so far as the debts due to Jugal Kishore's estate were concerned, by the latter's widow, Anandi Kuer. They denied that Srikishun and Jugal Kishore were joint with Bachu at the time of their deaths. The matter was decided in favour of Bachu Singh and after the latter's death his son, Mahabir Prasad, made a maintenance grant to Anandi Kuer by a deed dated May 17, 1874. Rani Ramkewal Kuer, however, challenged the decision by instituting Title Suit No. 163 of 1880 against Mahabir Prasad claiming her father's share in the ancestral properties. No claim was then advanced with regard to the mukarrari properties. The suit was compromised, Rani Ramkewal Kuer admitting Mahabir Prasad's title and receiving three villages from him. Rajkishori was impleaded in this suit. She and Sarabjit Pratap Sahi, son of Rani Ramkewal Kuer, who was then a minor, and his elder brother, were parties to the compromise. In the result these disputes terminated in the widows of Srikishun and Jugal Kishore, and the descendants of the former, admitting that Srikishun and Jugal Kishore died in a state of jointness with Bachu and that the latter's son had succeeded to the joint family properties. But the Lakhaipore mukarrari was not the subject-matter of those disputes.

Mahabir died on June 21, 1894, leaving two widows Bhagwat Kuer and Rupkali Kuer. On October 11, 1891, the latter gave birth to a daughter, Ramdulari Kuer, who died on June 3, 1895. Rupkali died in January 8, 1899. Kamalbas, widow of Srikishun, died on September 9, 1899. Anandi Kuer, widow of Jugal Kishore, on August 4, 1901, and Bhagwat Kuer on September 19, 1925. Under the will of Mahabir Prasad, his estate was given to his widow successively for life, and his daughter, Ramdulari, on her birth became entitled to the reversionary estate. The various claimants to these properties are the parties to this litigation and the principal question on which they are at issue, is as to who ultimately inherited the estate which Ramdulari obtained under the will of her father, Mahabir. The parties are all agreed that the estate of Mahabir vested in Ramdulari on her birth and that on her death it passed to her mother, Rupkali Kuer. The contention of Raghava Surendra Sahi and his son Hari Surendro Sahi, who are plaintiffs in Title Suits Nos. 40 and 41 of 1932 and defendants in Suits Nos. 30 of 1930 and 38 of 1932 is that on the death of Rupkali Kuer the estate of her daughter Ramdulari passed to Dhanukdhari, who was at that time the nearest reversioner to Ramdulari's father, Mahabir, the latter's senior widow, Bhagwat Kuer, being excluded from inheriting the estate of her step-daughter. This contention was challenged by Sia Prasad who instituted Title Suit No. 38 of 1932 and by Sarabjit Pratap was the plaintiff in Title Suit No. 30 of 1930. Both these persons have since died. Sia Prasad's widow, Nauratan Kuer, was substituted in his place and Sarabjit's son Chatterpati in his place. The contention of the plaintiff in Title Suit No. 30 of 1930 is that at the time of Bhagwat Kuer's death he was the nearest kinsman and heir of Mahabir although he was a cognate and not an agnatic relation. Sia Prasad's claim was based on the Mitakshara text that cognates do not succeed until other classes of heirs are exhausted.

As between the claim of Sia Prasad, who instituted Title Suit No. 38 of 1932, and the claim of Sarabjit Pratap, who instituted Title Suit No. 30 of 1930 (and whose representative is the appellant in First Appeals Nos. 137 and 19 of 1935) the right to succeed to the stridhan property of Ramdulari on the death of her stepmother, Bhagwat Kuer, depends on the question whether the claim of a remote agnate is to be preferred to that of a less remote cognate. The parties are agreed, and it is clear, that in the case of a maiden, the heirs to her stridhan are, first, her uterine brothers, secondly her mother, and thirdly, her father. After this, it is contended by Sir Sultan Ahmad in support of Sia Prasad's claim, that the heir to the deceased maiden's stridhan is the same as the heir to her father's property. In support of the claim of Sarabjit Prctap however, Mr. Das contends that the next to the stridhan is not the father's heirs but his nearest relation. Mr. Das founds his contention on the text of Manu, Chap. IX, verse 187; "The property of a near sapinda shall be that of a near sapinda," as explained by the Privy Council in Ram Chandra v. Venayak Venkatesh (2), at p. 297*, and in the commentary of Viramirodaya. The mitakshara divides sapindas, or blood relations, into two classes, gotraja sapindas and bhinna-gotra sapindas or bandhus. The Privy Council pointed out that while the Mitakshara uses the word sapinda in its wider sense to include all blood relations (i. e. all persons having particles of the same body as the deceased) it lays down rules for the limitation of the sapinda relationship which confines it to blood relations within seven degrees on the male side and five degrees on the female side. In Ram Chandra v. Venayak Venkatesh (2), their Lordships of the Privy Council rejected the contention that the Mitakshara uses the word sapinda in its narrower sense only in relation to marriage, impurity and exequial rites and not in relation to inheritance. They approved of the observations of the Full Bench in Umaid Bahadur v. Udai Chand (21), at p. 126, with reference to the meaning of sapinda in the Mitakshara:

"Having taken great pains in accurately defining the word 'sapinda' in the beginning of his work, and having once said in clear words in the passage in question that 'one ought to know that wherever the word sapinda is used, there exists (between the persons to whom it is applied) a connection with one body either immediately or by descent', it is hardly reasonable to suppose that the author used the word in another part of the work in a different sense. It is a well-understood rule of construction amongst the authors of the Institutes of Hindu Law, that the same word must be taken to have been used in one and the same sense throughout a work, unless the contrary is expressly indicated."

With regard to the succession to stridhan property, the Mitakshara cites a text of Yagnavalkya that if it be the property of a woman married in one of the orthodox forms, it will go to her daughters, and, in default of them, to her husband. In the case of a woman married in an unorthodox form her stridhan goes to her father and mother on failure of her own issue. It is common ground that the rules relating to the succession to stridhan are the same in the case of a maiden who has no brothers and a woman married in an unorthodox form and dying without issue. A text of Baudhayana is cited in the Mitakshara as regulating succession to the stridhan of a maiden:

"The wealth of a deceased maiden let the uterine brothers themselves take; on failure of them, it shall belong to the mother; or if she be dead, to the father."

Viramirodaya, who was a commentator on the Mitakshara, after referring to this text, says: "On failure of the mother and father, it goes to their nearest relations." The question on which the parties are at issue is whether "relations" (sapinda) is here used in the sense sapindas generally or whether it is confined to the meaning defined in the Mitakshara. Mr. Das contrasts the word 'sapinda' in the commentary of Viramirodaya with reference to succession to stridhan with the term 'gotraja sapinda' used in the text of Yagnavalkya cited in the Mitakshara in speaking of succession to the property of a male dying without issue. With regard to the latter Yagnavalkya's text is:

"The wife and the daughters also, both parents, brothers likewise and their sons, gentiles (gotrajas), cognates (bandhus), a pupil and a fellow student. On failure of the first among these, the next in order is indeed heir to the estate of one who departed for heaven leaving no lineal male descendant (putra)."

The Mitakshara, Chap. II, s. 5, after referring to the order of succession among the gotrajas says:

"If there be none such, the succession devolves on samanodakas, and they must be understood to reach the seven degrees beyond sapindas, or also as far as the limit of the knowledge and name extend. Accordingly Virhat Manu says. 'The relation of the sapinda ceases with the seventh person, and that of samanodakas extends to the 14th degree, or, as some affirm, it reaches as far as the memory of birth and name extends'. This is signified by gotra."

Mr. Das contends that since the word sapinda in the Mitakshara is to be used in the same sense throughout and since in describing the succession to stridhan the word used is sapinda and not gotraja sapindas as in the case of succession to the property of a male, the author of the Mitakshara must be taken to have intended to indicate that the two lines of succession were not the same, that is to say, whereas in the latter case gotraja sapindas and samanodakas have preference over bhinna gotra-sapindas; in the case of stridhan they have no such preference and the heir must be ascertained from among the sapindas generally by applying the test of religious efficacy. He referred to Viramitrodaya, Chap. V, Part 2 (Setlur), for the purpose of shewing that this writer also held that the lines of succession in the two cases are different. In s. 9, the author explains that the case of a woman married in an unorthodox form, in default of issue, her stridhan goes first to her mother and then to her father, although the text mentions only father. In s. 14, the author says:

(21) 6 O 119 at p. 126; 6 O L R 500 (F B).

*Page of 41 L. A.—[Ed].

"But when there is a failure of the above-mentioned heirs to a childless woman's property, Brihaspati ordains..... (here follows a list of persons pronounced to be similar to a mother, whom some writers call secondary mothers); if they (secondary mothers) leave no issue of the body, nor son (of a rival wife) nor daughter's sons, nor their sons, the sister's son and the rest shall take their property."

It is then explained that the term 'aurasa' or 'issue of the body' includes both sons and daughters, and that 'their sons' relates to the terms 'issue of the body' and 'son (of a rival wife)' and not to the term daughter's son "because the son of a daughter is not competent to offer oblations." The author proceeds:

"Hence on failure of heirs down to the daughter's son, first the 'auras' inherits, after him his sons and grandsons. For, it is proper that the succession should devolve on them, inasmuch as they are competent to present the pinda..... In their default, the son of a rival wife, his son and grandson (become heirs in their order) by reason of their being, under circumstances, the giver of the pinda..... Hence on failure of these, the sister's son and the rest alone, in spite of the sapindas, such as the father-in-law are, by virtue of the text (of Brihaspati) which is not reconcilable in any other way, entitled to succeed, according to their comparative propinquity to the property of their mothers, sister and the rest."

Here, contends Mr. Das, Viramitrodaya shews that the heir is to be found by applying the doctrine of religious efficacy to sapindas in general for among the "secondary sons" enumerated in the text of Brihaspati are persons who are cognates. It is to be remembered that, historically, until Yagnavalkya's text recognized the claims of cognates to succeed to the property of a male, in default of agnates, cognates had no right of inheritance at all. Yagnavalkya having, in the case of the property of a male, postponed them to agnates, it is contended that Viramitrodaya, who was commenting on and explaining the text of Yagnavalkya, intended to place them on the same footing as agnates in relation to the property of a woman. In Ohap. III, Part 1, relating to the succession to the property of a separated male, Viramitrodaya states, in s. 3:

"But in fact when a person in whom rights vested dies, it is proper that the property should be inherited by his nearrelations..... when the owner of any property is dead, then if he leave no male issue, his property is inherited by his relations such as his wife, etc."

There the author is clearly referring to the text of Yagnavalkya: "The wife and the daughters also, both parents, brothers uterine, and their sons, gentiles (gotrajas) cognates (bandhus)....." in support of his proposition that "When a person in whom right vested dies, it is proper that the property should be inherited by his near relations." In s. 9 of Part 2, Chap. I, relating to women's property the author explains:

"It goes to the mother in the first instance, and after her to the father, according to the principle set forth while explaining the term "parent" in the text (of Yagnavalkya), "the wife and the daughters also, the parents, etc." there being no other text against the application of that principle to the present case."

Sir Sultan Ahmed contends that the citation of Yagnavalkya's text in this context indicates that what Viramitrodaya meant was that on failure of the mother, the father gets the property and on failure of the father it goes to the other persons mentioned in the text of Yagnavalkya in order there given. Apparently, the rival claims of a near bandhu and a more remote agnate to succeed to the stridhan of a maiden have never been directly in issue before; but the opposing views presented, respectively, by Mr. Das and Sir Sultan Ahmed in these appeals have been advanced in many reported cases and have been the subject of discussion by many text-book writers, and the view now supported by Mr. Das has not been accepted. The text of Brihaspati on which Mr. Das relies has been cited by commentators whose works are authorities in the Bombay, Madras, Mithila and Benares Schools, respectively; but no text-book writer has accepted it in the sense contended for by Mr. Das, and no Court has construed it in that sense: see Bai Kesserbai v. Hunsraj Morarji (7); Nanja Pillai v. Sivabhagyathachi (13); Kana Kammal v. Ananthamathi Ammal (14); Kamala Bai v. Bhagirathi Bai (15); Sundaram Pillai v. Ramasamia Pillai (17); Kamla Prasad v. Murli Manohar (22) and Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra (4). In all these cases the text of Yagnavalkya with regard to succession to the property of a male was applied to the stridhan property of a woman and no instance has been cited in which that text was not applied. In Nanja Pillai v. Sivabhagyathachi (13) the text of the Mitakshara (Ohap. II,

(32) 13. Pat. 560; 152 Ind. Cas. 446; A I R 1934 Pat. 398; 15 P L T 715; 7 R P 190, Sec. xi, pl. 11) that on the failure of the husband of a woman married in an orthodox form the property "goes to his nearest kinsmen (sapindas)" was under consideration. The then learned Chief Justice said :

"The meaning of the above text is plain; it means that the stridhan property of a woman married according to an orthodox form who has left no issue will devolve on her husband, and on failure of the husband, the property will go to his sapindas in the order laid down in the Mitakshara with reference to succession to the property of a male. That is to say, we have to ascertain the person who would succeed to the property as the nearest sapinda of the husband if the property belonged to him. And that is the interpretation which has been placed upon the text whenever it has had to be considered."

This view was reiterated in Kana Kammal v. Ananthamathi Ammal (14) where the learned Judges after citing the passage quoted above, went on to say :

"No authority has been quoted for the suggestions of the learned vakil for appellant that the term sapinda in Mitakshara, Chap. II, s. 11, pl. 11, should be understood in a different sense to that in which it would be used in reference to inheritance from a male."

Again Phillips, J. in Sundaram Pillai v. Ramasamia Pillai (17), at p. 33* said :

"I am unable to accept the contention based on the single sentence of the judgment in Kamala Bai v. Bhagirathi Bai (15), that the father's sapindas in a case when the property of a female is concerned, are different to the sapindas in the case of a male's property. In the absence of any rule to the contrary, the sapindas must always be the same."

The true construction of the text of Brihaspati was decided by the Privy Council in Bai Kesserbai v. Hunsraj Morarji (7) in which it was held that the text is merely illustrative, enumerating some of the heirs entitled to succeed to the stridhan of a woman on failure of her husband, in the case of a woman married in an orthodox form, and of her father, in the case of a woman married, in an unorthodox form, and that the order of succession is not indicated in that text. Mr. Das does not accept that decision as authority for the proposition that the proper order, in the case of succession to the stridhan property of a woman is the same as in the case of the property of a male. He relies on the fact that the claim which the Privy Council upheld in that case was the claim of a co-widow and he contends that even on the view which he has presented, the co-widow would exclude all other sapinda because she is the nearest sapinda of her deceased husband. He referred to s. 15 of Part 2 of Chap. V of Viramitrodaya (Setlur) as authority supporting the co-widow's rights. In that section the author is commenting on Manu's text disinheriting woman and mentions that the only exception is in favour of those women "whose right of succession has been expressly mentioned in texts such as 'The.....wife and the daughters, also, etc.'" Mr. Das admits that the author is actually applying the text of Yagnavalkya to stridhan, for he relies on s. 15 to defeat the claim of Dhanukdhari to succeed in preference to Bhagwat Kuer, the stepmother of Ramdulari, but he contends that in para. 15 Viramitrodaya has not applied to stridhan the whole of Yagnavalkya's text relating to the property of a male but only a part of it namely "the wife and the daughters also." It is true that the text is being cited merely to illustrate the rule that only specially mentioned women have a right to inherit and therefore in s. 15 the commentator cannot be held to have cited it for anything more than in support of the claims of certain women. In s. 9, however, the same commentator cites the same text of Yagnavalkya in discussing succession to the property of a childless woman married in an unorthodox form. In such a case, according to the Mitakshara the property goes "to the father." In s. 9 Viramitrodaya explains that by "father" is here meant parents and goes on :

"Amongst them also, it goes to the mother in the first instance, and after her to the father, according to the principle set forth above while explaining the term 'parents' in the text 'the wife and the daughters also, the parents, etc.,' there being no other text against the application of that principle for the present case."

Mr. Das's comment on the fact that Yagnavalkya's text is quoted in this context is that it is an instance in which Viramitrodaya has cited in support of his own conclusions a text which is inapt for that purpose and therefore that it should not be read as incorporating into Viramitrodaya's discussion of the succession to a maiden's property; Yagnavalkya's rule regarding succession to the property of a male. That, however, is not the view taken by Kamalakara in his Vivada Tandava or by other commentators. Discussing succession to the stridhan of a woman married in an orthodox form Kamalakara says :

"In default of husband the estate is obtained by his near relation belonging with 'the lawfully wedded wife and the daughter, etc.,' as prescribed by the text of Yagnavalkya in the rule about succession to a sonless man."

By this passage it has been generally understood that in Kamalakara's view the succession to stridhan, in default of husband in the case of a woman married in an orthodox form, and in default of father in other case, was that the heirs of the husband or father succeeded in the order laid down in Yagnavalkya's text relating to succession to the property of a male. West and Buhler (Edn. 4, p. 485) say :

"The opinion (of Kamalakara) seems to be based on a consideration that, as the sapindas inherit only through the husband, they virtually succeed to property coming from him, and that consequently they must inherit in the order prescribed for the succession to a male's estate."

They then refer to the view now presented by Mr. Das and continue :

"But, the identity of the wife with her husband being accepted as a leading principle of the Mitakshara, the rule seems on the whole consonant with it, whereby precedence in heritable relation to him gives a like precedence and order of succession to his widow. Such appears to be the rule, too, which custom has preferred in this part of India."

See also Vyavastha Chandrika (Shyama Charan Sarkar, Vol 2 p. 539). Sir Gooroodass Banerjee in his Tagore Law Lectures on the Hindu Law of Marriage and Stridhan (9th Lecture, Edn. 4, pp. 383, 389) refers to the discussion of the subject by West and Buhler and says :

"In this conflict of authority it is not easy to say which view is correct. But Kamalakara's opinion is entitled to be followed as authority in the Benares School when it is not in conflict with that of any higher authority ; and in the present instance, the rule based upon his opinion has the further recommendation of being simple, as it makes the order of succession to stridhan correspond, after a certain point, to that, to that appealable to a man's property."

Another eminent Hindu Jurist, Gopalchandra Sarkar Sastri (Hindu Law, Edn. 6, pp. 730, 731) after citing Viramitrodaya's comment on Baudhayana's text . . . "On the failure of the mother and the father, it goes to their nearest relations" says :

"It seems that a maiden's status is similar to that of a woman married in a disapproved form of marriage, both being under the patria potestas of their father. The term 'their nearest relations' must be the father's relations, in the first instance inasmuch as they are also the mother's relations, so the term is not to be used distributively ; and in default of such relations, the relations of the mother alone become heirs It should be noticed that the nearness or propinquity is the principle on which the order of succession is worked out in the Mitakshara, hence the relations are to take a woman's property in the same order in which they would become heirs to her husband or father or mother."

Mr. Das' comment on these writers is that they all misunderstood the text of Kamalakara because they made the mistake of directing their attention to one passage of his work and failed to notice what he said later on, and that to accept their view is to give samanodakas preference over bandhus which, he contends, is directly contrary to the Mitakshara rule that the heir to maiden's stridhan is to be looked for among the sapindas in the sense in which that word is defined in the Mitakshara. His contention is that Kamalakara's final conclusion is that in default of husband or father, the heir is to be found by applying the doctrine of religious efficacy to the sapindas generally without reference to the particular class of sapindas to which they may belong. It is a startling suggestion that so many eminent Sanskrit scholars and jurists should have missed what is so obvious to Mr. Das. in Dwarka Nath v. Sarat Chandra (4) the question of succession to the stridhan of a woman married in an unorthodox form was considered and although the issue did not arise between a cognate and an agnate, the texts relevant to the latter point were fully discussed by Chatterjea, J., who said :

"So that, according to Kamalakara, the nearness of kinsmen in the rule laid down in the Mitakshara is to be determined according to the well-known text of Yagnavalkya relating to the succession to male owner dying without issue."

The decision in this case was followed in Nanja Pillai v. Sivabhagyathachi (13) which has already been referred to. In this state of judicial dicta and the comments of the learned Sanskrit scholars and jurists, I have no hesitation in rejecting the contention of Mr. Das in support of the claim, that Sarabjit is to be preferred as an heir to Mahabir in preference to Sia Prasad. Even if the texts and commentaries are capable of being construed in the sense for which he contends, I should hesitate to adopt that construction for it would inevitably have the effect of upsetting titles long founded on the contrary view.

Certain other facts must now be stated in order to understand the claims of Raghava Surendra and his son, who are the appellants in the principal appeal (First Appeal No. 69 of 1935, arising out of Title Suit No. 38 of 1932). By an ekranama of February 12, 1906, Bhagwat Kuer proclaimed that she had adopted Raghava Surendra Sahi as son to her deceased husband. Thereupon, on February 8, 1907, Dhanukdhari Singh, son of Ramrachya, executed a sale deed in favour of Ambica Prasad Singh of Tikari purporting to convey a two thirds share of the Lakhaipore mukarrari and a 2 annas 8 pies share of certain of the ancestral properties. The sale deed recited that the Lakhaipore mukarrari had belonged jointly to Srikishun, Bachu and Jugal Kistore and that they had separated from each other; that on the death of the widows of Srikishun and Jugal Kishore the shares of the two latter had devolved on Dhanukdhari, who on the death of Ramdulari, also inherited the estate left her by Mahabir Prasad, and that in order to raise money to finance litigation for the purpose of recovering the properties from Mahabir's widow, Bhagwat Kuer, who was in illegal possession of them, the vendor was obliged to sell the shares of Jugal Kishore and Bachu in the mukarrari, amounting to two-thirds, and the half share of Jugal Kishore in the other properties. The vendor and the vendee then instituted three suits. Title Suit No. 198 of 1907 was to recover the one-third share of Bachu which devolved on his son Mahabir; Title Suit No. 199 of 1907 was to recover the one-third share of Jugal Kishore, and Title Suit No. 200 of 1907 was to obtain a declaration that the adoption of Raghava Sahi was invalid. The last suit succeeded. The other two were finally dismissed by the Privy Council in 1919.

In the meantime, Sarabjit Protap, son of Rani Ramkewal Kuer, instituted Title Suit No. 153 of 1911 to recover the one-third share of his maternal grand-father Srikishun although he and his brother had signed the compromise entered into by his mother which admitted that Srikishun had died in estate of jointness with his brothers. While the suit was pending in appeal to the Privy Council, the parties entered into what they called a family arrangement, for the purpose of settling their disputes. The arrangement is evidenced by three deeds. By the first, dated January 8, 1921, Bhagwat Kuer purported to release the one-third share of Srikishun in favour of the latter's daughter Rajkishori. By the second deed, dated January 9, 1921, Rajkishori purported to surrender this one-third share to Sarabjit Protap, son of her sister, Rani Ramkewal Kuer. By the third deed, dated January 10, 1921, Sarabjit Protap purported to transfer to Bhagwat Kuer absolutely, by way of gift, most of the properties included in the one-third share. One of the properties, however, was given to Rajkishori and the remainder were retained by Sarabjit Protap himself. Dhanukdhari died on March 19, 1923, and his widow on November 12 in the same year.

While an application by Bhagwat Kuer for mesne profits against the plaintiffs of Suit No. 199 of 1907 was pending, a compromise was arrived at on February 10, 1924, between Bhagwat Kuer on one side and Ambica Prasad Singh and his son, Maharaj Kumar Gopal Saran Narain Singh to whom he had made a gift of the two-third share in the mukarrari properties purchased from Dhanukdhari on February 8, 1907, on the other side. Ambica Prasad and his son executed a kobala in favour of Bhagwat Kuer by which they sold to her their rights in the two-third share, except nine villages, and Bhagwat Kuer executed a kobala in favour of the Maharaj Kumar in respect of the one-third share of the aforesaid nine villages and a deed of surrender in respect of the remaining two-third shares. On July 2, 1924, Bhagwat Kuer made a gift of 52 villages out of the two-thirds share to Hari Surendro Sahi, son of Raghava Surendra Sahi. She died on September 19, 1925. Lachmi Kuer, a daughter of Dhanukdhari, was then recorded in Register D as proprietress in respect of some of the ancestral properties. As a result of dispute with respect to the Gaya properties, all the latter were attached by the District Magistrate under s. 146, Criminal Procedure Code.

With regard to the two-thirds share which Dhanukdhari purported to sell in 1907 and which the vendee conveyed to Bhagwat Kuer, it is necessary for these appellants to establish that the estate of Ramdulari was inherited by Dhanukdhari and not by her stepmother Bhagwat Kuer. It is contended that a stepmother never, in any circumstances, inherits the stridhan property of her stepdaughter. In support of this proposition reference was made to three cases, none of which, however, is directly in point. In Julessur Koor v. Uggur Roy (23) the rival claimants were the gotraja sapindas and the sister of the last male owner, respectively. The claim of the sister was rejected on the ground that she is not one of the heirs enumerated in the Mitakshara. In Tahaldai Kumri v. Gaya Prasad Sahu (24) the rival claimants to the estates of two deceased brothers were their father's sister's sons and their stepmother, respectively. The latter's claim was disallowed. The third case is Ramanand v. Surgiani (25) in which it was held that a stepmother, not being one of the females expressly named in the Mitakshara and not being included under the term "mother" in Chap. II, s. 3, cannot inherit from her deceased step-son.

(23) 9 O 725; 12 O L R 460.

(24) 37 O 214; 5 Ind. Cas. 135; 11 O L J 538; 14 O W N 443.

(25) 16 A 221; A W N 1894, 17.

The point which falls for decision in these appeals, namely, the right to inherit stridhan property was considered in Kamala Bai v. Bhagwati Bai (15) and decided in favour of the stepmother. There the contest was between the maternal aunt and the stepmother of a deceased maiden. The aunt's claim was disallowed. It is true that this case arose in the Madras Presidency but we have not been referred to any authority holding that in respect of stridhan property, the Hindu Law of inheritance as administered in this Province differs from that of Madras. It was, however, contended that the Madras case did not refer to the text of Viramitrodaya relating to succession to the stridhan of an unmarried girl. It is argued that when the succession to stridhan has been traced as far as the father of a deceased maiden, the property then passes to the heirs of the father as if it were the property of a male. Accordingly, it is contended, it cannot be inherited by a female agnatic relation, unless she be one of those expressly mentioned as heirs of a male and a stepmother is not so mentioned. But in discussing succession to stridhan, Viramitrodaya (Setlur, Chap. V, Part 2, s. 15) expressly introduces the text of Yagnavalkya: "The wife, and the daughters also, both parents brothers likewise, and their sons....." as an instance of certain women being specifically mentioned as heirs and there seems to be no reason why this particular text should have been cited in that context if at least the relevant portions of it were not to apply to the stridhan; that is to say, if it were not cited as an instance of certain women being heirs to stridhan. Bhagwat Kuer was the wife of Mahabir, the father of Ramdulari, and hence is mentioned in Viramitrodaya as one of the heirs. The claim of Raghava Surendra Sahi and his son, so far as it is based on Dhanukdhari's right of inheritance, therefore fails. This disposes of their claim to the two-third share which was the subject-matter of Dhanukdhari's sale to Ambica Prasad Singh, which was subsequently purchased from the latter's son by Bhagwat Kuer from whom the appellants claim.

With regard to the one-third share which belonged to Sri Kishun, these same claimants make an alternative case. They contend that in the litigation initiated by Dhanukdhari in 1907 which was determined in the Privy Council in 1919, it was decided that each of the three brothers, Srikishun, Bachu and Jugal Kishore separated, and that each had a one-third share in the property; that Bhagwat Kuer put Srikishun's daughter Rajkishori in possession by the deed of release of January 8, 1921; that Rajkishori surrendered it to Srikishun's grandson, Sarabjit Protap on January 9, 1921, and that the latter conveyed it absolutely to Bhagwat Kuer from whom the appellants obtained it by a deed of gift on January 10, 1921. It is argued that the decision of the litigation of 1907 operates as res judicata as to Srikishun's right to one-third of the mukarrari. The transaction of 1921 were relied upon as a family arrangement by which were settled the disputes between Bhagwat Kuer on the one hand and those interested in the estate of Srikishun on the other.

The Subordinate Judge overruled the plea of res judicata and held that the mukarrari grant was to Bachu alone, that there was no real dispute to be settled in 1921 and that if such a dispute existed, the settlement was not bona fide for the protection of the estate of which Bhagwat Kuer was in possession as a life tenant, but a device to convert her life interest in the one-third share into an absolute estate for the purpose of enabling her to convey it to Raghava Surendra Sahi. It was not contended that the Subordinate Judge's finding that the mukarrari was granted to Bachu alone is wrong in so far as it is based on the evidence in this case. The finding was at first challenged on the ground that the matter was concluded by the decision in the litigation of 1907 and a considerable amount of time was taken in discussing this question, both by the appellants and the respondents. In his reply, however, Dr. Dwarka Nath Mitter, the learned Advocate for the appellants in F. A. 69 of 1935, stated that he accepted the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge on the question of res judicata and also his finding that the transactions of 1921 did not amount to a family arrangement by way of settlement of a dispute.

The next question is as to the validity of endowments made by Bhagwat Kuer. They were all challenged both by Sia Prasad and Sarabjit Protap and by Lachmi Kuer, a daughter of Dhanukdhari Prasad. Raghava Surendra claimed them to be valid. With regard to two deeds of endowment executed in 1906 and 1906, respectively, he sought for a declaration of their validity in Title Suit No. 41 of 1932. In 1873 Bachu Singh conveyed six villages out of the Lakhaipore mukarrari to the deities installed by him in a temple at Ajodhya to whom he also assigned Rs. 40,000 owing to him by debtors. After his death this money was re-paid by the debtors to Bachu Singh's son, Mahabir, who, however, instead of handing it to the shebait of the temple, conveyed another six of the mukarrari villages to the deities in lieu of it. The validity of these endowments is not in question. In 1900, after the death of Mahabir, his widow, Bhagwat Kuer, purporting to act under his will, conveyed certain properties valued at Rs. 60,000 for the maintenance of a Sanskrit School at Ajodhya and a temple at Chapra. In 1905 she dedicated other properties valued at Rs. 40,000 to a temple which she herself founded at Ajodhya. Further properties valued at Rs. 32,000 were dedicated to this temple in 1906 and to the school in 1913. On June 19, 1924, Bhagwat Kuer dedicated to the temple at Chapra her deceased husband's residential house at Chapra with the out-houses and land appurtenant to it valued at Rs. 40,000 as a residence for the mutwalli of the endowed properties. She herself was the mutwalli at the time. The deed stated that on her death Raghava Surendra, and after him Hari Surendra, would be the mutwalli. The relevant portions of Mahabir's will are as follows:

"1. I have two wives. If by the grace of God one or both of them get issues, they shall, on my death, enter into possession and occupation of all my movable and immovable properties, ancestral as well as acquired, so that the name of my ancestors may be perpetuated and the expenses on charity and temple, etc., which have been met from the time of any ancestors down to the present time, as well as the expenses thereon to be provided for by me hereafter may continue to be defrayed exactly in the same manner as has (hitherto) been done, so that charitable acts may continue to be done in the family.

2. If my children are minors at the time of my death, the senior wife and on her death the junior wife who are both very intelligent, possessed of administrative ability and pious, shall act as their guardian till they attain majority, and manage the estate, giving training to the boys, and carry out the orders of the hakims for the time being.

5. My father has dedicated considerable property to Sri Thakurji installed at the temple at Ajodhya for purposes of rajbhog and charity and he has also executed a wagfnama. It is my wish also to do one or two acts of dharm to perpetuate my name and fame, and this is known to my wives. If I fail to fulfil my desire during my lifetime, I authorize my wives who might survive to fulfil this desire of mine as set forth in para. 2, and the wagfnama which might be executed by them, for this charitable act shall be operative and effectual to the same extent as the one which might have been executed by myself....."

The reference in para. 5 to 'para. 2' is apparently a mistake. It seems that para. 1 was meant. The phrase "one or two acts of dharm" is taken from the translation of the will by the learned Subordinate Judge which is admittedly accurate. In Ranchordas Vandrawandas v. Parvatibai (20), at p. 80* the Privy Council held that a bequest for dharm was too vague and uncertain to be given effect to. In Vaidayanatha Aiyar v. Swaminatha Ayyar (26), on the other hand, the charity to be benefitted was a chattram, a known and certain charity. It was contended in the present case that the phrase 'known to my wife' explains and amplifies the phrase "one or two acts of dharm." The acts of dharm are indicated with sufficient certainty to be enforced. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that there is no reliable evidence as to what, if any, were the acts of dharm which the testator had communicated to his wives and nothing has been said in these appeals which leads me to reject his conclusion on this point.

Apart from the will, however, it is contended that Bhagwat Kuer had power under the Hindu Law to dedicate a portion of her husband's estate to religious and charitable objects. That a widow has such a power is not contested but the widow's act must be reasonable, having regard to the value of the estate, and its object must be such as according to the notions prevalent in Hindu society conduce to the spiritual benefit of her husband; see Lal Ram Singh v. Deputy Commissioner of Partabgarh (27). The value of the dedicated properties according to the deeds is Rs. 1,72,000. In the course of the argument Dr. Mitter in supporting the dedications admitted that they amounted to a tenth of the estate. The object of the endowments has been found by the learned Subordinate Judge to be for the material benefit of Raghava Surendra and, if any spiritual benefit was in view, it was the spiritual benefit of Bhagwat Kuer herself. This circumstance of the case support the conclusion arrived at by the Subordinate Judge. She first attempted to adopt Raghava Surendra as the son of her deceased husband. When this failed, she conveyed part of the estate to him and the balance, except the dedicated properties, to his son. She appointed him as mutwalli of all the dedicated properties and even put him in possession of the family residential house. None of the dedications was for the benefit of the deity installed by her husband's father at Ajodhya. In this respect the facts are similar to those in Ram Kawal Singh v. Ram Kishore Das (28) where a widow alienated a part of her deceased husband's estate for the maintenance of a deity which had not been installed by him and the dedication was found to be prima facie for the widow's own spiritual benefit and not that of her husband. Mr. Das who challenged the dedications on behalf of Sarabjit Pratap, contended that under the Hindu Law a woman in possession of a life estate is entitled to dedicate part of the estate for the spiritual benefit of the last full owner only and therefore in the present case all alienations not for the spiritual benefit of Ramdulari are void. He relied on an observation of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Sardar Singh v. Kunj Behari Lal (19), at p. 394*:

(26) 51 I A 282; 82 Ind. Cas. 204; A I R 1924 P O 221; 47 M 884; 47 M L J 381, 35 M L T 189; (1924) M W N 749; 10 O & A L R 1076; 26 Bom. L R 1121; 20 L W 203; 22 A L J 983; 40 O L J 454; 39 O W N 154; 26 P L R 1; L R 6 A (P O) 17; 1 O W N 817 (P O).

(27) 45 A 596; 76 Ind. Cas. 922; A I R 1923 P O 180; 50 I A 265; 26 O O 257; (1923) M W N 591; 9 O & A L R 746; 21 A L J 777; 33 M L T 355; 10 O L J 513; 47 M L J 260; 29 O W N 86 (P O).

*Page of 26 I. A.—[Ed].

"In their Lordships' opinion the Hindu Law recognizes the validity of the dedication or alienation of a small portion of the property of a Hindu female for the continuous benefit of the deceased owner."

In that case the deceased owner was a male. It is not necessary to discuss this aspect of the matter because in my view of the facts the alienations of Bhagwat Kuer were intended neither for the spiritual benefit of Ramdulari Kuer nor Mahabir. For the same reason it is not necessary to discuss further the validity of the provisions of the will under which Bhagwat Kuer purported to act although it was contended that Mahabir having bequeathed a vested zamindari to Ramdulari the subsequent provision empowering the widows to use a part of the estate for acts of dharm were void. In the result, therefore, the only dedications of Bhagwat Kuer which can be held to be valid are those of her own stridhan properties. Of these latter, she appointed Raghava Surendra the mutwalli and her right to do so is not challenged. With regard, however, to the endowments made by Bachu Singh and the six villages transferred to the temple at Ajodhya by Mahabir, the right to the mutwalliship was claimed in the suits by Nauratan Kuer, widow of Sia Prasad, (28) 22 C 508.

*Page of 49 I. A.—[Ed.]

Sarabjit Pratap, Lachmi Kuer, daughter of Dhanukdhari and Raghava Surendra. The Subordinate Judge rejected the claims of all of them and only the last-mentioned appeals. His claim is based on a deed of management of all the dedicated properties executed by Bhagwat Kuer in his favour on September 8, 1924, on the strength of which he succeeded in having himself recorded in Register D as mutwalli. In the deed of endowment executed by Bachu Singh in 1873, he appointed himself as the first mutwalli and his son Mahabir as his successor and confined the succession thereafter to the eldest and worthy son of his own descendants, male or female. The male line of Bachu Singh terminated with the death of Mahabir and the latter's only daughter, Ramdulari, died when only a few months old. The line of succession laid down by the founder of the endowment having thus come to an end and the founder having died, the right of management reverted to the latter's heir, Mahabir. The latter, by his will, provided that the mutwalliship should go to his descendants, male or female, and therefore it passed to Ramdulari. On her death it again reverted to the founder's heir, who at that time was Dhanukdhari. Dhanukdhari never assumed the duties of the office or nominated a successor. On Dhanukdhari's death the founder's next heir was Sia Prasad, who also failed to nominate a successor. None of the claimants is a descendant of the founder or his son and none of them has been nominated by any heir of the founder. The same applies to Bhagwat Kuer. She was not the legally constituted mutwalli and had no power to nominate a successor. Her appointment of Raghava Surendra is, therefore, inoperative. It was contended that Bhagwat Kuer acquired a title to the office of mutwalli by adverse possession. The argument is that on the death of Ramdulari the mutwalliship devolved on Dhanukdhari but Bhagwat Kuer remained in possession for more than twelve years before appointing Raghava Surendra. No such case was made in the pleadings or at the trial. She took over the management of the dedicated properties as executrix of her husband's will and there is no indication in the evidence that on the death of Ramdulari she asserted a title to the mutwalliship hostile to the legal claimant. I agree that all the appeals be dismissed with costs as proposed.

S.

Appeals dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeal No. 119 of 1939

June 18, 1939

BROOMFIELD, Ag. C. J. AND SEN, J.

BAPTIST DE SOUZA—ACCUSED—

APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887), ss. 4, 5, 6—Evidence of bogus punters—Value of—Statements of Police long after event—Value of—Finding of marked coins and slip of paper with figures, when sufficient for conviction—Warrant in name of Sub-Inspector—Arrest by constable, Sub-Inspector being nearby—If vitiates warrant.

The bogus punters are usually very unsatisfactory witnesses. It does not much matter whether they are called accomplices or spies or Police agents. No doubt, it is very difficult to get better evidence and the Police may have to make use of such people, and if their evidence is corroborated and fits in reasonably well with the prosecution case, the Court may be justified in relying on it. But if the punter is called as a witness and does not support the prosecution case, it is obviously worse than if he was not called at all. [p. 201, col. 2.]

The Court cannot possibly be expected to rely on the mere statements of the Police Officers long after the event without any independent corroboration [p. 205, col. 1.]

The mere fact of the finding of the marked coins and the slip of paper with figures on it in the room is sufficient to justify the conviction only if the evidence makes it perfectly clear that these articles were instruments of gaming. [ibid.]

Where a warrant is in the name of a Sub-Inspector and he is present near the room used for gambling purposes but the accused is actually arrested by his constable who had already entered the room, the irregularity is not such as would vitiate the warrant or the proceedings in any way.

Or. A. from conviction and sentence passed by the Presidency Magistrate, Third Court, Mazgaon, Bombay.

Messrs. G. C. O'Gorman and V. N. Chhatrapati, for the Accused.

Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

Broomfield, Ag. C. J.—This is an appeal by one Baptist De Souza who has been convicted of offences under ss. 4 (a) and 5, Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act. The appellant, who has described himself as a motor mechanic, lives in room No. 25 in Bombay Development Department Chawl No. 17 at Worli. Sub-Inspector Tonpe of the Delisle Road Police Station, having reason to suspect that he was using this room for gambling purposes, obtained a warrant for the search of the premises. He then followed the procedure which has come to the common form in these cases. He marked some coins, gave them to one Jairam Mahadev, a bogus punter, and instructed him to lay bets on certain figures at the place of the accused. The Sub-Inspector and the punter and some constables then proceeded to the chawl. The punter was sent upstairs with one of the Police constables and the Sub-Inspector waited below. After a few minutes the punter returned and said that the bet was laid. The Sub-Inspector then went upstairs and found the appellant and another person who was accused No. 2 in the case, in room No. 25. It appears that before the Sub-Inspector entered the room, the Police constable, who had gone up with the punter, had entered it and arrested the appellant who, according to him, was writing something on a piece of paper. A panchnama appears to have been made in the presence of panchas, but they have not been examined as witnesses. According to the evidence of the Sub-Inspector, the following things were found in the room. The other accused had seven annas and a pencil with him. In the corner where the appellant was standing, on a shelf there were several coins, including the marked coins, and also a small slip of paper with some figures and names written in pencil in the Marathi language. The last figures appearing on this piece of paper are figure 5, 2 and 9, which, according to the Sub-Inspector, are the figures on which the punter was told to bet. There is also a name which may possibly correspond with the first part of the name of the punter but is hardly legible. There is some inconsistency between the evidence of the Sub-Inspector and that of the constable with regard to this piece of paper. The constable says that when he entered the room, the appellant crumpled up the piece of paper and threw it on the floor. The Sub-Inspector says, on the other hand, that it was found on the shelf. The failure to examine the panchas and to produce independent evidence as to what was found at the raid is a serious omission in this case for reasons which will appear in a moment.

A point has been taken on behalf of the appellant that the proceedings were irregular because the warrant was in the name of the Sub-Inspector; it was he who was empowered to enter the room, and before he did so, one of his constables had already entered and arrested the accused. But it cannot be suggested that the Sub-Inspector is required to arrest everybody with his own hand. If he had not been present at all, there might have been something in the point. But as he was present, although not actually on the first floor, where the room is situated, and as he himself entered the room almost immediately afterwards, we do not think it can possibly be argued that the irregularity, such as it was, vitiates the warrant or the proceedings in any way. If this were the only point in this case, we would have no difficulty in confirming the conviction.

There is, however, a serious, and, in our opinion, a vital defect in the prosecution case. The evidence produced for the prosecution is completely inconsistent as to the place where the alleged gaming took place and as to the person with whom it took place. The punter has deposed that he laid his bet on the figures 5, 9 and 2 in the passage on the first floor and not in any room and that he laid his bet with a fat Christian. The appellant is a Christian, but he is not fat, and the punter has expressly stated that he did not lay his bet with him. The other accused was not a Christian. The evidence of the Police constable who entered the room before the Sub-Inspector is that the punter entered the room and laid his bet with the appellant who was inside the room. In the course of his evidence this witness has stated that he actually saw the punter giving money to the accused, i.e. the appellant. He explained that by saying that he meant that he heard the jingling noise of the coins as they fell into the appellant's hand. Then he went on to say that the punter was counting out the coins to the appellant and then he saw them. The Magistrate went to view the scene of offence with Counsel in the case and it appears from his inspection notes that it was not possible for the constable to see anything of what happened inside from the place where he was.

It appears from the judgment that the Magistrate did not believe the punter and in effect he has discarded his evidence. If that is done, the question obviously arises whether there is sufficient evidence to justify the conviction of the accused. It is clear that the Police cannot have it both ways. These bogus punters are usually very unsatisfactory witnesses. It does not much matter whether they are called accomplices or spies or Police agents. They are usually without employment or business of any kind. The punter in this case says that he is a millhand, but he admits that he has been without work for seven or eight months, on account of illness, as he says. In fact they are usually rather disreputable people.

No doubt, it is very difficult to get better evidence and the Police may have to make use of such people, and if their evidence is corroborated and fits in reasonably well with the prosecution case, the Court may be justified in relying on it. But if the punter is called as a witness and does not support the prosecution case, it is obviously worse than if he was not called at all. In a case like the present, the Court is really asked to rely implicitly on the evidence of the Police Officers and on the strength of their evidence to assume that things did not happen in the way the punter says but quite differently. The Sub-Inspector was downstairs and can have no personal knowledge of what happened. The constable followed the punter and was standing some little distance from the room, but as I have said, it was impossible for him to see what happened inside the room and there is no doubt that in his evidence he has pretended to have seen much more than he actually did.

It is quite likely that the unsatisfactory character of the punter's evidence may be due to the delay in disposing of the case. The failure to produce the panchas to prove the panchanama is obviously due to that delay. Only the other day we had to comment on the time taken in the disposal of these gambling cases and this is an even worse example. The date of the offence was July 16, 1936. The case was commenced on July 27, 1936. There were then no less than thirty postponements, mostly for want of time. Not one of these postponements was at the instance of the accused, on September 2, 1938, the case was postponed again, the only reason given being that the Police wanted time. Even after that there were several more postponements, some owing to the illness of the Sub-Inspector and some for want of time. The first hearing of the case was on December 2, 1938. The extraordinary thing is that apparently it never occurred to anybody that there was anything scandalous or oppressive in this state of things. I presume that the accused had to attend the Court on every occasion, and so also the witnesses, except when they stayed away. When they stayed away, the case was automatically postponed for that reason. Everybody knows that the Presidency Magistrates are very busy and it may be impossible to avoid postponement of a case occasionally because the Court is occupied in other work. But when a case is dragging on for months and years, it must be somebody's duty to see that it is fixed on a date when it can certainly be taken up and disposed of without fail. We trust that the Magistrates concerned will pay serious attention to what we can only regard as a scandal.

Returning to the circumstances of the present case, we do not think that the Court can possibly be expected to rely on the mere statements of the Police Officers so long after the event without any independent corroboration. The learned Government Pleader argued that the mere fact of the finding of the marked coins and the slip of paper with figures on it in the room is sufficient to justify the conviction of the appellant. That could only conceivably be so if the evidence made it perfectly clear that these articles were instruments of gaming. In our opinion, the evidence produced in the present case does not establish that. We therefore allow the appeal and set aside the conviction. The fine, if paid, must be refunded. Out of the money ordered to be credited to Government, eight annas to be returned to the appellant.

a.

Appeal allowed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeals Nos. 388, 389 and 390
of 1939

June 20, 1939

MYA BU AND DUNKLEY, JJ.

AH PHUT AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

THE KING—OPPOSITE PARTY

Evidence Act (I of 1873), ss. 118, 30—Child witness—Duty of Court—Oaths Act (X of 1873), ss. 5, 6, 13—Oath, if compulsory—Omission in case of child—Whether renders evidence inadmissible—Confession of co-accused—Value of.

When a young child is called as a witness, the first step for the Judge or Magistrate to take is to satisfy himself, by questioning the child that the child is a competent witness within the meaning of s. 118, Evidence Act. [p. 205, col. 2.]

Under ss. 5 and 6, Oaths Act, 1873, every person who is examined as a witness shall make an oath or affirmation and there is no exception in the case of a child of tender years. Therefore if the child is adjudged to be a competent witness, an oath or affirmation must be administered to the child before he is examined. [ibid]

The word "omission," as used in s. 13, Oaths Act, includes any kind of omission and is not restricted to accidental or negligent omissions. Hence, although a child must be either sworn or affirmed before giving evidence, nevertheless if the child gives evidence without making an oath or affirmation his evidence is still admissible; but, it is for the Court to decide what weight may be given to such unsworn testimony; and, the evidence of a child must always be received with great caution. Deya v. Emperor (1), not followed. [p. 208, col. 2.]

(Case-law referred to.)

The confession of a co-accused cannot be the main evidence in a case. It is the weakest possible kind of evidence, which can only be taken into consideration against the co-accused by reason of the provisions of s. 30, Evidence Act. It is not given upon oath and it is not tested by cross-examination. A statement in such a confession cannot alone be held sufficient to justify a finding of guilty of so grave an offence as that under s. 396, which is punishable with death. Ngà Mya v. The King (11), followed. [p. 208, col. 1.]

Or. Apps. from the order of the Sessions Judge, Mergui, dated May 15, 1939.

Mr. U. Kyaw Zan, for the Appellants.

Mr. U. Tun Byu, the Government Advocate, for the Crown.

MYA BU, J.—The three appellants have been convicted by the learned Sessions Judge of Mergui of an offence under s. 396, Penal Code, and the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung have been sentenced to death and the appellant Sa Khon has been sentenced to undergo seven years' rigorous imprisonment. At the beginning of the hearing of these appeals, the learned Counsel for the appellants urged that the evidence of Ma Shwe Tun May (P. W. No. 3), a child aged eight years, was not admissible because she had not been sworn or affirmed, and it is clear that the learned Sessions Judge deliberately refrained from administering an oath or affirmation to Ma Shwe Tun May on the ground of her tender years, and it is therefore necessary that we should make some observations for the guidance of the learned Sessions Judge regarding the manner in which a child of tender years, who has been called as a witness, should be treated by the Court. Under s. 118, Evidence Act

"All persons shall be competent to testify, unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answers to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind."

Consequently, when a young child is called as a witness, the first step for the Judge or Magistrate to take is to satisfy himself, by questioning the child that the child is a competent witness within the meaning of s. 118, Evidence Act. Under ss. 5 and 6, Oaths Act, 1873, every person who is examined as a witness shall make an oath or affirmation and there is no exception in the case of a child of tender years. Therefore if the child is adjudged to be a competent witness, an oath or affirmation must be administered to the child before he is examined. In the present case the learned Counsel for the appellants in submitting that the evidence of Ma Shwe Tun May is inadmissible on the ground that she was advisedly neither sworn nor affirmed, relied upon the case in Deya v. Emperor (1) the head-note of which reads as follows:

"Section 6, Oaths Act (X of 1873), imperatively requires that no person shall testify as a witness except on oath or affirmation, and notwithstanding s. 13 of the same Act, the evidence of a child is inadmissible if it has advisedly been recorded without any oath or affirmation."

In coming to this decision the learned Judges professed to follow two decisions of the Allahabad High Court, namely Queen-Empress v. Maru (2) and Queen-Empress v. Lal Sahai (3). With the greatest respect the second case is no authority for the proposition advanced for all that was decided in that case was that the evidence of a child could not be recorded without administering to him an oath or affirmation. The decision in Queen-Empress v. Maru (2) has been overruled in Emperor v. Dhani Ram (4). In our opinion, the provisions of s. 13, Oaths Act, are so plain as to admit of no misunderstanding. They are as follows:

"No omission to take any oath or make any affirmation... shall invalidate any proceeding or render inadmissible any evidence whatever."

The word "omission" is used in the section without any qualification and, consequently, it must be held to include any omission whether that omission was deliberate or inadvertent. This is the view of the law which is now taken by all the High Courts: see The Queen v. Sewa Bhogta (5), Emperor v. Sashi Bhusan (6), Queen-Empress v. Shava (7), China v. Venkadu v. Emperor (8), Fatu Santal v. Emperor (9) and Budha v. Queen-Empress (10). It is therefore clear that the word "omission," as used in s. 13, Oaths Act, includes any kind of omission and is not restricted to accidental or negligent omissions. Hence, although a child must be either sworn or affirmed before giving evidence, nevertheless if the child gives evidence without making an oath or affirmation, his evidence is still admissible; but, as learned Counsel for the appellants has pointed out, it is for the Court to decide what weight may be given to such unsworn testimony, and the evidence of a child must always be received with great caution. We do not propose to place any reliance on the evidence of Ma Shwe Tun May in this case. The appellant Sa Khon made a confession, and in the course of his judgment the learned Sessions Judge said:

"The main evidence for the prosecution is that contributed by the accused Sa Khon in his confession recorded by the Second Additional Magistrate, Mergui, on December 12, 1938."

How the confession of a co-accused can be the main evidence in a case we are unable to understand. It is the weakest possible kind of evidence, which can only be taken into consideration against the co-accused by reason of the provisions of s. 30, Evidence Act. It is not given upon oath and it is not tested by cross-examination. The correct view of the confession of a co-accused has been laid down by Mackney, J. in Nga Mya v. The King (11) the head-note of which is as follows:

"Section 30, Evidence Act, provides that the Court may take the confession of a co-accused person into consideration against the other co-accused, that is to say, that the Court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co-accused."

Consequently, the confession of Sa Khon can, in this case, can only be used for the purpose of corroborating the evidence given by the witnesses upon oath. For that purpose the confession of the appellant Sa Khon is, in our opinion, practically valueless. It is only necessary to read the confession to see that Sa Khon has made it in such a way as to exculpate himself, as far as possible, and for this reason its truth is open to the gravest doubt. The robbery in connection with which the appellants have been convicted occurred at Manoron village on the night of November 21, 1938. During that day three Siamese, who were unknown in the village, arrived at the house of Maung Shwe Myat and Ma E in the early afternoon and spent the rest of the day there. Before their arrival the appellant Sa Khon who belongs to that village, had visited Shwe Myat's house, and according to his confession, he had gone there as a spy of the robbers. On that day

(1) 9 L B R 88; 43 Ind. Cas. 86; A I R 1918 L B 22; 19 Cr. L J 54.

(2) 10 A 207, A W N 1888, 86.

(3) 11 A 183, A W N 1889, 65.

(4) 38 A 49; 31 Ind. Cas. 1015; A I R 1915 All-437; 16 Cr. L J 829; 13 A L J 1072.

(5) 14 Beng. L R 294; 23 W R 12 (F B).

(6) 24 C W N 767; 58 Ind. Cas. 817; A I R 1920 Cal. 414; 21 Cr. L J 817; 32 O L J 31.

(7) 16 B 359.

(8) 38 M 550, 22 Ind. Cas. 737; A I R 1914 Mad. 293; 15 Cr. L J 161.

(9) 6 P L J 147; 61 Ind. Cas. 703; A I R 1921 Pat. 109; 23 Cr. L J 417; 2 P L T 288.

(10) 31 P R 1389 Cr.

(11) (1938) Rang. 30; 174 Ind. Cas. 947; A I R 1938 Rang. 98; 10 R Rang. 449; 39 Cr. L J 481.

Ma Shwe Kyo Hla (P. W. No. 4) and her daughter Ma Shwe Tun May happened to be spending the day with Shwe Myat and Ma E. In the evening, after lamps had been lighted, the visitors suddenly attacked Maung Shwe Myat and Ma E. When they arrived they were carrying weapons, two of them a da each and one an axe, but in this wild country there was nothing unusual in that. However, after night had fallen one of them cut Maung Shwe Myat on the head with his da and when Ma E tried to take the da away she received a blow from the visitor who was carrying the axe. Immediately Ma Shwe Kyo Hla and Ma Shwe Tun May ran away into the jungle. Ma Shwe Kyo Hla says that she hid in the garden at some little distance from the house and she saw the three men going past her, taking Maung Shwe Myat and Ma E with them. Ma Shwe Kyo Hla and her daughter hid in the jungle until daybreak and then the former returned to the house, and on her way she came upon the dead body of Ma E which was lying inside the garden. At some further distance away she also found the dead body of Maung Shwe Myat. In the first information report, which was given by Saw Ba Thein (P. W. No. 9), it is stated that the body of Shwe Myat was lying close to a hole which had been dug in the ground and at the mouth of the hole there was a rusty da, but so superficial was the conduct of the prosecution that this important fact has not been brought out in evidence. It shows that, in all probability, Maung Shwe Myat had been compelled by the robbers to point out the place where he had buried his valuables and that the valuables had been dug up and taken by the robbers.

From the very first Ma Shwe Kyo Hla told the villagers, and subsequently she told the headman and the Police Officers, that she would be able to identify the three Siamese who came to Shwe Myat's house and who of course were obviously the robbers, and there is every reason why she should be able to identify them because she was in Shwe Myat's house at the same time as these three robbers for at least four hours and also for a considerable period while it was still daylight. For some reason of which there is no evidence, due to the extremely summary manner in which the Investigating Officer was examined, suspicion fell upon the appellant Sa Khon and he was arrested, and he then made a statement, in consequence of which he was taken to Siam and he pointed out the two appellants, who were arrested on his information on December 1. On December 12, all the three appellants were sent before a Magistrate to have their confessions recorded but the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung declined to make confessions and only Sa Khon made a confession. As has already been pointed out, his confessional statement is a suspicious statement, but it does amount to an admission that he acted as guide for the robbers and received a sum of Rs. 10 as his share of the booty. This money was found by the Police in his house when it was searched. It was handed over to the Police by his wife Ma Ni (P. W. No. 6). She says that when she received this money from her husband it was tarnished as if it had been buried, and this is in accordance with Sa Khon's confession. So far as Sa Khon is concerned, his complicity in this robbery is clearly established by his confession, which is corroborated by the recovery of the money from his house and by the evidence of his own wife.

Against the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung, there is also sufficient evidence to justify their convictions for participation in the robbery. Leaving aside the evidence of the child Ma Shwe Tun May, who was able to pick out the appellant Lan Taung only at an identification parade, there is the evidence of Ma Shwe Kyo Hla, who identified both Ah Phut and Lan Taung at this parade, which was held at Bokpyin Police Station on December 8. As we have already pointed out, Ma Shwe Kyo Hla had ample opportunity of identifying the three Siamese who came to Shwe Myat's house. Naukachok (P. W. No. 5) supports her evidence because he says that when he was returning from school at about 4 p. m. on the day of the robbery, he saw a Siamese sitting near Maung Shwe Myat at the entrance of Shwe Myat's house, and he identifies this Siamese as the appellant Lan Taung whom he picked out at the identification parade. Ma Ni (P. W. No. 6) says that three or four days before the robbery the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung came to her house and stayed one night, and they returned on the fifth day afterwards and took away her husband Sa Khon with them, and late on that same night her husband returned and gave her ten tarnished rupees. There is other evidence to show that Sa Khon was seen in the company of Siamese, who were not identified by certain witnesses on the day of the robbery and also evidence to show that Ah Phut and Lan Taung and some other Siamese were brought to Manoron from Nandaung village in Siam in a boat about 15 days before the robbery, and that after the robbery Ah Phut and Lan Taung returned to Siam and then Lan Taung appeared to have plenty of money. Apart from this somewhat doubtful evidence, the identification of the two appellants by Ma Shwe Kyo Hla, supported by their identification by Naukachok and Ma Ni is sufficient to establish beyond any reasonable doubt that Ah Phut and Lan Taung must have taken part in this robbery.

The learned Sessions Judge has held that the offence committed was a dacoity in the course of which murder was committed by one of the dacoits, so as to bring the offence within s. 396, Indian Penal Code, but beyond the bare statement of the appellant Sa Khon in his confession there is no evidence whatever on which it can be held that five or more persons took part in this robbery. We have already dealt with the value of the confession of a co-accused as evidence, and a statement in such a confession could not alone be held sufficient to justify a finding of guilty of so grave an offence as that under s. 396, which is punishable with death. Moreover, on this point Sa Khon's confession is obviously untrustworthy. He admits that only three of his confederates went to the house of Shwe Myat and Ma E, and he gives their names as Ah Phut, Lan Taung and Ah Chein. Then, further on, he says that some time afterwards he and one dacoit Bo and two other Siamese proceeded to Shwe Myat's house but remained outside. He does not say where he met this dacoit Bo and the other two Siamese, nor does he give their names. A vague statement of this kind could not be acted upon even if it was made in the course of a sworn deposition, and it is worthless when contained in the confession of a co-accused. Consequently, the evidence in the case establishes only that four persons took part in this robbery. Hence the appellants cannot be held responsible for the murder of Shwe Myat and Ma E unless it is shown either that they actually committed the murders or one of them, or that they were parties to a common intention to commit them. On the first point, there is no evidence at all. On the second point there is also no evidence, and, in fact, the only statement appearing in evidence, which bears upon this question of common intention, tends to show that the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung had no intention at the time of the robbery of injuring either Shwe Myat or Ma E seriously, for Ma Shwe Kyo Hla says in her evidence that when these two appellants were taking Shwe Myat and Ma E from their house she heard one of them enquire of Ma E whether she had been hurt much and she replied that she had only been hurt a little, and she heard Shwe Myat telling these two appellants to walk with care or they would fall off the bridge.

Consequently, the responsibility of the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung for these murders has not been brought home to them, and equally it is clear that Sa Khon did not commit an offence under s. 396. The section of the Penal Code which is applicable is s. 394. We, therefore, alter the convictions of all the three appellants to convictions of an offence under this section, and we reduce the sentence passed upon the appellants Ah Phut and Lan Taung to sentences of seven years' rigorous imprisonment each. The sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment passed by the learned Sessions Judge on Sa Khon will stand.

D.

Sentences reduced.

PESHAWAR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Case No. 288 of 1939

September 12, 1939,

MIR AHMAD, J. O. AND SOOFI, J.

GUL ZAMAN MIR ZAMAN—ACCUSED—

APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 302—Conviction for murder on circumstantial evidence—Whether should not be visited with extreme penalty—Criminal trial—Revision—Sentence—Practice.

The Judge is either satisfied that the accused is guilty or he is not. There can be only two positions. If he is satisfied, the accused must get the normal punishment; if he is not, the accused must be acquitted. There is no middle course at all in judging the guilt of the accused. It is wrong to say that an accused convicted of murder merely upon circumstantial evidence should not be visited with extreme penalty. Abdul Wahad v. Emperor (1), Overruled.

As a rule, the High Court is reluctant in interfering in the sentence passed by the trial Court.

Cr. Case from an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Peshawar, dated July 3, 1939.

Sardar Bahadur Raja Singh, for the Crown.

Mir Ahmad, J. C.—Gulzaman was married to Musammât Zewar Nissa for about three years. They lived in village Mangal Doga which is situated within the Phulra State and is under the control of the Mansehra Police Station (Hazara district). On the morning of January 9, 1939, Faqir Mohammad of the same village was passing by the house of Gulzaman. He smelt the burning of clothes. He looked into the house and saw smoke coming out of it. On further examination he found that Musammât Zewar Nissa was lying near the hearth and her clothes were on fire. He raised a hue and cry and went to the hujra where he found Gulzaman and Aziz Mohammad Khan, the Gurarakhor of the village. Gulzaman had, according to Aziz Mohammad Khan, gone to the hujra to inform him that his mother-in-law was forcibly taking away his wife and to ask for his intervention. Aziz Mohammad Khan had sent a servant to the house and the servant was on the way when Faqir Mohammad raised a hue and cry. Faqir Mohammad informed Gulzaman what he had seen. Aziz Mohammad Khan and the other persons sitting in the hujra therefore hastened towards the house of Gulzaman. Gulzaman was with them and when they had reached midway he cried out that his mother-in-law had killed his wife. In the meantime his mother-in-law, Musammât Jan, came out of her house which was on the way and the whole party entered the house. There they found Musammât Zewar Nissa wounded and her clothes burnt. It appears that the females who had reached earlier had put out the fire.

There was a charge and counter-charge. The mother-in-law charged Gulzaman with the offence of murder and Gulzaman alleged that it was his mother-in-law who had killed his wife. Aziz Mohammad Khan therefore detained both of them and sent information to Kalandar Shah, the officer-in-charge of that ilaga under the Khan of Phulra. Kalandar Shah arrived. He found a blood-stained dagger behind a corn-bin in the room of Gulzaman. He also took his clothes into his possession: they were blood-stained. He submitted the information to the Khan of Phulra and the Khan then apprised the officer-in-charge of the Mansehra Police Station of what had occurred. The Police took up the case and sent up Gulzaman. He was committed to the Court of Session and tried there under s. 302, Indian Penal Code.

The prosecution story set out above was given by Faqir Mohammad, Aziz Mohammad Khan, Musammât Jan and Kalandar Shah. The following witnesses were also examined at the trial: The doctor, Musammât Karam Jan, Musammât Amir Jan, Ghulam Haidar, and Shah Baz Khan, Sub-Inspector. The doctor described the wounds on the deceased as follows: 1. An incised wound on the right side of the head (parietal region) cutting the scalp and the bone beneath. The wound was $7\frac{1}{2}" \times \frac{1}{2}" \times 6\frac{1}{2}"$. 2. An incised wound on the left side of the chest $3" \times 2" \times \frac{1}{4}"$. 3. Marks of burn on the inner side of the left thigh, knee and leg. 4. Marks of burn on the inner side of the right thigh. Death was due to the injury to the brain.

Musammât Karam Jan, a girl of 11 years, stated that she was going out to answer the call of nature when she heard a noise in the house of the accused. She locked in and saw the accused dragging Musammât Zewar Nissa and throwing her behind the door. Then the accused left the house and the girl also went away. On her return, she heard Faqir Mohammad crying that Musammât Zewar Nissa was on fire. Musammât Amir Jan was an earlier visitor to the house. Musammât Zewar Nissa was the sister of her husband. She had gone to ask for some soup. The accused and the deceased were quarrelling with each other. She had some soup and returned home. At the trial she said that the accused had a dagger in his hand at the moment but she admitted when confronted with her statement to the Police, that she had not said this in her Police statement: she had said there that the dagger was lying on the hearth. Ghulam Haidar is the brother of Musammât Zewar Nissa. He alleged that on the day of occurrence the accused had after his arrest, given out that he suspected a liaison between his wife and one Sikandar, his neighbour. He identified the dagger to be the property of the accused. S. I. Shahbaz Khan sent the dagger and the shirt of the accused to the Chemical Examiner and Imperial Serologist who reported that they were stained with human blood. The accused denied the charge. He said that he did not own the dagger. He admitted that his shirt was blood-stained but he said that he had touched the body of the deceased when picking up his child and had thus stained his shirt. He did not produce any defence. The three assessors who assisted at the trial returned a verdict of guilty. The learned Additional Sessions Judge convicted the accused under s 302, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced him to transportation for life. The accused has appealed from jail.

On a careful consideration of the case we see no reason to differ from the conclusion arrived at by the learned Additional Sessions Judge. According to the statement of Musammam Amir Jan, the husband and wife were quarrelling early in the morning. Musammam Karam Jan has proved the fact that the husband was dragging the wife and threw her behind the door. Faqir Mohammad saw the woman on fire and raised a hue and cry. At that moment the accused had carried a false tale to Aziz Mohammad Khan that his mother-in-law was trying to take away his wife from his house. Then the accused feigned that his mother-in-law had killed his wife and made an outcry to that effect when the party was on the way to his house. A blood-stained dagger, which was identified by Ghulam Haider to be the property of the accused was found behind a corn-bin in the room of the accused and there was blood on the shirt of the accused. The plea of the accused that the shirt was stained when he was picking up his child is idle because he was arrested on arrival in the house, and there is no evidence that he went near the deceased on his return from the hujra. The allegation of Ghulam Haider that the accused gave out his suspicion with regard to the conduct of the deceased provides the motive. In our opinion, a conclusive case has been made out against the accused for murder. We therefore maintain the conviction under s. 302, Indian Penal Code. In giving the lesser sentence the learned Judge has made the following remarks :

"Regarding sentence the act of the accused is a brutal one. There are no mitigating circumstances, there is no provocation and the action of the accused, in trying to conceal his act by going to the hujra and making up a false story against his own mother-in-law makes his case still worse. At the same time my attention has been drawn to a ruling, Abdul Wahab v. Emperor (1), a judgment of an eminent Judicial Commissioner of the Province, that in cases of purely circumstantial evidence extreme penalty should not be inflicted. I am therefore constrained to pass the lesser sentence and accordingly holding the accused guilty under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, sentence him to transportation for life."

We have carefully examined the ruling referred to by the learned Additional Sessions Judge. The head-note runs thus :

"The proof must be more cogent in criminal cases
(1) 78 Ind. Cas. 97; 25 Cr. L.J. 97.

than in civil cases, but the ultimate test can only be the personal and mental attitude of the person whose duty it is to consider the evidence before him. Purely circumstantial evidence, however overwhelming and convincing it may be, has the character which must leave some loophole for the contingency, however remote and infinitesimal, of possible errors. Although it is wholly illogical in case of a trial for murder to accept facts as proved for the purpose of conviction and to throw any doubt on such proof in considering the question of sentence, yet this is an illogicality which has been fully and consistently recognized by the Courts. An accused convicted of murder merely upon circumstantial evidence should not be visited with a sentence which is irrevocable. The Court is reluctant to launch a person into eternity except in case of exceptional strength."

The learned Judge has not quoted any authority in the text for the view that the illogicality has been recognized by Courts. With due respect to the eminent Judge who delivered that judgment we beg to differ from him in this view of law. It amounts to a compromise with one's conscience. There can be only two positions. The Judge is either satisfied that the accused is guilty or he is not. If he is satisfied, the accused must get the normal punishment. If he is not, the accused must be acquitted. We do not see any middle course at all in judging the guilt of the accused. We therefore overrule the authority referred to and direct that it should not be followed in this respect. We have given our anxious consideration to the question whether we should enhance the sentence. As a rule, the High Court is reluctant in interfering in the sentence passed by the trial Court. We do not think that we should depart from this practice in this case. We, therefore, dismiss the appeal.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

First Appeal No. 36 of 1937

February 23, 1939

STONES, C. J. AND BOSE, J.

B. L. CHOUDA AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS
versus

B. K. RAI AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 66—

Object of—Section, if draws distinction between purchase by person in name of stranger and one by father in name of son—Person purchasing at Court auction in his own name though on behalf of somebody else—S. 66 (1), if deals with such case—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 32—Cancelled will, when can be used in support of statement made by testator.

The object of s. 66, Civil Procedure Code, is to put a stop to benami purchases at execution sales, [p. 213, col. 1.]

There is no difference between purchases by A in the name of B where A and B are strangers and where A and B are closely related as in the case of father and son. Section 66, Civil Procedure Code, therefore, applies also to purchases by father in the name of the son Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapershad Gossain (2), Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (3) and Sura Lakshmiiah Chetty v. Kothandarama Pillai (4), explained; [p. 212, col. 1]

Section 66 (1), does not deal with a case where A has purchased at Court auction property in his own name though he purchased on behalf of somebody else. The section deals with a case where "any person" has made the purchase "on behalf of the plaintiff." [p. 213, col. 1.]

A cancelled will is admissible under s. 32, Evidence Act, if it is used in support of a statement made by the testator in the interest of other persons, his sons, and against his own interest. Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (3), distinguished.

F. A. from a decree of the Court of the Additional District Judge, Saugor, dated October 17, 1936, in Civil Suit No. 6-A of 1935.

Rai Bahadur D. N. Choudhary, for the Appellants.

Messrs. R. N. Padhye and W. B. Pendharkar, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2, respectively.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiffs appeal from a judgment dismissing the suit. The plaintiffs are three executors under the will of a gentleman who was in his lifetime a member of the English Bar but obviously towards the end of his life had shed those ideas which sometimes come with education in Europe. He died a man of considerable property leaving a small sum of money (Rs. 30 a month) to his widow, some small presents to friends and nothing to his two sons and daughter. Most of his will is concerned with directions with regard to certain religious and charitable purposes which appear to be designed to secure him favourable reception in the world to come. This is the kind of will which the Romans treated as an inofficious will which a dependant could upset. It is a kind of will that does not look well unless there are grave reasons for disinheriting those who have some claim upon the author of their being. However, with those considerations we are not in this case concerned because in this case we are not concerned with whether this is a good or a bad will but whether a particular item of property belonged to the testator at all. If it did, then he has disposed of it under this will. If it did not, the will and any other dispositions of the testator have nothing to do with the passing of title. This is not a case of a beneficiary being put to his election.

The property in question is a somewhat valuable one, a bungalow occupied at the present moment by the European Club, Saugor, and a property which was purchased sometime ago for a sum of Rs. 15,000. The question is: Did it belong to the testator so as to now form part of the testator's estate or does it belong to his sons? The learned Judge has found that it belongs to the sons. He has founded that conclusion on two different grounds: (1) the conclusive presumption created by s. 66 of the Civil Procedure Code, and (2) the facts of the case, (assuming that presumption does not arise).

On March 30, 1919, the subject-matter of this suit was sold in a Court auction. The persons mentioned in the sale certificate as the purchasers are the defendants, B. K. Rai and B. P. Rai. The case of the executors is, however, that the true purchaser was the deceased, the defendant's father. At the time of the purchase the defendants were minors and it is said that the testator has, in his will, declared it to be his property and that there is abundant evidence to show that the purchase price was paid out of the money standing to his credit with his bankers, Bansilal Abirchand. It is therefore urged that this is a case of a purchase by a father with that father's money in the name of his sons; in other words it is a benami transaction. All the property of the testator is to be treated as his self-acquired property. The sons are not to be regarded as members with him of a joint Hindu family. We proceed on the basis therefore that all his property was self-acquired and that we are dealing with a father and two children who are not joint.

The applicability and construction of s. 66, Civil Procedure Code, are the first points that arise. That section, in sub-s. (1), provides as follows:—

"No suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claims."

The argument addressed to us would involve reading that sub-section as follows:

"No suit shall be maintained against a stranger."

claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made [by the person certified as the purchaser] on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claims."

We have placed in square brackets the words which it is said should be read into this section. It is said that there is a big difference in these benami matters, including cases that fall within s. 66 between purchases by A in the name of B where A and B are strangers and where A and B are closely related as in the case of father and son: Gapal v. Keshosa (1), Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapershad Gossain (2) and Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (3) are referred to. In our opinion there is no difference at all between such purchases. In Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapershad Gossain (2) an endeavour was made to draw a distinction between them. The argument that was then addressed to their Lordships of the Judicial Committee was to the following effect:—

In English Law if A pays the purchase price for the conveyance of Blackacre which is taken in the name of B, a resulting trust arises whereby B becomes trustee for A and therefore, where it is once established that the price has been paid by A, the presumption arises that the title is in A although it appears to be in B. This in India is reflected in the law relating to benami transactions so that if one finds in India a transfer taken in the name of B and the purchase price supplied by A, then the presumption is that the title, despite the fact that the transferee is B, is in A. The argument was then advanced that in India, as in England, different considerations arise when A and B are so related as to raise a presumption, in such circumstances, that A paid that money, not with a view to get a title in himself but, with a view to the advancement of B. Such circumstances arise in England in the case of a child or in the case of a wife. Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapershad Gossain (2) was a case of a child and Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (3) was a case of a wife. In both cases (see also Sura Lakshmiiah Chetty v. Kothanda- rama Pillai (4) their Lordships of the Judicial Committee upheld the Courts in India, came to the conclusion that Indian social conditions did not attract that particular rule of advancement and that there was no presumption of advancement in such circumstances in India. Therefore their Lordships decided that even where A was a father and B was a son or a wife still the rule, that the purchase is benami, holds good. But although that be so, the person alleging that the transaction is benami would have to give evidence in the first place to show that the deed did not speak the truth. In the most common case he would discharge that burden if he established that he supplied the consideration. If he established that the burden of proof would shift. It would then be for the person in whose name the transfer was taken to show that it was not a benami transaction. That burden is not discharged by merely proving that he is a son.

In this present case the converse was argued in an endeavour by Rai Bahadur Choudhari to get us to read for "any person" "a stranger". It was said that a difference exists in the case of strangers and in the case of father and son. This difference, it was said, was so deep as to make it necessary to limit the cases that s. 66 is concerned with to two cases other than those where a father purchases in the name of a son, or a husband in the name of a wife. In developing that argument, he relied on a further series of Privy Council cases, that is to say, Ganga Sahai v. Kesri (5), and the earlier Privy Council case therein referred to at p. 555 (Bodh Singh Dodhoria v. Gunesh Chunder Sen) (6), together with two more decisions one of which purports to follow Ganga Sahai v. Kesri (5), that is to say, Patrachariar v. Ramaswami (7) and Jai Kishan v. Parmeshri Das (8). The last named case decided that on the facts there present s. 66 did not apply and accordingly the benami nature of the

(1) I L R. (1936) Nag. 65; 165 Ind. Cas. 350; A I R 1936 Nag. 185; 9 R N 80.

(2) 6 M I A 53; 2 Suther. 13; 4 W R 46; 1 Sar. 493 (P O).

(3) 55 C 944; 109 Ind. Cas. 723; A I R 1928 P O 172; 55 I A 235; 32 O W N 817; 29 P L R 429; 28 L W 66; 48 O L J 119; 5 O W N 668; I L T 40 Lah. 144; 30 Bom. L R 1384; 55 M L J 651; (1928) M W N 917 (P O).

(4) 48 M 605; 88 Ind. Cas. 327; A I R 1925 P O 181; 52 I A 266; 23 A L J 662; 49 M L J 109; 42 O L J 8; 27 Bom. L R 1076; 29 O W N 1013; 3 Pat. L R 290; 23 L W 138; (1925) M W N 717 (P O).

(5) 37 A 545 at p. 555; 30 Ind. Cas. 265; A I R 1915 P O 81; 42 I A 77; 19 O W N 1175; 18 M L T 203; 29 M L J 329; 2 L W 837; 13 A L J 999; 17 Bom. L R 998; 22 O L J 508; (1915) M W N 713 (P O).

(6) 12 B L R 317; 19 W R 356; 3 Sar. 253 (P O).
(7) A I R 1919 Mad. 942; 49 Ind. Cas. 734; 9 L W 276; (1919) M W N 693.

(8) A I R 1937 Lah. 471; 171 Ind. Cas. 856; 39 P L R 152; 40 R L 240.

transaction could be gone into. Ganga Sahai v. Kesri (5), as we read it, is a case in which it was found that a fraud had been perpetrated and is a case quite different on its facts from the present. The fact that their Lordships of the Judicial Committee founded their view on fraud is seen when their observations at p. 555* are read.

That leads us to the second alteration in the wording of the section which it is said should be made if one is to arrive at a true construction of s. 66 (1), that is to say, after the words "was made" should be added "by the certified purchase". That, however, in our opinion is a hopeless construction because that would mean that we are not dealing with benami transactions at all but are dealing with cases in which A has purchased at Court auction property in his own name though he purchased on behalf of somebody else. That is not the kind of case that s. 66 (1) is dealing with. It is dealing with a case where "any person" has made the purchase "on behalf of the plaintiff". In such a case if the person in whose name the purchase is taken is certified as the purchaser, the plaintiff cannot maintain a suit against him claiming title on the ground that the purchase was made on his behalf. The most important case is where the purchaser is the plaintiff and where he has taken a transfer in the name of another who is the person certified as the purchaser. The reason why such a distinction has been made between Court auction sales and private sales is brought out in Sir Dinshah Mulla's notes to s. 66. As he observes the object of the section is to put a stop to benami purchases at execution sales. Of course these provisions, like other provisions, are not permitted by Courts of law to operate so as to work a fraud, but where is the fraud in the present case?

In the present case the facts are as follows: The testator attended this auction sale and bought this property in the name of his two sons. He paid off the purchase price by a cheque drawn on his bank. He fed the bank from a variety of sources, partly from his business, and round about the time of this sale undoubtedly from the sale of property which was equally undoubtedly his. But he has himself made it quite clear, in a document that we shall refer to later, that he was buying this property not on his own behalf but on behalf of his sons. He was not buying it on behalf of his sons by way of advancement out of his own money but he was buying it on behalf of his sons with the sons' own money, only the sons' money had been used by him in the past and he was not, in effect, re-paying them out of his own money. That is, as we understand this case, the truth of the matter. We derive that from the documents. Before we come to the documents it is desirable to make one or two preliminary observations.

This gentleman made at least two wills. The one was made in 1927 and will be referred to as the cancelled will and the other in 1929, the effective will. He was at the time of his death well advanced in years, as things go in the East, and, between those two dates, whether it was due to declining mental powers or to other reasons, he appears to have entirely changed his attitude not with regard to one of his dependants only but with regard to them all. In the earlier cancelled will there is the following statement:

"List of property which is separately owned by respective persons is not included in mine; for it was separately purchased with their amounts.

Club bungalow (the suit property) which at present fetches a rent of Rs. 100 per month. It was purchased in the names of Bhairo Prasad and Balkrishna (the two defendants) only with the amount accumulated, of all the four sons. Money used always to be given to them in their early life since their birth by way of presents which was laid by in a Savings Bank and led to profit being invested into the business. As for the way in which the rent of the same should be distributed....."

If reference is made to Ex. D-1 one finds a corroboration of the defendants' story that in addition to the sums which came to them by way of gift in the manner stated in the cancelled will they also obtained substantial sums from their mother. Exhibit D-1 refers to two sums, one of Rs. 3,000, and another of Rs. 2,300, which appears as credited to Bhairo Prasad and Bal Krishna, respectively. There is also an entry: "His mother paid from ornaments, etc. Hence credited to him". All these moneys would appear to have been mixed by the testator with his own moneys.

After this purchase was concluded one finds in the testator's books the following entries: Under date March 28, 1921; Rs. 90 credited on account of rent of the Club House of Bhaiya Bhairo Prasad Bal Krishna for the month of February". Similar entries are to be found under dates—June 28, 1921, August 2, 1921, September 30, 1921 and November 5, 1921. On December 7, 1921, we have this entry; "Credited to the khata of Bal Krishna Bhairo Prasad on account of rent of the Club House for the month of October 1921". The last entry of this kind that we have is under date February 1, 1922. It will be observed that in the entry dated December 7, 1921, a reference is made to the khata of these two sons "on account of the rent of the Club House". If Ex. P-6 is referred to we find "khata Not 1. khata of the Club House...from of October 24, 1919", then certain credits and debits are given. Altogether a sum of Rs. 1,534-2-0 is credited and that shows not only that those payments were put into a separate khata of the Club House but, read in with the entry that we have mentioned under date—December 7, 1921, that that khata was the khata of the two sons. There is also the oral evidence of the son who went into the witness-box and gave evidence to the effect that he was 11 when this property was purchased for him and therefore was then told what had been done for him. Putting that quite on one side it seems to us that the documentary evidence is all one way until we come to the last will of the testator. The last will of the testator is obviously made either after a quarrel or, what appears more probable, after he had commenced to lose his mental faculties. We incline to the latter alternative because a son is disinherited apparently because he was active in causing an ailing sister to go into hospital and undergo an operation which probably saved her life. We are not to be taken as saying that the testator was of non-testamentary capacity, but the will does bear on its face the signs of being made by a man who had lost all regard for his dependants. That is a state of mind that does occasionally afflict people who are not well. In his last will unquestionably he treats the suit property as property belonging to him, property that he bought benami in the name of his sons, and he claims to exercise full disposing power over it. But we do not in any way regard the evidence supplied by this last will as comparable with the evidence supplied by the cancelled will. The cancelled will has no force or effect as a will and Rai Bahadur Choudhari argued that it has no evidentiary value at all founding himself on Guran Ditta v Ram Ditta (3). But the reason their Lordships of the Privy Council treated the will there as being of no evidentiary value was because the cancelled will was there being used in support of a statement made by the testator in his own interest. Here the statement is being made by the testator in the interest of other persons, his sons, against his own interests, and is accordingly admissible under s. 32 (2) of the Evidence Act.

We observe that in this case we are sitting as an Appellate Court and the learned Judge, who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses, has arrived at a certain conclusion of fact which ends the matter if upheld. That is to say, the question under s. 66 does not arise if his finding of fact is correct. We looking at the cold record, at a very early stage in this appeal arrived at the same conclusion of fact. That is enough to dispose of the appeal. Accordingly the appeal is dismissed with costs.

We observe that the costs in the lower Courts have been given against the plaintiffs without in any way indicating that they are to come out of the estate. There has been no appeal from this part of the decree but the respondents leave the matter to us to deal with according to equity and bearing in mind what is usual in executors' cases. We have no reason to think that this is litigation undertaken maliciously or with the sole desire to cause trouble to the defendants, but we think that the executors really considered, acting under legal advice, that the case was one that should, in the interests of the testator's estate and the charities, be filed. In such cases it is not usual to impose the burden of costs on executors or trustees personally. Accordingly the costs throughout will be paid by the plaintiffs to the defendants out of the estate.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Suit No. 1882 of 1937

March 15, 1939

PANCKRIDGE, J.

R. EZEKIEL—PLAINTIFF

versus

THE PROVINCE OF BHNGAL—

DEFENDANT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 88

(b-d)—Suit to establish title to attached property—Claim under sub-s. (b-a), if should first be filed—Securities Act (X of 1920)—Government promissory note, transfer of, how made—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 114, 160—Company depositing as security in respect of warehouse Government promissory note—Position of Government is of bailee—Return of note—Interest of third party in note, effect of.

Sub-s. 6 (d) of s. 88, Criminal Procedure Code, does not prevent a person from filing a suit to establish his title to attached property without first filing a claim or objection under sub-s. 6 (a). (p. 216, col. 1.)

Government promissory note can only be transferred by endorsement on the note itself. (p. 216, col. 2.)

Where Government accepts a Government promissory note deposited by a company with the excise authorities as a security in respect of a private warehouse, the Government becomes under s. 114, Contract Act, the bailee and must return the note to the bailor without demand after the termination of the license. The fact that some third person has interest in the note cannot be a ground for refusal to return it.

Messrs. Carden Noad, N. C. Chatterjee and H. N. Sanyal, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. S. M. Bose, Standing Counsel, for the Defendant.

Judgment.—The facts of this case are as follows: There was a company, named Davidsons, Limited, which carried on business as importers of wines and spirits. For the purposes of this business they owned a private bonded warehouse, and as a condition of owing it, they were required by the excise authorities to secure the liability, which would arise from time to time to pay duty in respect of dutiable liquors imported by them. On September 20, 1933, the company wrote to the Collector of Excise enclosing a Government promissory note in the five per cent. loan, 1945—55 of the face value of Rs. 10,000. The company in their letter to the Collector describe the note as "deposit money in connection with the establishment of a private warehouse by us at 6, Cooper's Lane in lieu of executing a hypothecation bond."

This Government promissory note has never been endorsed to the company. The last endorsement is as follows: "Pay David Ezekiel and Mrs. Ezekiel either or survivor or order," the endorser being the Imperial Bank of India. On January 9, 1934, the Collector acknowledged receipt of the promissory note, which he described as "deposit by you in connection with the establishment of a private warehouse at 6, Cooper's Lane in lieu of executing a hypothecation bond required for this purpose."

There is a document of November 11, 1934, whereby the Collector certifies that the company have deposited the bond in connection with the establishment of a private warehouse and that the bond is lying in the Collector's custody. It appears from a letter of May 28, 1935, that on March 18, 1935, the company had written to the Collector stating that they desired to withdraw the note and to deposit in lieu thereof either cash or other Government securities. This letter is of no particular importance, except as evidencing the date when the company first attempted to recover possession of the note. On July 23, 1936, the company's solicitors wrote to the Commissioner of Excise saying that, as the company's excise licenses have been cancelled and they have been prevented by the excise from selling their goods, they have been instructed to ask for the return of the note. This letter failed to elicit a reply and in a reminder of September 1, 1936, the solicitors again ask for the promissory note and point out that as their clients' excise license has been suspended and they are not permitted to sell the goods lying in their bond, their security has been automatically discharged, and they are entitled to the refund of their deposit. A further reminder was sent on October 2, 1936.

On October 16, 1936, the Commissioner wrote to the company's solicitors stating that the security deposit could not now be refunded. At this time a prosecution for offences under the Excise Act and the Indian Penal Code was pending in the Magistrate's Court at Alipore against David Ezekiel, who was an endorsee of the note and was also interested in Davidsons, Limited. On December 16, 1936, the Police Inspector, who was in charge of the prosecution, at the instance of the Excise Department, applied to the trying Magistrate to order attachment of the note. The trying Magistrate endorsed on the Inspector's written application an order that the note should be attached, and that it should remain with the Collector of Excise, who was not to part with it or deal with it in any way without the permission and authority of the Court.

The formal order addressed to the Commissioner of Police, requires him to attach the right, title and interest of David Ezekiel in the note, and all interest that had accrued, or is hereafter to accrue on it. The order of attachment was made on the ground that David Ezekiel was absconding, and in making it the Court purported to exercise the power conferred on it by s. 88, sub-s. 3 (c), Criminal Procedure Code, which prescribes, as one of the methods of attaching movable property, an order in writing prohibiting delivery of such property to a proclaimed person or to anyone on his behalf. Meanwhile the plaintiff Mr. Ezekiel David's wife, as a debenture-holder in Davidsons, Limited, had instituted a suit to enforce her security, and in June, 1936, this Court had appointed the Official Receiver, Receiver of the property and assets of Davidsons, Limited, with power to get in and collect the same and to bring suits in his own name. On December 8, 1937, the Official Receiver instituted the present suit. While it was pending, that is to say, on April 11, 1938, Mrs. Ezekiel obtained a decree for foreclosure which provided for the discharge of the Official Receiver and declared that Mrs. Ezekiel was entitled to the assets of the company. The decree gave Mrs. Ezekiel liberty to realize the assets and proceed with pending suits, which had been instituted by the Official Receiver. Consequential amendments to the plaint were made on June 22, 1938, in accordance with which Mrs. Ezekiel has become plaintiff in the place of the Official Receiver. The reliefs sought include a declaration that the note is a part of the assets of Davidsons, Limited, return of the note with all interest thereon, or its value, and damages. The written statement of the Province of Bengal was filed on February 16, 1938. Under s. 88 (6-a), Criminal Procedure Code, any person who claims to have an interest in property attached under the section can make a claim within six months of the attachment. Sub-section 6 (d) provides that if a claimant's claim or objection is disallowed in whole or in part that person may within a period of one year from the date of such order institute a suit to establish the right which he claims in respect of the property in dispute, but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order of the Magistrate shall be conclusive.

No proceedings were taken either by the Official Receiver or by the present plaintiff under sub-s. 6 (a). It is not disputed that sub-s. (d) does not prevent a person from filing a suit to establish his title to attached property without first filing a claim or objection under sub-s. 6 (a), but I understand it to be suggested that an attachment is a bar to a claim for relief other than by way of declaration of title and the reliefs consequent thereon. It was suggested by the learned Standing Counsel that the note was deposited not by Davidsons, Limited, but by David Ezekiel. That suggestion was based upon the language of an entry in the ledger of Davidsons, Limited, which, it is true, lends some support to the submission. However, the point as to the identity of the depositor is not taken in the written statement, and in view of the correspondence it is, to my mind, perfectly clear that it was the company that deposited the note, and that the Collector throughout has treated it as a deposit made by the company.

With regard to the company's title the position appears to me to be as follows: The books of Davidsons, Limited, satisfactorily prove that the company gave consideration for the promissory note by crediting David Ezekiel on January 31, 1934, with Rs. 11,300 which was then the market value of the note. Some difficulty is caused by the fact that there has been no endorsement in favour of the company by David Ezekiel and the plaintiff, or by either of them, nor has there been any assignment by a separate document, such as would satisfy the provisions of s. 130, Transfer of Property Act, assuming that transfers, effected as laid down in that section, are valid in respect of Government securities. In any event, however, I consider that there has not been a transfer, which is effectual to vest the property in the note in the company, because in my opinion that can only be done by endorsement on the note itself, and in this connection I would refer to s. 5, Securities Act, 1920, which provides that notwithstanding anything in s. 15, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, no endorsement shall be valid on a Government promissory note unless made by the signature of the holder inscribed on the back of the security itself. Therefore the note is not and has never been, strictly speaking, a part of the assets of Davidsons, Limited. This, however, is very far from saying that Davidsons, Limited, have no rights whatever to the note.

In my opinion when the note was deposited with the Collector on December 20, 1933, and accepted by him in his letter of January 9, 1934, the Government of Bengal became the bailees of the note within the meaning of s. 114, Contract Act. It follows that under s. 140 of that Act, the Government were under a duty to return it without demand as soon as the time for which it had been bailed had expired, or the purpose for which it had been bailed was accomplished. I do not think it is a matter of much importance whether the license is more properly described as having been cancelled or as having been suspended, because I am told that it is an annual license and expires at the end of a year. It is not suggested that Davidsons, Limited, were under any liability to Government in respect of the bonded warehouse, and so even without demand, the Government were under an obligation to deliver the note according to the direction of Davidsons, Limited, at least as early as the expiry of 1935. I have read the subsequent correspondence which contains an unequivocal demand for the note by Davidsons, Limited, and unequivocal refusal to part with the note on the part of the Government. I do not think any useful purpose would be served by insisting on an amendment of the plaint setting out these facts. In my opinion it was the duty of the Government to return the note, and that, under the well-known principle which is embodied in s. 117, Evidence Act, being bailees, they were not at liberty to refuse to return it on the ground of some interest which they allege still subsists in David Ezekiel.

I also consider that the Government cannot after their refusal improve their position by obtaining ex parte an order under s. 88, Criminal Procedure Code, and they cannot buttress their position by the direction contained in the order that they are not to part with the note without the authority of the Criminal Court.

I am not concerned with the position which would have arisen if the note were no longer in the possession of the Government of Bengal through the Collector of Excise, nor what the measure of damages in those circumstances would be, having regard to the fact that the title of Davidsons, Limited, has not been perfected by the endorsement of the holders or either of them. In my opinion Davidsons, Limited, as bailors have been throughout entitled to obtain the return of the note from the bailees, and I also hold that the order of attachment which the Government have obtained in the Courts is no bar to my directing its return. I accordingly make a decree in terms of prayer 2 of the plaint with costs.

S.

Suit decreed.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Appeal from the Calcutta High Court
October 10, 1939

LORD MACMILLAN, SIR GEORGE RANKIN AND
MR. M. R. JAYAKAR

PROBODH KUMAR DAS AND OTHERS —
APPELLANTS

versus

THE DANTMARA TEA CO., LTD. AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53-A—Right under—Confers no right of action on transferee in possession under unregistered contract of sale—Available only by way of defence—India Tea Control Act (XXIV of 1933)—Export quota rights are assignable.

The amendment of the Transfer of Property Act, effected by the enactment of s. 53-A confers no right of action on a transferee in possession under an unregistered contract of sale. The right conferred by s. 53-A is a right available only to the defendant to protect his possession. The section is so framed as to impose a statutory bar on the transferor; it confers no active title on the transferee.

The export quota rights obtained from the Tea Licensing Committee are assignable and are of value.

Sir Thomas Strangman, K. C. and Mr. Charles Bagram, for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. M. Dunne, K. C., L. P. E. Pugh, K. C. and J. M. Pringle, for Respondent, Nos. 1 and 7.

Lord Macmillan.—This appeal relates to a tea garden in the District of Chitragong, known as the Kaiyacherra Tea Estate, which at one time belonged to the Kaiyacherra Tea Company, Limited. The estate was mortgaged to Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co. of Calcutta who in 1930 obtained an order for the compulsory winding-up of the Tea Company. Thereafter the estate was put up to auction by the liquidators and purchased by Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co. Without obtaining any conveyance in their favour Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co. on October 10, 1931, by an interchange of letters of offer and acceptance agreed to sell the estate to one S. N. Roy, who paid the first instalment of the price and entered into possession. No conveyance was ever executed in pursuance of this contract of sale but the plaintiffs in the present suit, now the appellants, claim to have acquired at least in part the purchaser's right under it. The estate has been the subject of a complicated series of transactions which it is fortunately not necessary to detail for the purpose of deciding the only question argued before their Lordships. These transactions are fully set out in the judgments of the Subordinate Judge and the High Court and account for the varied assortment of defendants to the suit.

The first defendants and respondents, the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, to whom alone it is necessary to refer, claim on the other hand to be the proprietors of the estate under (1) a duly registered deed of assignment in their favour by the partners of Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co., dated June 1, 1934, which narrates inter alia the failure of S. N. Roy to complete the contract of sale of October 10, 1931, and (2) a duly registered deed of sale, also dated June 1, 1934, by the Kaiyacherra Tea Company, Limited, and the liquidators of that company and by the partners of Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co.

The position accordingly is that the plaintiffs have no title to the estate of which they are at least partly in possession, but rely on the contract of sale of October 10, 1931, while the defendants, the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, have a duly completed title to the estate but are not in possession of it.

The real bone of contention between the parties is the right to the export quota under the India Tea Control Act (XXIV of 1933), which was passed inter alia to regulate the export of tea from India. By s. 3 of that Act an Indian Tea Licensing Committee was set up and under other provisions of the Act, it was entrusted with the task of determining the total quantity of tea, termed the "export quota," which the owner of each tea estate should be permitted to export, and of issuing export licences. These quota rights are assignable and are of obvious value. The Licensing Committee in 1933-34 issued the export quota rights for the Kaiyacherra estate to the plaintiffs or to them and S. N. Roy. In 1934-35 the Committee, having become aware that the title to the estate was in dispute, declined to issue any export quota rights in respect of it. Subsequent to the execution and registration of the conveyance of the estate to the defendants, the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, the Licensing Committee have recognised them as entitled to the export quota rights of the estate. Thus the plaintiffs have in part at least possession of the estate but have no export quota rights, while the defendants, the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, hold the export quota rights of the estate but have not possession of it.

It is in these circumstances that the plaintiffs brought the present suit in which they seek to have it declared that the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, and others have no right or title to the estate and are debarred from enforcing any right to the estate, including the right to sell tea under the export quota allotted to it or to transfer the quota rights to any person. They also seek an injunction.

The defendants challenged the right of the plaintiffs to bring the suit and maintained that they had no title to sue. The Subordinate Judge rejected this plea and decided generally in favour of the plaintiffs but on appeal the learned Judges of the High Court were of opinion that the suit was not maintainable and dismissed it.

It was conceded by the appellants at their Lordships' bar that, apart from s. 53-A which was added by amendment in 1929 to the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, they had no case. But they contended that, notwithstanding that they had not chosen to sue for specific performance of the contract of October 10, 1931, and notwithstanding that they had taken no steps to complete their title, they were nevertheless entitled under s. 53-A actively to assert the rights of a proprietor in virtue of the contract of October 10, 1931, and their possession.

The position of the law under the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, before the addition to it of s. 53-A has on more than one occasion been expounded by their Lordships and reference may be made to the case of Pir Bakhsh v. Mahomed Tahar (1), where the subject was fully discussed. It is clear that the appellants were well-advised in conceding that if they could not invoke s. 53-A they were out of Court.

In their Lordships' opinion the amendment of the law effected by the enactment of s. 53-A conferred no right of action on a transferee in possession under an unregistered contract of sale. Their Lordships agree with the view expressed by Mr. Justice Mitter in the High Court that "the right conferred by s. 53-A is a right available only to the defendant to protect his possession." They note that this was also the view of their late distinguished colleague, Sir Dinshah Mulla, as stated in the second edition of his treatise on the Transfer of Property Act at p. 262. The section is so framed as to impose a statutory bar on the transferor; it confers no active title on the transferee. Indeed, any other reading of it would make a serious inroad on the whole scheme of the Transfer of Property Act.

(1) 61 I A 338; 151 Ind. Cas. 326; 7 R P O 60; A I R 1934 P O 235; (1934) A L J 912; 11 O W N 1145; 40 L W 492; (1934) M W N 1037; 18 R D 469; 39 O W N 31; 1931 A L R 894; 36 Bom. L R 1195; 60 C L J 370; 67 M L J 865; 16 P L T 1; 58 B 650; (1934) O L R 769 (P O).

It was suggested that by obtaining the export quota rights from the Licensing Committee the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, as persons claiming under the transferors, were enforcing a right in respect of the property against the appellants as persons claiming under the transferee, and could be enjoined at the appellant's instance from so doing, but in their Lordships' view there has been no enforcement within the meaning of the section of any right against the appellants.

Their Lordships will accordingly humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal be dismissed. Separate printed cases were presented on behalf of the respondents, the Dantmara Tea Company, Limited, and the respondents, the Chandranagar Tea Company, Limited, who claimed to have acquired an interest in the estate, and were separately represented at their Lordships' bar, but the appellants will pay only one set of costs to the respondents.

a.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Callingham Ormond & Maddox.

Solicitors for Respondents Nos. 1 and 7:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Appeal from the Patna High Court

October 10, 1939

LORD ROMER, SIR GEORGE RANKIN AND
MR. M. R. JAYAKAR.

CHANDAN MULL INDRA KUMAR
AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

CHIMAN LAL GIRDHAR DAS PAREKH
AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), O. XXVI, rr. 9, 10—Commissioner's report—Principles to be adopted in dealing with—Practice—Privy Council—Relief claimed solely on ground that defendant worked coal under particular portion of land—Allegation failing—Defendant found to have taken coal from different portion—Plaint not amended to include relief in this respect—Claim cannot be allowed in appeal to Privy Council.

The principle to be adopted in dealing with the Commissioner's report is that there should be no interference with the result of a long and careful local investigation except upon clearly defined and sufficient grounds. It is not safe for a Court to act as an expert and to overrule the elaborate report of a Commissioner whose integrity and carefulness are unquestioned, whose careful and laborious execution of his task is proved by his report, and who has not blindly adopted the assertions of either party. Ranee Surut Soondree Debea v. Baboo Prosonno Coomar Tagore (1), referred to. [p. 222, col. 2.]

Where the plaintiff has only alleged in his plaint that the defendant had worked some coal under land comprised in plaintiff's underlease in a particular direction, and has claimed relief solely on this ground but has failed to prove the allegations, and it has been found that the defendants had taken coal to a small extent from under land in different direction and no application to amend the plaint was however made at any stage of the proceedings so as to include relief in respect of such working, the plaintiff cannot be heard to claim such relief in appeal to the Privy Council.

Messrs. L. L. Cohen, K. C. and W. W. K. Page, for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. M. Dunne, K. C. and J. M. Pringle, for the Respondents.

Lord Romer.—This is an appeal from a judgment and decree of the High Court of Judicature at Patna, dated April 1, 1937, which reversed a judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge of Dhanbad dated February 21, 1933, and dismissed the appellants' suit.

The question for decision is whether the appellants or some of them are entitled to recover damages from the respondent by reason of the respondents having cut and removed coal under a certain area of land which will be described later.

The appellants' claim to the coal in question is founded upon a lease or rather a sub-lease dated July 17, 1908 (hereinafter called the sub-lease) whereby there was demised to the Phularitand Coal Company, Limited (hereafter called the Phularitand Company) coal under the land described in the 3rd Schedule thereunder written and also delineated and described in the map or plan thereto annexed and thereon coloured blue. Amongst the land described in the 3rd Schedule was land situate in the Mauza Ganeshpur and described therein as being bounded on the north by the Mauzas Buddora and Kenduadhi. On the plan there is shown lying between what is marked as Ganeshpur on the south and what is marked as Kenduadhi on the north a streamlet or jore. The plan would seem to indicate that no part of this jore was situate in Ganeshpur inasmuch as it is not coloured blue thereon. So far as the plan is concerned, therefore the northern boundary of that part of Ganeshpur which abuts on Kenduadhi is indicated as being the southern bank of the jore. The blue colour on the plan extends to that bank but no further.

In the month of March, 1926, the Phularitand Company went into voluntary liquidation with a view to effecting an amalgamation with the Baraboni Coal Concern, Limited (hereinafter called the Baraboni Company) by means of a sale to them of all its assets. On June 30, 1927, accordingly by an agreement of that date the liquidators of the Phularitand Company agreed to sell to the Baraboni Company as from April 1, 1926, the whole of the assets of the Phularitand Company. According to this agreement the liquidators were to retain possession of the assets until completion of the sale which did not take place until much later. It is alleged, however, by the appellants that the Baraboni Company was in fact put into possession of the assets upon April 1, 1926.

On January 29, 1928, the Baraboni Company who are the appellants No. 2 discovered that the respondents who were leaseholders of the coal under the western part of Kenduadhi were or had been working a seam of the coal under the jore. In the belief that for the reasons hereinafter stated such coal was included in the sub-lease they in conjunction with the appellant No. 1 Chandan Mull Indra Kumar instituted on August 29, 1930, the present suit against the respondents claiming a declaration of title, an injunction, and damages. The appellant last mentioned had in the year 1928 purchased some of the assets of the Baraboni Company and was under the impression that his purchase included the coal under Ganeshpur. In this he was mistaken. It is now conceded, that he had no interest in that coal and he need not be further considered. Nor at the date of the institution of the suit had the Baraboni Company any property in the coal inasmuch as their purchase of the assets of the Phularitand Company had not been then completed. They based their claim to relief, however, upon their alleged possession of the demised coal since April 1, 1926, and merely brought in the Phularitand Company as formal defendants. But by order dated August 12, 1932, the Phularitand Company were struck out as defendants and added as plaintiffs and are now the appellants No. 3.

In view of what has been stated about the plan attached to the sub-lease, it would not appear at first sight that the appellants Nos. 2 and 3 could have any right to complain of the working by the respondents of coal under the jore. Their claim to do so, however, was set out in their plaint founded upon the following allegations. They said in effect that the true boundary between Mauza Ganeshpur on the south and Mauza Kenduadhi on the north was the jore as shown on the Revenue Survey map of 1862; that the said jore had since then gradually shifted its course towards the south with the result that it was now wholly within the boundaries of Mauza Ganeshpur; that the respondents had no right to any coal lying to the south of the old jore as depicted in the Revenue Survey map; that the coal lying under the strip of land described in Sch. B to the plaint was, therefore, the property of the appellants; and they claimed a declaration to that effect. Such Schedule so far as material was as follows:

Boundary of the disputed strip of land as referred to hereinbefore.
North. By the jore (streamlet) as it is existing in the Revenue Survey map to the midland (sic).
South. By the present jore (streamlet.)

It is to be observed that in this Schedule the northern boundary of the coal claimed by the appellants is the "midland" (which is no doubt a misprint for the "midline") of the jore as shown on the Revenue Survey map; whereas in the body of the plaint it is merely alleged that the respondents have no right to the coal lying to the south of the jore. But however this may be, their Lordships are satisfied on a careful examination of the map that the boundary line between the two mauzas in question is therein shown to be the south bank of the jore. A similar conclusion was come to by the learned Pleader and Commissioner Hem Chandra Roy whose position in the matter will be stated hereafter. In the course of giving evidence at the trial of the suit he said: "According to the Revenue Survey map the jore is within the limits of Mauza Kenduadhi." No reference is made in the plaint to the fact that on the map annexed to the sub-lease the jore purports to be shown and is not coloured blue. Now it might be contended that the jore there shown was intended to be the jore in the position it occupied at the date of the sub-lease; in which case, in order to establish their right to the coal under the jore in the position it occupied at the time of the respondents alleged wrongful workings, the appellants would have had to prove a shifting of the jore's position since 1908. It seems, however, far more probable that the plan merely intended to record the fact that the northern boundary of Ganeshpur was the northern boundary of the coal demised and that such boundary was the southern bank of the jore as it had been shown to be on the Revenue Survey map, and was in no way concerned with the question whether the jore had altered its position since 1862.

A written statement was filed by the respondent No. 2 in which a great number of defences were raised. Of these the only one that need be referred to is the allegation that the jore in the position it then occupied was the true boundary between Ganeshpur and Kenduadhi and that if that position differed from the one shown on the Revenue Survey map, the Revenue Survey map was wrong.

On July 24, 1931, the first two appellants (the then plaintiffs) petitioned the Court for the appointment of a Commissioner with directions to him (amongst other things) (a) to prepare a map of the locality (b) to find out the intermediate boundary line between the plaintiffs' land and that of the defendants' by reference to the Revenue Survey map and title deeds of the parties (if necessary) (c) to ascertain the encroachment, if any, made by the defendants on the plaintiffs' land with reference to such intermediate boundary line, as also the quantity of coal cut therefrom. This petition was successful and on August 5, 1931, Babu Hem Chandra Roy, Pleader, to whom reference has already been made, was appointed Commissioner for the purposes above-mentioned.

The Commissioner in due course made a careful survey of the locus in quo and embodied the result of such survey in a map on the scale of 16 inches to the mile. On this map he indicated the then position of the jore and also its position as indicated on the Revenue Survey map of 1862. He found himself able to ascertain the latter position (as he explained to the Court in his first report of September 14, 1931) in the following way: He was in possession of the Revenue Survey map and of the Revenue Survey field book. On that map were indicated two tri-junction pillars marked U and O and the Commissioner was satisfied that these corresponded practically with the two survey stations on his own map marked 1 and 20. Now the position of what may be called the Revenue Survey jore so ascertained by the Commissioner and indicated on his own map by a red line is a substantial distance to the north of the present position of the jore. It is plain, therefore, that any working of the coal to the south of that red line was a wrongful act on the part of the respondents unless (1) the Commissioner was wrong in his identification of his survey points 1 and 20 with the points U and O on the Revenue Survey map or (2) the position of the jore in 1862 was not accurately shown on the Revenue Survey map.

At the date of his first report the workings of the respondents to the south of the position of the Revenue jore as shown on his map had long since been discontinued and the site of those workings was full of water and could not be surveyed by him. The mine was accordingly pumped dry by the appellants at a considerable cost and the Commissioner then made an inspection of the workings. The result of his inspection was embodied in a further report dated April 16, 1932, and illustrated on a second map. He calculated that 15,753 tons of coal had been removed by the respondents to the south of the Revenue jore as shown upon his first map. It would appear from this second report of the Commissioner that the appellants had changed their views as to the way in which the position of the Revenue jore had shifted to the south. They no longer contended that the jore had gradually shifted its course but "that the present jore is nothing but a diverted course caused by the colliery proprietors and the village cultivators only during the recent years."

It was in these circumstances that this suit came on for hearing before the Subordinate Judge of Dhanbad in the month of August 1932. A great number of issues had been framed for trial of which the only ones material for the present purpose were substantially these:

"(9) What is the correct intermediary boundary between Mauza Ganeshpur and Kenduadhi? (10) Is the property described in Sch. B of the plaint included within the property described in Sch. A of the plaint? (i. e., the property described in the underlease). (12) Have the defendants wrongfully extracted the plaintiffs' coal, and if so, what is the quantity?"

At the trial the appellants sought to discredit the accuracy of the Commissioner's maps particularly in so far as they indicated the position of the jore as shown on the Revenue Survey map. They contended (amongst other things) that the Commissioner was wrong in thinking that the survey points 1 and 20 on his first map corresponded to the points O and O on the Revenue Survey map. If they were right in this contention it is obvious that the position of the Revenue jore as shown on the Commissioner's map could not be relied upon. The learned trial Judge in his judgment of February 21, 1933, considered this as well as the other objections urged by the appellants against the accuracy of the Commissioner's maps and reports in great detail and with the greatest care. The Commissioner had himself given evidence at the trial and the learned Judge made an able and exhaustive analysis of that evidence and of the evidence of other witnesses. In the result, he found that the intermediate boundary between Kenduadhi and Ganeshpur and therefore the boundary between the coal of the appellants and the respondents was the Revenue jore as depicted on the Commissioner's maps. He accepted the Commissioner's findings as to the amount of coal extracted and decreed to the respondents damages at the rate of Re. 1-14-0 per ton of such coal.

The learned Judge does not appear to have considered the question whether the Revenue Survey of 1862 could itself be relied upon as showing accurately the position of the jore at that time.

The respondents thereupon appealed to the High Court at Patna where it came on for hearing before Sir Courtney-Terrell, C.J. and James, J. In the result, the appeal was allowed.

The Chief Justice thought that the sub-lease indicated quite clearly that the northern boundary of the present appellant's coal was the southern bank of the jore as it existed in 1903, and that as there was no evidence that the jore had shifted its position since that time, the suit should have been dismissed. He thought that it was quite immaterial what was the boundary between Kenduadhi and Ganeshpur for the purpose of the Revenue Survey of 1862.

Their Lordships find themselves unable to regard this as a satisfactory solution of the question in dispute. In their opinion the sub-lease included the coal under Ganeshpur up to the true northern boundary of that mouza as fixed by the Revenue Survey—that is to say up to the southern bank of the jore in the position that it occupied at the date of the Revenue Survey. The only question is whether that position was the same as the position that the jore now occupies. That was the view of the matter taken by James, J. He pointed out that no witness had deposed to any alteration having taken place in the course of the jore. He also gave his reasons for thinking that no such change as was alleged by the appellants could have taken place in that district without a convulsion of nature. In those circumstances he said there were two alternatives neither of which he thought impossible (1) that the Commissioner was unable to find the fixed points of the Survey of 1862 or (2) that the boundary was incorrectly plotted in that Survey. The first of these two alternatives had been rejected, and in their Lordships' opinion, rightly rejected, by the Subordinate Judge. He had said:

"It has been laid down that interference with the result of a long and careful local investigation except upon clearly defined and sufficient grounds is to be deprecated. It is not safe for a Court to act as an expert and to overrule the elaborate report of a Commissioner whose integrity and carefulness are unquestioned, whose careful and laborious execution of his task was proved by his report and who had not blindly adopted the assertions of either party."

This, in their Lordships' judgment, is a correct statement of the principle to be adopted in dealing with the Commissioner's report. It is substantially the principle already laid down by this Board in the case of Ranee Surut Soondree Debea v. Baboo Prosonno Coomar Tagore (1).

Nor indeed did James, J. proceed upon the first of the two alternatives propounded by him. He proceeded exclusively upon the second and did so in these terms:

"It appears to me clear from examining the Revenue Survey Map that the delineation of the course of the nala shown therein is to be regarded with suspicion. The work of the Revenue Survey so far as it consisted of triangulation was certainly of the first class; but we are here concerned not with the question of whether the traverse survey then made was correct, but of whether the Amin who plotted the boundaries, working from the traverse lines, surveyed them correctly. The map is on a small scale; but it would, on the face of it, appear that the Amin did not survey the boundary at all, but merely sketched it in by hand.....I do not consider that it can be held to be proved that the nala ever flowed elsewhere in its present position."

He then adverted to the facts that in his survey of the respondent's workings the Commissioner had found that they had extended slightly beyond the southern bank of the jore. This encroachment the learned Judge considered to be quite negligible and one that need not be taken into account.

(1) 13 M I A 607 at p. 617; 6 B L R 677; 15 W R 20; 2 Buth. 393; 2 Sar. 633 (P O).

With this judgment of James, J. their Lordships find themselves in substantial agreement.

In the first place there is no single witness who deposes to a shifting of the position of the jore. On the contrary: the only four witnesses who dealt with that question all asserted quite definitely that the jore had never shifted its position during the time that they had known it. They were giving their evidence in the year 1932 and seem to have been familiar with the neighbourhood for about 20, 28, 14 and 16 years, respectively. It is inconceivable that, if the jore had gradually shifted its position as stated in the appellants' plaint, or had been suddenly diverted by some colliery proprietors or village cultivators in recent years as they stated, to the Commissioner, these four witnesses should have been ignorant of the facts. The truth of the matter would seem to be that the idea of this shifting of the jore first occurred to the appellants in the year 1927, when the same Commissioner, in making a survey of the present position of the jore for the purpose of litigation concerning another colliery situate to the east of the appellants' colliery, had discovered that the position of the jore as delineated on the Revenue Survey map was to the north of its present position. It is plain that the appellants' contention was not based upon any evidence but solely upon the map that the Commissioner prepared in 1927. The appellants in other words are relying simply and solely upon the position of the jore being accurately delineated in the Revenue Survey map.

In their Lordships' opinion the map cannot be trusted in this respect. If this map be accurate, the jore must have shifted its position considerably since 1862. There is, however, no evidence to show that any change of position of a stream was either probable or even possible in that locality: and there is the oral evidence, to which reference has already been made, that no such change as alleged has taken place during recent years. There cannot, therefore, have been any gradual change of the stream or any change made in recent times by any cultivator or colliery owner and no other kind of change has been suggested by the appellants. It appears, moreover, from the evidence of the Commissioner given at the trial that the revenue field book does not contain the offsets of the line of the jore. It is therefore at least possible, and in view of all the circumstances of this case, it seems to their Lordships highly probable that the Amin did not in 1862 survey the position of the jore at all, but in the words of James, J. merely "sketched" it in.

This being so, the appellants have failed to discharge the onus that lies upon them of showing that the respondents have worked coal comprised in the appellants' underlease. It is true that the Commissioner's survey of the respondents' workings indicates that to a small extent the respondents have taken coal from under land lying to the south of the jore. But no reference to any such working is to be found in the appellants' plaint. All that they alleged was that the respondents had worked some coal under the land described in Sch. B to the plaint, and it was only in respect of the coal under that land that they sought a declaration of title and damages. Now the land described in Sch. B did not extend further south than the jore. No application to amend, however, was made at any stage of the proceedings, and in their Lordships' opinion it would be quite wrong to give to the appellants any relief in respect of the respondents' comparatively small workings to the south of the jore. Had the appellants been correctly informed as to the true northern boundary of the coal comprised in their sub-lease, this lengthy and very expensive litigation would never have been undertaken by them. They ought not to be allowed to avail themselves of the fact that in the course of their unsuccessful endeavour to establish their title to the coal under the land comprised in Sch. B, they have discovered that a small quantity of coal to the value of little more than Rs. 2,000 has been extracted by the respondents to the south of that land. They did not, in their plaint, claim any relief in respect of such coal and they cannot be heard to claim it now.

For these reasons their Lordships are of opinion and they will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal should be dismissed. The respondents' costs of the appeal must be paid by the appellants.

s. Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. Hy. S. L. Polak & Co.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURTCriminal Reference Nos. 477 and 478
of 1939

July 7, 1939

MULLA, J.

B. SOHAN LAL—APPLICANT

*versus*M. MUBARAK ALI KHAN—OPPOSITE PARTY*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 197*
—Member of non-City Municipality, whether can claim protection of s. 197.

A member of a non-City Municipal Board is removable by the Commissioner under s. 40, U. P. Municipalities Act, and hence cannot be described as a person not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Government or some higher authority. He cannot, therefore, claim protection of s. 197, Criminal Procedure Code. At the stage when the Magistrate has to decide whether he can take cognizance of the offence or not, the question whether the offence with which the Municipal Commissioner is charged is one for which the Commissioner would or would not eventually have the power to remove him does not arise at all.

Cr. Ref. made by the Additional Sessions Judge, Aligarh at Etah, dated May 10, 1939.
Mr. B. S. Darbari, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Order.—These are two connected references by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Aligarh at Etah which give rise to the same question of law for decision and can therefore be conveniently disposed of together. The facts out of which the question of law arises may briefly be stated as follows: One Babu Sohan Lal in whose behalf the reference has been made, is a member of the Municipal Board of Jalesar. The Chairman of that Board is one Mr. Mubarak Ali Khan. It appears that in his capacity as a Municipal Commissioner, Babu Sohan Lal was entrusted with certain public moneys. The Chairman has made two separate complaints against him for having dishonestly misappropriated these moneys and he is charged under s. 409, Indian Penal Code, because he is a public servant as defined by s. 21, Indian Penal Code. The Magistrate before whom the complaints were made took cognizance of the two offences and issued summonses to Babu Sohan Lal. In both cases an objection was taken on behalf of Babu Sohan Lal that in view of s. 197, Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate was not authorized to take cognizance of the offences. It was contended in each case that Babu Sohan Lal was a public servant who was not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of the Local Government and as he was accused of an offence alleged to have been committed by him while acting in the discharge of his official duty, no Court could take cognizance of such an offence except with the previous sanction of the Local Government. It is admitted that no sanction of the Local Government has been obtained in this case. When the Magistrate took cognizance of the case, Babu Sohan Lal made an application in revision to the learned Additional Sessions Judge who has made these references. The learned Judge has accepted the contention on behalf of Babu Sohan Lal and has consequently recommended that the Magistrate's order summoning Babu Sohan Lal in each case should be quashed.

Upon a careful consideration of the facts, I find that I am unable to agree with the view taken by the learned Additional Sessions Judge. The decision obviously turns upon the interpretation of the words "not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Government" contained in s. 197, Criminal Procedure Code. The simple point is whether this description rightly applies to Babu Sohan Lal so that he can claim the protection afforded by s. 197, Criminal Procedure Code. In order to decide this point, reference must be made to s. 40, U. P. Municipalities Act, which provides for the removal of a Municipal Commissioner. That section draws a clear distinction between City Municipalities and non-City Municipalities. In the case of City Municipalities, the Local Government alone has power of removing a Municipal Commissioner. In other cases even the Commissioner can remove a Municipal Commissioner under s. 40 for any one of the reasons mentioned therein. Now the Municipality of Jalesar of which Babu Sohan Lal is a Commissioner is admittedly a non-City Municipality so that the Commissioner has the power of removal in respect of the Commissioners of that Municipality under s. 40, U. P. Municipalities Act. It necessarily follows that member of the Jalesar Municipal Board who is removable by the Commissioner under s. 40, U. P. Municipalities Act cannot be described as a person not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Government or some higher authority. The learned Additional Sessions Judge has given a rather curious reason for arriving at the finding that Babu Sohan Lal is a person not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Govt. or some higher authority. The reason is that the offence of criminal breach of trust with which he is charged is not an offence for which the Commissioner can remove any member of the Jalesar Municipal Board. This argument is obviously unsound. At this stage when the Magistrate has to decide whether he can take cognizance of the offence or not, the question whether the offence with which Babu Sohan Lal is charged is one for which the Commissioner would or would not eventually have the power to remove him does not arise at all. It is only when Babu Sohan Lal is convicted of the offence with which he is charged that the question of his removal can possibly arise. At this stage all that the Court is concerned with is the interpretation of the words "not removable from his office save by or with the sanction of a Local Govt. or some higher authority." For the reasons which I have already given, it is perfectly clear that Babu Sohan Lal does not fulfil that description and he cannot therefore claim any protection under s. 197, Criminal P. O. The result, therefore, is that I reject the reference made by the learned Additional Sessions Judge.

S. Reference rejected.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 168 of 1937

March 22, 1939

BHAUMONT, C. J.

BASAPPA CHANBASAPPA CHEKKI

AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS Nos. 1 to 3—

APPELLANTS

versus

HANMAPPA RAMAPPA MANAUR—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 64, O. XXXVIII, r. 10—Contract of sale before attachment of property before judgment—Subsequent conveyance if prevails over attachment—Attachment—Before judgment—Provisional order coming for being made absolute—Court directing defendant to furnish security, and on failure, property would be attached—Effect of.

Section 64 and O. XXXVIII, r. 10, Civil P. O., must be read together. Section 64 applies to an effective attachment, and under O. XXXVIII, r. 10, attachment before judgment is not effective as against rights subsisting at the date of the attachment. Hence a conveyance of a property, executed after its attachment before judgment by a creditor, in pursuance of a contract dated before the attachment, should prevail over the attachment. 34 Ind. Cas. 953 (2), approved.

Where at the time when the provisional order for attachment before judgment has come before the Court for being made absolute, the Court directs the defendant to give security and says "failing which the property will be attached," all that the Court means is that the attachment on the property will be continued, that is to say, the Rule will be made absolute unless the security is furnished within time allowed in which case the attachment will be discontinued.

S. A. from the decision of the Assistant Judge, Dharwar, in Appeal No. 208 of 1935.

Mr. A. G. Desai, for Appellant (Defendant No. 1).

Messrs. G. P. Murdeshwar and R. A. Mundkar, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a second appeal from a decision of the Assistant Judge of Dharwar. The facts giving rise to the suit are these. On May 27, 1921, defendants Nos. 1 to 3 agreed to sell five survey numbers to the plaintiff. That sale was carried out by a conveyance on September 26, 1922, but in the meantime, namely on September 6, 1922, one Sitaram commenced a suit against the defendants for a sum of money and obtained an order for attachment before judgment of the property, or part of the property included in the plaintiff's sale. On November 8, 1922, when the provisional order for attachment, which Sitaram had obtained, came up to be made absolute, the Court refused to make the Rule absolute and cancelled the attachment. Sitaram appealed against that order, and on March 1, 1923, an order was made by the then District Judge of Dharwar, the effect of which is said to be to restore the attachment. The true construction of that order is one of the questions with which I have to deal. On April 4, 1923, the property was attached, and subsequently Sitaram got a decree against the defendants, and under that decree the attached property was sold by the Court in execution, and Sitaram purchased with the leave of the Court for Rs. 1,581. That sum was applied in discharge of Sitaram's debt, and the balance of Rs. 331 was paid to the plaintiff, and on October 18, 1930, an order was made in execution giving possession to Sitaram and ousting the plaintiff from possession. The plaintiff's case in this suit therefore is that he got no title to the property, which was subsequently sold to Sitaram, and claims damages against the vendors for breach of their covenants of title implied under s. 55 (1) (a) and (2), T. P. Act.

Two points are taken on this appeal. The first is that the order of March 1, 1923, did not have the effect of restoring Sitaram's attachment but created a new attachment which was after the date of the sale to the plaintiff. The order is not very happily worded. It states that the appellant's Pleader is content if the respondent gives security for Rs. 4,000, and the learned Judge says: "This seems reasonable. I order the respondent to give security within fifteen days, failing which, the property will be attached." It is obvious that that order is not correctly expressed. The learned Judge had no power to order the respondents to give security. What he was really doing was providing that the attachment should continue unless the respondents gave security. He was giving them an option, and I think when he directs them to give security and says "failing which the property will be attached," all that he means is that the attachment on the property will be continued, that is to say, the Rule will be made absolute unless within fifteen days the security is furnished, in which case, the attachment will be discontinued. That seems to me to be the effect of the order, and that is the view which is taken in both the lower Courts.

The second point taken has undoubtedly more substance in it. It is argued that, in point of fact, the plaintiff got a perfectly good title from the vendors, and therefore they are not liable for breach of their covenants for title, and reliance is placed on O. XXXVIII, r. 10, Civil P. C., which says that attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment of persons not parties to the suit. Now, the plaintiff was not a party to Sitaram's suit, and, undoubtedly, before Sitaram obtained attachment before judgment, the plaintiff had acquired a right under the contract of sale. It is true that a contract for sale in India does not, as in England, confer any equitable estate on the purchaser, but undoubtedly the purchaser has a right to have the contract carried out, and that right is not merely, as Mr. Murdeshwar argued, a right to sue for specific performance. It is not necessary to sue for specific performance, if the vendor is willing to carry out his obligation, and I think undoubtedly the plaintiff had a right to require the vendors to carry out their contract, and as it has been proved that the plaintiff had no notice of the attachment, he would be entitled to pay his purchase money to the vendors. Mr. Murdeshwar argues that that is inconsistent with s. 64, Civil P. C., which provides that where attachment has been made, any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein shall be void. But one must read s. 64 and O. XXXVIII, r. 10 together. Section 64 applies, I think, to an effective attachment, and under O. XXXVIII, r. 10, attachment before judgment is not effective as against rights subsisting at the date of the attachment. Therefore, I think, there is a good deal of force in the contention of the present appellant that the plaintiff did get a good title. Mr. Murdeshwar relies on Taraknath Mukherji v. Sanatkumar Mukherji (1), but that case is opposed to an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court in Madan v. Rebati (2), in which the Court held that a conveyance of a property, executed after its attachment before judgment by a creditor, in pursuance of a contract dated before the attachment, should prevail over the attachment. I think that decision is right, and I prefer it to the later decision of the Calcutta High Court, which I must confess I have some difficulty in understanding.

The question then arises whether the appellant is entitled to take this point now. It was not apparently taken in either of the lower Courts, but, apart from that, the point ought to have been taken at the time when the plaintiff was dispossessed. The plaintiff was dispossessed in execution proceedings at the instance of Sitaram, and the present appellant as judgment-debtor was a party to those proceedings, though he did not put in an appearance. In those proceedings, to which the appellant was a party, the Judge held, rightly or wrongly that the plaintiff was not entitled to retain the property as against Sitaram, and it seems to me that the appellant is not entitled to dispute that finding. It is res judicata, the principle of which, it is well-settled, applies in execution proceedings. If the appellant is not entitled to affirm that the plaintiff got a good title against Sitaram, then I think he has no answer to the plaintiff's claim for damages for breach of the covenants for title. The appeal, therefore, fails and must be dismissed with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 57 C 274; 122 Ind. Cas. 637; A I R 1929 Cal. 494; 33 C W N 205; Ind. Rul. (1930) Cal. 269.
(2) 23 C L J 115; 34 Ind. Cas. 953; A I R 1916 Cal. 937; 21 C W N 158.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 110 of 1933

November 8, 1938

ADDISON AND RAM LALL, JJ.

Sheikh NOOR AHMAD—PLAINTIFF

versus

Sayed MAHMUD ALI—DEFENDANT

Stamp Act (II of 1899), Art. 35 (a) (i), (viii)—Lease of house on monthly rental—Term not fixed—Tenancy terminable on month's notice—Lease held does not fall under Art. 35 (a) (i) but under (viii)—"Lease," definition of, in Stamp Act is wider than that given in Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 105.

A lease may be from month to month and yet be for an indefinite period. The language of the Stamp Act is perfectly clear and it is only when a term of less than 12 months' duration is specified that a lease can be said to purport to be for such a period and therefore chargeable as such. Where no term is fixed, the document is ex facie one for an indefinite period.

Even if a document is such that it could not be deemed to be a lease within the meaning of s. 105, T. P. Act, it would still come within the Stamp Act because the definition of "lease" in the Stamp Act is wider and more comprehensive than the definition of it in the T. P. Act. The two Acts are not complementary of each other and where the language employed in one Act is perfectly clear, the Courts should not go to another Act for interpreting the term used in that Act.

A lease of a certain house was granted on a monthly rental of Rs. 30. The instrument did not fix a term but it was stated that either party could terminate the tenancy on giving one month's notice:

Held, that the lease was one which did not purport to be for a definite term. It did not therefore fall under Art. 35 (a) (i) but under (viii) of Stamp Act. 51 Ind. Cas. 221 (1), explained and not approved.

L. P. A. filed by Collector of Delhi against an order passed by Mr. Justice Skemp, J. in C. R. No. 28 of 1937, dated April 25, 1938.

Mr. M. Sleem, Advocate-General, for the Collector, Delhi.

Mr. Azim Ullah, for the Plaintiff.

Ram Lall, J.—A lease of a certain house in Delhi was granted on a monthly rental of Rs. 30. The instrument did not fix a term but it was stated that either party could terminate the tenancy on giving one month's notice. In a suit for rent the above-mentioned document was produced and the Small Cause Court Judge who was trying the case, holding that it was a lease for a term of less than one year and therefore chargeable under Art. 35 (a) (i) of Sch. I, Stamp Act, charged a duty of Rs. 3 and a penalty of Rs. 30 before admitting it into evidence. The Chief Revenue Authority, Delhi, made a reference to the High Court under s. 61 (1), Stamp Act, urging that the instrument in question was chargeable under Art. 35 (a) (viii), together with penalty, amounting in all to a sum of Rs. 247-8-0. This reference was disposed of by a learned Single Judge who by his order dated April 25, 1938, held that the proper section applicable was Art. 35 (a) (i) on the authority in A. M. Amolia v. Ibrahim Ishak (1), and on a consideration of the language of s. 105, T. P. Act. The Chief Revenue Authority has come up in appeal, urging again that the document is a lease for an indefinite period and chargeable to duty as such.

On a general consideration of the language of the Article it appears to me that the contention of the appellant must prevail. Section 35 (a) makes a distinction between leases which purport to be for a fixed term and those which do not specify a term. In the present case the tenant would continue in possession till his tenancy was put an end to by notice. Neither party could know beforehand at what moment of time such a notice would be given and so such a lease might continue for an indefinite number of years. It appears to me therefore that the present lease is clearly one which does not purport to be for a definite term.

Turning to decided cases, the only decision that supports the contrary contention is A. M. Amolia v. Ibrahim Ishak (1). In that case the agreement was to pay Rs. 60 per month as rent and to pay it at Rs. 2 per day. There was no stipulation for terminating the tenancy by notice and it might easily be construed that the intention of the parties was that after the first month the tenant would be allowed to hold over. It was held that such a contract would be deemed to be a lease from month to month in accordance with s. 105, T. P. Act, but without further discussion it was stated that the duty chargeable would be under s. 35 (a) (i), Stamp Act. This case appears to me to be decided rather on the admissions of Counsel as to whether or not a monthly tenancy existed and not on any consideration of the question whether the contract was one for a definite period or not. Mulla and Pratt, in their learned commentary on the Stamp Act (at p. 239, Edn. 3), point out that the failure of the Court in the Calcutta case to assess duty on a contract of lease for an indefinite period was "evidently an oversight."

In a Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court, reported as In the matter of Burmah Shell Oil Storage and Distri- buting Co., India, Ltd. (2), same railway land was given to an oil company and a monthly payment was to be charged for the use of this land. The company was to construct certain permanent structures and in case of breach of any of the conditions specified, the transaction could be cancelled by giving seven days' notice to the company and in any other case on three months' notice by either side. The lease in question expressly provided that no tenancy was being created. The question arose whether this document was a licensee or a lease and with what duty it was chargeable. It was held that it was a lease and further that the definition of 'lease' as contained in the Stamp Act was wider than that contained in the T. P. Act. It was held, therefore, that even if this document did not amount to a lease under s. 105, T. P. Act, it was nevertheless a lease for the purposes of the Stamp Act. Regarding the duty chargeable, it was held that the document was a lease which did not purport to be for a definite term. Though the Calcutta decision mentioned above was not specifically referred to, the conclusion arrived at by the Full Bench was contrary to that stated in the Calcutta case. In a very recent decision reported in Mangal Puri v. Baldeo Puri (3), the matter was more directly in issue and the Calcutta case referred to above (and on which the learned Single Judge mainly based his judgment) was specifically disapproved. In this case a lease had been granted with a stipulation, as in the present case under discussion, that the owner could get the house vacated by giving one month's notice. A Division Bench held that a monthly tenancy within the meaning of s. 105, T. P. Act, had been created but it did not follow that the document in question was a lease for less than one year. The learned Judges went on to say :

(1) 46 C 804; 51 Ind. Cas. 221; A I R 1919 Cal. 200; 23 O W N 398.

"A lease for less than one year means a lease for some specified period which is less than 12 months. In the present case the lease is for an indefinite period: in other words, it 'does not purport to be for any definite term.'"

Referring to s. 105, T. P. Act, the learned Single Judge observed that it would be anomalous if a lease which contained no clause as to notice, should be a lease from month to month, whereas a lease which contained a clause making the tenancy terminable by one month's notice should be a lease for an indefinite period. It appears (2) 55 A 674; 145 Ind. Cas. 674; A I R 1933 All. 735; 1933 A L J 749; 6 R A 145 (F B).

(3) A I R 1938 All. 301; 175 Ind. Cas. 313; I L R (1938) All. 481; 1938 A L J 324; 1938 R D 495; 10 R A 680; 1938 A L R 409.

to me that this argument does not touch the real question in issue. I am quite clear in my mind that a lease may be from month to month and yet be for an indefinite period. The language of the Stamp Act is perfectly clear and in my opinion it is only when a term of less than 12 months' duration is specified that a lease can be said to purport to be for such a period and therefore chargeable as such. Where no term is fixed, the document is ex facie one for an indefinite period. Further, as pointed out in the Full Bench decision of the Allahabad High Court referred to above, even if a document is such that it could not be deemed to be a lease within the meaning of s. 105, T. P. Act, it would still come within the Stamp Act because the definition of "lease" in the Stamp Act is wider and more comprehensive than the definition of it in the T. P. Act. The two Acts are not complementary of each other and where the language employed in one Act is perfectly clear, I can see no reason for going to another Act for interpreting the term used in that Act. For these reasons, I would accept this appeal, but having regard to all the circumstances of the case, I would make no order as to costs in the High Court. Learned Counsel for the respondent pointed out that the penalty which his client would have to pay was very heavy indeed, having regard to the subject-matter of the suit. While we may entertain sympathy for the respondent in this matter, it appears to me that we have no power either to reduce or to remit the penalty imposed and the only remedy lies in a representation to the Chief Revenue Authority.

Addison, J.—I concur.

D.

Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Application No. 142
of 1939

June 20, 1939

BROOMFIELD, AG. C. J. AND SHN, J.
KANAYALAL MOHANLAL GUJAR—ACCUSED
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 286—Agreement between purchaser and seller that commodity sold should be measured by measure produced by purchaser—No representation by purchaser that measure produced was standard one—Purchaser, if guilty under s. 286—"False measure," meaning of—Commission of offence under Bombay Weights and Measures Act, whether makes measure false within meaning of s. 266.

Where both purchaser and seller are well aware of the actual measure being used, there can be no question of fraudulent intent. It is only when the seller purports to sell according to a certain standard and sells below that standard, that he can be said to be guilty of fraud.

Where therefore it has been agreed between the seller and the purchaser that a certain commodity should be measured by a measure produced by the purchaser and purchaser has not represented in any way that the measure was the standard measure, the purchaser cannot be said to have fraudulent intent and cannot be convicted under s. 266, I. P. O. 43 Ind. Cas 433 (1), relied on.

The fact that an offence may have been committed under the Bombay Weights and Measures Act does not make the measures false within the meaning of s. 266, I. P. O. According to the ordinary use of language, if a measure is described as false, that means that it is something other than what it purports to be.

Cr. R. App. against the decision of the Sessions Judge, Poona.

Mr. V. N. Ohhatrapati, for the Accused.

Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar, Govt. Pleader, for the Crown.

Broomfield, Ag. C. J.—This is an application for revision by one Kanaylal Gujar against his conviction under s. 266, I. P. O. of the offence of being in possession of a false weight or measure known to be false with the intention that the same may be fraudulently used. The conviction was by the First Class Magistrate of Junnar, and it was confirmed on appeal by the Sessions Judge of Poona. The learned Advocate, who appears for the applicant, contends, in the first place, that the measures used in this case were not false within the meaning of s. 266 and, in the second place, that a fraudulent intention has not been established. The facts are very simple. The accused is a sowkar and he deals in hirda. He had purchased a quantity of about 16 maunds of hirda from one Savleram, and he got the hirda measured by means of two measures called adholis. The measurement was made by Savleram, the vendor himself, with the assistance of another person. The adholis are old measure and are not in accordance with the standard prescribed by the Weights and Measures Act (Bombay IV of 1932). The Patil of the village was present at the time, and he says that he warned the accused not to use these old measures, and that as the accused persisted in using them, when the measurement of the hirda was completed, he seized the adholis and handed them over to the Police. The view taken by the lower Courts was that the adholis in question must be regarded as false measures, because they are smaller than the adholi measures prescribed by the Weights and Measures Act. Because they are smaller, and the accused deliberately used these old measures, it has been held that he must have acted fraudulently. This finding has been arrived at in spite of the evidence making it clear that Savleram, the vendor, was himself using these measures and had consented that they should be used. In our opinion, the conviction of the accused for an offence under s. 266, I. P. O. cannot be sustained on these facts.

Under s. 12, Weights and Measures Act, it is provided that, subject to the provisions of s. 46 (with which we are not concerned), all dealings or contracts in any area in which the Act is in force shall be deemed to be had or made according to one of the standard weights or measures, and it shall not be lawful to use any other weight or measure in relation to any such dealing or contract. The section further provides that any dealing or contract, so far as it contravenes the provisions of the section, shall be void, unless it is proved that such dealing or contract was had or made without intention to contravene the said provisions. By s. 31 of the Act it is made a penal offence punishable with imprisonment or fine or both to use any weight or measure fraudulently. But s. 44 of the Act provides that no prosecution under the Act shall be instituted, except by or with the previous sanction of the Collector, or an officer specially empowered by the Collector, or by Govt. The Weights and Measures Act applies to the District of Poona, and it may be that the transaction between the parties was void under s. 12. Provided the use of the measures was fraudulent, the use would be an offence under s. 31 although, as I have said, prosecution under the Act would require sanction. But the fact that an offence may have been committed under the Weights and Measures Act, does not make the measures false within the meaning of s. 266. According to the ordinary use of language, if a measure is described as false, that means that it is something other than what it purports to be. In Ratanlal's Law of Crimes a passage is cited from Stokes' Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol. I, to the effect that the word 'false' in s. 264 and the following section means :

"different from the instrument, weight or measure, which the offender and the person defrauded have fixed upon expressly or by implication, with reference to their mutual dealings."

No suggestion has been made that the accused represented in any way that the adholis were of the standard measure. In fact the evidence makes it perfectly clear that he did nothing of the sort. We hold therefore that the measures were not false measures within the meaning of this section of the I. P. O. We are also not satisfied that there was any fraud. The vendor Savleram consented to the use of these measures. Whether he did so with reluctance or not does not, in our opinion, make any difference. In Emperor v. Harak Chand Marwari (1), Tudball, J. in dealing with a somewhat similar case under s. 266, observed as follows (p. 86*) :

"A necessary ingredient of an offence under s. 266 is fraudulent intent. One knows full well that the measures of weight and measures of length which are in use in this country in villages and towns differ considerably from the standard measures laid down by Govt. under Act II of 1889. Where both purchaser and seller are well aware of the actual measure being used, there can be no question of fraudulent intent. It is only when the seller purports to sell according to a certain standard and sells below that standard, that he can be said to be guilty of fraud."

In the present case it appears to have been agreed between the accused and Savleram that the hirda was to be measured by the adholis produced by the accused and we think it quite impossible to hold that under the circumstances the accused had a fraudulent intent. The conviction and sentence must be set aside. The fine must be refunded.

s.

Conviction set aside.

(1) 40 A 84; 43 Ind. Cas. 433; A I R 1918 All. 174; 19 Cr. L J 145.

* Page of 40 A.—[Ed.]

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 2 of 1938

April 12, 1938

VENKATARAMANA RAO, J.

S. V. SUBBA RAO—APPELLANT

versus

CALICUT CO-OPERATIVE

URBAN BANK, LTD.—RESPONDENT

Co-operative Societies Act (II of 1912), s. 51—Limitation—Award by Registrar—Enforcement by Civil Court other than High Court—Limitation applicable—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182.

By statute the award of the Registrar under s. 51 of the Co-operative Societies Act is given the same status as a decree of a Civil Court for the limited purpose of execution and the provisions of law relating to the enforcement of decrees of such Courts including the law of limitation applicable for such enforcement will apply by necessary implication. So when a question of limitation arises as to the enforcement of an award of the Registrar of the Co-operative Society, the Court before which the application for its enforcement is made will have to apply the Article applicable for the enforcement of the final decree of that Court. Where the execution is by a Civil Court, other than the High Court, the Article applicable is Art. 182, Lim. Act. 104 Ind. Cas. 808 (2), dissented from: [p. 231, col. 1.] (Case-law discussed.)

A. against the appellate order of the District Court, South Malabar, dated December 13, 1937.

Mr. N. R. Sesha Ayyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. Kuttikrishna Menon, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—The question raised in this appeal is as to the proper Article of the Lim. Act for an application for the enforcement of an award passed by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under s. 51 of the Act. The execution application in this case, out of which this appeal arises, was made in 1936 in respect of an award which was passed on July 15, 1931. The first application for enforcement of the award made to the District Munsif of Calicut was made in 1932 and between 1932 and 1936 there were other applications made for its enforcement. It is conceded that if Art. 182, Lim. Act applies, there is no bar of limitation. Both the lower Courts have taken the view that Art. 182 is applicable and held that the application is not barred by limitation. But it is contended by Mr. Sesha Ayyar that this view is wrong and that the Article applicable is Art. 181, Lim. Act. He places considerable reliance on the decision of Cornish, J. in Co-operative Credit Society v. Chinna-swami Udayar (1). With due respect, I am unable to agree with the said decision. Under s. 65, Co-operative Societies Act, the Local Govt. is empowered to make rules to carry out all or any of the purposes of the Act and one of such purposes is the enforcement of decisions or awards in proceedings before the Registrar of Co-operative Societies. The rule which has been enacted in pursuance of this section is r. 15, cl. 7. Clause 7 contains three sub-clauses providing three methods of enforcement and the sub-clause which is relevant for the purpose of the present discussion, is sub-cl. (c) which runs thus :

"On application to the Civil Court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the decision or award, that Court shall enforce the decision or award as if it were a final decree of the Court."

(1) 71 M L J 759; 167 Ind. Cas. 223; A I R 1937 Mad. 31; I L R (1937) Mad. 495; (1938) M W N 1198; 44 L W 720; 9 R M 437.

If therefore an application to enforce an award is made to a Civil Court, for the purpose of enforcement, the Legislature enacts that it should be treated as a final decree of that Court. Thus by statute the award of the Registrar under s. 51 of the Act is given the same status as a decree of a Civil Court for the limited purpose of execution and the provisions of law relating to the enforcement of decrees of such Courts including the law of limitation applicable for such enforcement will apply by necessary implication. So when a question of limitation arises as to the enforcement of an award of the Registrar of the Co-operative Society, the Court before which the application for its enforcement is made will have to apply the Article applicable for the enforcement of the final decree of that Court. In this case the Article applicable for the enforcement of the final decree of the Court of the District Munsif of Calicut is Art. 182. Prima facie therefore the Article that should govern the present case is Art. 182. In Belvedere Jute Mills, Ltd. v. Hardwara Mull & Co. (2) a question arose as to the enforcement of an award under s. 15, Arbitration Act, where the language is almost similar. Section 15 runs thus :

"An award on a submission, on being filed in the Court in accordance with the foregoing provisions, shall (unless the Court remits it to the reconsideration of the arbitrators or umpire, or sets it aside) be enforceable as if it were a decree of the Court."

Rankin, C. J. and Mitter, J., held that Art. 181 would not apply to the case but the Article applicable was Art. 183, the Article applicable to the enforcement of the decree of the High Court. Rankin, C. J. in the course of the judgment remarked thus :

"If one looks at the question of limitation from the point of view of the different alternatives, there can be one inference only and that is that the words employed by the Legislature in the first subsec. of s. 15, Arbitration Act, were intended to go to the question of limitation as well as to the question of procedure."

This decision was followed in our High Court by the learned Chief Justice and King, J. in Hindu Religious Endowments Board, Madras v. Shirur Mutt (3). There the question arose whether Art. 181 or Art. 182 is to be applied in regard to the application for the enforcement of an order passed by the Hindu Religious Endowments Board under s. 70 (2) of the Act which ran thus :

"The Court shall on the application of the President of the Board... recover the amount as if a decree had been passed for the amount by the Court against the religious endowment concerned."

The learned Judges referred to Lakshmindra Tirta Swamiar v. Hindu Religious Endowments Board, Madras (4) where it was held that the words "as if a decree had been passed" attract to the order the whole procedure in execution and followed the ruling in Belvedere Jute Mills, Ltd. v. Hardwara Mull & Co. (2) and applied Art. 182. In my opinion the above decisions lay down the correct principle. I therefore hold that Art. 182, Sch. I, Lim. Act, would apply to the enforcement of an award passed by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under s. 51 of the Act by a Civil Court other than a High Court.

I shall now deal with the decisions relied on by Mr. Sesha Ayyar. The first case relied on by him is Co-operative Credit Society v. Chinnaaswami Udayar (1). On a perusal of the said decision, it looks as if it was assumed that Art. 181 applied to the case and the only question was whether the application was time-barred. This appears clear from the following observation of the learned Judge in that case :

"The only question in this appeal is whether the application is time-barred. Admittedly it is, if Art. 181 of the Lim. Act governs it. But the argument is that the application not being one under the Civil P. O., the Lim. Act has no application."

The learned Judge after overruling this contention held that the application being one under the Code, Art. 181 would apply and he purported to follow the decision in Sambasiva Mudaliar v. Panchanada Pillai (5) which is another decision relied on by Mr. Sesha Ayyar. That was a decision under s. 40, Revenue Recovery Act. The question there was what Article would apply for an application by a purchaser at a revenue auction sale for delivery of possession. The learned Judges applied Art. 178 of Act XV of 1877, corresponding to Art. 181 of the present Lim. Act and the decision turned on the language of s. 40, Revenue Recovery Act, which runs thus :

"Where notwithstanding such publication, any lawful purchaser of land may be resisted and prevented from obtaining possession of his purchased land, any Court of competent jurisdiction, on application and production of certificate of sale provided for by s. 38 shall cause the proper process to be

(2) 31 O W N 1087; 104 Ind. Cas. 808; A I R 1927 Cal. 853; 55 C 499.

(3) 58 M 760; 156 Ind. Cas. 747; A I R 1935 Mad. 217; 68 M L J 200; 41 L W 264; (1935) M W N 142; 8 E M 44.

(4) 56 M 712; 141 Ind Cas 799; A I R 1933 Mad. 305; 65 M L J 364; 37 L W 207; Ind. Rul. (1933) Mad. 162; (1933) M W N 213.

(5) 31 M 24; 17 M L J 441; 3 M L T 19.

issued for the purpose of putting such purchaser in possession in the same manner as if the purchased lands had been decreed to the purchaser by a decision of the Court."

It is with reference to this language the following observations were made :

"The section as we read it places the purchaser in the position of a decree-holder for the purposes of putting the machinery of the Court in motion in order that the certificate of sale granted by the revenue authority may be given effect to. It does not by implication make the law of limitation with reference to the execution of decrees or orders of Civil Courts applicable to proceedings under s. 40 of the Act."

But the language of r. 15, cl. 7 (c) given above is quite different. For the limited purpose of execution, an award is treated as a decree of the Court. On this ground the decision in Sambasiva Mudaliar v. Panchanada Pillai (5) is distinguishable as it may be possible to contend that the use of the words "the proper process to be issued" and "in the same manner" connote only the bare machinery of the Court for putting the purchaser in possession. The other cases relied on by Cornish, J., in his judgment seem to me to have no bearing on the actual point for decision before me, and I think it unnecessary to deal with them. Mr. Sessa Ayyar brought to my notice the decision in Raghavendra v. Industrial Bank, Gulegdud (6) where Beaumont, C. J. doubted whether the award of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act of 1925 would ever become a decree of a Civil Court within the meaning of Art. 182, Lim. Act, but left the question open. It may be pointed out that the wording of the rule which the learned Chief Justice was dealing is different from the rule in the present case. The question is not, if I may say so with respect, whether the award becomes a decree of the Civil Court but whether the law of limitation governing the execution of a decree of a Civil Court is made applicable by statute by necessary implication. Both the lower Courts took the view that the decision in Co-operative Credit Society v. Chinnaswami Udayar (1) would not apply in view of s. 57-B of the Act which runs thus :

"The Registrar or any person empowered by him in that behalf, shall be deemed, when exercising any powers under this Act for the recovery of any amount by the attachment and sale or by the sale without attachment of any property, or when passing any orders on any application made to him for such recovery or to take some step-in-aid of such recovery, to be a Civil Court for the purposes of Art. 182, Sch. I, Lim. Act, 1908."

(6) 38 Bom. L R 927; 165 Ind. Cas. 512; A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 396; 9 R B 147.

In terms this section would not be applicable to an application for the enforcement of an award in a Civil Court as provided in r. 15, cl. 7 (c), but the object underlying the section in my opinion establishes beyond doubt that the Legislature intended by necessary implication in enacting the said cl. (c) that Art. 182, Lim. Act would apply to applications made in pursuance thereof, because the award has to be treated by a Court as a decree of that Court. The object in enacting s. 57-B is to have one uniform rule of limitation for the enforcement of decrees of Civil Courts and the decrees and awards and orders of a Registrar of Co-operative Societies and whether they are enforced by a Registrar or a Civil Court. It would be anomalous to hold that an award when enforced by a Registrar would be governed by Art. 182 but when enforced by a Civil Court is governed by Art. 181. In the result, the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. Leave to appeal granted.

N.D.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Execution Second Appeal No. 124 of 1939

May 18, 1939

DIN MOHAMMAD, J.

FIRM JETHU MAL-HARI PARSHAD

—FORBES-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

TELU—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

Res judicata—Objection by judgment-debtor that he is governed by custom in matter of succession, allowed by executing Court but disallowed by Appellate Court—In appeal High Court not going into question of custom but reversing lower Appellate Court's decision on other grounds—Plea that judgment-debtor, is governed by custom, if res judicata in subsequent suit.

Executing Court allowed the objection by the judgment-debtor that he was governed by custom in the matter of succession. On appeal, that finding was reversed by the District Judge. On appeal to the High Court, the High Court declined to enter into the question of custom but on other points reversed the findings of the District Judge and restored those of the executing Court :

Held, that it could not be fairly argued that any part of the District Judge's judgment had been left intact so as to make the findings arrived at by him binding on the parties. Consequently, the plea that the judgment-debtor was governed by custom could be reargued in subsequent suit.

Ex. S. A. from an order of the District Judge, Ambala, dated October 27, 1938.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Messrs Tek Chand and Roop Chand, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—The sole question involved in this case is whether the contention raised by the judgment-debtor that he is governed by custom in the matter of succession to land can be re-agitated in view of a previous decision against him. It is common ground that on a similar objection raised by the judgment-debtor, Lala Ram Kanwar, Senior Subordinate Judge, found that the judgment-debtor being a member of a dominant agricultural tribe and an agriculturist himself was governed by custom. The decree-holder preferred an appeal against this order and the District Judge, Mr. Henry, reversed the decision of the executing Court and came to the conclusion that the judgment-debtor was governed by Hindu Law. Thereupon, the judgment-debtor presented an appeal to this Court which came on for hearing before Tek Chand, J. The learned Judge declined to go into the question of custom as no certificate, as required by s. 41, Punjab Courts Act, had been obtained by the appellant. He, however, reversed the decision of the District Judge on other grounds and restored that of the executing Court.

Counsel for the appellant contends that inasmuch as Tek Chand, J., had not disturbed the finding arrived at by the District Judge that the judgment-debtor was governed by Hindu Law, that finding remained intact despite the fact that his whole judgment had been reversed and that of the executing Court restored. Counsel for the respondent on the other hand urges that the order of the District Judge merged in the order of the High Court and inasmuch as the original decision was restored by the High Court, the finding of the executing Court that the judgment-debtor was governed by custom stood. Neither party has referred me to any authority on the matter and the case therefore is one of first impression. In my view it cannot be fairly argued that any part of the District Judge's judgment has been left intact so as to make the finding arrived at by him binding on the parties. As soon as Tek Chand, J. set aside the judgment of the District Judge and restored that of the executing Court, all the findings arrived at by the District Judge, whether specifically disturbed by this Court or not, disappeared, leaving the findings of the executing Court alone in the field and, as remarked above, the finding on the question of custom was in favour of the judgment-debtor. I accordingly hold that there has never been any previous decision against the judgmentdebtor on this matter and that there is consequently no force in the plea of res judicata raised by the appellant. I accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 1972 of 1937

September 13, 1939

ALLSOP, J.

RAM CHANDER—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

Mst. RURE KUNWAR—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 89—Suit against agent on basis of revocation of agency—Time, when begins to run

Under the Lim. Act, limitation begins to run when a cause of action accrues. It is obvious that it would be the right of the agent to claim that no cause of action on the basis of revocation could arise against him until the termination of his authority as an agent. In so far as the cause of action is the revocation of the agency, he could not be sued until he had received notice of such revocation. It follows, therefore, that the period of limitation would begin to run on that date and would extend for a period of 3 years.

S. A. from the decision of the Civil Judge, Meerut, dated August 10, 1937.

Mr. C. B. Agarwala, for the Appellant.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This second appeal arises out of a suit against an agent for the recovery of money collected by him on account of his principal. The only question that had been argued is whether the suit was barred by limitation. It is not denied that Art. 89 of Sch. I to the Lim. Act applies to this suit. The only question is when the period of limitation began to run. If it so began to run on March 17, 1933, when according to the Court below notice of revocation of the agency was served on the agent, then the suit is within time. On the other hand, if it began to run on the date when the letter containing the revocation was consigned to the post, then the suit is barred. Learned Counsel has relied upon s. 201, Contract Act. He has also referred to the provisions of s. 20, which, he argues, give the agent a right as though the agency continued but do not burden him with any liabilities. His point is that the agent's rights are secured by s. 20, but the rights of the principal are terminated when the revocation becomes binding upon him under the provisions of s. 4, Contract Act. I do not think that it could possibly have been the intention of the Legislature that an agent should be able to claim a right as such and at the same time repudiate liabilities. It is unnecessary to decide the question in this case because the principle to be applied is a very simple one. Obviously under the Lim. Act limitation begins to run when a cause of action accrues. It is obvious that it would be the right of the agent to claim that no cause of action on the basis of revocation could arise against him until the termination of his authority as an agent. In so far as the cause of action was the revocation of the agency, he could not be sued until he had received notice of such revocation. It follows, therefore, that the period of limitation would begin to run on that date and would extend for a period of 3 years. It is a finding of fact that the authority of the agent was terminated on March 17. There is no force in this appeal and I dismiss it with costs. Leave to appeal under the Letters Patent is refused.

8.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Appeal from the Calcutta High Court

October 30, 1939

LORD THANKERTON, LORD ROMER AND SIR

GEORGE RANKIN

JADUNATH ROY AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

PARAMESWAR MULLIOK AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS

Partition—Suit for—Mortgagee of undivided share who has purchased property in execution of his decree pending suit, if necessary party—Purchaser at execution sale under money decree and purchaser under mortgage decree, distinction—Rights of parties added after preliminary decree, if can be adjusted at time of final decree.

A partition necessarily affects the interest of a mortgagee of an undivided share, since after the partition his security is upon the divided share of the separate allotment. The mortgagee of an undivided share might be prejudiced if that share did not receive a proper allotment in severalty, and it is for the benefit of all other persons interested in the joint property that such a mortgagee should be bound by the allotment. Hence it will in general meet the case if he is allowed to attend and be heard at that stage at which the making of a proper allotment is effected. Mohindra Bhoosun v. Sohee Bhoosun (4) and Khetterpal Sritirutno v. Khelal Kristo Bhattacharjee (5), referred to. [p. 237, col. 1.]

While the purchaser at an execution sale under a mere money decree gets no more than the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor at the date of the sale, the purchaser under a mortgage decree gets the right, title and interest in the mortgaged subjects which the mortgagor had at the date of the mortgage and charged thereby. Buying the mortgaged property free from incumbrances he gets, as it is sometimes put, the title both of the mortgagee and of those interested in the equity of redemption. He is not a mere successor-in-interest of the owner of the equity of redemption at the date of the sale. [p. 237, col. 2.]

If the mortgagee has proceeded to a sale pending partition, the purchaser would become a necessary party to the partition suit.

A partition suit, in which a preliminary decree has been passed, is still a pending suit and the rights of the parties who are added after the preliminary decree, have to be adjusted at the time of the final decree [p. 236, col. 2.]

A mortgagee of an undivided share obtained a decree against B, the son of the deceased mortgagor and purchased the property on January 11, 1930, and the sale was confirmed on February 19, 1930. In the meanwhile a partition suit was brought on August 30, 1929, to which B his mother and an unmarried sister were made parties. On October 1, 1929, a preliminary decree for partition was passed declaring the share of B subject to the charge for maintenance and other expenses of his mother and sister. The mortgagee was neither made a party nor was any decision given as to mortgagee's rights, in the decree. The mortgagee applied by applications, one made before execution sale and other after the sale but before confirmation, to be made party to partition suit and on appeal from their rejection, the High Court directed that they should be made parties "as from April 12, 1930, on which date their application was rejected, the proceedings taken before the said date, being binding upon them just as much as they would be binding upon their predecessor-in-interest." The mortgagee thereupon applied to set aside the preliminary decree so far as it declared charges upon the property but this was rejected in view of the High Court's order. The mortgagee then applied for separate allotment of his share and the allotment was made without making any charge on the property. The High Court set aside this order on the ground that in view of the previous order of that Court the preliminary decree could not be altered or modified.

Held, that the mortgagee owing to his purchase of the property was a necessary party and the previous order of the High Court need not be construed as holding that after the execution sale the ladies had the same rights against the purchasers as they had had against B's interest in the equity of redemption. The ladies' interest in the equity of redemption equally with B's must be regarded as having passed to the mortgagee. At no time was it correct to treat the mortgagee as mere assignee of B's interest. Before the sale his interest was as mortgagee and was not represented in the suit. After the sale when he was made party, his interest as complete owner was before the Court—an interest which at no time had belonged to B. At no time was it correct or sufficient to regard B as mortgagee's "predecessor-in-title"; upon any question as between B and other persons claiming to be interested in the equity of redemption, a decision charging or limiting his interest had no bearing upon the rights of the mortgagee whether before the execution sale or afterwards. The property purchased by the mortgagee could not therefore be charged with the maintenance of B's mother and sister.

Messrs. L. P. E. Pugh, K. C. and W. Wallach, for the Appellants.

Sir George Rankin.—By three English mortgages executed in 1923 and 1924 one Bhuvan Mohan Mullick (a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga) mortgaged to appellant No. 1 and the father of the other four appellants his one-eighth share in certain immovable property. The capital sums secured amounted to Rs. 2,35,000. On April 24, 1925, he died intestate, leaving him surviving a widow Sm. Annabati Dassi, a minor son Biswanath and an unmarried daughter Sm. Parbati Dassi (also a married daughter who need not here be further mentioned). By the decree under appeal, which is dated January 28, 1937, it has been held by the High Court at Fort William in Bengal that the maintenance of the widow and unmarried daughter is a charge upon the interest of the mortgagees under the mortgages. This conclusion is prima facie opposed to the rights of the parties; indeed it does not in the end appear to have been doubted by the Courts in India that while the ladies would have a claim to a charge upon any property coming to Biswanath as heir to his father, the interest of the father's mortgagees was not such property and is not liable upon the death of the mortgagor to be burdened with the maintenance of his widow or daughter. In order to trace the steps by which a contrary result has been arrived at by the High Court, it will clearly be important to bear in mind throughout that the appellants' mortgages were all taken from Bhuvan Mohan in his lifetime and not from his son after his death.

The appellants brought a suit upon their mortgages in the High Court on June 7, 1926, impleading Biswanath. They obtained a preliminary decree on January 12, 1928, and a final decree for sale on January 21, 1929. On January 11, 1930, they purchased the mortgaged property at the execution sale and obtained a sale certificate on February 19, 1930, in respect thereof.

On August 30, 1929—some seven months after final decree and some five months before the execution sale—the partition suit, out of which the present appeal arises was brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, 24 Parganas. The one-eighth share which Bhuvan Mohan had mortgaged was his share in certain properties which had belonged to his grandfather Kunja Bihari Mullick. Kunja had died in 1849 leaving a will whereby, after giving certain pecuniary legacies, he directed that the residue of his estate should go in equal shares to his three sons and a grandson by a deceased son. His fourth son was Pulin Behari, who died intestate on December 28, 1919, leaving him surviving two sons, Bhuvan Mohan and another. Hence Bhuvan Mohan had a one-eighth share in a number of properties which had belonged to his grandfather and by the mortgages of 1923 and 1924 he had incumbered his share in some (not all) of these properties. The partition suit was brought by Murari Mohan, a son of Kunja's eldest son. Biswanath was impleaded as defendant No. 6, Annabali, his mother, and Parbati, his sister, were defendants Nos. 13 and 15, respectively. The appellants were not made parties to the suit. By a written statement filed on behalf of Biswanath, Parbati and the widow, it was submitted that Biswanath's one-eighth share should be allotted to him subject to the claim of his mother and sister for maintenance. On October 1, 1929, a preliminary decree for partition was pronounced declaring the share of Biswanath to be "one-eighth subject to the charge for maintenance and other expenses of his mother, defendant No. 13, and marriage expenses and maintenance of his unmarried sister, defendant No. 15." Neither in the pleadings nor in the decree was any mention made of the mortgages to the appellants nor was any decision given with respect to the appellants' rights. The direction to the Commissioners of partition was a general direction to make the valuation and allotments of the properties "according to the aforesaid shares," though in the case of some of the shares other than Biswanath's, the decree provided for the maintenance of females being charged not on all the property allotted to each particular share but only on a sufficient part thereof.

On December 12, 1929 (before the execution sale), and also on January 14, 1930 (after the sale but before confirmation), the appellants applied to the Subordinate Judge that they might be made parties to the partition suit. By orders dated January 29, and April 12, 1930, the Subordinate Judge refused their request on the ground that it was not necessary at that stage to make them parties; but he directed the Commissioners of partition to hear the appellants' submission. This order was challenged in the High Court and on July 14, 1930, a Division Bench of the High Court set it aside directing that the present appellants should be added as parties to the suit "as from April 12, 1930, on which date their application was rejected, the proceedings taken before the said April 12, 1930, being binding upon them just as much as they would be binding upon their predecessor-in-interest." The Subordinate Judge having amended the plaint on September 12, 1930, in accordance with this decision, the appellants (now defendants Nos. 17 to 21) on September 17 applied to him to set aside or amend the preliminary decree in so far as it declared charges upon the share of Biswanath in favour of his mother and sister. This application was by order dated February 23, 1931, refused on the ground that by virtue of the High Court's decision "the decree that was passed on October 1, 1929, is as binding upon them as upon their predecessor-in-interest and it is clearly not open to them to challenge anything that was done in relation to the proceedings in Court prior to April 12 last." The argument of the appellants' Pleader, "that it is not the defendant No. 6 who should really be treated as their predecessor-in-interest," was repelled on the ground that it was contrary to the language of the appellants' previous petitions and the appellants were reproached for seeking to evade the express terms of the High Court's judgment. On July 31, 1931, the appellants applied for separate allotment of their share to them and this was granted (November 21, 1931) without discussing the question of the charges in favour of Biswanath's mother and sister. The Commissioners of partition on January 17, 1934, made their final report allotting certain properties to the appellants but directing that these should remain charged as a security for the payment of the maintenance and other expenses of defendants Nos. 13 and 15. The appellants having objected to this direction, their objections were heard and were allowed by order dated May 8, 1934. This order was not passed by the same learned Judge who had previously dealt with the case but by his successor (Babu Kali Prasanna Bagchi). After pointing out that the claim of the ladies to have priority over the appellants was untenable in law by reason that the mortgages had been granted by Bhuban Mohan in his lifetime and not by Biswanath after his father's death, the learned Subordinate Judge noticed that this question had not been argued or considered by the High Court, and concluded that no order had been passed in the matter. He did not think that the appellants were entitled to an order setting aside the preliminary decree and he regarded their previous application to that effect as ill-advised and rightly rejected. "But," he said, "a partition suit in which a preliminary decree has been passed is still a pending suit and the rights of the parties who are added after the preliminary decree have to be adjusted at the time of the final decree. The defendants Nos. 17 to 21 cannot ask for setting aside the preliminary decree but they can reasonably claim that at the time of the final decree they should get an allotment as purchasers and their rights should be adjusted." Accordingly he ordered that the properties allotted to Biswanath and those only should stand charged with the maintenance of his mother and sister, and not the properties allotted to the appellants. A final decree for partition was passed on May 12, 1934, in accordance with this direction. From this final decree Biswanath, his mother and his sister on June 28, 1935, appealed to the High Court, whose decree is dated January 28, 1937. The view taken by the learned Judges was that "by virtue of the order of this Court passed on July 14, 1930, the preliminary decree in the suit for partition passed on October 1, 1929, would not be allowed to be altered or modified in any way in the present proceedings for partition." They agreed with the views expressed in the order dated February 23, 1921, by the learned Subordinate Judge (Babu D. L. Sen Gupta) who had dealt with the application of September 17, 1930, to set aside or modify the preliminary decree, and considered that the appellants were seeking to nullify the effect of a decision inter partes by the High Court.

The final decree for partition as settled by the High Court is now before their Lordships on appeal but the appeal appears to turn solely on the High Court's order of July 14, 1930—a reported decision Jadunath Ray v. Murari Mohan Mullick (1) which must necessarily have effect upon the procedure adopted in partition cases by the Courts of the province and elsewhere. It is unfortunate that no appearance has been made by the respondents and no argument heard on their behalf with reference to that decision, but their Lordships cannot omit to examine it.

A partition necessarily affects the interest of a mortgagee of an undivided share,

(1) 35 C W N 296; 134 Ind. Cas. 307; A I R 1931 Cal. 594; Ind. Rul. (1931) Cal. 803.

since after the partition his security is upon the divided share or the separate allotment. For this reason some High Courts in India would appear to join such mortgagees as parties to the suit as a matter of course, and by some English authorities [cf. Daniels Chancery Practice (8th Ed.) p. 198] the practice is considered to be that while a mortgagee upon the whole estate is not a necessary party a mortgagee of one of the undivided portions would be a necessary party [cf. Swan v. Swan (2), Sinclair v. James (3)]. The practice in Bengal follows the lines laid down by Sir Arthur Wilson in 1800 in the case of Mohindro Bhoosun v. Soshee Bhoosun (4), where a person having a disputed claim to be a mortgagee from the plaintiff in a partition suit applied to be joined. In refusing the application, Sir Arthur Wilson said :—

"The question as between the plaintiff and the defendant is who is entitled to the property in dispute? To determine that question, it is not necessary that the mortgagees should appear; they will not be bound by any finding come to in their absence. In case of a decree for partition being made, the mortgagees should have leave to come in and attend the partition proceedings."

In 1894 Sale, J. in Khetterpal Sritirutno v. Khelal Kristo Bhattacharjee (5), stated the practice succinctly: "A mortgagee is not a necessary party to a partition suit but he may and frequently does obtain leave to attend the proceedings as a quasi-party". The mortgagee of an undivided share might be prejudiced if that share did not receive a proper allotment in severalty, and it is for the benefit of all other persons interested in the joint property that such a mortgagee should be bound by the allotment. Hence it will in general meet the case if he is allowed to attend and be heard at that stage at which the making of a proper allotment is effected, just as in other types of case a person interested only in the result of a particular account may be allowed to attend at the taking of that account, especially if it be in the interests of others that he should not thereafter dispute the result. It is a fundamental condition of this practice in partition cases in Bengal that the extent of the share should not be in dispute; on that assumption an important advantage of the practice is that it lightens the partition suit by avoiding the necessity of deciding as to the existence and validity of the mortgages claimed over the undivided shares.

So far as regards the application made and decided in the present case before the execution sale had been confirmed, it is not necessary to examine or criticise the order of the learned Subordinate Judge. He may have been right in applying the ordinary practice and he had a discretion in the matter. But if he was right, he was right entirely because it was not necessary in order to safeguard the appellants' interests that they should be made parties, because without being parties to the suit they could be heard by the Commissioners of partition on the question of the allotment proper to be made to answer the one-eighth share over which they claimed to have security, and because as to all else, in Sir Arthur Wilson's words, "they will not be bound by any finding come to in their absence."

The learned Subordinate Judge's order of April 12, 1930 is, however, in a very different position. The effect of the sale under the mortgage decree was to divest Biswanath, his mother and his sister of all interest in the property comprised in the mortgages made by his father in 1923 and 1924. The ladies' interest was gone equally with his. Both his interest and theirs were derivative interests in the equity of redemption and arose to them only on the death of Bhuban Mohan in 1925. While the purchaser at an execution sale under a mere money decree gets no more than the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor at the date of the sale, the purchaser under a mortgage decree gets the right, title and interest in the mortgaged subjects which the mortgagor had at the date of the mortgage and charged thereby. Buying the mortgaged property free from incumbrances he gets, as it is sometimes put, the title both of the mortgagee and of those interested in the equity of redemption. He is not a mere successor-in-interest of the owner of the equity of redemption at the date of the sale. The position of the partition suit so far as regards the property now in question was that as a result of the execution sale the suit had become defective: there was no longer any party before the Court who had any interest in this property. It was to the interest of all other parties that the suit should be properly constituted and it was not within a judicial discretion to insist that the suit

(2) (1819) 8 Price 518; 22 R. R. 770.

(3) (1894) 3 Ch. 554; 63 L. J. Ch. 873; 8 R. 637; 71 L. T. 483.

(4) 5 O. 882.

(5) 21 O. 904 at p. 909.

should go on as regards this property behind the backs of the new owners. As Sale, J. had said in the case already cited: "If the mortgagee had proceeded to a sale pending partition, the purchaser would have become a necessary party to the partition suit." The learned Judges of the High Court were right therefore in directing that the appellants should be made parties. But the observation at the end of their judgment that "it goes without saying" that all proceedings taken before April 10, 1930, would be binding upon the appellants just as much as they would be binding upon "their predecessor-in-interest" is not easy to interpret or accept. It may have been directed only to this—that there was no need to invalidate what had already been done in the suit merely because the appellants had not been parties at the time, that partition could proceed under the preliminary decree, the appellants' rights being adjusted thereunder. Sale, J., on a question of the costs of partition, had harmlessly referred (in the case already cited) to the original mortgagor as predecessor-in-title of a purchaser at a mortgage sale meaning no more than that he was the person who had previous to the sale represented the share in question before the Court. He had held that the purchaser could not take advantage of the partition and at the same time repudiate all liability for costs of partition incurred before his purchase. After referring to this passage in the judgment of Sale, J., the learned Judges in the present case may have had similar matters in mind when they employed the same language, and the phrase "it goes without saying" suggests some such interpretation rather than a decision upon an important matter which had not been argued. But two Courts in India have interpreted the order made as a decision to the effect that because the preliminary decree of October 1, 1929, rightly held the mother and sister of Biswanath to have a charge for maintenance upon what he inherited, the appellants—at one time mortgagees from his father and now purchasers of the whole original interest of his father—were liable to maintain his mother and sister out of the property and that partition should be made accordingly. This interpretation runs some risk of doing an injustice to the learned Judges, but if their Lordships may assume against the appellants that the order of the High Court involved an erroneous opinion to the effect that the preliminary decree of October 1, 1929, bound the mortgagees, it still remains that the appellants had since the passing of that decree become purchasers of the whole interest in the share and that no decision as to their rights as purchasers had at any time been given in the suit. Their Lordships are not prepared to hold that the order of July 14, 1930, must needs be construed, contrary to the rights of the parties, as holding that after the execution sale the ladies had the same rights against the purchasers as they had had against Biswanath's interest in the equity of redemption.

It is manifest that the ladies' interest in the equity of redemption equally with Biswanath's must be regarded as having passed to the appellants, if it is not regarded as having come to an end. At no time was it correct to treat the appellants as mere assignees of Biswanath's interest. Before the sale their interest was as mortgagees and was not represented in the suit. After the sale when they were made parties, their interest as complete owners was before the Court—an interest which at no time had belonged to Biswanath. At no time was it correct or sufficient to regard Biswanath as "their predecessor-in-title"; upon any question as between Biswanath and other persons claiming to be interested in the equity of redemption a decision charging or limiting his interest had no bearing upon the rights of the appellants whether before the execution sale or afterwards.

Their Lordships fully agree with the observation made by the learned Subordinate Judge who passed the final decree in his order of May 8, 1934, whereby he allowed the objections of the appellants to the Commissioners' report on the ground that a partition suit in which a preliminary decree has been passed is still a pending suit and the rights of parties who are added after the preliminary decree have to be adjusted at the time of final decree.

In this view it becomes unnecessary to consider whether, if the High Court's order of July 14, 1930, was binding upon the Division Bench who heard the appeal from the final decree, it necessarily follows that it could not be disturbed on appeal to His Majesty in Council.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be allowed, the decree of the High Court, dated January 28, 1937, set aside, and the final decree of the learned Subordinate Judge restored.

The respondents Nos. 9, 15 and 17 who appealed to the High Court must pay the costs of the present appellants incurred in the High Court and of this appeal.

s. Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Hy. S. L. Polak & Co.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Second Appeals Nos. 1180 of 1934 and 38 of 1935

November 7, 1935

WADSWORTH, J.

NARAYANA MUDALI AND OTHERS

— PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

PERIA KALATHI MUDALI AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 9—Suit to establish right to observe Kappu Kattu and Diparathana, whether one of civil nature—Whether can be tried by Civil Court.

It is well-established that the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to decide matters of ritual except in so far as a decision on such matters is a necessary incident to the decision of a civil right. It is also established that a general right of worship either in a particular temple or outside is a civil right which can be claimed in the Courts. Generally speaking the rule is that once the general right to worship is conceded or established, the Courts will not endeavour to lay down the ritual which is to be followed; nor will they prescribe the manner in which the worship is to be conducted. It is also the rule that when there is no obligation to perform an act of worship, there will be no civil right to claim honours or perquisites of nominal value which ordinarily accompany the voluntary act of worship. The position is different if the perquisites are attached to an office or an obligation; but when there is no obligation to render service to the deity, there is no legal right to claim any honorific return for the services rendered.

Kappu Kattu is an act of ritual, partly religious and partly appertaining to the caste, which is at the most a mere incident in a series of ritual observances making up the communal festival. There is no obligation upon the members of the community to take part in the festival or to have their young men decorated in a particular way by the priest who presides at the festival. In the same way Diparathana is a matter arising out of no legal obligation and forming the basis of no legal claim. A suit therefore to establish right to observe Kappu Kattu and Diparathana is not of a civil nature and Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain it. [p. 240, col. 2.]

(Case-law referred to.)

S. As. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Vellore, in Appeal Suit Nos. 61 and 60 of 1934.

Messrs. T. V. Ramanatha Aiyar and M. Seshapathi, for the Appellants.

Messrs. K. Rajah Aiyar and M. Krishna Barathi, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—These two appeals both relate to claims made by the appellants who represent the minority section of the Senguntha community in a village, to establish rights of a religious or quasi-religious nature in a village temple. It is common ground that the temple is a public temple with an endorsement from public funds, but that the Senguntha community performs certain festivals therein, financing them by contributions levied from the community in proportion to their means.

There also appears to be no doubt that, owing to factions in the community, the plaintiffs discontinued their contributions and by way of retaliation, the majority excluded them from certain religious privileges. Second Appeal No. 1180 relates to an observance known as Kappu Kattu. Second Appeal No. 38 relates to another observance known as Diparathana. Kappu Kattu is a rite whereby the unmarried boys of the caste go through a sort of initiation which consists in the tying of a sacred string round the wrist as preparatory to their taking part along with others in the festival. Diparathana consists in the making of offerings of cocoanut, betel and fruits to the God on the occasion of the festival and the return to the person who makes the offerings of a portion or the whole of the offerings after they have been placed before the god.

The claim of the plaintiffs with reference to the Kappu Kattu is that they have a right to present all their boys for this ceremony without restriction and without any question of payment. This claim was resisted by the defendants on the ground that Kappu Kattu is conditional on payment of the contributions to the cost of the festival, that the number of boys is restricted and that the choice of those who are to take part in the rite involves a process of selection. With reference to the Diparathana, plaintiff's case was that it was also an absolute right independent of contributions and that it included a right to the return of the whole of the offerings. Defendants' case was that the right to make offerings belonged to the community as a whole unconditionally, but that those who did not contribute to the cost of the festival were entitled to receive back only half of what they offered.

The main question in this appeal is whether these rights are legal rights which can be the subject of adjudication by the Civil Courts. There is no question here of claiming rights in connection with any office. The plaintiffs claim simply as members of the community, all the members of which are entitled to worship in a particular way; so that unless the plaintiffs can show that the refusal to them of the unlimited rights which they claim is the refusal of the right of worship, they have no case on which the Civil Courts can adjudicate. It is well-established that the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to decide matters of ritual except in so far as a decision on such matters is a necessary incident to the decision of a civil right. It is also established that a general right of worship either in a particular temple or outside is a civil right which can be claimed in the Courts. There is at least one case in which it has been held that the rejection of a worshipper's offerings is a denial of a civil right of worship in the temple. The well-known Mandagapadi case reported in Thirumalai Alwar Aiyangar v. Srinivasachariar (1), the correctness of which has been doubted in subsequent decisions, held that a right to perform exclusively a mandagapadi festival at one's own expense and to receive honours thereat is a civil right which can be decreed by the Courts. The logic of this decision is a little difficult to follow; but apparently it was based on the fact that this mandagapadi right had in fact been recognized as a proprietary right in the family which owned it and had been the subject of partition and otherwise treated as capable of exclusive ownership.

Generally speaking the rule is that once the general right to worship is conceded or established, the Courts will not endeavour to lay down the ritual which is to be followed; nor will they prescribe the manner in which the worship is to be conducted. It is also the rule that when there is no obligation to perform an act of worship, there will be no civil right to claim honours or perquisites of nominal value which ordinarily accompany the voluntary act of worship. The position is different if the perquisites are attached to an office or an obligation; but when there is no obligation to render service to the deity, there is no legal right to claim any honorific return for the services rendered. Cases quoted before me on this subject are Kooni Meera Sahib v. Meera Sahib (2), Kadirvelu Chetty

v. Nanjundaivar (3), Ramalingam Pillai v. Ponnusami Goundan (4), Thathachariar v. Srinivasaraghava Aiyangar (5), Srinivasa Thathachariar v. Srinivasa Aiyangar (6) and Perianan Servai v. Mahadevan Ambalam (7).

Applying the principles laid down in these decisions to the present case, it seems to me fairly clear that no suit lies for either of the reliefs which are claimed. Kappu Kattu is an act of ritual, partly religious and partly appertaining to the caste, which is at the most a mere incident in a series of ritual observances making up the community festival. There is no obligation upon the members of the community to take part in the festival or to have their young men decorated in a particular way by the priest who presides at the festival. Their right to worship has not been denied. It is not, in my opinion, the duty of the Courts to prescribe the precise ritual to be followed in these voluntary observances nor the persons who are to take the leading part therein.

The suit for the Diparathana seems to me to stand on an even flimsier basis. The plaintiffs seek to establish in the Courts their right, at a festival in which no one denies their right to participate, to make offerings to the God and to receive them back intact. The remedy for the refusal of the presiding faction to allow the return of these offerings is to refrain from offering them. If the plaintiffs wish to get the honour and glory attaching to the making of offerings, that is a matter arising out of no legal obligation and forming the basis of no legal claim. It seems to me that both the suits should have been dismissed on the ground that they are not of a civil nature. I do not think it necessary to go into the further question whether assuming that a civil right to these privileges can be established, the non-payment of contributions provides a sufficient justification for the refusal of these privileges to the plaintiffs. In the result, therefore, both these appeals are dismissed with costs of the contesting respondents. One set in each appeal. Leave to appeal is refused.

N.-S.

Appeal dismissed.

(3) 3 L W 512; 35 Ind. Cas. 88; A I R 1917 Mad. 888.

(4) 38 L W 333; 145 Ind. Cas. 1014; A I R 1933 Mad. 728; 6 R M 188.

(5) (1938) 1 M L J 174; 173 Ind. Cas. 986; (1938) M W N 18; 47 L W 459; 10 R M 654; A I R 1938 Mad. 334.

(6) 9 M L J 355.

(7) 41 L W 752; 158 Ind. Cas. 375; A I R 1935 Mad. 679; (1935) M W N 520; 8 R M 258 (1).

(1) 31 M L J 758; 36 Ind. Cas. 568; A I R 1917 Mad. 903; 4 L W 562; (1916) 2 M W N 327.

(2) 30 M 15; 16 M L J 471.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT
Civil Revision No. 764 of 1937
October 20, 1938

GRUBER, J.

MEGHJI HIRJEE & Co.—PLAINTIFF

—APPLICANT

versus

THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY COMPANY, LTD.—DEFENDANT

—OPPOSITE PARTY

Railways Act (IX of 1890), ss. 77, 41, 28, 30—Overcharges, claim for—S. 77, if provides remedy—"Overcharges", what are—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to investigate into Railway Company's liability created by statute—S. 77, if contemplates notice in anticipation—Limitation Act. (IX of 1903); Sch. I, Art. 62, s. 14—Claim for overcharges—Article applicable—Governor-General in Council, if Court—Proceedings before Railway Advisory Board, if can extend time under s. 14.

Section 77, Railways Act, assumes the possibility of claims for overcharge, but where such a claim lies in law then it cannot succeed unless notice within six months has been given. It does not provide a remedy under the Act; it only cuts down the remedy in cases where claims would lie according to the general law. [p. 242, col. 1.]

An overcharge is simply a charge of more than is permitted by law. The word should be interpreted in a wide sense Haratchand v. G. I. P. Ry. Co. (1), followed. [ibid.]

Chapter V of the Railways Act, provides the detailed remedies under ss. 72 to 82. Chapter V of the Act gives a particular remedy against the Railway Company for a liability created by the statute itself, and s. 41 excludes the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. It is to be inferred that, the litigant is confined to this remedy which has been specially provided. Jagannath v. Khubā (4), followed. The Rhymney Railway Co. v. Rhymney Iron Co., Ltd. (3) and Manchester Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. Co. v. Denaby Main Colliery Co. (3), referred to. [p. 242, col. 2.]

A notice claiming overcharges upto a certain date does not operate as notice for similar future claims. Dhanpat Mal v. Agent, B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. (5) and Shamul Haq v. Secretary of State (6), distinguished.

The object of s. 77 of the Railways Act is to prevent stale and dishonest claims for loss and not as a means to enable the Railway authorities to deprive their customers of just dues; but the Railway authorities are entitled to have due notice of the total extent of the claim preferred against them. [p. 243, col. 1.]

A suit for overcharges against a Railway Company must be instituted within three years under Art. 62, Limitation Act.

For the applicability of s. 14, Limitation Act, an enquiry by the plaintiff must have been prosecuted in good faith in a Court which from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature was unable to entertain it. But where the plaintiff had a recourse to the Advisory Board which is not a Court, instead of to the Railway Commissioners, he cannot be said to have prosecuted his claim in good faith and hence in such a case s. 14 cannot extend time. [p. 243, col. 2.]

Similarly though the Governor-General in Council is the supreme executive authority in India, there is no statute constituting him a Court. Har Shankar Partap Singh v. Ragharaj Singh (8), Muhammad Subhan Ullah v. Secretary of State (9) and Laxman Ganesh v. Keshav Govind (10), followed.

App. for revision of the decree of the Court of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Nagpur, dated September 15, 1937.

Mr. J. M. Thakar, for the Applicant.

Mr. P. N. Rudra, for the Opposite Party,

Order.—In this case before the Small Cause Court, Nagpur, the plaintiff-applicant Meghji Hirji and Co., Forest Contractor and fire-wood merchant, unsuccessfully sued the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company for a sum of Rs. 1,000 excess charges on wagons of fire-wood sent from time to time to Motibagh, Itwari and Nagpur Railway Stations from Talodhi Station on the Gondia-Chanda section of the railway. The plaintiff had first of all complained to the Governor-General-in-Council on January 16, 1933, that the rates charged by the Company were unfair and gave undue preference to his competitors at other stations. The Governor-General-in-Council referred the question for enquiry to the Railway Rates Advisory Committee whose printed report is Ex. P-1 on the record. The plaintiff's application is to be found at pp. 52 to 54. It complains that the Railway Administration has been giving unreasonable preference in contravention of s. 42 (2) of the Indian Railways Act. The applicants prayed that their complaint be referred under s. 28 of the Indian Railways Act to the Railway Rates Advisory Committee for decision about the rates and that the applicants be awarded damages of Rs. 7,795 on account of overcharges paid by them under protest from December 10, 1929, to December 10, 1932. The Committee found (p. 18 of the report) that undue preference had been given and undue prejudice caused to the applicant and that he was entitled to have the rates reduced. They indicated the ways by which this could be done. With regard to the applicant's claim for damages the Commissioners said (p. 2 of the report):

"It was explained to him that we are an advisory body and not a judicial body with legal powers, that our powers and rules of procedure were laid down in Government of India (Railway Department), Resolution No. 606-T, dated September 25, 1930, and that, as such, apart from other legal difficulties, we had no power to award damages, to grant injunctions, or to make recommendations to the Government in those respects. We should like to add, in this connection, that there is no provision in Chap. V of the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, for the awarding of damages by the Railway Commissioners."

The recommendations of the Committee were accepted by the Governor-General-in-Council on January 9, 1935, and the Railway Company reduced its rates for the timber booked from this station.

Plaintiff's present claim is for overcharges on 75 wagons from April 22, 1932, to April 1, 1933, and on 112 wagons from April 1, 1933 to April 1, 1934. The claim has been dismissed on these grounds: first, it is barred under s. 41 of the Indian Railways Act; secondly, it is unmaintainable for want of valid notice; and thirdly, it is time-barred. It is contended in revision that the decision on all these three points is erroneous.

Plaintiff admits that by s. 41 of the Indian Railways Act, he could not have brought this suit "except as provided in this Act", but he says that s. 77 provides for the launching of his claim. Now s. 77 says that nobody shall be entitled to a refund of an overcharge unless his claim has been preferred in writing to the railway administration within six months from the date of the delivery of the goods. The section certainly assumes the possibility of claims for overcharge, but all it means is that where such a claim lies in law, then it cannot succeed unless notice within six months has been given. It does not provide a remedy under the Act: it only cuts down the remedy in cases where claims would lie according to the general law.

It may be mentioned incidentally that the lower Court is not satisfied that the claim related to an overcharge as contemplated by the section. That point is not pressed by defendant's Counsel, and I see no force in it. An overcharge is simply a charge of more than is permitted by law: Harackchand v. G. I. P. Ry. Co. (1). The word should be interpreted in a wide sense.

To return to s. 41, where there has been an omission by a railway administration in violation of Chap. V the remedy provided for in this Act is laid down in s. 28. When complaint is made to the Governor-General in Council he may refer the case to the Commissioners for decision, and in hearing such a case the Railway Commission shall have the powers which may be exercised in the hearing of an original civil suit by the High Court: (s. 30). Now the plaintiff did not follow this remedy. He applied for reference of his complaint to the Railway Rates Advisory Committee, not to the Railway Commissioners. The request was acceded to. This Advisory Committee could only express an opinion, it could not make an award or allow damages. If the matter had been referred to the Commissioners, the result might have been different. Analogous cases have arisen in England under the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. C. 31). Section 6 of that Act reads:

(1) A I R 1937 Nag. 77; 100 Ind. Cas. 406.

"No proceeding shall be taken for any violation or contravention of the above enactments, except in the manner herein provided; but nothing herein contained shall take away or diminish any rights, remedies or privileges of any person or company against any railway or canal or railway and canal company under the existing law."

Section 3 of the same Act provides the remedy of application to the Railway and Canal Commission which can issue injunction against the Railway Company for contravention of the Act. Section 6 means that that remedy must be followed although at the same time it says that the remedies under the existing law are not taken away. Although the section is differently worded, it corresponds in principle to s. 41 of the Indian Railways Act. If no claim for past damages can be brought in an ordinary civil suit under s. 6 of the English Act, I am unable to see how s. 41 of the Railways Act allows any greater latitude. In the case of The Rhymney Railway Co. v. Rhymney Iron Co., Ltd. (2), their Lordships followed Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. Co. v. Denaby Main Colliery Co. (3), and held that the only remedy where it is alleged that there has been a breach of s. 2 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854, is by application to the Railway Commissioners under s. 3, and the only remedy they can give has regard to the future, not the past, and therefore that past payments alleged to be overcharges by reason of being contrary to the Act could not be recovered by action. In the Indian Act, Chap. V provides the detailed remedies under ss. 72 to 82, Chapter V of the Act gives a particular remedy against the railway company for a liability created by the statute itself, and s. 41 excludes the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. It is to be inferred that the litigant is confined to this remedy which has been specially provided: see Jagannath v. Khuba (4) at pp. 178, 179. On this ground therefore I agree with the lower Court that the suit is not maintainable.

(2) (1890) 25 Q B D 146; 59 L J Q B 414; 63 L T 407; 38 W R 764.

(3) (1885) 14 Q B D 209; 54 L J Q B 103.

(4) 5 N L R 176, at pp. 178, 179; 4 Ind. Cas. 795.

The next question is about notice. Plaintiff admittedly gave notices on May 8, 1932, and September 27, 1932, and the lower Court holds that these are valid in respect of consignments up to September 27, 1932. A further notice was given on August 9, 1933 (Ex. P-3) after the Advisory Board had given their findings, but it is beyond six months from the date of delivery of the goods and so does not comply with s. 77. Plaintiff's contention is that it is a case of a continuing wrong, and secondly, that as the agent had knowledge and notice of his claim with regard to previous consignments, it was unnecessary to give a separate notice for the later consignments. I should say that there was a recurring wrong, no doubt, but it did not occur independently of plaintiff's volition. It only occurred because plaintiff continued to send the various consignments. Nor from the fact that overcharges up to a certain date were claimed would the Agent know that overcharges in future would also be claimed. Section 77 is mandatory and does not contemplate that a notice should be given in anticipation. I think that the claim for items subsequent to September 27, 1932, would fail on this ground also.

Plaintiff relies on Dhanpat Mal v. Agent, B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. (5), which does not cover the point. It held that when notice was given to one railway and the other railway concern had taken notice of plaintiff's claim, made enquiries and replied to him, no separate notice was necessary. That was with regard to a claim which had accrued before that time: so, too, in Shamsul Huq v. Secretary of State (6). No doubt the object of s. 77 of the Railways Act is to prevent stale and dishonest claims for loss and not as a means to enable the railway authorities to deprive their customers of just dues; but the railway authorities are entitled to have due notice of the total extent of the claim preferred against them.

The third point is whether the claim is time-barred. I should first of all remark that as plaintiff bases his cause of action on the finding of the Advisory Committee, and as that Committee in para. 49 of its report says that "nothing in this report should be taken as bearing on the applicant's contention that the rates in force prior to that date causes undue prejudice to him"

it seems to follow that there is no cause of action for transactions prior to April 1, 1933. For deliveries subsequent to that date, the suit had to be brought within three years under Art. 62 of the Lim. Act, unless s. 14 of the Lim. Act applied to exclude the period of enquiry before the Advisory Committee. If s. 14 is to apply, this enquiry must have been prosecuted in good faith in a Court which from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature was unable to entertain it. The lower Court points out that the Advisory Committee had no judicial powers and so could not be a Court. It is now argued that the Governor-General-in-Council was a Court. But even if he were, the enquiry was conducted not by him but by the Advisory Board. Taking it, however, that as the enquiry was made under his orders, it and his acceptance of it formed one proceeding, is the Governor-General-in-Council a Court constituted by law? The word 'Court' has not been defined in the Civil P. O., but in Manavala Goundan v. Kumarappa Reddy (7), it has been held to mean "a place where justice is judicially ministered." In Har Shankar Pratab Singh v. Raghuraj Singh (8), it is pointed out that administrative officers are not Courts within the meaning of this section: see also Muhammad Subhan-Ullah v. Secretary of State (9) and Laxman Ganesh v. Keshav Govind (10). The Governor-General-in-Council is no doubt the supreme executive authority in India, but there is no statute constituting him a Court, nor has any ruling been brought to my notice which treats him as such.

It is said that by Chap. V of the Act the Governor-General-in-Council is invested with all the powers of a High Court. In my view that is not so. It is the Commissioners appointed by the Governor-General in Council that are given powers of a High Court under s. 30. It does not follow that the authority appointing a Court or appointing Commissioners having the powers of a Court is itself a Court. I need not go

(7) 30 M 326 at p 327; 17 M L J 313.

(8) 29 A 519; 34 I A 135; 4 A L J 497; 9 Bom. L R 757; 11 O W N 811; 17 M L J 354; 2 M L T 391; 10 O O 313 (P O).

(9) 26 A 382; A W N 1904, 51.

(10) 43 B 201; 48 Ind. Cas. 467; A I R 1918 Bom. 82; 20 Bom. L R 918.

(5) A I R 1928 Lah. 438; 110 Ind. Cas. 718.

(6) 37 O 1286; 128 Ind. Cas. 248; A I R 1930 Cal. 332; 52 O L J 260; Ind. Rul. (1931) Cal. 72.

on to consider whether by having recourse to the Advisory Board instead of the Railway Commissioners the plaintiff can be said to have prosecuted his claim in good faith according to s. 14 or not. I hold that s. 14 did not come in to extend time in the case.

The application for revision, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs. Counsel's fee will be Rs. 30.

D.

[Application dismissed.]

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Miscellaneous Appeal No. 24 of 1937

February 23, 1939

DAVIS, J. C. AND TYABJI, J.

Srimati KALAWANTIBAI—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

UDHAVDAS GIRDHARIDAS AND ANOTHER
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Jurisdiction—Administration suit—Jurisdiction how determined—Subject-matter valued for court-fee at sum below Rs. 5,000—First Class Sub-Judge returning plaint for presentation to proper Court—Appeal from order—Forum of

In suits for accounts and administration, the court-fees payable determine the jurisdiction of the Court and the Court to which an appeal lies depends not upon the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Subordinate Court but on the value of the subject-matter in dispute. [p 245, col 2]

Consequently, where in an administration suit the subject-matter valued for purpose of court-fee is below Rs. 5,000 and the plaint is returned by the First Class Sub-Judge for presentation to the proper Court, an appeal from his order lies to the District Court and not to the High Court. Bai Amba v. Jivandas Dullabhram (2), Maganlal-Chunilal v. Kanchanlal Manchharam (3) and Nathasingh Mul Singh v. Manager, Incumbered Estates in Sind (4), relied on.

Misc. A. against the decision of the First Class, Sub-Judge, Shikarpur, dated March 13, 1937.

Mr. Pahlaising B. Advani, for the Appellant.

Mr. Srikishindas H. Lulla, for the Respondents.

Davis, J. C.—This is an appeal from an order of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Shikarpur, in which he returned a plaint to the appellant on the ground that jurisdiction as determined by the value put by the appellant upon her plaint was the jurisdiction of the Second Class Court and not of a First Class Court. The plaintiff-appellant is a widow and she brought this suit in the First Class Subordinate Judge's Court which was taken by all the parties concerned as a suit for administration of the estate of her deceased husband and was treated on that footing. She was the wife of one Gobindram, and defendant No. 1 was a brother of this Gobindram and defendant No. 2 was the son of this brother. She alleged in her plaint that Gobindram had separated from his brother and his brother's son, defendants Nos. 1 and 2, that the movable and immovable property was divided, the immovable property even divided by metes and bounds and that all the relevant entries were in the books in the possession of the defendants, that after the partition her late husband Gobindram and his brother defendant No. 1 commenced a banking business, that they went into partnership in the banking business in the name and style of Girdharidas Udhavdas at Shikarpur, Bombay, and other places in the Madras Presidency, and this partnership continued until Girdharidas's death, and that after his death the defendants have been carrying on the partnership business and they have wrongly possessed themselves of the business and property of her late husband Gobindram, even including her stridhan ornaments, and that they were unlawfully realizing all the outstandings collecting the rents of the property, the interest on cash and hundies and dividends on shares and generally intermeddling and administering the estate of her late husband Gobindram, she herself not being given a single pie for maintenance, and for the last three years she had been living on borrowed money. Therefore, she said that she brought, as she was entitled to, this suit for the administration of the estate, for accounts and for partition, and, what is loosely stated as a declaration. She goes on in her plaint to say that even if it be found that her late husband was not separate from the defendants even then she is entitled to have the estate administered and in the course of that administration, she should have awarded her a monthly allowance of Rs. 100 for her life and also arrears of maintenance.

Subsequently she abandoned her claim for arrears of maintenance because it was the opinion of the Court that the claim for maintenance could not be granted in an administration suit. But even so, the plaintiff was not fortunate in this litigation because finally the learned Subordinate Judge after having considered the case carefully came to the conclusion that as the plaintiff had valued for the purpose of court-fees her claim at Rs. 400, so thereby she fixed the value for the purpose of jurisdiction at the same amount. This the learned Judge found in accordance with the provisions of s. 7, cl. (iv) (f), Court Fees Act and s. 8, Suits Valuation Act, and assuming that the suit was one essentially for the administration of an estate, the Judge's finding on this point would be correct. Therefore, after having given the plaintiff an opportunity to pay the extra court-fees, which opportunity was rejected by the plaintiff, he returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court, and it appears that when the plaintiff through her legal adviser presented the plaint to the Second Class Court, she was again unfortunate, for it appears that it was taken there, as it was taken here, that in the plaint there was an alternative claim for maintenance and that the claim for maintenance being properly valued would bring the suit again out of the jurisdiction of the Second Class Court into that of the First Class Court which had already returned the plaint. Thus, the unfortunate plaintiff was in a position of being told by the First Class Court to go to the Second Class Court and being told by the Second Class Court to go to the First Class Court, and we think that blame must attach to those who drafted the plaint in such a manner as to give reasonable ground for this confusion and difficulty. We, therefore, while following the provisions of the law, do not wish to add to the difficulties of this unfortunate plaintiff and will make an order which we hope will enable her to have her claim when put forward in an honest and reasonable manner adjudicated upon and finally decided.

Now, so far as the rejection of the plaint by the learned First Class Subordinate Judge is concerned on the ground that the valuation of Rs. 400 for court-fees fixed the valuation of the jurisdiction, there is ample authority to show that on the basis that the suit is one essentially for the administration of an estate, the learned Subordinate Judge was right. The alternative plea for maintenance was not raised clearly. The prayer for a declaration is only loosely made and there is no prayer for a declaration in the proper sense of that word: Ramkhelawan v. Surendra Sahai (1). Firstly, there is the case in Bai Amba v.

Pranjiwandas Dullabhxram (2). In that case the plaint, though made up of several items was substantially one for the administration of the estate of certain minors, and there was included within that principal prayer other prayers for the taking of accounts, and for an order for the payment of any balance found due. But nevertheless Sargent, C. J. held that the case was essentially one for the administration of the estate and that although the value of the property in dispute was put by the plaintiff at Rs. 30,000, the plaint showed for the purpose of court-fees the value was put at Rs. 130. This the learned Chief Justice held decided the question of jurisdiction in the matter of the appeal which he held lay not to the High Court but to the District Court.

This case again was followed by a Bench of the Bombay High Court in Maganlal Chunilal v. Kanchanlal Manohararam (3). In the suit out of which that appeal arose, as in this suit, a preliminary issue was raised as to whether a proper court-fee had been paid, and the question as to which Court an appeal lay from the order of the Subordinate Court on that preliminary issue was discussed at length by Broomfield, J. in his judgment. It is true that in that case the Subordinate Court had held that the suit fell within the provisions of cl. (iv) (f) of s. 7, Court Fees Act, because it was a suit for accounts, but that makes no difference in principle, and in this case the learned Subordinate Judge found that this suit as an administration suit came under s. 7, cl. (iv) (f), Court Fees Act, in the same way. It is clear from that judgment and indeed, from the relevant sections of the relevant Acts, that in suits for accounts and administration the court-fees payable determine the jurisdiction of the Court and that the Court to which an appeal lies depends not upon the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Subordinate Court but on the value of the subject-matter in dispute.

It does not, for instance, follow that because a First Class Subordinate Court decides a dispute, gives judgment, passes a decree, an appeal lies to the High Court. An appeal lies to the High Court from the decision of the First Class Subordinate Judge if the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute exceeds Rs. 5,000, and, indeed, this simple point has been decided by this Court in Nathasingh Mulsingh v.

(1) 19 B 198.

(2) 38 Bom. L.R. 754; 165 Ind. Cas. 954; - A I R 1936 Bom. 353; 9 B B 189.

(3) 16 Pat. 766; 172 Ind. Cas. 840; A I R 1938 Pat. 22; 18 P. L. T. 977; 10 R. P. 349; 4 B R 178.

Manager, Incumbered, Estates in Sind (4). There also appears no force in the argument of the learned Advocate for the appellant that an appeal would lie to this Court as a High Court and not to the District Court, because the question in dispute is whether the First Class Subordinate Judge was right when he said that it was for the Second Class Court to decide questions relating to property valued at Rs. 30,000, the value of the subject-matter in dispute. Also the learned Advocate is not correct when he argues that in all the decided cases which have been cited to us, the appeal was against the decree and not against an order directing the plaint to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court. Section 26, Bombay Civil Courts Act, which has been applied to Sind, provides only that in all suits decided by a Sub-Judge of which the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeds five thousand rupees, the appeal shall lie direct to the High Court; and s. 8, Sind Courts Act, which corresponds to s. 8, Bombay Civil Courts Act, provides that a regular appeal shall lie from the decisions of a Judge of a Subordinate Court to the District Court whenever such appeal is allowable under the Civil Procedure Code, or any other law for the time being in force in the province of Sind. Therefore, as in this case, the Subordinate Judge did not decide a suit, an appeal does not lie under the provisions of s. 26, Bombay Civil Courts Act, and s. 8, Sind Courts Act, is the appropriate section.

There appears indeed no reason why the procedure in this Province should differ from the procedure in Bombay. In the case already referred to in Bai Amba v. Pranjirendas Dullabhram (2), the plaint was returned in order that it might be properly stamped and the appeal was made against that order. In the same manner in the case referred to in Maganlal Chunilal v. Kanchanlal Manchharam (3), the appeal was against an order deciding a question raised as a preliminary issue; and in the case reported in Jamnadas Vrijlal v. Chandulal Jamnadas (5), the appeal was also against an order on a preliminary issue. Section 8, Suits Valuation Act of 1887, provides that where in suits other than those referred to in the Court Fees Act, 1870, s. 7, paras. v, vi and ix and para. x, cl. (d) (and this case does not fall within any of those paragraphs), court-fees are payable ad valorem under the Court Fees Act, 1870 (and here the court-fees are payable ad valorem under Sch. I), the value as determinable for the computation for court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same. The Bombay Civil Courts Act and the Sind Courts Act and the Sui's Valuation Act must be read with the Court Fees Act. Section 7, cl. (iv) (f), Court Fees Act, provides that the amount of court-fee payable under the Act in suits for accounts which include suits for the administration of estate shall be computed according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint.

Therefore it appears to us clear that the jurisdiction of the Court in this case was the Court of the Second Class Subordinate Judge because the relief sought was valued at Rs. 400 but that is upon the assumption that the suit is a suit for administration of the estate and that there is no such other alternative relief, sought as the learned Advocate for the plaintiff contends, as will bring this case out of the ambit of the rulings we have cited and will bring the suit within the jurisdiction of the First Class Subordinate Court. But this can only be upon an amendment of the plaint which the learned Advocate for the plaintiff, in order to find some means whereby she should not be sent vainly from one Court to another asks now to be allowed to do, so that it may be made clear that the plaintiff asks in the alternative for future maintenance at the rate of Rs. 100 a month which, he says, will, for the purpose of court-fee, be valued at maintenance payable for a period of ten years, and he will be prepared to pay the extra court-fee so as to enable the First Class Court to deal finally with this suit which had proceeded far before it before this question of court-fee and jurisdiction was raised. We do not think that we should here grant leave to amend the plaint so as to make clear this alternative prayer or decide that if the plaint be so amended, the suit would be one for the First Class Subordinate Judge to try, for, we think that these are questions which should be dealt with by the District Court which we have held is the appropriate Court to which an appeal against the order of the First Class Subordinate Judge dated March 13, 1937, will lie.

The learned Advocate for the appellant asks that the plaintiff be permitted, if she cannot find means to pay the court-fee for maintenance at Rs. 100 a month, to ask leave to amend her plaint, reducing the amount of the maintenance claim. That question is a matter for the District Judge, and we have no doubt that he will take into consideration the difficulties of a widow seeking maintenance against her relations and will, so far as the law and a proper discretion permit, give the appellant permission to amend her plaint and pay such court-fees as will enable her to get her claim heard and decided. As the case now stands, the First Class Subordinate Judge here returned her plaint because he has held on the plaint as he has interpreted it, that the case is a case of a Second Class Court, but it would appear, the Judge of the Second Class Court has taken a different view and has held that if the suit is, as it would appear to him to be, a suit for maintenance, among other things, he has no jurisdiction to hear it for the value of the maintenance the plaintiff claims takes the case out of the jurisdiction of his Court. We think therefore that the proper order we should pass is that the appeal against the order dated March 13, 1937, of the Subordinate Judge is not within our jurisdiction and that the appeal should be returned to the appellant for presentation to the District Court, where the learned Judge will, we have no doubt, give all proper consideration to the prayer that she wishes to make that her plaint may be so amended that her claim can be heard and decided.

(4) A I R 1936 Sind 190; 165 Ind. Cas. 742; 9 R S 107; 30 S L R 335.

(5) 39 Bom. L R 138; 162 Ind. Cas. 449; A I R 1937 Bom. 167; 1 L R (1937) Bom. 623; 9 R B 369.

D. Order accordingly.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Civil Revision Petition Nos. 1317

and 1561 of 1936

October 21, 1938

VARADACHARIAR, J.

PERUMAL NAICKEN—PETITIONER

versus

KONDAMA NAICKEN AND ANOTHER

—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, rr. 7, 13, 6—Code, if in terms provides for application to set aside order declaring defendant ex parte—Courts in mofussil so declaring defendant—If can put restriction on him that he can only cross-examine opposite witnesses and not lead evidence himself—Whether can be debarred for filing written statement at that stage.

Though it is the practice in the mofussil to pass an order declaring a defendant ex parte, the Civil P. O., does not, in terms provide for an application to set aside that order. All that r. 7 of O. IX provides is that where the ex parte hearing of a suit has been adjourned, the defendant may at any time before the disposal of the suit appear, and if he assigns good cause for his previous non-appearance, he may be heard in answer to the suit as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance. It is only when a decree has been passed that an application in terms to set aside that decree is contemplated in r. 13. [p. 248, col. 1].

In the absence of any express statutory provision as that found in O. VI, r. 2, of the Original Side Rules, Courts in the mofussil have no warrant to impose while declaring a person ex parte, a restriction on him to the effect that he is entitled only to cross-examine the witnesses on the other side and is not entitled to lead any evidence on his own side. Similarly there is no reason to deny him an opportunity to file a written statement at that stage. The mere fact that on the new statement, additional issues may have to be framed does not amount to re-opening anything that has happened already. Where by reason of causes for which none of the parties is responsible, the case has not made much progress, there is no reason why rr. 6 and 7 of O. IX should be applied as penal provisions depriving parties of the opportunity of putting forward their defence. Venkatasubbiah v Lakshminarasimham (1), Arumugam Pillai v. Kandasami Pillai (3) and Harba v. Chandrabhaga (4), relied on.

O. R. P. under s. 115 of Act V of 1903 and section of 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise the Orders of the Court of the District Munsif of Karur, dated August 15, 1936, and September 10, 1936, and made in I. A. Nos. 747 and 866 of 1936, respectively in O. S. No. 512 of 1935.

Mr. L. V. Krishnaswami Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. J. Kuppanna Rao, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—These petitions have been filed by the 1st defendant in the lower Court, asking this Court to revise two orders passed by the lower Court in the following circumstances.

The 1st defendant did not appear on the first hearing date and he was declared ex parte on January 10, 1936. On July 30, 1936, he applied to have that order set aside alleging that summons had not been served on him. The lower Court was of opinion that this allegation was not true and accordingly dismissed that petition on August 15, 1936. O. R. P. No. 1317 has been filed against the order.

On August 18, 1936, the 1st defendant applied for permission to file a written statement and to take further part in the conduct of the case. The District Munsif was of opinion that in view of his former order dismissing his application to set aside the order declaring him ex parte, all that the 1st defendant could be permitted to do was to cross-examine the witnesses on the other side without letting in any evidence on his side. He was also of opinion that the 1st defendant was not entitled to file a written statement at that stage. With these observations he dismissed the petition of August 18, 1936, and it is against this dismissal that O. R. P. No. 1561 of 1936 has been filed.

So far as O. R. P. No. 1317 is concerned, I do not feel justified in interfering with the order of the lower Court. The finding that the first defendant had been duly served is a finding of fact which I see no reason to set aside on any grounds open in revision. I may, however, add that though it is the practice in the mofussil to pass an order declaring a defendant ex parte, the Code does not, in terms provide for an application to set aside that order. All that r. 7 of O. IX, provides is that where the ex parte hearing of a suit has been adjourned, the defendant may at any time before the disposal of the suit appear and if he assigns good cause for his previous non-appearance, he may be heard in answer to the suit as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance. It is only when a decree has been passed that an application in terms to set aside that decree is contemplated in r. 13. With this observation, I dismiss O. R. P. No. 1317 with costs.

In O. R. P. No. 1561, however, I am unable to approve of the order passed by the lower Court. I am not able to gather exact ground on which the District Munsif thought the 1st defendant can only cross-examine witnesses on the other side but not lead any evidence on his side. There is no doubt a specific provision of this kind in the Original Side Rules—See O. VI, r. 2 of the Original Side Rules—but in the absence of any express statutory provision of this kind, Courts in the mofussil seem to me to have no warrant to impose such a restriction. Among the authorities referred to by the District Munsif, it is sufficient to refer to the judgment of Wallace, J., in Venkatasubbiah v. Lakshminarasimham (1). The principle enunciated by the learned Judge is that even a defendant who fails to show good cause for his previous non-appearance is not debarred from participating in the further conduct of the case and that the Original Order only covers the period during which the party was originally absent. He proceeds to point out that where good cause for non-appearance is shown, the party would be relegated back to the position which he would have been put in if he had appeared at the previous hearing, i. e., that proceedings which have taken place in his absence could be re-opened so as even to give him the opportunity of cross-examining witnesses that had been examined in his absence. This principle has generally been adopted in most of the reported cases—Vide Pattanna Pattabirama Aiyangar v. Neeli Chetty (2), Arumugam Pillai v. Kandasami Pillai (3) and Harba v. Chandrabhaga (4). The extreme view taken in Oudh is opposed to the preponderance of authority. On the above principle, I do not see any justification for drawing a distinction between the liberty to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses and the liberty to adduce evidence on his own side so far as future proceedings are concerned. I have, however, felt some hesitation as to whether or not the 1st defendant should be permitted to file a written statement. But I have come to the conclusion that there is no reason to deny him this opportunity. According to the test suggested by Wallace, J., it will not, in any sense, be re-opening what has happened in the past, if the 1st defendant should be permitted to file a written statement. I am informed that the other defendants have filed written statements and certain issues have been framed thereon. No evidence has yet been recorded. I also gather that the 1st defendant is not content with the issues raised already and that his proposed written statement might raise other issues. Assuming these facts to be true, it appears to me that what the 1st defendant asks for is nothing in contravention of what the authorities recognise him to be entitled to. The mere fact that on the new statement, additional issues may have to be framed does not amount to re-opening anything that has happened already. It has been stated that even while asking for permission to file the additional written statement the petitioner stated that he had his witnesses ready and that he did not require any adjournment on the ground of having to summon any witness. It may be that on the filing of the petitioner's written

(2) 51 M 597; 108 Ind. Cas. 297; 27 L W 361; A I R 1927 Mad. 1197; (1928) M W N 103.

(3) 106 Ind. Cas. 664; A I R 1928 Mad. 211; 39 M L T 656.

(4) A I R 1931 Nag. 122; 134 Ind. Cas. 268; 27 N L R 50; Ind. Rul. (1931) Nag. 140.

(1) 49 M L J 273; 91 Ind. Cas. 545; A I R 1925 Mad. 1274; (1925) M W N 647.

statement, the plaintiff might require time to get ready to meet the plea there raised; but there is an indulgence required by the plaintiff and not an indulgence required by the petitioner; I quite realise that the object of rr. 6 and 7 of O. IX will be frustrated if defendants could be allowed to absent themselves with impunity at the earlier stages of a litigation. But where by reason of causes for which none of the parties is responsible, the case has not made much progress, there is no reason why these rules should be applied as penal provisions depriving parties of the opportunity of putting forward their defence. The rule laid down in Venkatasubbiah v. Lakshminarasimham (1) seems to me, if I may say so to adopt the golden mean and according to the test there laid down, I think this petition ought to be allowed.

The lower Court is directed to receive the written statement proposed to be filed by the 1st defendant and frame the necessary issues after giving sufficient opportunity to the other parties to file any additional pleadings that they may consider necessary in view of the 1st defendant's written statement. In the circumstances there will be no order as to costs in C. R. P. No. 1561.

N.-D.

Petitions allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Criminal Revisions Nos. 179 and 180 of 1939

March 13, 1939

EDGLEY, J.

GIANI MEHER SINGH—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 499, 514, 497 (1)—Bail bond for appearance containing undertaking for good behaviour—Forfeiture, legality of—Offence under s. 124-A, Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860)—Bail should not be granted.

The only condition contemplated by a bail bond is a condition for attendance in Court and a bail bond in which any other condition of the nature of condition as to undertaking for good behaviour such a bond, is included, cannot be regarded as a bond under the Code. The forfeiture of such a bond is therefore illegal.

The offence under s. 124-A, Penal Code, is a non-bailable one punishable with transportation for life. So the accused should not be released on bail at all.

Mr. Anil Chandra Roy Choudhury, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Probodh Chandra Chatterjee, for the Crown.

Order.—Criminal Revision No. 179 of 1939.—This Rule is directed against an order of the Additional District Magistrate of 24 Parganas dated December 19, 1938, in which he directed that a bond which had been executed by a man named Gyani Meher Singh should be forfeited and that he should pay a penalty of Rs. 200. It appears that the petitioner Gyani Meher Singh had been accused of an offence under s. 124-A, Penal Code. After his arrest he gave an undertaking to the effect that he would not deliver any speech and thereupon he was released on bail. The bail bond was executed by Gyani Meher Singh himself and Babu Girin Das Gupta executed the bond as a surety whereby he bound himself to forfeit to His Majesty the sum of Rs. 500 in the event of any breach of the bond. The conditions mentioned in the bond were to the effect that Gyani Meher Singh would give security for his attendance in Court on August 5, 1938, and on subsequent days fixed for the hearing of the case against him and further he undertook not to deliver any speech until the disposal of the case. It has been found by the learned Magistrate that Gyani Meher Singh in fact delivered a speech on November 7, 1938, and it was due to this fact that he held that the bond should be forfeited.

It is argued by the learned Advocate for the petitioner that the order of forfeiture is illegal because there is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code whereby an undertaking for good behaviour such as that which has been embodied in the bail bond in this case can be so included. The object of bail is primarily to ensure the appearance of an accused person on a certain day and place. The offence in respect to which Gyani Meher Singh was accused was a non-bailable one punishable with transportation for life. Strictly speaking this man ought not to have been released on bail at all having regard to the provisions of s. 497 (1), Criminal Procedure Code, and doubtless had it not been for the fact that he was prepared to give an undertaking to the effect that he would not deliver any speech, he would never have been so released. The fact remains, however, that under the provisions of s. 499, Criminal Procedure Code, it is provided that before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such a sum of money as the Police Officer or the Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient, shall be executed by such person and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the Police Officer or the Court, as the case may be.

It follows therefore that the only condition contemplated by a bail bond is a condition for attendance in Court and it further follows that a bail bond in which any other condition is included of the nature of condition with which we are now dealing, such a bond cannot be regarded as a bond under the Code Section 514, Criminal Procedure Code, which prescribes the procedure to be followed on the forfeiture of a bond only relates to bonds taken under the Code. In this view of the case, I do not think that the learned Magistrate had jurisdiction to forfeit the bond executed by the petitioner and his surety in this case, as that bond could only be regarded as a bond taken under the Code in so far as the bond is for the appearance of the petitioner in Court. In view of the undertaking which had been given by Gyani Meher Singh, I consider that the procedure which should have been adopted in a case of this sort would have been for the Police to bring to the notice of the Court the fact that there had been a violation of the undertaking in order that the Court might thereupon cancel the bail bond in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. It is also possible that by violating this undertaking the petitioner may have committed a contempt of Court. I am of opinion, however, that this undertaking, not to make any speech, should not have been imported into the bail bond and that the forfeiture of this bond was therefore illegal. The Rule must, accordingly, be made absolute and the order of the learned Magistrate dated December 19, 1938, is set aside.

Criminal Revision No. 180 of 1939

In view of my judgment in the other Rule, the Rule obtained by Girin Das Gupta must also be made absolute and the order of the learned Magistrate dated December 19, 1938 is also set aside.

D.

Rules made absolute.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 14 of 1938

April 25, 1939

HARRIES, O. J. AND WORT, J.

Musammam HALIMAN BIBI AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUHAMMAD TAJAMUL HUSSAIN—

PLAINTIFF AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Abandonment—Chandnadar transferring holding but remaining in possession of one room of house standing on holding with leave and license of transferee—There is abandonment and landlord can recover holding—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 33—Suit dismissed—Appeal by one of defendants—No appeal by plaintiff but only cross-objection—Appellate Court, if can grant him relief

Where a chandnadar after executing a kobala transferring his holding to another person has remained in possession of a room in the house standing on the holding with the leave and license of the transferee, it cannot be said that the relationship between the transferor and the landlord continues. There is an abandonment of the holding by the chandnadar and hence the landlord is entitled to recover the holding. Laley Dharnidhar v. Jugeshwar Mahton (2), distinguished.

Where an action is dismissed and an appeal has been filed by one of the defendants, the Appellate Court has power under O. XLI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code, to grant the plaintiff relief even if he has not preferred an appeal but has filed only cross-objection.

L. P. A. from the decision of Mohammad Noor, J., dated April 26, 1938.

Mr. G. C. Das, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. Misra, for the Respondents.

Wort, J.—This is an appeal from the decision of Mohammad Noor, J. arising out of an action for the recovery of .04 acre of land with a house thereon which at one time was in possession of one Bhajani Mahalik, who was chandnadar. The appellant before my brother, Mohammad Noor, was defendant No. 2. One of the questions of fact decided by the Courts below was whether the son of Bhajani Mahalik pre-deceased him or whether he survived him and in his turn became the chandnadar. It was originally recorded in the Provincial Survey, as I have already indicated, in the name of Bhajani Mahalik. In the current settlement it was recorded in the name of defendant No. 1, Sunai Bewa, in other words, widow of one Rama Mahalik, the son. On December 19, 1932, defendant No. 1, the widow, executed a kobala in favour of defendant No. 2. There were two other transactions a few days later, that is, on January 11, 1933, which have been held to be merely transactions to cover up the true nature of the transaction of December 19. In other words, as I understand the judgments of the Courts below they were transactions, one of mortgage and the other of sale of a lesser area of the land, which, if taken at their face value, would lead one to suppose that the whole of the land, the subject-matter of the tenancy, had not been transferred, and having regard to the events which happened, this is explicable on the grounds that one of the contentions put forward by the defendant was that the holding had not been abandoned. One of the arguments on behalf of the parties in the Courts below was that this tenancy was a mere tenancy-at-will. There has been a finding against that based upon a decision of this Court in Jahabaj Khan v. Srikrishna Dey (1) where it was held that the tenancy was not a tenancy-at-will. Sub-s. (2) of s. 236, Orissa Tenancy Act, provides:

"Save as otherwise expressly provided in this Act, the incidents of the tenancy of a chandnadar shall be regulated by local custom or usage and his rent shall be liable to re-assessment on each revision of land revenue settlement."

The character of such tenancy can be gathered from the definition in s. 3, sub-s. (3):

"Chandnadar' means a person holding land which has been recorded as chandna in the course of a settlement of land revenue, and for which rent has been fixed for the term of that settlement, and includes also the successors-in-interest of such a person."

It is not too much to say from the definition in the section, to which I have already referred, that it is indicated that a tenancy of the character with which we are dealing in this case, at least subsists during the currency of a settlement. In the result, apart from the question which was argued before Mohammad Noor, J. as to the competency of the appeal before the first Appellate Court, the question which arose was whether defendant No. 1 could be held to have abandoned the holding.

The contention of defendant No. 2, the transferee relying, as I have already indicated, upon the other two transactions of January 11, 1933, was that the holding had not been abandoned, and apart from the transactions to which I have just made reference, reliance was placed upon the fact that the chandandar, defendant No. 1, after the transfer of December, 1932, remained in possession. In my judgment it is a contention that cannot be supported, because it has been found as a fact that the possession of the defendant was merely the occupation of one room in the house, which stood on the land with the leave and license of the transferee, defendant No. 2. Even supposing if something more than a mere license is meant, it could, in the circumstances, be no more than a sub-tenancy and it would be impossible to contend that the relationship between the transferor, that is, defendant No. 1, and the plaintiff, the landlord, continued. The learned Advocate for the appellants has failed to state what other circumstances would be necessary for the purpose of holding that an abandonment has taken place. In my judgment, it is impossible to contend that the decision of the Court below that the holding or tenancy had been abandoned is wrong. If the holding was abandoned, there is no doubt and it is not seriously disputed that the plaintiff is entitled to recover.

One other question was raised which is not very strenuously pressed, is the question of competency of the appeal by defendant No. 2 in the first Appellate Court. The action in that Court had been dismissed for reasons which need not be stated. Defendant No. 2 appealed, and there was a cross-appeal or cross-objection by the plaintiff. Obviously the contention could not be that defendant No. 2 should not have appealed, but that the cross-objection of plaintiff No. 1 was incompetent and that there should have been a properly constituted appeal by him. Whether described as a cross-objection or as an appeal, it seems to me not to matter. The only question that could possibly have arisen would be whether coming with his cross-objection the plaintiff had paid the proper court-fees. No question arose as regards that and apart from the considerations which have been stated by the learned Judge in the Court below and those to which I have referred, it must be remembered that the Court had the widest powers under O. XLI, r. 33, Civil Procedure Code. In my judgment, there is no substance in the objection as to the competency of the cross-objection by the plaintiff. For the reasons which I have stated, in my opinion, the decision of Mohammad Noor, J. is right.

There is reference to one authority on the question of abandonment: Laley Dharnidhar v. Jugeshwar Mahton (2). The head-note says that

"ordinarily execution of an effective sale deed by

(1) 16 P L T 864; 160 Ind. Cas. 437; A I R 1936 Pat. 29; 15 Pat. 187; 2 B R 218; 8 R P 365 (F B).

(2) A I R 1935 Pat. 269; 156 Ind. Cas. 217; 8 R P 46.

the raiyat in favour of a stranger will constitute an abandonment of the holding by the raiyat. If afterwards the raiyat continues cultivating the land and has made arrangement for the payment of rent, he is not liable to be ejected, provided that he has not repudiated the relationship with his landlord."

Mohammad Noor, J. decided that where the raiyat who has executed a sale cultivates the land under the purchaser as an under-raiyat, the landlord entitled to a decree for ejectment against the purchaser. This was a case under the Bengal Tenancy Act. One of the contentions upon which the three appeals were decided, was that where provision has been made for the payment of the rent, it could not be held that there had been an abandonment. There can be no possible application of the decision to the facts of the present case for the reasons which I have sufficiently stated. In my judgment, the appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs. The stay order is discharged.

Harries, C. J.—I agree.

s.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Suit No. 406 of 1936

July 19, 1938

ENGINEER, J.

MULCHAND JIVRAJ—PLAINTIFF

—APPLICANT

versus

D. LOW AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—OPONENTS

Minor—Suit by next friend on behalf of minor dismissed with costs—No express direction in decree that next friend should pay costs—Estate of minor, if liable for costs—In execution of decree for costs property of minor attached—Minor paying money to raise attachment—Application for refund of such money, whether can be made by new next friend.

Where the plaintiff is a minor, and suit brought on his behalf by a next friend is dismissed with costs, if the Court intends the next friend to pay the costs, there should be an express direction to that effect. Where there is no such direction in the decree and the decree merely says: "The plaintiff's suit is dismissed and the plaintiff do pay to the defendants their costs of the suit", the decree must mean what it says and the estate of the minor plaintiff must remain liable to satisfy the costs. It is not necessary that the decree should state in so many words that the costs of the successful party are to be taken out of the estate of the minor losing party. Turner v. Turner (1) and Slaughter v. Talbot (2), distinguished, Brijesurree Dossai v. Kishore Doss (3), relied on. (p 251, col. 1.)

Where a suit filed on behalf of the minor plaintiff by his next friend is dismissed with costs and in execution of the decree for costs the property of the minor is attached and the minor pays money to raise the attachment, an application for the refund of the money so paid, on the ground that the decree could not be executed against the minor is maintainable by the new next friend.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, Advocate-General for the Opponents.

Judgment.—This is a Chamber Summons taken out on behalf of the minor plaintiff for an order that the Sheriff of Bombay do refund to him certain moneys paid to the Sheriff under protest in order to raise an attachment brought on certain goods belonging to the minor plaintiff. The plaintiff's contention is that the decree is not one which can be executed against him. The suit was filed on behalf of the minor plaintiff by his next friend Umedmal Genaji. The suit was dismissed with costs. The decree as drawn up says:

"The plaintiff's suit is dismissed and the plaintiff do pay to the defendants their costs of the suit when taxed and noted in the margin hereof."

In execution of this decree for costs, the defendants got attached certain goods belonging to the minor plaintiff in the business which he now carries on through a munim who is other than the original next friend. The present application is made on behalf of the plaintiff by his present munim as his new next friend. It is contended on behalf of the defendants that the summons is misconceived as the application cannot be made on behalf of the plaintiff by anybody else except the original next friend. I cannot accept that submission. The suit is at an end, and in any event, it certainly cannot be expected that the original next friend should come forward and say that the estate of the minor plaintiff is not liable but he himself is personally liable. The present application has nothing to do with the suit itself and the present next friend has made an affidavit stating that he has no interest directly or indirectly adverse to the minor applicant. I do not see any reason why the present application cannot be made by the new next friend. On the merits of the summons, the contention on behalf of the plaintiff is that whoever might be liable for the costs of the defendants, the decree taken in connection with the judgment shows that the minor is not liable. In the affidavit in support of the summons, the contention is put in these terms:

"The remedy of the defendants for realization of their costs is against the said Umedmal Genaji, the next friend who in law is liable to the defendant for payment of the costs and not the said Mulchand Jivraj nor his properties."

The affidavit alleges that the conduct of Umedmal Genaji in the suit was improper, that his evidence was disbelieved by the learned Judge who tried the suit and that Umedmal Genaji is not even entitled to look to the minor's properties in respect of his liability for costs of the defendants. The question is really one of construction of the decree. There is no doubt that a minor cannot be made personally liable for the costs of the suit. It is equally clear that where the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs, the Court generally directs the next friend to pay the costs either without prejudice to his right to have recourse to the estate of the minor or without having such recourse if the next friend's conduct has not been proper. In this case the order does not say that the next friend should pay the costs. All that the decree says is that the plaintiff do pay the costs of the defendants. The argument for the plaintiff falls into two parts. First it is contended that in a decree of this kind it is the next friend who is liable to pay the costs, and, secondly, that in any event even if the next friend cannot be held liable on the construction of the decree as it stands, the minor cannot be liable and that the decree so far as the payment of costs is concerned, is abortive. Two decisions were cited in support of the first submission. They were Turner v. Turner (1) and Slaughter v. Talbot (2). In those cases the order simply was that the action be dismissed with costs, and it was held that under a judgment in that form, proceedings could be taken against the next friend for recovering the costs. In those cases there was no express direction that the plaintiff should pay the costs, and the next friend was considered liable to satisfy a decree in that form. Subsequent decisions, however, show the necessity of the decree providing expressly for payment of the costs by the next friend. In Harrison v. O'Donnell (3), judgment was entered for the defendant with costs, and an application was subsequently made to amend the certificate of judgment by adding in the judgment the words that the next friend should pay the costs. In delivering the judgment allowing the amendment, the learned Judge observed as follows (p. 104)*:

"As an infant was not liable for costs, it might well be argued that the judgment as delivered and as recorded in the associate's certificate, amounted

(1) (1726) 2 Str. 708.

(2) (1730) Willes 190.

(3) (1919) W N 104.

*Page of (1919) W. N. — [Ed.]

to a direction that the costs should be paid (to the defendant) by the (plaintiff's) next friend; but it was a better and safer practice that the Judge, when delivering judgment, should be asked to deal in express terms with any question that might arise as to the liability of the next friend in reference to costs."

It will be noticed that in this case the judgment had not been perfected before the application for amendment was made. In a similar case, Hulbert v. Thursten (4), an application for insertion of the words that the next friend should pay the costs was refused because the judgment had been drawn up and perfected. In In re Picton; Picton v. Picton (5), as the order was not drawn up, an application to have the order amended so as to make the next friend pay costs without prejudice to his right against the minor's estate was allowed. In making the order, the learned Judge observed that he did not intend to make an abortive order. It is these words which are relied on on behalf of the plaintiff in support of the submission that unless the order specifically directs the costs to come out of the estate of the minor, an order cannot be executed. I do not think that the submission is correct. One does not know what the position was in that case. It may be that the minor had admittedly no property and the order would therefore be abortive. In any case there is high authority for the proposition that an order can be made simply in terms that the minor plaintiff do pay the costs. I will refer to those authorities presently.

In Brijessuree Dossia v. Kishore Doss (6), where the decree did not in express terms say that the next friend was to pay the costs, execution proceedings taken against the next friend were set aside. It was pointed out that the rights of the parties depended upon the terms of the decree. It was argued on behalf of the plaintiff that in this suit the decree does not make it quite clear that the learned Judge intended that the costs of the defendants were to be recovered out of the estate of the minor plaintiff, and that therefore the execution proceedings taken cannot be sustained. In my opinion, the decree is quite clear and it directs the minor plaintiff to pay the defendants' costs. Undoubtedly such a decree does not entail any personal liability on the minor; but there is no reason why under a decree in this form the defendants cannot proceed against the estate of the minor as they have done. It is not necessary that the decree should state in so many words that the costs of the successful party are to be taken out of the estate of the minor losing party. The Court of Appeal in Slingsby v. The Attorney-General (7), made an order directing the infant and his guardian to pay the costs both in the Court of Appeal and in the Court below. The case went up to the House of Lords and the decision of the Appeal Court was confirmed. But as regards the costs of the appeal to the House of Lords, it was ordered that the next friend should pay the costs. Again in Elumalai Naicker v. Kuppammal (8), the Court of Appeal made an order allowing the successful respondents to recover their costs from the next friend or the minor appellant as they chose.

(4) (1931) W N 171.

(5) (1931) W N 254.

(6) 25 W R 316.

I cannot, in these proceedings, go into the alleged misconduct of the next friend in the suit and conjecture whether the Court did or did not mean that the minor's estate should be liable for the costs. I can only go by the decree as it stands. There is nothing in the judgment itself which militates against the construction which I put on the decree. The judgment is that the suit is dismissed with costs. That is the form of the judgment usually adopted whether the plaintiff is an adult or a minor. But where the plaintiff is a minor, if the Court intends the next friend to pay the costs, there should, in my opinion, be an express direction to that effect. In the absence of such direction, the decree must mean what it says and the estate of the minor plaintiff must remain liable to satisfy the costs. Summons dismissed with costs. Costs to be paid by the present next friend. Counsel certified.

B.

Summons dismissed.

(7) (1916) 32 T L R 364.

(8) 53 M 716; 128 Ind. Cas. 156; A I R 1931 Mad. 249; 58 M L J 623; (1930) M W N 289; Ind. Rul. (1931) Mad. 12.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 747 of 1938

August 11, 1939

AGARWALA, J.

KHEDU MAHTO AND OTHERS—APPELLANTSversusKHONKA MAHTO AND OTHERS—*RESPONDENTS

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 35—Suit to eject defendants on ground that they were under-raiyats of plaintiffs—In Khanapuri proceedings which preceded finally published Record of Rights, one of plaintiffs on behalf of all was stated in decision of Khanapuri Officer to have admitted that predecessors-in-interest of defendants were co-sharers—Admissibility of such statement.

A suit was instituted to eject the defendants on an allegation that they were under-raiyats of the plaintiffs. The defence was that the defendants were not under-raiyats but co-sharers with the plaintiffs. In the finally published Record of Rights, the predecessors of the defendants were recorded as under-raiyats in respect of the disputed land. But in the Khanapuri proceedings which preceded the finally published Record of Rights, M, one of the plaintiffs, was stated in the decision of the Khanapuri Officer to have admitted before him that the predecessors-in-interest of the defendants were co-sharers. At that time M was acting on behalf of all the persons jointly interested in the land in dispute.

Held, that the admission contained in the decision of the Khanapuri Officer was admissible. Furthermore, even if the decision of the Khanapuri Officer were inadmissible for proving the truth of the admission made by M before the Khanapuri Officer, it would still be admissible for the purpose of proving that M made such a statement. Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar (2), Collector of Gorakhpore v. Ram Sundar Mal (3) and Chand Roy v. Bhagwati Charan (5), relied on. Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (4), distinguished.

A. from the appellate decree of the Sub-Judge, Purulia, dated May 26, 1938.

Mr. R. S. Chatterji, for the Appellants.

Mr. N. N. Roy, for the Respondents.

Judgment—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs from a decision of the Subordinate Judge of Purulia reversing a decision of the Muusif. The appeal arises out of a suit to eject the defendants on an allegation that they were under-raiyats of the plaintiffs. The defence was that the defendants were not under-raiyats but co-sharers with the plaintiffs. The Court below has accepted the defence and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. This decision is challenged by the appellants on the ground that the Court has acted on inadmissible evidence. The evidence objected to is a decision of the Khanapuri Officer in the course of the settlement in 1903. In the finally published Record of Rights, the predecessors of the defendants were recorded as under-raiyats in respect of the disputed land. But in the Khanapuri proceedings which preceded the finally published Record of Rights, one of the present plaintiffs, Jhari Mahto, is stated in the decision of the Khanapuri Officer to have admitted before him that the predecessors-in-interest of the present defendants were co-sharers. It is this admission contained in the decision of the Khanapuri Officer which is challenged as inadmissible. In Parbutty Dassi v. Purno

Chunder Singh (1) the plaintiff who was sued for possession of a fishery sought to put in evidence an admission alleged to have been made in a previous suit by the defendants' predecessors in title in a written statement filed in that suit. The only evidence of the admission was the recital from the pleadings contained in the preliminary portion of the decree in the final suit. It was held that the statement in the decree was evidence of the admission under s. 35, Evidence Act. The next case on the point is Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar (2). That was a suit for partition of family property in which it became necessary for the plaintiff to prove that his grandfather had been adopted by A. He sought to prove this fact by judgments in which it was stated that A's brother who was the grandfather of defendant No. 1 had sued to recover moneys due to A, alleging that the adopted son was an infant living under his protection. It was held that these judgments were admissible in order to prove the statement made by the predecessor-in-title of the party against whom they were sought to be used. This case was referred to by the Privy Council in Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ram Sundar Mal (3) at p. 165. With reference to the Madras case, their Lordships said:

"In Krishnasami Ayyangar v. Rajagopala Ayyangar (2) a statement amounting to an admission which was contained in a judgment was received in evidence under s. 35 as an entry in a record made by a public servant in the course of his duty. There is much to be said for this view of s. 35. In India judgments have to be in writing and signed by the Judge and the original judgments and decrees are records of the Court and retained in the record room the parties being supplied with certified copies only."

Now, the question before the Privy Council was whether an admission contained in a pedigree attached to a decree in a former suit was admissible against the successor-in-interest of the person on whose behalf the pedigree had been admitted in the former suit. Their Lordships held that the pedigree attached to the decree was admissible for the purpose of proving the admission relied upon. On behalf of the appellants reference was made to the decision of the Privy Council in

Ram Parkash Das v. Anand Das (4). The question in dispute between the parties in suit case related to the right to succeed to an asthal, it being alleged that one of the claimants was debarred by reason of his being a married man. This was sought to be proved by a statement with regard to it in the judgment of the Criminal Court. The Privy Council held that the judgment was inadmissible for this purpose. That case was distinguishable from the cases already referred to in this respect that the person who made the statement in that case was a stranger to the parties before the Privy Council. Their Lordships, therefore, there said that the criminal proceedings were irrelevant in the case before them. In the case that is before me not only is Jhari Mahto himself the plaintiff, but from the decision of the Khanapuri Officer it appears that he was, at the time, acting on behalf of all the persons jointly interested in the land in dispute. I, therefore hold that the decision of the Court below cannot be challenged on the ground of inadmissibility of evidence. Furthermore, even if the decision of the Khanapuri Officer were inadmissible for proving the truth of the admission made by Jhari Mahto before the Khanapuri Officer, it would still be admissible for the purpose of proving that Jhari Mahto made such a statement, and when that fact is admissible, the further fact, that Jhari Mahto himself being the plaintiff in the present litigation did not venture into the witness box in support of his case that the defendants are under-raiyats could not but impress the Court of fact unfavourably with regard to his claim. It is evident from the judgment of the Court below that that Court was very unfavourably impressed by the fact that Jhari Mahto did not offer himself for cross-examination. Under these circumstances, even if the evidence objected to were inadmissible, I am not prepared, in second appeal, to hold that the rejection of that evidence would have made any difference to the decision of the Court below.

Finally, reference may be made to the decision in Chand Ray v. Bhagwati Charan (5) that the proceedings before the survey authorities prior to the publication of the Record of Rights are admissible for the

(1) 9 O 586.

(2) 18 M 73.

(3) A I R 1934 P O 157 at p. 165; 150 Ind. Cas. 545; 56 A 468; 61 I A 286; 7 R P O 1; 11 O W N 889; 40 L W 217; (1934) A L J 779; 67 M L J 274; 15 P L T 531; 60 O L J 67; (1934) M W N 751; 36 Bom. L R 867; 38 O W N 1101 (P O).

(4) 43 I A 73; 33 Ind. Cas. 583; A I R 1916 P O 256; 43 O 707; 20 O W N 802; 14 A L J 621; (1916) 1 M W N 466; 31 M L J 1; 18 Bom. L R 490; 3 L W 556; 24 O L J 116; 20 M L T 267 (P O).

(5) 2 Pat. 814; 81 Ind. Cas. 326; A I R 1924 Pat. 248.

purpose of rebutting the presumption which attaches to the finally published record. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

s. Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT Special Bench

First Appeal No. 87 of 1937; F. A. No. 108 of 1938; F. M. A. No. 110 of 1938; F. A. No. 306 of 1937; F. M. A. Nos. 98 and 146 of 1938; S. A. No. 877 of 1936; S. A. No. 714 of 1937; M. A. No. 115 of 1937; S. M. A. No. 164 of 1938; Civil Revision No. 1405 of 1938 and F. A. No. 73 of 1937

July 10, 1939

DERBYSHIRE, C. J., NASIM ALI AND
R. C. MITTER, JJ.

KHIRODE C. GHOSE AND OTHERS—
APPELLANTS

versus

NARENDRA N. SANYAL AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS

Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act (VII of 1936), ss. 32 to 36—"Civil Court," if includes High Court

The expression "Civil Court," in Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, does not include the High Court.

Messrs. Apurba Chandra Mukherjee (in No. 87), Jatindra Mohan Choudhury (in Nos. 108 and 110), Phani Bhusan Chakravarty (in No. 306), Panchanon Ghose (in No. 96), Chandra Sekhar Sen (in No. 146), Atul Chandra Gupta (in No. 877), Narendra Kumar Das (in No. 744), Phani Bhusan Chakravarty (in No. 115), Nripendra Chandra Das (in No. 164), Jitendra Kumar Sen Gupta (in No. 1405), and Amarendra Nath Bose and Dharendra Krishna Roy, (in No. 73), for the Appellants.

Messrs. Phanindra Kumar Sanyal (in No. 87), Satindra Nath Roy Choudhury (in Nos. 108 and 110), Nripendra Chandra Das (in No. 306), Abinash Chandra Ghose (in No. 96), Anil Kumar Das Gupta (in No. 146), Jatindra Mohan Choudhury and Bireswar Chatterjee (in No. 877), Rohini Binode Rakshit (in No. 744), Asok Chandra Sen (in No. 115), Jatindra Mohan Ghose (in No. 164), Bhupendra Kishore Bose (in No. 1405) and Paresh Lal Shome (in No. 73), for the Respondents.

Derbyshire, C. J.—In Narsing Das Tansukdas v. Chogemul and another (1), which was heard before a Special Bench consisting of myself, Lord-Williams, Bartley, Nasim Ali and Mitter, JJ., in December and (1) 43 O W N 613; 183 Ind. Cas. 113; A I R 1939 Cal. 435; 69 O L J 468; 12 R O 129; 1 L R (1939) 2 Cal. 98 (F B).

January last, judgment was given on March 31 of this year. The view of myself, Bartley and Nasim Ali, JJ. was that the words "Civil Court" in the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, 1935, did not include the High Court. That was the basis of the decisions that we gave. Lord-Williams and Mitter, JJ. differed on that, but were of opinion that if the words "Civil Court" did include the High Court, then the Act was ultra vires of the local Legislature. In my opinion we are bound by the majority decision in that case that the words "Civil Court" in the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, 1935, do not include the High Court. The consequence is that the notices which have been received in the cases brought before us are no reason for making any stay in the appeals or in the revision case. We accordingly order that the appeals and the revision case be heard in the ordinary course.

Nasim Ali, J.—I agree.

R. C. Mitter, J.—I agree.

D. Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT Criminal Revision No 431 of 1939 September 4, 1939

MULLA, J.

CHIRANJI LAL—APPLICANT
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

U. P. Public Gambling Act (III of 1867), s. 3—Prosecution must prove commodity in respect of alleged gambling.

It is incumbent on the prosecution under the law to prove by definite evidence the commodity in respect of which the alleged satta gambling was going on. The vague and general statement by the prosecution witnesses that satta gambling was going on proves nothing in law. Shyam Sunder v. Emperor, Cr. R No 263 of 1932, Shyam Sunder v. Emperor, Cr. R No. 173 of 1931 and Sarnimal v. Emperor, Cr. R. No. 699 of 1925, relied on.

Cr. R. from an order of the Sessions Judge, Agra, dated February 24, 1939.

Mr. K. D. Malaviya, for the Applicant.

The Deputy Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Order.—This is an application in revision by one Chiranji Lal who has been convicted by a First Class Magistrate in a summary trial of an offence under s. 3, Gambling Act. From the judgment of the learned trying Magistrate which is the only record in the case, it appears that the charge against the applicant was that he was keeping his shop as a gaming house for satta gambling. There is nothing in the judgment of the learned Magistrate to show what constituted the alleged gambling and what was the commodity in respect of which the gambling was going on. Several points of fact and law have been taken by the learned Counsel for the applicant in challenging the conviction; but the most important one which is sufficient for deciding this application is that it was incumbent for the prosecution under the law to prove by definite evidence the commodity in respect of which the alleged satta gambling was going on. The vague and general statement by the prosecution witnesses that satta gambling was going on proved nothing in law. The argument is obviously sound and must prevail. It is fully supported by several decisions of this Court, e. g., Shyam Sunder v. Emperor, Criminal Revision No. 263 of 1932, Shyam Sunder v. Emperor, Criminal Revision No. 173 of 1931 and Sarnimal v. Emperor, Criminal Revision No. 699 of 1925. It appears that these cases have not been reported and that accounts for the lower Courts going wrong in this matter. The legal position is, however, perfectly clear and I, therefore, allow the application and set aside the conviction and sentence of the applicant. The fine, if any, paid by him will be refunded.

s. Application allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT Special Bench

Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 3117
of 1939

August 21, 1939

LEACH, C. J., MCKEET and KRISHNASWAMI
AYYANGAR, JJ.

In the matter of K. J., A VAKIL, MADRAS Legal practitioner—Misconduct—Appropriation of client's money by Advocate—Name struck off roll—
Reinstatement, when advisable.

Where an Advocate misappropriates a considerable sum of his clients, the act of professional misconduct committed by him is a very grave one and it is not possible to allow him to continue practising in an honourable profession. But that does not mean that the Court is precluded from reinstating him when adequate punishment has been imposed and he has shown that he has rehabilitated himself in such a manner that he is fitted to be admitted into his profession again.

Messrs. T. R. Venkatarama Sastri and K. S. Sankara Iyer, for the Petitioner.

Leach, C. J.—The name of the petitioner was struck off the roll of Advocates of this Court on October 15, 1931, as it had been shown that he had misappropriated a sum of Rs. 4,800 belonging to a client. The petitioner, who had considerable property, got into financial difficulties in 1927 and on February 14, of that year he was adjudicated an insolvent. On April 25, 1927, he was suspended from practice. The delay in the passing of the order striking the petitioner's name off the rolls was due to the fact that the Court desired to know the position disclosed by the insolvent's public examination before arriving at a decision. The justice of the order of this Court striking the petitioner's name off the roll of Advocates is not and could not be questioned. It is said, however, that during the 12 years that have elapsed since the petitioner was first suspended he has worked hard to rehabilitate himself and has succeeded in establishing an honourable reputation. The petitioner rendered all assistance that he could to the Official Assignee and secured his discharge on December 8, 1930. After his suspension from practice he obtained a clerkship in the office of Mr. Shamanna, a well-known solicitor of Madras, and retained this post until 1934 when he obtained a clerkship with Messrs. King and Partridge, also well-known solicitors of this city. He has continued in their service ever since. Mr. Shamanna and Messrs. H. Maitland Jones and Leslie D. Miller of Messrs. King and Partridge have given the petitioner certificates of character. Mr. Shamanna says that while he was employed by him the petitioner was dealing with his cases and with his clients and that he found his conduct and dealings both with his clients and the other members of his establishment to be satisfactory, and guided by a high sense of probity. Mr. Maitland Jones says that while in the employment of his firm the petitioner has been entrusted with important work. Mr. Maitland Jones had many opportunities of observing his conduct which he says was excellent and in addition his probity was above suspicion. Mr. Miller says:

"From my knowledge of him, in spite of what happened in the past, I personally would place every confidence in his integrity."

The petitioner has also filed a certificate given to him by Mr. Nugent Grant in April of this year. Mr. Grant says that the petitioner has throughout the period of his exclusion from the profession exhibited a consciousness of the injury he has done to himself and the profession of which he was once an honourable member. Mr. Grant believes that he had made every endeavour to atone for his lapse from morality. The act of professional misconduct committed by the petitioner was a very grave one and it was not possible to allow him to continue practising in an honourable profession. But that does not mean that the Court is precluded from reinstating him when adequate punishment has been imposed and he has shown that he has rehabilitated himself in such a manner that he is fitted to be admitted into his profession again. I consider that there is here ground for the Court holding that the petitioner has been fully punished and that he has re-gained his character to an extent that justifies his re-admission as an Advocate of this Court. For these reasons, I would allow the petition.

Mockett, J.—I agree.

Krishnaswami Ayyangar, J.—I agree.

N.D.

Petition allowed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Full Bench

First Civil Appeal No. 11 of 1936

October 14, 1939

THOMAS, C. J., ZIA-UL HASAN AND BENNETT, JJ.

On difference of opinion between

HAMILTON AND YORKER, JJ.

Lala MAHADEO PRASAD—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

Musammat JAGANNATH KUAR—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT

U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act (XXVII of 1934), s. 2 (2), Proviso 1, Expl. VII—Expl. VII, whether independent of first proviso—Interpretation of Statutes—Language of statute plain—Consideration of hardship in particular cases.

Explanation VII to s. 2 (2), U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act is independent of the first proviso and it is not an addition to cls. (a) to (g) of s. 2 (2). The word "explanation" has wrongly been used. It is more like a "Proviso" than an "explanation". [p. 262, col. 2.]

There is no absurdity or ambiguity in the Expl. VII. [ibid.]

Per Thomas, C. J.—Where the language of a statute is plain in itself, it is not open to the interpreter to add to it or to deduct from it or even to consider whether the rule is likely to create hardships in particular cases if it be read in its ordinary sense. The words themselves alone must be considered to see the intention of the law given. [ibid.]

F. O. A. against the order of the Civil Judge, Gonda, dated December 12, 1935.

Mr. Ram Prasad Varma, R. B., for the Appellant.

Messrs. Radha Krishna and Karta Krishna, for the Respondent.

Hamilton, J.—(January 21, 1939).—This appeal No. 11 of 1936 is an appeal from the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Gonda in a suit under s. 33 of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

The learned Judge came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was an agriculturist and, therefore, decreed the suit reducing interest under s. 30 of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

The one ground urged in this appeal is that this decision is incorrect in view of Expl. VII to s. 2 (2) of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

The plaintiff is a zamindar who pays over Rs. 1,000 revenue, who pays over Rs. 120 local rates—in fact, the amount is stated to be over Rs. 1,200—and who pays over Rs. 500 rent. But for these amounts he would have come under s. 2 (2) (a), (c), (d) and (f).

The learned Civil Judge came to the conclusion that Expl. VII which says that a person holding land free of revenue when he pays both rent and local rate shall not be deemed to be an agriculturist if the total of the rent and local rate annually payable by him exceeds Rs. 500 is subject to the first proviso which is as follows:

"Provided that in s. 2 (10) (a), 3, 4, 5, 8 and Chaps. IV and V an 'agriculturist' means also a person who would belong to a class of persons mentioned in parts (a) to (g) of this sub-section, if the limits of land revenue local rates, rent and area mentioned in these parts were omitted."

There are a number of points to be considered, and I shall consider them in what I regard as being the proper order.

The first point is whether for a person to be an agriculturist under this section, he must come within one of the cls. (a) to (g) and not more than one, that is to say, if he pays revenue he must not pay rent: if he pays rent, he must not pay revenue and so on.

I do not think that a person who comes in under more than one class is by this fact no longer an agriculturist. In the first place the Act does not say so, and secondly, Expl. VI, Expl. VII and illustrations 1 and 2 show that a person who belongs to more than one of the cls. (a) to (g) can still be an agriculturist provided his annual payments do not exceed a certain sum. The fact, therefore, that the plaintiff pays land revenue, local rate and rent do not prevent him being an agriculturist.

The next point to be considered is whether a person whose annual payment of either revenue or local rate or rent exceeds the maximum amount of any of these in (a) to (f) ceases to be an agriculturist. I hold that he does cease to be an agriculturist because otherwise there would be no reason for the first proviso, and this is also shown by the words in Expl. VI "or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g)" which is further illustrated by Illustration (ii).

The plaintiff, therefore, is not an agriculturist under (a) to (g), and it is only if the first proviso brings him in again that he is an agriculturist.

Undoubtedly, Expl. VII applies to the plaintiff because he holds land free of revenue and he pays both rent and local rate and the annual amount so payable by him exceeds Rs. 500. This proviso is entered in the statute as Expl. VII, but the question is whether the word "Explanation" is a correct term. I have not been able to find either in Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes or in Beal's Cardinal Rules of Legal Interpretation anything about explanations occurring in statutes. I think indeed that it is doubtful whether an explanation should occur in a statute which, if properly framed, should require no explanation in it, and an explanation is really an interpretation which is a matter for Courts. The only doubt as to the meaning of s. 2 (2), up to, but not including the first proviso, would be whether a person who came under more than one of (a) to (g) would or would not be an agriculturist. If coming under more than one clause, disqualifies a man from being an agriculturist, the amounts payable by him in the form of revenue, local rate and rent do not have to be taken into consideration. If it is not a disqualification then the payment of rent, revenue and local rate not exceeding the maximum for rent, revenue and local rate respectively would not be a disqualification. Explanation VII, however, lays down that a payment exceeding Rs. 500 does disqualify so that a payment of Rs. 120 local rate and Rs. 500 rent would disqualify a person from being an agriculturist although neither the maximum amount of local rate nor the maximum amount of rent was exceeded. Explanation VII, has, therefore, modified the main body of the section instead of explaining it, and it should have appeared as a proviso or should have been called an exception. If it is a proviso, it modified the provisos which come before it and would, therefore, modify the first proviso, and if it is an exception, it is a complete disqualification.

The learned Counsel for the appellant accordingly argues as follows:—

It is true that generally a person otherwise coming under one or more of (a) to (f) will still be an agriculturist for certain sections if he exceeds the maximum limit, in any, of (a) to (f) because of the first proviso, but the first proviso is superseded whenever Expl. VII, comes in. Whenever a person who holds land, free of revenue, pays both rent and local rate more than Rs. 500, he ceases to be an agriculturist even if he pays less than Rs. 120 local rate and less than Rs. 500 rent; for instance, if he pays Rs. 110 as local rate and Rs. 391 as rent; as this is laid down in Expl. VII. In such a case the first proviso cannot help him because it only applies to persons who exceed Rs. 120 local rate or Rs. 500 rent, or both. The learned Counsel argues then that when such a man ceases to be an agriculturist, it is only reasonable to hold that a person who exceeds the maximum of local rate or rent can be in no better position than the poorer man to whom the first proviso cannot be applied.

The learned Counsel for the respondent admits that a person paying not more than Rs. 120 local rate and not more than Rs. 500 rent when the total payment does exceed Rs. 500 ceases to be an agriculturist. He argues, however, that this does not apply when there is a payment of local rate or rent above the maximum allowed for local rate or rent as then the first proviso comes into play. He points out that Expl. VI, excludes for the purposes of certain parts of the Act persons who pay more than Rs. 1,000 as rent and revenue or a person who is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g). From this he argues that the exclusion of persons who pay more than Rs. 1,000 rent and revenue combined refers only to such persons as do not pay more than Rs. 1,000 as revenue or Rs. 500 as rent, and if either of these limits are exceeded, the disqualification is under the succeeding words "or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g)". He then asks that Expl. VII should be read similarly as if these words "or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g)" occurred in Expl. VII. In the first place, these words do not occur there and Expl. VII has a meaning without these words being there. Further, it does not follow that his argument about Expl. VI is correct, for one can hold that the words "or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g)" are redundant because the main body of the section with the first proviso already introduces this disqualification, but the legislature wanted to make this clearer still.

In my opinion, Expl. VII is to the effect that once the maximum annual combined payment has been exceeded, the payer is not an agriculturist, whether he exceeds Rs. 500 as rent or Rs. 120 as local rate or not, and this exclusion continues even if he exceeds either or both of these maxima. The explanation, as I have said, although so called, is really a proviso or an exception and coming after the first proviso must supersede it when repugnant to it.

The Act is undoubtedly designed to make provisions for the relief of agriculturists from indebtedness, but the first part of s. 2 (2) defines an agriculturist and shows that generally only agriculturists of a certain financial status are to be benefitted. It is true that for certain sections of the Act the first proviso enlarges the number of agriculturists but it may well be that even this enlargement was intended by the legislature not to include those holding land free of revenue-paying rent and local rate above a certain amount. Why such classes should be singled out I do not know, but when they are undoubtedly not agriculturists if they pay more than Rs. 500 even if they do not exceed the various maximum amounts of (a) to (f), it is difficult to hold that when paying rent and local rate exceeding any of these maxima they were intended by the legislature to be deemed to be agriculturists.

I would, therefore, find that the plaintiff is not an agriculturist in view of Expl. VII, and the appeal must, therefore, be allowed with costs. Interest will then be throughout at the contractual rate.

Yorke, J.—(January 21, 1939).—I regret that I am unable to agree with my learned brother's view in this appeal.

The question for decision is whether the plaintiff who is a zamindar paying over Rs. 1,000 as land revenue and paying over, much over Rs. 120 as local rate and who also pays over Rs. 500 as rent is an agriculturist within the meaning of s. 2 (2) of the Agriculturists' Relief Act read with the first proviso to that section. I would put the matter as it appears to me on somewhat different lines from those which he has followed. In the first place it appears to me clear that the intention of the Act, as it is to be derived both from the preamble and from the general scheme of the Act, is that it is intended to make provision for the relief of agriculturists, both small and big, that it is intended to help big agriculturists as well as small is clearly inferable from the wording of the first proviso which removes the limits of land revenue, local rates, rent and area mentioned in the definitions (a) to (g) for the purposes of certain sections of the Act, those sections being sections which afford a very large degree of relief to agriculturist debtors. Secondly, I am clear that in the light of the provisions in s. 2 (2), there is no general bar to combinations of qualifications for being held to be an agriculturist that is to say, that an agriculturist may, subject to any of the explanations, combine the whole of the capacities (a) to (g), and yet be counted as an agriculturist for the purposes of the Act, and he may further be an agriculturist for the purposes of certain sections of the Act, the sections already referred to, in the same capacities but with the limits of land revenue, etc., removed. There are only two explanations which seem to operate as limitations in this case of combination of capacities. These are found in Expl. VI and Expl. VII. Explanation VI provides that "a person, who pays both rent and revenue, shall not be deemed to be an agriculturist for the purposes of Chaps. II (except ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8), III and VI, if the total of the rent and revenue annually payable by him exceeds Rs. 1,000, or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g)."

It is important to note that this explanation has effect only in respect of sections which are not mentioned in the first proviso. There is, therefore, no sort of interrelation between the first proviso which removes the limits provided in the definitions (a) to (g) and this explanation. I am very doubtful whether Expl. VI is really of any assistance for the purpose of interpreting Expl. VII since it definitely cannot have any operation whatsoever to exclude the application of the first proviso, and the real question which arises in regard to Expl. VII is whether the wording of that explanation is such as to preclude the applicability of the first proviso.

Coming to Expl. VII, this explanation is either an absolute bar or it is not an absolute bar. If it is an absolute bar, then it is in contradiction with the whole scheme of the Act and it leads to illogical and unreasonable results. Secondly, if it is an absolute bar, it should not have been described as an explanation, but as an exception, or preferably it should have found a place in the section itself above the explanations, as a fourth proviso. As it has not found such a place, I do not think it is reasonable to interpret it as if it were worded "provided further that" instead of "Expl. VII". Now as to the illogical results which seem to me to follow from treating this explanation as an absolute bar; in the first place it may be read as contradicting the definitions (b) and (c) since it is obvious that a man who pays local rate under (b) or (c) amounting to Rs. 499 and rent amounting to Re. 1 is still within the combined maximum allowed by Expl. VII. From another point of view, there is a similar incongruity. A pays Rs. 500 or Rs. 5,000 or even Rs. 5 lakhs as local rate. He comes under definition (b) or definition (c) assisted for the purposes of the important sections by Proviso I. B on the other hand pays Rs. 500 or Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 5 lakhs local rate plus Re. 1 as rent, B on this line of argument is barred entirely. Thus there is on this view a completely illogical exclusion of people who combine two qualifications, although it is not really the mere combination of the qualifications which excludes them, since it does not do so provided the combined total under the two heads does not exceed Rs. 500. In these circumstances, I am strongly inclined to the view that Expl. VII is really, though described as an explanation, a sort of addition to cls. (a) to (g), and means no more than that, whereas by combination of qualifications (c) and (f) or (b) and (f) a man would be an agriculturist if he paid even as much as Rs. 500 rent in addition to the full limit of Rs. 120 local rate, by this explanation there is added a further limitation (similar to the limitations in (a) to (f) for people who combine those two sets of qualifications, that is to say, a limitation for the purposes of the sections not covered by the first proviso. I would therefore infer that if Expl. VII is properly so described and is to be construed as I have suggested above, it must necessarily be subject to the application of the first proviso. It may be that prima facie that proviso will not operate to help a person who has a combination of local rate and rent totalling between Rs. 500 and Rs. 620, but if this explanation is taken as a kind of additional classification of a like nature with those in (a) to (g), it would not require very much elasticity in the interpretation of the law to apply the first proviso to such cases even though not strictly so applicable.

There is only one case on record in which this point has been at all considered, namely Sheo Shankar Das and another v. Mohammad Hasan (1937 A. L. J. R. 620) (1) in which a Bench of the Allahabad High Court disposing of an appeal under O. XII, r. 11, remarked as follows:—

"It is contended in appeal that the Expl. VII added to the section lays down that a person in districts subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation, 1795, shall not be deemed to be an agriculturist if the total of the rent and local rate annually payable by him exceeds Rs. 500, and it is urged that this explanation must override the proviso. We are of opinion that this explanation has been added in order to explain the provisions of the main section, particularly (b), whereas the proviso is intended to exempt from the operation of the limits imposed by certain sections and two specific Chapters. There is nothing in Expl. VII to suggest that it was intended to apply to applications governed by Chaps. IV and V and other sections mentioned in the proviso. In our opinion, the explanation is subject to the proviso so far as applications specially exempted under it are concerned."

It is unfortunate that the remarks which follow in the next few lines clearly indicate that this was not a case to which Expl. VII was really applicable, and therefore the above remarks were undoubtedly of the nature of obiter dicta. None the less they do express what appears to me to be a reasonable view of Expl. VII, namely that it is subject to the application of the first proviso.

On this view of the case, the present appeal would necessarily fail and be dismissed with costs.

By Court.—(January 21, 1939).—As there is a difference of opinion between the Members of the Bench, we accordingly refer this case to a Full Bench under s. 13 (b) of the Oudh Courts Act.

(1) (1937) A L J 680; 171 Ind. Cas 573; A I R 1937 All. 633; 1937 R D 359; 10 R A 297 (1); I L R (1937) All. 759; (1937) A L R 862 (2).

Messrs. Ram Prasad Varma, R. B., and S. N. Srivastava, for the Appellant.

Messrs. R. B. Lal and Karta Krishna, for the Respondent.

Thomas, C. J.—(October 5, 1939).—Bhaiya Lat Bakhsh Singh Taluqdar of Majhgawan filed a suit under s. 33 of the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act in the Court of the Civil Judge of Gonda. The learned Civil Judge held that the plaintiff was an agriculturist and accordingly decreed the suit and determined the amount on the three mortgages, Exs. 1, 2 and 3.

The appeal came up for decision before a Bench of this Court, and as it differed with regard to the construction to be placed on the first proviso to s. 2 (2) of the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act read with Expl. VII to the said section, it referred the appeal to a Full Bench.

The word "agriculturist" is defined in s. 2 (2), cls. (a) to (h). Clauses (a) to (g) show that the word "agriculturist" means a person who pays land revenue, local rates, rent or holds land free of rent up to certain specified limits of land, revenue, local rates, rent and area.

The plaintiff admittedly paid over Rs. 1,000 as land revenue, over Rs. 120 as local rates and over Rs. 500 as rent; he also held some land revenue-free.

The learned Civil Judge held that the plaintiff was an agriculturist because in his opinion Expl. VII to s. 2 (2) of the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act was subject to the first proviso of the section.

On appeal to this Court Mr. Justice Yorke concurred with the above view, but Mr. Justice Hamilton was of opinion that the plaintiff was taken out of the class of agriculturists by the Expl. VII to s. 2 (2), which is as follows:—

"When a person holding land in districts subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation I of 1795, or holding land free of revenue, pays both rent and local rate, he shall not be deemed to be an agriculturist if the total of the rent and local rate annually payable by him exceeds Rs. 500"

The question for consideration is whether the proviso should be construed as subject to Expl. VII or whether Expl. VII should be construed as creating an absolute bar.

The contention on behalf of the defendant-appellant is that the plaintiff is not an agriculturist in view of Expl. VII to s. 2 (2) of the U. P. Agriculturists' Relief Act. The first proviso lays down that

"In ss. 2 (10) (a), 3, 4, 5, 8 and Chaps. IV and V an 'agriculturist' means also a person who would belong to a class of persons mentioned in parts (a) to (g) of this sub-section, if the limits of land revenue, local rates, rent and area mentioned in these parts were omitted"

It means that the limits of revenue, local rates, rent and area which are to be omitted in determining the status of an agriculturist under Chap. V are the limits mentioned in cls. (a) to (g) of s. 2 (2). No other limits are intended as prescribed in Expls. VI or VII to the said section. In my opinion, therefore, it is clear, that Expl. VII is independent of the first proviso and it is not an addition to cls. (a) to (g) of s. 2 (2). The word "explanation" has wrongly been used. It is, in my opinion, more like a "Proviso" than an "explanation."

There is no absurdity or ambiguity in the Expl. VII. Where the language of a statute is plain in itself, it is not open to the interpreter to add to it or to deduct from it or even to consider whether the rule is likely to create hardships in particular cases if it be read in its ordinary sense. The words themselves alone must be considered to see the intention of the law given.

I am therefore of opinion that Expl. VII is independent of the first proviso and the plaintiff is not an agriculturist.

I would, therefore, allow the appeal with costs.

Zia-ul Hasan, J.—(October 5, 1939).—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by Bhaiya Lat Bakhsh Singh, now deceased, predecessor-in-interest of the respondent, in the Court of the Civil Judge of Gonda under s. 33 of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

The appeal came up for decision before a Bench of this Court but as the learned Judges composing the Bench differed on the question whether or not the plaintiff was an agriculturist to which the provisions of s. 33 of the Act could be applied, the appeal was referred to a Full Bench.

It is not disputed that the plaintiff was a zemindar who paid over Rs. 1,000 as land revenue, over Rs. 120 as local rates and over Rs. 500 as rent and that he also held some land, revenue-free.

It was contended by the defendant (the present appellant) that the plaintiff was not an agriculturist in view of Expl. VII of s. 2 (2) of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

The trial Court held that he was an agriculturist because, according to his view, Expl. VII was subject to the first proviso of the said section. On this finding the suit of the plaintiff was decreed and the amount due on the mortgage deeds in suit was determined. The defendant appealed to this Court and while Mr. Justice Hamilton was of opinion that the plaintiff was taken out of the class of agriculturists by Expl. VII to s. 2 (2), Mr. Justice Yorke concurred with the view of the trial Court in holding that that explanation was governed by the first proviso to the said section. After giving my best consideration to the question, I agree with the view taken by Mr. Justice Hamilton, though on grounds totally different from those on which he has based his opinion.

It appears to me that for the determination of the question before us it is not necessary to see what is the effect of a combination of qualifications mentioned in cls. (a) to (h) of s. 2 (2), nor, in view of the clear wording of the section, is it for us to speculate about the intention of the Legislature in enacting the different parts of s. 2 (2). The simple key to the solution of the apparent difficulty lies, in my opinion, in the words "mentioned in these parts" occurring in the first proviso. These words clearly show that the limits of revenue, rent etc., which are to be omitted according to the proviso in determining the status of an agriculturist under Chap. V (which includes s. 33 under which the suit was brought) are only the limits mentioned in the clauses (called "parts" in the proviso) (a) to (g) of s. 2 (2) and not any other limits such as are prescribed in Expl. VI or VII. It follows therefore that Expl. VII must be read as independent of the first proviso, so that even if a person is an agriculturist under that proviso, he is not to be deemed such if he holds land in a district subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation I of 1795 or holds land free of revenue and pays both rent and local rate, the aggregate amount of which exceeds Rs. 500.

There is another reason why I am of opinion that Expl. VII must be given effect to irrespective of the first proviso and that is a comparison of that explanation with Expl. VI. Explanation VI shows that though a person who pays both rent and revenue is not to be deemed an agriculturist if the total of rent and revenue payable by him annually exceeds Rs. 1,000 or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g), this provision is not to apply when the question of the person being an agriculturist arises under ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8 or under Chaps. IV and V, that is to say, in almost every case in which the limits mentioned in cls. (a) to (g) are to be omitted under the first proviso. No such exceptions appear in Expl. VII. This necessarily leads to the conclusion that a person to whom Expl. VII applied is not to be deemed an agriculturist for any purposes of the Act, that is, even if the question arises under ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8 and Chap. IV, and V for which provision is made in the first proviso. Had it been the intention of the Legislature that Expl. VII should be subject to the first proviso like Expl. VI, the sections and chapters mentioned in the proviso would have been excepted in this explanation also as they were in Expl. VI.

It is no doubt true that, as my learned brothers have pointed out, the term "explanation" does not properly apply to what has been enacted in Expl. VII and that that provision is more in the nature of a proviso to the first proviso than an explanation of the main section; but perhaps it was termed an explanation because like the other explanations it has reference to some of the cls. (a) to (h) of s. 2 (2). Expls. I and II refer and show the intention of the Legislature in regard to cls. (a), (d), (e), (f), and (g), Expl. III to cl. (d), Expls. IV and V to cls. (f) and Expl. VI to a combination of cl. (a) and (f). Similarly Expl. VII contemplates combinations of cls. (b) and (f), and (c) and (f). When however the provision contained in Expl. VII is clear and unambiguous in its terms, we should not look to how it is designated by the Legislature. Nor do I think it is necessary for us to probe into the question why the Legislature deprived persons holding land in districts subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation I of 1795 or holding land free of revenue and paying rent and local rate exceeding Rs. 500, of the benefits of the Agriculturists' Relief Act.

I am therefore of opinion that as the first proviso refers only to the limits mentioned in cl. (a) to (g) and as there is nothing in Expl. VII to show that its provisions are subject to that proviso, we cannot but hold that Expl. VII is quite independent of the first proviso. Consequently the plaintiff who held land free of revenue and who pays rent and local rate much more than Rs. 500 cannot, in view of Expl. VII, be held to be an agriculturist.

I would; therefore, allow the appeal with costs.

Bennett, J.—(October 5, 1939).—This case has been referred to a Full Bench in view of a difference of opinion between two learned Judges of this Court with regard to the construction to be placed on the first proviso to s. 2 (2) of the Agriculturists' Relief Act, read with Expl. VII.

Sub-section (2) of s. 2 contains the definition of the word "agriculturist" and the substantive portion of the definition is contained in eight clauses (a) to (h). The first seven of these, (a) to (g), show that in all sections of the Act where the term is used, it means a person who makes payments of land revenue, local rates or rent, or holds land free of rent up to certain specified limits of land revenue, local rates, rent and area.

The first proviso extends this definition for the purpose of certain sections and chapters of the Act to all persons making such payments or holding such land irrespective of these limits. It reads:—

"Provided that in ss. 2 (10) (a), 3, 4, 5, 8 and Chaps. IV and V an 'agriculturist' means also a person who would belong to a class of persons mentioned in parts (a) to (g) of this sub-section if the limits of land revenue, local rates, rent and area mentioned in these parts were omitted."

There follow two more provisos and then seven Explanations, of which the five only appear to be properly so called. The next two Explanations are:—

Explanation VI.—When a person pays both rent and revenue, he shall not be deemed to be an agriculturist for the purposes of Chaps. II (except ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8), III and VI, if the total of the rent and revenue annually payable by him exceeds Rs. 1,000, or if he is excluded from the definition of agriculturist under any of the cls. (a) to (g).

Explanation VII.—When a person, holding land in districts subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation I of 1793, or holding land free of revenue, pays both rent and local rate, he shall not be deemed to be an agriculturist if the total of the rent and local rate annually payable by him exceeds Rs. 500."

The question for consideration is whether the proviso should be construed as subject to Expl. VII, or whether Expl. VII should be construed as merely adding further limits when certain qualifications are combined, these limits being inapplicable under the proviso for the purpose of the sections and chapters stated therein.

The learned Judge of this Court who held that in view of Expl. VII the plaintiff-appellant is not an agriculturist, considered that the Explanation, though so called, was really a proviso or an exception, and coming after the first proviso, must supersede it where repugnant to it. He thought that the Legislature may not have intended to include in the proviso those holding land free of revenue paying rent and local rate above a certain amount, though the reason behind this intention is not apparent.

The learned Judge who took the contrary view observed that it appears from the preamble and the general scheme of the Act that it was the intention of the Act to make provision for the relief of agriculturists, both small and big. There were only two Explanations which seemed to operate as limitations in the case of combination of capacities, namely Expl. VI and Expl. VII. The real question which arises in regard to Expl. VII is whether its wording is such as to exclude the applicability of the first proviso.

He considered that if Expl. VII is regarded as an absolute bar, it is in contradiction with the whole scheme of the Act and it leads to illogical and unreasonable results. Moreover, if it is an absolute bar, it should not have been described as an explanation, but as an exception, or preferably it should have found a place in the section itself above the explanations as a fourth proviso. As it has not done so, it was not reasonable to regard it as a further proviso.

The learned Judge then gave instances of illogical results which follow from the view that Expl. VII is an absolute bar. He said that "in the first place it may be read as contradicting the definitions (b) and (c), since it is obvious that a man who pays local rate under (b) or (c) amounting to Rs. 499, and rent amounting to Re. 1. is still within the combined maximum allowed by Expl. VII".

He proceeded:—

"From another point of view there is a similar incongruity. A pays Rs. 500 or Rs. 5,000 or even Rs. 5 lakhs as local rate. He comes under definition (b) or definition (c) assisted for the purposes of the important sections by Proviso I. B on the other hand pays Rs. 500 or Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 5 lakhs local rate plus Rs. 1 as rent, B on this line of argument is barred entirely. Thus there is on this view a completely illogical exclusion of people who combine two qualifications, although it is not really the mere combination of the qualifications which excludes them, since it does not do so provided the combined total under the two heads does not exceed Rs. 500."

He considered therefore that Expl. VII is really a sort of addition to cls. (a) to (g), and as such, subject to the application of the first proviso, as held (though obiter) in Sheo Shankar Das and another v. Mohammad Hasan (1937 A. L. J. R. 680) (1).

If the question could be decided by reference to the probabilities alone, I should be inclined to agree with this view. When the proviso allows persons who pay land revenue, local rate, or rent up to any amount to be treated for certain parts of the Act as agriculturists; it certainly seems doubtful whether in the case of the combination of two of these qualifications it was intended to impose a bar which might, in certain circumstances, lead to very illogical results. Moreover, Expl. VII seems to be complementary to Expl. VI. The latter explanation deals with a combination of the qualifications referred to in cls. (a) and (f), while Expl. VII refers to a combination of the qualifications referred to in cls. (b) and (f), and (c) and (f). Prima facie there is no reason why a different principle should be applied in Expl. VII from that applied in Expl. VI. But a different principle has been applied by the omission from Expl. VII of the words "for the purposes of Chap. II, (except ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8), III and VI", and the reason may be that these words were omitted inadvertently. This is, I think, more probable than that an Explanation which is found at the end of the section was intended to be read as if it came before the provisos. Had that been the intention, it must have been also the intention in regard to Expl. VI and there would have been no need to insert in this Explanation the words "for the purposes of Chap. II (except ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8), III and VI".

But though I consider it not unlikely that these words were inadvertently omitted from Expl. VII, I do not consider it possible to hold that they must have been. It is possible that the Legislature had reasons, not apparent, for imposing a general limit applicable for all sections of the Act in cases of a combination of rent and local rate paid by persons holding land in districts subject to the Benares Permanent Settlement Regulation I of 1795 or by persons holding land free of revenue. Some incongruous or illogical results may follow on a consideration of the limits imposed and possible combinations thereof, but incongruities occur not infrequently where an arbitrary limit is imposed, and some may occur as it is even in the case of persons not governed by the proviso. For instance, it might appear incongruous that a man who pays rent of Rs. 499, and local rate of Re. 1, should be an agriculturist, while a man who pays rent of Rs. 499, and local rate of Rs. 2 is not.

I do not think that there is any contradiction between the Explanation and cls. (b) and (c). The Explanation does not, in my opinion, make the proviso entirely inoperative. It does not extend the limits given in cls. (b) and (c) in the case of a combination of qualifications, and those limits will still apply except where the proviso comes in. That is to say, except where the proviso excludes the limits, the limit of Rs. 120, local rate will still apply. The example given above of a person paying Rs. 499, local rate and Re. 1, rent and still being an agriculturist would only be possible under the proviso. Any other person paying Rs. 499 local rate, or any amount in excess of Rs. 120, would be barred by cl. (b) or cl. (c). It is not therefore the case that where the qualifications referred to in the Explanation are combined, the Explanation puts every one on the same footing. On the contrary it allows a person to whom the proviso applies to pay a much larger amount of local rate, if the amount of rent paid by him is correspondingly smaller.

The very fact that the words "for the purposes of Chap. II (except ss. 3, 4, 5 and 8), III and VI" have been omitted from Expl. VII may be considered indicative of the Legislature's intention. The presumption is rather that they were omitted by design than by accident.

I would refer in this connection to certain principles laid down in Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes (Eighth Edition) and derived from English authorities.

Pages 3 and 4.

"When the language is not only plain but admits of but one meaning, the task of interpretation can hardly be said to arise. 'Absoluta sententia expositio non indiget.'"

The rule of construction is 'to intend the Legislature to have meant what they have actually expressed.

Where, by the use of clear and unequivocal language capable of only one meaning, anything is enacted by the Legislature, it must be enforced, even though it be absurd or mischievous.

The words cannot be construed, contrary to their meaning, as embracing or excluding cases merely because no good reason appears why they should be excluded or embraced."

It is true that these principles appear to receive some qualification further on. On

p. 73 it is stated:

"Before adopting any proposed construction of a passage susceptible of more than one meaning, it is important to consider the effects or consequences which would result from it, for they often point out the real meaning of the words."

But this is on the assumption that the passage is susceptible of more than one meaning.

On p. 202 it is stated:—

"Where the language of a statute, in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction, leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship or injustice, presumably not intended, a construction may be put upon it which modifies the meaning of the words, and even the structure of the sentence."

It can hardly be said that the language of Expl. VII, leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship or injustice, presumably not intended.

Page 220.

"An omission which the context shows with reasonable certainty to have been unintended may be supplied, at least in enactments which are construed beneficially, as distinguished from strictly."

It has been argued in the case under consideration—and I think with force—that an enactment which makes encroachments on the rights of individuals (in this case of money-lenders) should be construed strictly. A large number of persons should not be allowed to take advantage of it than its language on a strict construction warrants.

Page 141.

"Where there are two sections dealing with the same subject-matter, one section being unqualified and the other containing a qualification, effect must be given to the section containing the qualification."

If the provisions under consideration were contained in different sections, there can be no doubt, therefore, that effect would have to be given to the section containing the qualification.

Reference has been made on behalf of the respondent to an observation of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Henrietta Muir Edwards and others v. Attorney-General of Canada and others (A I R 1930 P. O., 120) 2) "the question is not what may be supposed to have been intended, but what has been said."

In Aziz Ahmed Khan and others v. Chhote Lal and others (A. I. R. 1928 All., 241) (3), the Allahabad High Court observ-

(2) A I R 1930 P O 120; 126 Ind. Cas. 88; 58 M L J 300; 31 L W 601; Ind Rul. (1930) P O 312 (P O).

(3) A I R 1928 All 241; 109 Ind. Cas. 38; 28 A L J 298; 50 A 569.

ed:—

"Where the language of a statute is plain in itself, it is not open to the interpreter to add to it or to deduct from it or even to consider whether the rule is likely to create hardships in particular cases if it be read in its ordinary sense."

I do not find that there is any such manifest absurdity or such improbability in Expl. VII as to justify a construction not warranted by its apparent meaning. It is clear that the word "Explanation" is a misnomer: it is on any construction rather of the nature of a further proviso or exception, and since it has been placed at the end of the section, it is natural to construe it as governing whatever precedes it. This and the omission in it of any words of exception such as are contained in Expl. VI are, in my opinion, fatal to the plaintiff-respondent's case. I would, therefore, allow the appeal with costs.

By Court.—(October 14, 1939)—We allow the appeal with costs.

E.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeals Nos. 710 and 865 of 1939

November 3, 1938

DIN MOHAMMAD, J.

JAIMAL SINGH AND ANOTHER—CONVICTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 170—Innocent persons falsely implicated—Investigating officer, if justified in not sending them for trial on ground of insufficient evidence—Criminal trial—Conviction—No conviction on basis of scientific theories.

Where definite allegations are made by aggrieved persons which they are prepared to support by positive evidence, apparently free from taint, it is generally not the function of the Police to play the role of Judges and to pronounce their verdict on the truth or falsehood of those allegations. In such cases, they are bound to send up the accused for trial and not to discuss the probabilities or the improbabilities of the case and come to a final decision of their own. But where there is a tendency to implicate innocent persons along with the guilty whenever any occasion arises in that respect, not only the Courts but the investigating officers must proceed cautiously when they are faced with that situation. A Police Officer is in the same position as a Magistrate holding inquiry in cases triable by a Court of Session, and such Magistrate has power to discharge an accused person if the evidence against him is palpably false or legally insufficient. Where the investigating officer not being satisfied with the evidence against some of the accused feels that they are falsely implicated he is justified in not sending them for trial.

Persons cannot be convicted merely on scientific theories which may or may not be infallible.

Cr. As. from an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Rupar, dated July 26, 1938.

Messrs. B. R. Puri and Gullu Ram, for the Appellants.

Mr. Mohammad Amin (Malak), for the Advocate-General, for the Crown.

Judgment.—This judgment will dispose of Criminal Appeals Nos. 710 and 865 of 1938. The former has been presented by Jaimal Singh and Naranjan Singh through Counsel while the latter has been submitted by Sarwan Singh through the jail authorities. These appellants were convicted of an offence under s. 326 read with s. 34, Indian Penal Code, and each sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment. That is a peculiar case in which the investigating agency was at loggerheads with the complainant. In the first information report made by Dalip Singh he had stated that while Sarwan Singh and Naranjan Singh held him fast, Jaimal Singh had given a blow with a safajang on his right leg cutting it off clean, and that this occurrence had been witnessed by Maluk Singh, Naranjan Singh, Surjan Singh and some other persons who were known to Maluk Singh. The motive for the attack was also stated in detail. The Sub-Inspector of Police who held the investigation after examining the witnesses produced by Dalip Singh did not believe that Jaimal Singh and Naranjan Singh had participated in the assault and consequently sent up Sarwan Singh alone on the strength of a few witnesses in whom Dalip Singh placed no reliance. Dissatisfied with this investigation, Dalip Singh made a representation to the authorities on which the Deputy Superintendent of Police was deputed to hold further investigation in the matter. He, too, agreed with the Sub-Inspector.

On receiving the chalan the prosecuting Sub-Inspector reported to the Superintendent of Police that the chalan as sent up would fail even as against Sarwan Singh inasmuch as the witnesses who had been put forward to support the case against him had not made such statements as would lead to his conviction. Despite this report the previous chalan was not amended in any manner. Dalip Singh then put in a private complaint reiterating the allegations made by him in the first information report and the proceedings in the complaint were taken along with the chalan. The Magistrate after recording the evidence of both sets of witnesses came to the conclusion that the Sub-Inspector had conducted himself in an objectionable manner and that Dalip Singh had succeeded in bringing home the offence to all the three persons originally implicated by him in the first information report. He accordingly convicted them as stated above.

I may remark at once that I am not prepared to say that the procedure adopted by the Police in this case cannot be approved in any manner. It is true that in cases where definite allegations are made by aggrieved persons which they are prepared to support by positive evidence, apparently free from taint, it is generally not the function of the Police to play the role of Judges and to pronounce their verdict on the truth or falsehood of those allegations. In such cases they are bound to send up the accused for trial and not to discuss the probabilities or the improbabilities of the case and come to a final decision of their own. But unfortunately in this country, as has been noticed so often there is a tendency to implicate innocent persons along with the guilty whenever any occasion arises in that respect, and not only the Courts but the investigating officers must proceed cautiously when they are faced with that situation. To restrain them altogether from using their discretion in such cases would prove detrimental to the interests of the public and would lead to unnecessary harassment of persons who had absolutely no hand in the crime. A Police Officer in my view is in the same position as a Magistrate holding inquiry in cases triable by a Court of Session and there is a string of rulings which lay down that such Magistrate has power to discharge an accused person if the evidence against him is palpably false or legally insufficient and this in spite of the fact that the function of sifting the truth or falsehood of that evidence is within the competence of the Sessions Judge only. I do not therefore agree with the Magistrate that the conduct of the Police in this case necessarily pointed to the conclusion that they had been actuated by sordid motives. Both the Sub-Inspector and the Deputy Superintendent of Police may have honestly believed that Dalip Singh was falsely implicating both Jaimal Singh and Naranjan Singh and on that ground they were quite justified in not showing their willingness to send up the case against them.

Coming now to the merits of the case before me, I am not satisfied that the case against Jaimal Singh and Naranjan Singh is above suspicion. The statement of Dalip Singh has been corroborated by Mal Singh, Amolak Singh and Surjan Singh. Mal Singh was not mentioned in the first information report although he states that he was going ahead of Amolak Singh and Surjan Singh and was thus in close proximity to Dalip Singh and the first to see the occurrence. He has admitted that Jiwa Singh, brother of Jaimal Singh, had instituted a criminal case against his brother Rulya Singh, and that Ohhanga, an uncle of Jaimal Singh, had obtained a decree against him in the execution of which his she-camel had been attached. Moreover, the Magistrate has himself remarked that this witness had been prevaricating and, in these circumstances, it would be unsafe to rely on his statement. Amolak Singh is a first cousin of Dalip Singh and, although in the first information report, it had been alleged that both Dalip Singh and Amolak Singh were coming together from their fields, at the trial they did not adhere to this story and Amolak Singh professed to have arrived at the scene of occurrence only when the accused had assaulted Dalip Singh. Surjan Singh is a son of Musammat Ram Piari and is complainant enough not to object to her living with Dalip Singh in immoral circumstances and in this respect does not see eye to eye with his brother Sarwan. It is further significant that Naranjan Singh who had been named as an eye-witness was not at all produced at the trial. There is thus no impartial, independent or disinterested evidence on the record and Dalip Singh's enmity with Jaimal Singh being admitted unless there is definite evidence, direct or circumstantial, free from taint, connecting Jaimal Singh and Naranjan Singh with the offence, it would be impossible to maintain their conviction. Only one blow was struck and it is quite possible that in order to implicate these two persons successfully the story of their holding Dalip Singh in their grip was introduced.

The Magistrate has laid much stress on the statement of Dr. Pir-bi Ohand Beri, Sub-Assistant Surgeon, who has stated that the injury inflicted on Dalip Singh was possible only if somebody had held him fast. Apart from the fact that the statement made by this witness is not in the nature of expert evidence, persons cannot be convicted merely on scientific theories which may or may not be infallible. The main ground urged by this witness is that the leg should have been stationary before it could have been cut in the clean manner in which it was cut; but it is evident that in a moment of fright a person would cease walking and would thus be stationary for some period at least, however small it may be, and it is also obvious that the striking of a solitary blow with a safajang does not take very long. It also cannot be ignored that even in the normal posture of walking one leg is not moving fast when the other leg is in motion. Anyhow, it is a guess-work one way or the other, and mere guesses do not take the place of evidence on the basis of which one can maintain a conviction with a peaceful mind. I accordingly accept the appeal of Jaimal Singh and Naranjan Singh and giving them the benefit of the doubt acquit them. So far as Sarwan Singh is concerned, it is true that Dalip Singh does not attribute the blow to him but he does not exonerate him also from the charge altogether. His statement coupled with the evidence brought on the record on behalf of the Police is in my view sufficient to bring home the offence to him. I accordingly uphold his conviction and confirm his sentence.

D.

Order accordingly.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Criminal Reference No. 363 of 1938

March 14, 1939

DAVIS, J. C. AND TYABJI, J.
EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

ABDULLAH KARIM—ACCUSED

Bombay Borstal Schools Act (XVIII of 1929), ss. 6, 8—Previous convictions as evidence of criminal habits—Proof—Action under s. 6, when can be taken—Procedure to be followed before referring case to High Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 439—Power is discretionary.

Where the evidence of criminal habits or tendencies from which it is to appear to the Court that it should take action under s. 6, Bombay Borstal Schools Act is that of previous convictions, the Court should require these previous convictions to be properly proved before it can say that there is evidence from which it can appear to the Court that the accused is of criminal habits or tendencies within the meaning of cl. (b) of s. 6. There is no difference in the standard of proof required for previous convictions, for the purpose of s. 75, Penal Code, or for the purpose of s. 6, Bombay Borstal Schools Act. 33 Ind. Cas. 825 (1), relied on. [p. 270, col. 1.]

Where the only evidence of previous convictions is merely the extracts from the records of Central Bureau of Finger Prints and no certificate from Jail Officer or warrant of commitment is produced to prove it, on such evidence, the Court cannot take account of the previous convictions and cannot, consequently, take action under s. 6.

Before a case is referred to the High Court under s. 6, a reference should be first made to the Inspector-General, and only when he is of the opinion that he cannot, by reason of the particular circumstances of the case or the provisions of s. 11, Borstal Schools Act, transfer a young offender to the Borstal School by his own order or with the previous sanction of Government, should any reference in such matters be made to the High Court. [p. 270, col. 2.]

Exercise by the High Court of the revisional jurisdiction in criminal matters is a matter of discretion.

Cr. Ref. made by the Superintendent, Karachi District Prison, dated December 1, 1938.

Mr. Partabrai D. Punwani, Advocate-General, for the Crown.

Mr. W. D. C. Vellani, for the Pauper Accused.

Davis, J. C.—The record in this case has been sent to us by Superintendent, Karachi District Prison, under s. 536, Bombay Jail Manual, it being his opinion that this accused, Abdullah, son of Karim, aged about 20, is a fit and proper subject for a Borstal School, and that we should under ss. 6 and 8, Bombay Borstal Schools Act, 1929, send him to a Borstal School. But we do not think that this is a case where we should interfere. It appears the evidence on which the Superintendent relies to show that the accused is a person of criminal habits or tendencies is the fact that the judgment shows two previous convictions, one on July 20, 1937, of three months' rigorous imprisonment under ss. 454-511, Indian Penal Code, by Lucknow Court, and the other on November 30, 1937, also by a Lucknow Court of an offence under s. 379, Indian Penal Code, with six months' rigorous imprisonment. But the learned Advocate who appeared for the accused took the point that these two previous convictions had not been properly proved, their proof merely being extract from the records of the Central Bureau for Finger-prints and the evidence of one Ramchand, an expert of the Finger-print Bureau at Karachi. The wisdom of the rule which requires previous convictions to be properly proved is, we think, illustrated by this very case because while the extract from the Register of Finger-prints was interpreted by the expert as showing the accused was convicted by a First Class Magistrate on July 10, 1935, and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment under s. 379, Indian Penal Code; further inquiry apparently showed that the entry as interpreted by the expert was incorrect, and that the sentence was not three years' rigorous imprisonment but three years in a Reformatory School at Dharwar. There should really be no difficulty about proof of these previous convictions if the prosecution would take the little trouble that is necessary.

The simplest thing for them to do, is to obtain from the prison or from the Court a certified copy of the judgment in which the previous convictions on which they rely are recorded. Section 511, Criminal P. O., provides for this: A previous conviction or acquittal may be proved inter alia by an extract certified, under the hand of the officer having the custody of the record of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had, to be a copy of the sentence or order; or, in the case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail, in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered. Thus the fact of the previous conviction or acquittal, as the case may be, is satisfactorily proved. But this is not enough; in addition, there must be proof of the identity of the accused person as the person so convicted, and here comes in the use of finger-prints. But the evidence of finger prints is evidence of identity and is not in itself evidence of the previous convictions. For instance, in this very case, there has been a mistake which would have been avoided if there had been a copy of the sentence or order or a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail or the warrant of commitment. There would not have been then this confusion as to whether the sentence was of three years' rigorous imprisonment or three years in the Reformatory School, and we think this simple illustration shows the necessity of proving the conviction and sentence in the manner set out in s. 511 (a) or (b), Criminal P. O., to which we have already referred.

The learned Advocate-General who appeared to support the reference of the Superintendent of the Jail pointed out to us that s. 6, Bombay Borstal Schools Act, merely requires that it should appear to the Court, and that these words imply something less than proof. But where the evidence of criminal habits or tendencies from which it is to appear to the Court that it should take action under s. 6, is that of previous convictions, we think that the Court should require these previous convictions to be properly proved before it can say that there is evidence from which it can appear to the Court that the accused is of criminal habits or tendencies within the meaning of cl. (b) of s. 6. The case, of course, is quite different where the prosecution rely upon something other than previous convictions to show the accused as of criminal habits or tendencies. But we ourselves can see no difference in the standard of proof required for previous convictions, for the purpose of s. 75, Indian Penal Code, or for the purpose of s. 6, Bombay Borstal Schools Act. The purpose of proof in each case is to make reasonably certain the existence of those previous convictions upon which the Court is asked to act and we do not think it was the intention of the Legislature that under s. 6, Bombay Borstal Schools Act, there should be an element of doubt as to previous convictions any more than that there should be an element of doubt as to previous convictions when the provisions of s. 75, Indian Penal Code, are to be invoked. In this case we have much the same sort of thing as in Emperor v. Sheikh Abdul (1). In that case the learned Judge said at p. 1137*:

"The first of these witnesses was a certified expert in finger-prints, and he produced what has been marked as Ex. 4 (1), from the Central Bureau. That purports to be a register of the thumb impressions of the accused on p. 1, and on the reverse, his descriptive roll and a list of his previous convictions. No evidence has been recorded as to how this paper comes to be made and lodged in the Central Bureau nor from what particulars the previous convictions on the reverse are recorded and certified. There is, therefore, nothing on this paper except the two certificates at the foot to show that the person convicted seven times in Bombay is the same man as was convicted at Howrah on May 22, 1912."

There is nothing in the record before us to satisfy us that the convictions and sentences shown on the slip from the Central Finger-print Bureau were convictions and sentences passed upon the accused person now before us. There is a gap in the evidence, there is not here the link of the certified copies of the sentences or orders or the certificate of the Jail Superintendent under s. 511, Criminal P. O., to connect satisfactorily the accused before us with the accused before the Lucknow Courts. We think, therefore, that we cannot take account of these two previous convictions for the purpose of this reference of the Superintendent of the Jail.

(1) 43 O 1123; 33 Ind. Cas. 825; A I R 1916 Cal. 344; 17 Cr. L.J. 185; 20 C.W.N. 725.

*Page of 43 O.—[Ed.]

It was then said to us by the learned Advocate for the accused that if we cannot take notice of these two previous convictions for the purpose of the reference of the Superintendent of the Jail, and if it is our opinion that they were not properly proved, we should interfere and reduce the sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment passed upon the accused, and that we should do this in exercise of our jurisdiction as a Court of Revision. But the exercise by us of the revisional jurisdiction is a matter of discretion. We see no reason whatever why we should interfere and reduce the sentence of one year's rigorous imprisonment passed upon this accused. We think under the circumstances the sentence was in no way excessive. We should also wish to point out to the Superintendent of the Jail that under s. 11, Bombay Borstal Schools Act, the Inspector-General of Prisons has certain powers of dealing with convicted persons and of transferring them from prison to a Borstal School and we think it would be for more convenient if before a case is referred to us by the Superintendent in this manner, a reference should be first made to the Inspector-General, and only when he is of the opinion that he cannot, by reason of the particular circumstances of the case or the provisions of s. 11, Borstal Schools Act, transfer a young offender to the Borstal School by his own order or with the previous sanction of Government, should any reference in such matters be made to us. We therefore return the reference to the Superintendent stating that we intend to take no action in this matter, and that we should be glad if those responsible for proof of previous convictions in the Courts at Karachi will carefully consider the proper procedure to be followed and see that a more satisfactory procedure than has been adopted in this case be followed in the future. Order accordingly. A copy of this order should be sent to the Inspector-General of Prisons for information.

D.

Reference answered.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Criminal Reference No. 103 of 1938

July 19, 1939

MOHAMMAD ISMAIL AND MULLA, JJ.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

QUDRAT AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 289 (2)
—Direction of Judge that there is no evidence that accused committed offence, whether binding on jury
—Whether must return verdict of not guilty—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 366, 376—Kidnapping —Prosecution must prove girl to be below 16—Charge under s. 376—Prosecution to prove girl to be under 14—Evidence—Age—Proof of—Statement of doctor as to age based upon certain physical peculiarities —Whether legal proof—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 45.

The expression "direct" in s. 289 (2), Criminal P. C. leaves no room for doubt that the intention of the Legislature was that the jury was bound to accept the opinion of the Judge, whether they agreed with that view or not. It therefore follows that the direction of the Judge that there is no evidence that the accused committed an offence is binding on the jury and must be followed by them, and the jury cannot return a verdict of guilty on such a direction. The question of absence of evidence is a question of law and not a mere question of fact.

In order to prove the charge of kidnapping, it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove that the person kidnapped was under 16 years of age.

To prove the charge under s. 376, Penal Code, the prosecution is bound to prove that the girl is below the age of 14.

It is true that a doctor is in a better position to form an opinion about the age of a person than a layman, but the statement of a doctor is no more than an opinion. When from his statement it does not appear that he brought any scientific knowledge to bear upon his opinion, where the doctor has relied entirely on certain physical peculiarities, such as teeth, etc., his statement is not a legal proof but a mere opinion. 39 Ind. Cas. 401 (1), relied on.

Or. Ref. made by the Assistant Sessions Judge, Benares, dated November 10, 1938.

The Deputy Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Mr. Madan Mohan Lal, for the Opposite Party.

Order.—This is a reference under s. 307, Criminal Procedure Code, by the learned Assistant Sessions Judge of Benares. Musammam Bhagmanian said to be about 12 or 13 years of age, was living with her father-in-law named Sudaman in village Lachmangarh. On August 1, 1938, Sudaman found at about 8 or 9 P. M. Musammam Bhagmanian had disappeared from the house in which the family was living. Sudaman searched for the girl, but did not succeed in tracing her. He gave information to Lallan Singh, the semdar of the village. The next day the Sub-Inspector of Police Station Balua happened to visit the village. Lallan Singh informed the Sub-Inspector of the disappearance of the girl. After some investigation Qudrat, accused, was summoned, and it is stated that he informed the Sub-Inspector that the girl would be found at the house of Musammam Rasulan, accused No. 2, in village Dharain. The girl was found outside the house of Musammam Rasulan and was made over to Iqbal Ahmad, the Sub-Inspector. Qudrat and Rasulan were prosecuted, the former under ss. 366 and 376, Indian Penal Code, and the latter under s. 368, Indian Penal Code. The case was committed to the Sessions and was tried with the aid of a jury. Musammam Bhagmanian stated how she was enticed away by Qudrat who, after having sexual intercourse with her, took her to the house of Musammam Rasulan at midnight and left her in custody of Musammam Rasulan. After the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination of the accused, the learned Assistant Sessions Judge was of the opinion that there was no evidence on the record to prove that the accused had committed the offences with which they were charged. He accordingly directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. The jury, however, returned a verdict of guilty by a majority of 3 against 2. The learned Sessions Judge then made this reference under s. 307 of the Code, with the recommendation that this Court may set aside the verdict of the jury and may pass an order of acquittal in favour of the accused persons. The first question to be determined is whether the jury were entitled to return the verdict of guilty against the clear direction of the learned Sessions Judge to the contrary, Section 289 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, provides:

"If he (accused) says he does not, the prosecutor may sum up his case; and if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, it may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty."

The expression "direct" leaves no room for doubt that the intention of the Legislature was that the jury was bound to accept the opinion of the Judge, whether they agreed with that view or not. This interpretation finds support from illustration (a) to s. 299 of the Code:

"... It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong, and whether they do not agree with it."

This illustration apparently refers to the direction given by the learned Judge on points of law; but the same expression is used in s. 289 of the Code, and in our opinion it follows that the direction of the Judge that there is no evidence that the accused committed an offence is equally binding on the jury and must be followed by them. In other words, the question of absence of evidence is treated as a question of law and not a mere question of fact. Having regard to the clear language of the section, we have no hesitation in holding that the verdict of the jury in the present case cannot be accepted.

The next question for consideration is whether the learned Sessions Judge was justified in holding that there was no evidence on the record to prove that the accused had committed the offence. In order to prove the charge of kidnapping, it was incumbent on the prosecution to prove that Musammāt Bhagmania was under 16 years of age. Similarly to prove the charge under s. 376, the prosecutor was bound to prove that Musammāt Bhagmania was below the age of 14 so that her consent to have sexual intercourse with Qudrat may be treated as no consent in law. Musammāt Bhagmania herself gave her age as 12 or 13. It is manifest that Musammāt Bhagmania herself had no direct knowledge about her age. It is also manifest that she did not derive this information from anyone else; otherwise we would expect that she would give a more definite figure. In her statement she does not say whether she derived this knowledge from her mother or father. That being so, we must disregard the statement of Musammāt Bhagmania with regard to her age. Prosecution Witness No. 1, Sudaman, clearly stated that he did not know where and when Bhagmania was born, nor did he know Bhagmania from before her marriage. There is no other evidence on the record proving the age of Musammāt Bhagmania, except the statement of the Civil Surgeon. In the opinion of the Civil Surgeon, Musammāt Bhagmania's age was about 13. It appears that the doctor based his opinion on the particulars given in his report with regard to height, weight, etc. The learned Assistant Sessions Judge is of opinion that the medical evidence does not amount to legal proof of the age of Musammāt Bhagmania. Under s. 45, Evidence Act.

"when the Court has to form an opinion on a point of . . . science . . . the opinion upon that point of persons specially skilled in such . . . science are relevant facts. Such persons are called experts."

From the statement of the Civil Surgeon it does not appear that he brought any scientific knowledge to bear upon his opinion. The indications given by the doctor could be observed by a layman. It is true that a doctor is in a better position to form an opinion about the age of a person than a layman, but the statement of a doctor is no more than an opinion. This question has been considered in several cases. We need only cite the observations of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Mohammad Syedol Ariffin v. Yeoh (1). While considering the doctor's certificate on the question of age, their Lordships observed as follows:

"Dr. Bright, on examination, says that he formed the opinion that the appellant was 21, judging by his teeth, his appearance and his voice. In their Lordships' view such a certificate is worthless. It is in truth not a certificate but only an assertion of opinion . . . Proof on the subject is not advanced by such documents."

From the report of the Civil Surgeon in the present case it would appear that he relied entirely on certain physical peculiarities, such as teeth, etc. In our opinion, the learned Assistant Sessions Judge was right in holding that there was no legal proof of the age of Musammāt Bhagmania. That being so, the learned Assistant Sessions Judge was fully entitled under s. 389, Criminal Procedure Code, to direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty which the jury were bound to follow. For the reasons given above, we accept the reference, set aside the verdict of the jury and acquit Qudrat and Musammāt Rasulan of the offences with which they were charged. Qudrat who is in custody shall be released forthwith, unless required in connection with some other charge. Musammāt Rasulan is on bail, and she need not surrender. The bail bonds are cancelled.

s. Reference accepted.

(1) 43 I A 256; 39 Ind. Cas. 401; A I R 1916 P O 242; 21 O W N 257; (1917) M W N 162; 19 Bom. L R 157; (1916) 2 A O 575; 86 L J P O 15; 115 L T 564; 32 T L R 678 (P O).

ODDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 84 of 1937

November 8, 1939

HAMILTON, J.

PARBHU DAYAL—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

BISHESHWAR NATH AND ANOTHER—

DEPENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Pre-emption—Muafidar paying no rent—Rent no determinable under s. 40, Oudh Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1876)—If can pre-empt.

Where a muafidar pays no rent and it has not been shown that his rent has to be determined by the Settlement Officer under s. 40, Oudh Land Revenue Act, 1876, he is neither an under-proprietor nor a proprietor and is therefore not entitled to pre-empt.

S. O. A. against the decree of the Civil Judge, Hardoi, dated October 30, 1936.

Mr. S. N. Srivastava, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. N. Tandon, for Respondent No. 1.

Judgment.—This is an appeal against an appellate decision of the Civil Judge of Hardoi, who upheld the finding of the original Court that a muafidar is not entitled to pre-empt.

The learned Counsel for the appellant here relies on Dalmir Khan v. Shamsher Khan, (1931 O. W. N. 285) (1) and urges that if a qabzadar is entitled to pre-empt, there is no reason why a muafidar should not.

The custom of pre-emption may be presumed under the Oudh Laws Act to exist in all village communities, however constituted, and whether proprietary or under-proprietary, and in the cases referred to in s. 40 of the Oudh Land Revenue Act. The appellant has not shown that he holds an under-proprietary right by virtue of s. 107 (H) of the Oudh Rent Act so that he must have recourse to s. 40 of the Oudh Land Revenue Act, 1876. This section states that the Settlement Officer shall, in accordance with the provisions of the Oudh Sub-Settlement Act, 1866, so far as they are applicable, determine the rent to be paid to the proprietor by all under-proprietors in a mahal, and by all holders of heritable, non-transferable leases, whose rent has not been fixed by contract. The appellant must, therefore, show that he is a holder of a heritable, non-transferable lease whose rent has not been fixed by contract and whose rent has to be determined by the Settlement Officer. He is a muafidar paying no rent and it has not been shown that his rent has to be determined by the Settlement Officer under s. 40. Consequently as the appellant is not helped by s. 40 and he is not either an under-proprietor or a proprietor, there can be no pre-emption under the Oudh Laws Act.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 1937 O. W. N. 285; 167 Ind. Cas. 275 (2); 1937 O. L. R. 97; 9 R. O. 371; A. I. R. 1937 Oudh 428; 13 Luck. 181.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 10 of 1938

August 8, 1939

HARRIS, C. J. AND FAZI ALI, J.

TEJPAL MARWARI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KEDARNATH HIMATSINGKA AND OTHERS

—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 104 (c) —Appeal under—Validity of award itself, if can be challenged—Arbitration—Arbitrator—Power of, to allow amendment of plaint refused by Court before referring suit to arbitration.

The scope of an appeal under s. 104 (c), Civil P. C. is a limited one, and the party appealing can attack the order of the Court only in so far as it modifies the award and must confine himself to points which have a bearing on the modification made in the award. It is clearly open to the party attacking the order to show that none of the conditions mentioned in Para. 12 of Sch. II applied and the award could not have been modified; but s. 104 does not entitle a party to appeal against the award itself; nor can he in appeal under this provision attack the proceedings before the arbitrator after a decree has been passed on the basis of the award. An award cannot, therefore, be challenged in an appeal under s. 104, on the ground that the arbitrator was not justified in allowing certain amendment in the plaint. 15 Ind. Cas. 519 (1), relied on.

Where an entire suit has been referred to arbitration, the arbitrator has power to allow amendment of plaint in respect of certain wrong date mentioned in it even if such an amendment had been refused by the Court before reference to arbitration.

A. from the original order of the Sub-Judge, Dumka, dated December 9, 1937.

Messrs. L. K. Jha and K. K. Banarji, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Baldeva Sahai and C. P. Sinha, for the Respondents.

Fazi Ali, J.—This is an appeal by the defendants against an order modifying an award in a suit brought by the respondents in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Santal Parganas for recovery of a certain sum of money. The plaintiffs' case was that the defendants used to take certain articles on credit from them and they referred in their plaint to certain adjustments of account between them and the defendants, one of them being alleged to have taken place on Baisakh 1, 1337. On February 11, 1935, before the suit was referred to arbitration, the plaintiffs applied to the Subordinate Judge to allow them to amend their plaint by changing Baisakh 1, 1337 into Kartick 16, 1337 on the ground that the former date had been mentioned by mistake. The Subordinate Judge at first allowed the amendment, but afterwards on objection by the defendants he recalled his previous order and disallowed the amendment with these observations :

"The plaintiffs by their amendment now want to shift the date to Kartick 16, 1337 B. S. This changes the position materially. How far this will affect the accounts is another point, and will come up for consideration in due course."

It appears that after the suit was referred to arbitration the plaintiffs again prayed for amendment of the plaint by inserting the new date, and the arbitrator allowed the prayer. Thus when the award was submitted by the arbitrator to the Subordinate Judge, one of the objections raised by the appellants to the award was that the arbitrator had no power to allow an amendment which had previously been refused by the Court. The Subordinate Judge overruled not only this objection but all the other objections put forward by the defendants but as he found that the arbitrator had made certain mistakes in calculating interest, he made slight modifications in the award. These modifications are in favour of the defendants, and the learned Advocate appearing for them has clearly stated before us that they have no grievance in so far as the award has been modified with regard to interest. He limits his appeal to one question only, namely that the arbitrator was not justified in allowing the amendment of the plaint on a point on which amendment had been refused already by the Subordinate Judge. Now, a preliminary question arises here as to whether it is open to the appellants to attack the award on such a ground in the present appeal. This appeal has been preferred under s. 104 (c), Civil P. O., which gives a right of appeal "from an order modifying or correcting an award." It is clear that the scope of such an appeal is a limited one, and the party appealing can attack the order of the Court only in so far as it modifies the award and must confine himself to points which have a bearing on the modification made in the award. Under para. 12 of Sch. II, Civil P. O., the Court has power to modify or correct an award :

"(a) Where it appears that a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration and such part can be separated from the other part and does not affect the decision on the matter referred; or (b) where the award is imperfect in form, or contains any obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision; or (c) where the award contains a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission."

Thus it is clearly open to the party attacking the order to show that none of the conditions mentioned in this paragraph applied and the award could not have been modified; but s. 104, Civil P. O., does not entitle a party to appeal against the award itself; nor can he in appeal under this provision attack the proceedings before the arbitrator after a decree has been passed on the basis of the award. This view is fully supported by the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Rajbans Sahay v. Soorja Lal (1). It was clearly pointed out in that case that cl. (c) of s. 104, Civil P. O., does not confer an unrestricted right of appeal; in other words, when an order has been made by which an award has been modified or corrected, in an appeal preferred against that order the validity of the whole award cannot be called in question, the true effect of the clause being to allow an appeal against the order only in so far as it modifies or corrects the award. The scope of the appeal being limited, it is clear that the award cannot be challenged by the appellants on the ground urged in this appeal.

Although this appeal fails on the preliminary ground, it must be stated that there is also no merit whatsoever in the objection put forward by the appellants. The learned Advocate for the appellants concedes that if the Subordinate Judge himself tried the suit, he had power to allow the plaint to be amended even if he had refused such amendment on a previous occasion. As however the entire suit has been referred to arbitration, I do not see why a similar power could not be exercised by the arbitrator. The arbitrator has pointed that the plaintiffs had made a mistake in stating the date of the adjustment of the accounts in the plaint, and, in my opinion, the arbitrator was justified in allowing amendment in these circumstances. In my opinion, there is no merit in this appeal and it must be dismissed with costs.

Harries, C. J.—I agree.

s. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 17 C W N 617; 15 Ind. Cas. 519.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeal No. 467 of 1939

June 23, 1939

YOUNG, O. J. AND SALE, J.

KALA MOHAMMAD AKBAR—CONVICT

—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

"Criminal trial—Confession—No evidence to show that any portion of exculpatory element is false—"

Confession should either be accepted or rejected as a whole—Right of private defence—Held on facts that accused exceeded the right—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 304.

Where there is no other evidence to show affirmatively that any portion of the exculpatory element in the confession is false, the Court must accept or reject the confession as a whole and cannot accept only the inculpatory element while rejecting the exculpatory element as inherently incredible. Balmakund v. Emperor (1), followed [p. 276, col. 1.]

Held, on facts that the accused had a right of private defence but in hitting the deceased on head with axe and killing him, he exceeded that right. (The conviction was altered to one under second part of s. 304, Penal Code.)

Ur. A. from the order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Rawalpindi, dated April 19, 1939.

Mr. Mohammad Amin, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nazir Hussain, Assistant Legal Remembrancer, for the Crown.

Sale, J.—Kala has been convicted, by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Rawalpindi, under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, for the murder of Qurban Ali, on the evening of September 11, 1938, at Santh Sarola, Rawalpindi District. One Mohammad Azim was also tried by the learned Additional Sessions Judge for participation in this offence but was acquitted. The learned Sessions Judge has rejected almost the whole of the prosecution evidence and for the purposes of this appeal, the conviction of Kala rests solely on the basis of a confession recorded during the investigation by a Magistrate and repeated before the Committing Magistrate but retracted in the Sessions Court. In these circumstances it is unnecessary to recapitulate in any detail the prosecution story as recited in the first information report and the evidence of the prosecution witnesses which the learned Sessions Judge has discarded. The essential facts are that Qurban Ali, deceased, who was the Secretary of the Co-operative Credit Society of his village claimed that Kala, appellant, owed him some money. There were other causes of enmity also which need not here be detailed.

The appellant Kala, who is employed in the Commissariat Department at Razmak, came home on two months' leave at the beginning of September. On September 11, the deceased Qurban Ali returned to his village after a visit to Rawalpindi. The appellant Kala was living with his uncle Azim and, according to the prosecution version, Azim and Kala accompanied by two other persons visited Qurban Ali on the evening of September 11 and suggested that the latter should accompany them to Azim's house to settle their debt. Qurban Ali is alleged to have agreed very reluctantly to accompany Kala and Azim to the latter's house and the suggestion of the prosecution was that having decoyed Qurban Ali to Azim's house, Kala, with the assistance of Azim, deliberately murdered Qurban Ali in the verandah of his house. The murder was committed with a kulhari and the medical evidence shows that the cause of death is one incised wound on the left side of the head which cut open the bone to the brain. A report was made to the Police only after considerable delay which the learned Sessions Judge holds has not been explained. The Head Constable (P. W. No. 15) investigated the case on receipt of the report, came to Azim's house and found the dead body of Qurban Ali lying on a charpoy in the verandah of Azim's house with a kulhari still embeded in the head of the deceased. Blood was found lying on the floor. There is no doubt that Qurban Ali was killed while in the verandah of the house of Azim by a blow from an axe. The learned Sessions Judge rejected the evidence of the prosecution witnesses and held that Azim had probably been implicated on account of enmity and acquitted him. It is unnecessary to discuss this evidence since Mr. Nazir Hussain on behalf of the Crown concedes that the evidence of the witnesses is unreliable and has rightly been rejected by the learned Sessions Judge. The only evidence remaining therefore for our consideration is the confession of Kala.

This confession was recorded during the investigation by Mr. Nahr, Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Murree, on September 21, 1938, that is to say, nine days after the occurrence, with all the necessary precautions prescribed by the law. The confession was repeated before the Committing Magistrate but was retracted in the Sessions Court. Counsel for the appellant has suggested that the confession was not made voluntarily and was obtained from the accused by improper inducements on the part of the Police. We can find no foundation on the record for this suggestion. It is clear that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate who recorded the confession observed all the necessary formalities, and satisfied himself by questioning the accused that the confession was voluntary and genuine. This conclusion is corroborated by the facts that Kala adhered to his confession when he was examined by the Committing Magistrate on October 12, 1938, and again on October 24, 1938. It is only six months later, when he was examined in the Sessions Court, that he retracted his confession. We are satisfied that the confession was recorded with due regard to all the necessary formalities and after observance of the necessary precautions. The confession is corroborated by circumstantial evidence, afforded by the finding of the body at the place indicated in the confession, by the proved manner of Qurban Ali's death, and lastly by the fact admitted by Kala, before the Committing Magistrate, that blood-stained clothes were removed from his person on arrest. We hold that the confession is voluntary and true and that reliance can be placed upon it.

According to this confession the appellant was sitting in the house of his uncle Azim when Qurban Ali, deceased, came there of his own motion to collect some debts alleged to be due from Kala. There was an exchange of abuse but Azim who was then present calmed down the contestants. It is then said that Azim had to leave to obey a call of nature; and that while Azim was away Qurban Ali attacked the appellant with a stick (soti lekar hamla kiya.) To defend himself, Kala bent down to pick up a weapon which happened to be at hand and hit Qurban Ali on the head. Kala says that he did not realize at the time that he was using an axe. Such is the confession. The learned Sessions Judge says that the filthiest abuse does not constitute grave and sudden provocation and that, since he cannot accept Kala's version that he did not realize that it was an axe with which he struck Qurban Ali, Kala's offence is murder under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, and he holds that there are no extenuating circumstances which would justify a sentence less than death. It has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court of which one of us was a member that

"where there is no other evidence to show affirmatively that any portion of the exculpatory element in the confession is false, the Court must accept or reject the confession as a whole and cannot accept only the inculpatory element while rejecting the exculpatory element as inherently incredible. Balmakund v. Emperor (1)."

This is a rule which has been already approved for the Courts of this province and which must be followed in the present case. In the absence of any reliable evidence in the present case, we must accept this confession as a whole, so far as the statements of fact are concerned. These facts are that Qurban Ali came to the house of his uncle of his own motion, demanded his debts, abused the appellant in a filthy manner and later attacked the appellant with a stick, and that it was only in defence that the appellant hit Qurban Ali. On these facts, it is patent that the appellant had a right of private defence against Qurban Ali. The question for our consideration that remains is whether the appellant exceeded his right of private defence. The appellant would only have been justified in causing the death by an axe blow on the head if he had reasonable cause for apprehension that Qurban Ali would in assaulting him cause him death or grievous hurt. The only actual assault attributed to Qurban Ali by the appellant in the confession is abuse and an attack with a stick. The original confession uses the words, soti lekar hamla kiya. It does not say that the deceased actually hit the appellant and it only mentions the threat with a soti which is usually understood to be a light stick. Actually the appellant did not receive any injury nor does he complain of any injury having been received. The appellant is a young man of 27, employed in the army and, so far as is known, of sound physique. The age of the deceased is nowhere specifically stated but he must have been a good deal older; since two of his sons have given evidence in this case, one Mansabdar being recorded as 25 years of age. It would seem, therefore, that the appellant had the advantage over the deceased, both in age and physique. In these circumstances, even on the appellant's own confession, it is impossible to hold that the appellant was justified in using an axe to cut open Qurban Ali's head.

(1) 52 A 1011; 129 Ind. Cas. 258; A I R 1931 All. 1; (1931) Cr. Cas. 1; 32 Cr. L J 362; (1930) A L J 1481; Ind. Rul. (1931) All. 130; L R 12 A 33 Cr. (F B).

There is another point. The appellant says in his confession that it was only after he had hit Qurban Ali that he discovered that he had used an axe. We have seen the axe in Court and even making allowances for the fact that the light may have been dim, owing to the time being 8 p. m. we are unable to accept the appellant's explanation that he did not realize at the time the weapon he had picked up was an axe, and that he was using the sharp side for striking Qurban Ali. It is to be noted that in disbelieving this part of the confession we are not rejecting any statements of fact in the confession but only rejecting an inference, which the appellant wishes to be drawn from the facts and which, in our view, is patently untenable.

We hold, therefore, that the appellant had a right of private defence against Qurban Ali, but that he exceeded it. We therefore accept the appeal to the extent of altering the conviction to one under the second part of s. 304, Indian Penal Code and we reduce the sentence to three years' rigorous imprisonment.

D. Sentence reduced.

• OUDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 148 of 1937

November 15, 1939

HAMILTON, J.

RAUF AHMAD—DEFENDANT

—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât FAHMIDA BEGUM

PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS

Pre-emption—Mouza Safipur—Right of pre-emption in respect of grove—Village area included in town—Whether becomes town—Wajib-ul-arz—Interpretation—Custom of pre-emption on transfer of share—If applies to portion of it.

If a village area is incorporated in a town, it does not become a town within the meaning of s. 8 of the Oudh Laws Act so that the right of pre-emption shall not be presumed. Janki Prasad v. Saheb-un-nissa (1), relied on.

The wajib-ul-arz of Mouza Safipur shows that there exists a custom of pre-emption in that mouza, and such a right therefore exists in respect of grove land situated in a mohal of that mouza and paying revenue.

When a wajib-ul-arz says that there is a custom of pre-emption on a transfer of a share, it applies not only to a transfer of a complete share but also to a portion of it.

S. C. A. against the decree of the District Judge, Unao, dated January 20, 1937, setting aside the decree of the Munsif, Safipur, at Unao, dated September 4, 1936.

Messrs. H. Husain and H. H. Zaidi, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Wasim, for Respondent No. 1.

Judgment.—This is an appeal against a decision of the District Judge of Unao who granted a decree for pre-emption and set aside a decision of the original Court dismissing a suit for pre-emption.

The plaintiff sued for pre-emption of a grove which as described in the plaint was situate in mohal Mohan Shah, Qasba Safipur Khas in which mohal the plaintiff was a co-sharer but the defendant was not. It was also stated that revenue was paid. The trial Court held that as the land was described as being in Qasba Safipur Khas, it was in a town and there was, therefore, no presumption of the existence of the right of pre-emption. The lower Appellate Court after allowing the production of additional evidence found that this grove was situate outside the inhabited area and was not within the ambit of the town of Safipur proper and was consequently subject to the right of pre-emption.

There is a wajib-ul-arz of Mouza Safipur to the effect that sales of shares by co-sharers are subject to pre-emption. If it applies to this land there is no question of whether a pre-emption arises or not for the wajib-ul-arz is sufficient evidence of the custom. In connection with this wajib-ul-arz it was held in the year 1866 by the District Judge of Lucknow in whose jurisdiction Unao, where this land is situate also lay, that this custom of pre-emption did not extend to groves, houses and the like. The case went up in appeal to the Judicial Commissioner who rejected the appeal finding that pre-emption extended to shares of co-sharers in the rural area but not to groves in the town area. It is not clear, consequently, whether he based his decision on the fact that the land was a grove and not a share rather than that it was in the town area and not in the rural area. That was a different grove, and if the decision was based on the situation of that particular grove, the only bearing that it would have on the present case is that this grove is not far from that one. It has been held in Janki Prasad v. Saheb-un-nisa, (7 O. C. 74) (1) that if a village area is incorporated in a town, it does not become a town within the meaning of s. 8 of the Oudh Laws Act so that the right of pre-emption shall not be presumed. In this case the land is shown to be in a mohal and it pays revenue, so even if it eventually lay within the boundaries of the town, there would be a presumption independent of the wajib-ul-arz, but as I have stated, in the present case we have the wajib-ul-arz of Safipur Mouza, and as this land is in a mohal and pays land revenue it can be presumed that this land is in a mohal of Mouza Safipur. I have not myself come across any case where there was a mouza bearing a certain name and a Qasba bearing the same name which formed two different entities so that one can say that a certain area belonged at the time of the wajib-ul-arz to the mouza but a certain area consisting of the Qasba was different. It has not been shown that when the wajib-ul-

(1) 70 O 74.

arz was prepared Mouza Safipur was a different entity from Qasba Safipur or that in fact any Qasba Safipur existed at all.

It has been held in Kanhaiya Lal v. Hamid Ali (7 O. W. N. 271) (2) that a wajib-ul-arz was as effective in a town as in a village although it was argued that the wajib-ul-arz had no effect because that area known as Pihani was a town. It would appear from this argument and the finding that there, too, the wajib ul-arz was of village Pihani but was held to apply to Pihani town.

In Sheodat Prasad v. Lala Suraj Bali, (18 O. C. 138) (3) it was held that Kundri though included within the municipal limits of Lucknow was not a mohalla of the city but a village as the papers prepared for this area at the time of the settlement were prepared as though it were a village and not a portion of the city.

In my opinion, therefore, the wajib-ul-arz does apply to the grove in question.

It has further been argued that the District Judge's decision of 1886 and that of the Judicial Commissioner in 1887, Exs. A-4 and A-3, are authority for holding that the wajib-ul-arz does not apply to a grove in the Urban area. The District Judge referring to the wajib-ul-arz drew a distinction between the transfer of a share and the transfer of a grove, house or the like. What he meant by the words "the like" I do not know. It might be argued that a house, that is to say, the building as opposed to the site is not a share or even part of a share of a co-sharer, but the only difference that, as far as I can see, could be drawn between a share and a grove is not the fact that trees grow in a grove but that one plot is not a complete share. I do not think that when a wajib-ul-arz says that there is a custom of pre-emption on a transfer of a share, it applies only to a transfer of a complete share and not to a portion of it. The whole includes the part and I do not see on what principle one should find that a share of a share is not pre-emptible when the whole share is.

I find, therefore, that the wajib-ul-arz shows that there exists a custom of pre-emption in Mouza Safipur and that this land being in Mouza Safipur, it is subject to that custom.

(2) 7 O W N 271; 122 Ind Cas. 774; Ind Rul. (1930) Oudh 134; 14 R D 119; A I R 1930 Oudh 235.

(3) 18 O C 138; 30 Ind. Cas. 295; 2 O L J 305; A I R 1915 Oudh 290.

I, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.
s. Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Letters Patent Appeal No. 11 of 1939

September 21, 1939

HARRIES, O. J. AND FAZL ALI, J.

MUKHAN SINGH AND OTHERS

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

Babu CHANDRIKA PRASAD SINGH alias
RAMADHIN SINGH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Bihar Tenancy Act (VIII of 1934), ss. 179, 155—Landlord, whether can contract with lessee that right of ejectment under contract shall not be subject to qualifications imposed by s. 155—Principle underlying s. 114, Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), is embodied in s. 155.

There is nothing in s. 179, Bihar Ten. Act, to prevent the landlord from entering into a contract with the lessee to the effect that the right of ejectment which he shall have under the agreement shall not be subject to any such qualifications as are imposed by s. 155.

The principle underlying s. 114, T. P. Act, is also embodied in s. 155 of the Bihar Ten. Act which is virtually a counterpart of s. 114 of the T. P. Act; and, as the Act itself contains this provision which enables the tenant to contract himself out of the concession available to him under it, there can be no further room for the application of any equitable principle.

L. P. A. from a decision of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice O. M. Agarwala, dated January 13, 1939, reported as 120 Ind. Cas. 624.

Mr. Phulan Prasad Varma, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Baldeva Sahay, Harinandan Singh and Harians Kumar, for the Respondents.

Fazl Ali, J.—This is a Letters Patent Appeal from a judgment of Agarwala, J. in a second appeal arising out of a suit in ejectment.

It appears that on November 17, 1912, the plaintiffs' predecessors-in-interest granted a permanent mukarrari lease to defendant No. 4 at an annual rent of Rs. 19 in which there was a clause to the following effect:—

"If any of the fixed instalments (of rent) remain unpaid, the said proprietors (i.e. the lessor) and their heirs and representatives shall be competent to cancel this patta on their own authority and bring the mukarrari property into their own direct possession or to settle it with others, to which no objection by me or my heirs and representatives shall be entertained."

On August 29, 1934, the defendant No. 4 transferred the mukarrari land to defendants Nos. 1 to 3, and as neither these defendants nor defendant No. 4 paid the rent due for the year 1341 and 1342 F. to the plaintiffs, the latter brought in 1935 the present suit for the ejectment of defendants Nos. 1 to 3 on the ground that the lease had been forfeited. They also claimed compensation for use and occupation of the land by the defendants subsequent to the date of the alleged forfeiture.

The trial Court passed a decree in the following terms :—

"the suit be decreed on contest with costs against defendants Nos. 1 to 3 and ex parte against defendant No. 4. Defendants Nos. 1 to 3 are directed to pay to the plaintiffs the sum of Rs. 21-9-6 the amount claimed by them in this suit, as compensation and damages for 1342 F. along with full costs of this suit within fifteen days from this date. In case the money is paid to the plaintiff or is deposited in Court within the aforesaid period, the lessee shall hold the property leased, as if the forfeiture had not occurred, but in case the order is not complied with, the plaintiffs will be entitled to eject the defendants from the holding and recover possession thereof. Defendant No. 4 will be liable for payment of Rs. 21-9-6 to the plaintiffs on account of compensation and damages for 1341 F. Pleaders fee at 8 p. c. Future interest at 6 per cent."

The plaintiffs appealed from the decree of the trial Court and the lower Appellate Court, while maintaining the decree for compensation, gave them an unconditional decree for ejectment. The judgment of the lower Appellate Court was upheld on second appeal and hence this appeal under the Letters Patent.

Section 179 of the Bihar Ten. Act provides that "Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent a proprietor or a holder of a permanent tenure in a permanently-settled area from granting a permanent mukarrari lease on any terms agreed on between him and his tenant."

This section was construed by a Full Bench of this Court in Nawabzada Syed Moinuddin Mirza v. Sourendra Kumar Roy (1) and the view expressed in that case was as follows :—

"The true construction of s. 179, is that it is a permission to landlords and tenants, in the case of a creation of a permanent tenure in a permanently settled area, to contract out of the Act and that whereas the general law created by the Bengal Ten. Act as applicable to the relationship of landlord and tenant will apply to a permanent mukarrari lease, the parties are at liberty to make a specific provision for the elimination of such terms as may be imposed by the Act as they may select to eliminate."

The same view has been expressed by this Bench in Muhammad Hasan v. Baidyanath Sahay, (S. A. No. 388 of 1933 decided on September 4, 1939) (2). In that case it was contended that there can be no ejectment for non-payment of rent under the Bihar Ten. Act by reason of ss. 10, 65 and 178, sub-s. (1), cl. (c), but this contention was negatived and my Lord the Chief Justice pointed out in his judgment that s. 179, is by its terms, an exception to the law as laid down in the earlier sections and, therefore, those sections of the Act would not prevent the parties agreeing to whatever terms they thought proper.

(1) 13 Pat. 231; 147 Ind. Cas. 655; 6 R P 361; 15 P L T 156; A I R 1934 Pat. 153 (F B).

(2) 184 Ind. Cas. 605; 6 B R 62; 12 R P 253;

Now, the point raised in this appeal is not that the plaintiffs cannot claim ejectment by reason of any specific provisions of the Bihar Ten. Act. On the other hand, it is conceded that they have a right to sue for ejectment in the present case. What is really contended is that before suing for ejectment it was incumbent on the plaintiffs to follow the procedure laid down in s. 155 of the Bihar Ten. Act, and the decree passed in that suit must conform to that section. It is argued that s. 155 merely provides the procedure which must be followed in all suits for ejectment, and so there is no conflict between this section and the right to claim ejectment which may be provided for by any special covenant in a mukarrari lease between a tenant and a proprietor or holder of a permanent tenure in a permanently settled area. As this point was neither raised nor decided in Muhammad Hasan v. Baidyanath Sahay, S. A. No. 388 of 1938 (2), it is necessary to deal with it specifically in this appeal.

Section 155, provides among other things (1) that a suit for the ejectment of a tenant, on the ground that he has broken a condition on breach of which he is, under the terms of a contract between him and the landlord, liable to ejectment, shall not be entertained unless the landlord has served in the prescribed manner, a notice on the tenant specifying the particular misuse or breach complained of, and, where the misuse or breach is capable of remedy, requiring the tenant to remedy same, and, in any case, to pay reasonable compensation for the misuse or breach, and the tenant has failed to comply within a reasonable time with that request; and (2) that a decree passed in favour of the landlord in any such suit shall declare the amount of compensation which would reasonably be payable to the plaintiff for the breach, and whether, in the opinion of the Court, the breach is capable of remedy, and shall fix a period during which it shall be open to the defendant to pay that amount to the plaintiff, and, where the breach is declared to be capable of remedy, to adopt the same.

The first question to be decided is, whether there is anything in the Ten. Act to prevent the parties to a mukarrari lease from contracting out of this section or in other words entering into an agreement that if the lessee is to be ejected he may be ejected unconditionally and independently of the provisions of this section. In my opinion, the answer to this question must be in the negative. The words "any terms agreed on between him and his tenant" which occur in s. 179, are very wide and show that the parties to a mukarrari lease to which that section applies can contract not only out of ss. 10, 65 and 178 as was held in S. A. No 388 of 1938 Muhammad Hasan v. Baidyanath Sahay (2), but also s. 155 of the Bengal Ten. Act. As was pointed out by Agarwala, J., if the provisions of s. 155, are examined, it will be found that the right of ejectment which the landlord may have, is qualified by them in two particulars: first, the landlord is required to give a notice in the prescribed form specifying the breach of contract; and, secondly, the landlord is compelled to accept compensation in lieu of forfeiture in the event of tenants choosing to pay such compensation. But, as has already been pointed out, there is nothing in s. 179 to prevent the landlord from entering into a contract with the lessee to the effect that the right of ejectment which he shall have under the agreement shall not be subject to any such qualifications as are imposed by s. 155.

The next question to be considered is whether there is any such contract in the mukarrari lease upon which the title of the defendants is based. In my opinion, the relevant clause in this document which has already been referred to, gives the landlord an absolute and unqualified right of re-entry. This is clear from the use of the expression "on their own authority" and also by the provision that no objection to the right of re-entry shall be entertained if any objection is put forward by the lessee or his heirs. The vernacular expression which has been translated to mean "on their own authority" is Ba-ikhtiare-khud. In my view, the use of this expression makes it clear that the right of re-entry which the landlord was entitled to exercise under the lease was subject to none of the qualifications laid down in the Bihar Ten. Act.

It was lastly contended by the learned Advocates for the appellants that the appellants are in any event entitled to a relief under s. 114 of the T. P. Act. This section runs as follows:—

"Where a lease of immovable property has determined by forfeiture for non payment of rent, and the lessor sues to eject the lessee, if, at the hearing of the suit, the lessee pays or tenders to the lessor the rent in arrear, together with interest thereon and his full costs of the suit, or gives such security as the Court thinks sufficient for making such payment within fifteen days, the Court may, in lieu of making a decree for ejectment, pass an order relieving the lessee against the forfeiture; and thereupon the lessee shall hold the property leased as if the forfeiture had not occurred."

The lower Appellate Court has, in its judgment, clearly shown that s. 114, can be of no avail to the appellants, because the conditions laid down in this section have not been fulfilled in the present case. But apart from that fact it is quite plain that neither s. 114, nor the principle underlying it can be applied to the present case. Section 114, is not applicable because this case is not governed by the T. P. Act but by the Bihar Ten. Act. As to the principle underlying that section, it is enough to point out, first, that this principle is also embodied in s. 155 of the Bihar Ten. Act which is virtually a counter-part of s. 114 of the T. P. Act; and secondly, that if the Act itself which contains this provision enables the tenant to contract himself out of the concession available to him under it, there can be no further room for the application of any equitable principle.

In my opinion, the case was correctly decided by Agarwala, J. and I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Harries, C. J.—I agree.

B.

Appeal dismissed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Execution of Decree Appeal No. 48 of 1937
November 21, 1939

THOMAS, O. J. AND RADHA KRISHNA, J.
GOMTI AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT-DEBTORS
—APPELLANTS

versus

JUGAL KISHORE—DEBTOR-HOLDER
—RESPONDENT

U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (XXV of 1934), ss. 7 (1) (a), 14, 18—Transfer of decree for execution to Court in Bengal—Subsequent application by judgment-debtor under s. 4 forwarded under s. 6—Execution pending in Court in Bengal, if can be stayed—Word "other execution process," meaning of—Decree under s. 14—Effect of.

It is clear from O. XXI, rr. 5 and 6, Civil Procedure Code, that the proceedings in connection with an application for transfer of the decree start with an application for transfer to the Court which passed the decree and end when that Court has complied with the requirements of r. 6 of O. XXI. Thereafter no proceeding remains pending in that Court. It may be that the execution Court does not on an order of transfer lose its jurisdiction over the execution proceedings for certain purposes but it is very different from saying that the execution proceedings remain pending in that Court. Hence where the judgment-debtor makes an application under s. 4, U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, after the decree is transferred for execution by the Court at Unao in Oudh which passed the decree to the Court at Comilla in Bengal and an order has been made by the Collector under s. 6 of that Act, there are no proceedings pending at the date of the order under s. 6 in the Court at Unao and cl. (a) of s. 7 (1) does not apply to the case, and the execution proceedings pending in the Court at Comilla cannot be stayed. 109 Ind. Cas. 417 (1) and 123 Ind. Cas. 881 (5), discussed and distinguished. [p. 282, cols. 1 & 2; p. 283, cols. 1 & 2.]

A mere order of transferring a decree is not issuing a process for the execution thereof, and the words "other execution process" used in the latter part of cl. (a) of s. 7 (1) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act do not refer to and cannot cover an order transferring the decree for execution to another Court. [p. 283, col. 2.]

When a decree under s. 14 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, is passed, then by virtue of s. 18 of the Act the effect of the decree passed by the Special Judge would be to extinguish the previously existing rights of the decree-holder-creditor. These rights will be substituted by the decree of the Special Judge. [p. 284, col. 1.]

Ex. D. A. against the order of the Civil Judge, Unao, dated September 3, 1937.

Messrs. Haidar Husain and H. H. Zaidi, for the Applicants.

Mr. M. Wasim, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This is an execution of decree appeal on behalf of the judgment-debtors against whom the respondent at present holds a decree, which he obtained under O. XXXIV, r. 6, of the Code of Civil Procedure. This decree was passed some time in November, 1925. The judgment-debtors have some property situated in the District of Trippera, Bengal. In 1933 the decree-holder applied in the Court of the Civil Judge, then Subordinate Judge, of Unao for transfer of his decree to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Comilla in Bengal for execution. The decree was therefore sent for execution to that Court and the execution thereof is pending there.

In October, 1936, the judgment-debtors made an application under s. 4 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act before the Collector of Unao requesting that the provisions of that Act be applied to them. The Collector of Unao forwarded the application to the Special Judge of Unao and proceedings before the learned Special Judge are still pending.

On July 24, 1937, the judgment-debtors applied in the Court of the Civil Judge at Unao, i. e., the Court which passed the decree in favour of the respondent-decree-holder praying that by virtue of s. 7 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, the execution proceedings going on in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge at Comilla District Trippera be ordered to be stayed. The Court on July 27, 1937, passed an ex parte order staying execution proceedings. On August 3, 1937, the decree-holder applied for setting aside the ex parte order of stay on the ground that the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Comilla was situated outside the United Provinces and the execution proceedings pending in that Court could not be stayed under the provisions of s. 7 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act. This application of the decree-holder was allowed and the order of stay passed on July 27, 1937, was vacated. The judgment-debtors have come up in appeal to this Court against the order of the learned Civil Judge of Unao, dated September 3, 1937, cancelling the order of stay of execution proceedings.

The learned Counsel for the appellants has argued that the provisions of s. 7 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act are fully applicable and they are entitled to obtain an order staying further execution proceedings in respect of the decree in favour of the decree-holder on two grounds, namely:—

- (1) That the execution proceedings originating in the decree-holder's application for transfer of the decree for execution to the Court in Bengal are still pending in the Unao Court which passed the decree and will terminate when the Bengal Court certifies to that Court the result of the execution under s. 41 of the Code of Civil Procedure. These proceedings must be stayed under the first part of s. 7 (1) (a) resulting in the withdrawal of the decree from the Court in Bengal by the execution Court at Unao in the United Provinces.
- (2) That the order passed by the Unao Court transferring the decree for execution to the Bengal Court was an execution process within the meaning of that expression in the latter part of s. 7 (1) (a) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, and as such, it became null and void and the decree must be recalled from the Court to which it was sent for execution.

In support of his argument the learned Counsel for the appellant has contended that the Court does not become functus officio between the time when it transfers the decree for execution to another Court and the date of certificate under s. 41 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that Court still retains jurisdiction over execution proceedings. He has placed reliance for this contention upon Jang Bahadur v. Bank of Upper India, Lucknow, (L. R. 55 I. A. p. 227 = 5 O. W. N. 502) (1), Seth Shapurji Nanabhai v. Shankar Dat Dube (I. L. R. 17 Allahabad 431) (2), Srihary Mondal v. Murari Chowdhury, (I. L. R. 13 Calcutta 257) (3), Swaminatha Ayyar v. Vaidyanatha Sastri, (I. L. R. 23 Madras, 466) (4) and Balkrishna v. Debi Prasad and others, (7 O. W. N. 363) (5). He has further referred to Lang v. Jaswanti Lal, (I. L. R. 50 Bombay 439) (6) in support of his contention that the Court which passed the decree has power to withdraw the decree at any time from the Court to which the decree has been transferred for execution.

We find ourselves unable to agree with the contentions of the learned Counsel for the appellants. In our opinion the case does not fall either under the first or the second part of s. 7 (1) (a) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act.

Section 39 of the Code of Civil Procedure lays down cases in which the Court which passed the decree may send it for execution to another Court. Order XXI, r. 5 and 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure provide for the mode and procedure of transfer of the decree. It is clear from these provisions that the proceedings in connection with an application for transfer of the decree start with an application for transfer to the Court which passed the decree and end when that Court has complied with the requirements of r. 6 of O. XXI. Thereafter no proceeding remains pending in that Court. It may be that the execution Court does not on an order of transfer lose its jurisdiction over the execution proceedings for certain purposes but it is very different from saying that the execution proceedings remain pending in that Court. The cases cited by the learned Counsel for the appellant mentioned above do not lend any support to the particular argument addressed before us.

In Jang Bahadur v. Bank of Upper India, Lucknow (5 O. W. N. 502) (1) the facts were that the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Lucknow passed a decree absolute for sale on a mortgage in favour of the Bank of the Upper India, Lucknow, against Raja Durga Prasad, the father of Jang Bahadur, appellant. Some property sought to be sold was situated in the District of Hardoi. The Subordinate Judge of Lucknow sent the decree for execution to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Hardoi under s. 39 of the Code of Civil Procedure and execution proceedings started in that Court. Raja Durga Prasad then died during the pendency of the execution proceedings in the Hardoi Court. The decree-holder then filed an application in the Hardoi Court praying that Jang Bahadur's name be brought on the record as the representative of Raja Durga Prasad, the judgment-debtor. This substitution was allowed by the Hardoi Court. After the execution proceedings had gone on in the Hardoi Court for several years Jang Bahadur made an application before the Sale Officer at Hardoi that the sale proceedings were illegal and without jurisdiction inasmuch as the decree-holder did not get his name entered in the decree in accordance with the provisions of s. 50 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The Sale Officer referred the matter to the Subordinate Judge of Hardoi who rejected Jang Bahadur's application. The order of the Subordinate Judge of Hardoi was upheld by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh. Jang Bahadur went up in appeal to their Lordships of the Judicial Committee. Their Lordships dismissed the appeal. The argument before their Lordships in the Privy Council was that in view of s. 50 of the Code of Civil Procedure the Lucknow Court alone was competent to make the order of substitution. Their Lordships in their judgment observed that the words "which passed it" did not find place in the corresponding section, viz., s. 208 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, but were inserted in s. 232 of the Code of 1877 and were continued in s. 232 of the Code of 1882 and s. 50 of the Code of 1908. In their Lordships' view the effect of the introduction of these words was merely to lay down a rule of procedure as to which

(1) 55 I. A. 227; 109 Ind. Cas. 417; 5 O. W. N. 502; A. I. R. 1928 P. C. 162. 32 O. W. N. 790; 26 A. L. J. 681; 48 O. L. J. 23; 28 L. W. 25; 3 Luck. 314; 30 Bom. L. R. 1373; 55 M. L. J. 515; (1928) M. W. N. 863 (P. O.).

(2) 17 A. 431; A. W. N. 1595, 74.

(3) 13 C. 257.

(4) 23 M. 466.

(5) 7 O. W. N. 363; 123 Ind. Cas. 881; Ind. Rul. (1930) Oudh 177; A. I. R. 1930 Oudh 305.

(6) 50 B. 439; 94 Ind. Cas. 146; 28 Bom. L. R. 381; A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 271.

of the two Courts, i.e. the Court which passed the decree or the Court to which the decree had been transferred for execution, an application for substitution should be made and the non-compliance with such procedure was a defect which might be waived. In the circumstances of the case their Lordships held that it was not open to Jang Bahadur after a lapse of long time to turn round and challenge the legality of the substitution proceedings. In the course of their judgment their Lordships examined s. 39 of the Civil Procedure Code and observed that on such transfer of the decree the Court transferring the decree does not altogether lose seisin of the decree and that the Court of transfer obtains jurisdiction to deal with that particular execution proceeding and retains such jurisdiction until such execution is withdrawn or stayed or until it certifies to the Court which passed the decree either that the decree has been executed or if it fails to execute the decree, the circumstances attending such failure. This decision does not support in any manner the contention of the learned Counsel for the appellants that the execution proceedings remained pending in the Court which passed the decree in spite of the fact that the decree had been transferred to another Court for execution.

In Balkrishna v. Debi Prasad and others, (7 O. W. N. 363) (5) a Bench of this Court held that there is nothing to debar a Court which passes a decree from deciding any matters which may arise in execution quite apart from attachment or sale of property. This decision again is a decision which defines the respective limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed a decree and the Court to which the decree had been transferred for execution, but is of no help in determining the question involved in the present case.

The other cases need not be considered. The same criticism apply to them.

We are of opinion that there were no proceedings pending at the date of the order under s. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act in the Court at Unao and the first part of cl. (a) of s. 7 (1) does not apply.

As regards the second contention that the order transferring the decree by the Unao Court is an execution process and was in force at the date of the order under s. 6 of the Encumbered Estates Act, we are of opinion that it has no force. In our opinion, the words "other execution process" refer to processes analogous to attachment of property, such as warrant of arrest, order for sale of property, etc. A perusal of the rules of O. XXI of the Code of Civil Procedure will show that that Order deals with several stages during the course of execution of a decree. Rules 1 and 2 deal with the question of payment under decree. Rules 3 to 9 deal with transfer of decree to another Court. Rules 10 to 23 deal with the form of an application for execution, the persons entitled to execute and the procedure in cases of cross-decrees and of cross claims under the same decree, etc. Rule 24 and rules onwards deal with the mode of execution and in this stage it becomes necessary for the Court executing the decree to issue certain processes, such as processes for arrest, detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor, attachment of property, order for sale, etc. We consider that it is this stage in the execution of a decree when processes for execution are issued. The heading just before r. 24 is "process for execution" r. 24 (1) reads as follows:—

"When the preliminary measures (if any) required by the foregoing rules have been taken, the Court shall, unless it sees cause to the contrary, issue its process for the execution of the decree".

The language of this clause clearly indicates that the stage in the course of execution contemplated by rr. 1 to 23 is only a preliminary stage, and after the preliminary measures required by rr. 1 to 23 have been taken, the Court is required to issue its process for the execution of the decree. The procedure for an application for transfer of a decree is a preliminary measure, required to be taken before the processes for execution are issued. A mere order of transferring a decree is not issuing a process for the execution thereof, and in our opinion the words "other execution process" used in the latter part of the clause of the Encumbered Estates Act under consideration do not refer to and cannot cover an order transferring the decree for execution to another Court.

We are, therefore, of opinion that s. 7 (1) (a) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act has no application to the present case and the execution proceedings pending in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Comilla cannot be stayed.

It has to be noted that the decree-holder has presented his written-statement claiming the decretal amount against the appellants under s. 9 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, and the learned Counsel for the appellants has pointed out that if the execution proceedings carried on in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge, Comilla, are not stated, a very anomalous position will arise because while the decree-holder will be reaping the fruit of his execution in the Bengal Court, he will also be getting a decree on his claim under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act. In our opinion the consideration of this question is premature. It will be for the learned Special Judge, when examining the claim of the decree-holder and determining the amount of debt due to him under s. 14 to see that the decree-holder does not get any amount twice over. When a decree under s. 14 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act is passed, then by virtue of s. 18 of the Act the effect of the decree passed by the Special Judge would be to extinguish the previously existing rights of the respondent. These rights of the respondent will be substituted by the decree of the Special Judge and the decretal amount shall have to be recovered in the manner and to the extent prescribed by the provisions of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act.

The judgment-debtor-appellants may after a decree is passed by the Special Judge be entitled to raise the question that after the passing of that decree no further execution in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Comilla can go on but this question does not arise in the present case and we express no opinion on that point.

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

a.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 275 of 1938

February 10, 1939

WORT, J.

JADUNANDAN DAS AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Musammat MAHO AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—RESPONDENTS

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Oral agreement modifying registered contract of lease, is inadmissible—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 106, 108—Month to month lease—Lessee allowed to construct building—Lessor, if can claim demolition—His remedy—Joint lease—One co-lessor alone cannot enforce covenant.

Subsequent oral agreement modifying a previous contract of a month to month lease which is registered, is not admissible in evidence.

Where in case of such a month to month lease, lessee is allowed to construct a building on the land leased, it is unjust for the lessor to claim the structure to be demolished. He should give the lessee a notice to quit.

Where a co-proprietor alone sues to enforce a covenant of lease but the other co-proprietor who though does not decline to join as co-plaintiff is impleaded as co-defendant with the lessee, and comes forward with the latter in establishing an oral agreement made by the lessee with his father which modifies the lease, in the circumstances one of the joint lessors or lessees cannot enforce the covenants of the lease. T. M. Fairclough and Sons Limited v. Berliner (3), relied on.

A. from the appellate decree of the Sub-Judge, Purnea, dated December 11, 1937.

Mr. J. M. Ghosh, for the Appellants.

Mr. R. S. Chatterjee, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal by the plaintiff arises out of an action in which he claimed a declaration that the defendant first party had no right to build permanent walls on the land in suit, and also prayed for a mandatory injunction calling upon him to demolish the objectionable buildings. The defence to the action was that as far back as 1923 when the thatched buildings had been destroyed by fire the interested defendants approached the plaintiffs' father and he agreed that the defendants could re-build by constructing what is ordinarily known in this country as pucca buildings. The trial Court came to the conclusion that the agreement had not been proved but disallowed the plaintiffs' claim as regards certain rooms but ordered the demolition of the wall. It appears that the reason why there was no order as regards the rooms was that no claim had been included in the plaint with regard to them. The Appellate Court allowed the appeal coming to the conclusion that the agreement put forward by the defendants had been established. In this Court for the first time it is contended that it was not open to the defendant to prove the agreement of 1923 as it was contrary to the provisions of s. 92, Proviso (4), Evi Act. Section 92 prohibits the proof of an oral agreement in variation of a written agreement, but the Proviso allows for the proof of 'any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant or disposition of property,' and there is an exception tagged on to the Proviso that if such 'contract, grant or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according to the law in force,' then the Proviso does not apply. It seems to me quite clearly that it is necessary to decide whether the expression "or has been registered" refers to the fact of registration and not to the requirement of law and therefore, being an agreement although by law not required to be in writing but has been registered, and not an agreement to rescind or modify such contract, is inadmissible in evidence. The question therefore to be determined in the first place is whether the agreement proved by the defendant was an agreement to rescind or modify a contract.

Before dealing with that point, I would refer to another question which arose during the course of the argument and that relates to the form of the lease. It appears that the plaintiff proved no patta, called for no patta from the defendant, nor did the defendant produce it, nor is there any indication in the record of the case that any such patta exists. Therefore the lease was ineffective in law by reason of the decision of this Court in Ramkrishna Jha v. Jainandan Jha (1) if it is to be construed as a lease for a year or more than a year. If that be so, it is obvious that the plaintiff cannot prove the covenant to build a thatched house only. I have had the kabuliyat translated, and in my opinion, the lease must be construed as a lease from month to month under s. 106, T. P. Act, determinable on fifteen days' notice and not as suggested determinable at will. Any suggestion made by the defendants therefore that they have got a permanent lease is disposed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in G. H. C. Ariff v. Jadunath Majumdar Bahadur (2) and the subsequent decision of this Court with regard to the matter. That being so, it is quite clear that the plaintiff was entitled to establish or prove the covenant in the agreement or kabuliyat which was adduced in evidence in the case. That aspect of the case has certainly an important bearing upon the relief which the plaintiff claimed with which I shall deal in a moment; in the meantime it is necessary for me to decide whether this is a case which the defendant attempted to prove an agreement to rescind or modify any such contract. I must say I find considerable difficulty in coming to a conclusion with regard to the matter. It might be said that the so-called agreement which the defendant proved was an attempt to prove the case which excused him from what prima facie was a breach of contract; in other words, in proving his agreement he might have been understood to say: "Yes, I have broken the terms of my agreement but my reason for doing so was the arrangement made by you that I should be allowed to do so." Whatever else may be said about the case, it seems to me to be very unjust on the part of the plaintiff in this case, the facts being what they are: the father having agreed to allow him to re-build a more substantial building than that which existed on the land before and one of the sons now coming forward and trying to ignore the arrangement made by the father.

The only question that remains is whether it is an agreement which modifies such a contract. With very considerable hesitation I come to the conclusion that it does modify the contract and therefore in that sense was not admissible in evidence. But that does not dispose of the case. The plaintiff, as I have said, was among many joint proprietors and he alone sued as plaintiff. It is not a case in which the plaintiff being one joint proprietors sues for a sum of money and his co-proprietor declines to join as a plaintiff and the plaintiff suing claims the full amount, but a case in which the co-proprietor of the plaintiff who is one of the defendants comes forward to support the defendants in proof of the agreement which the Judge in the Court below allowed the defendants to establish. That can only be construed as meaning that the co-proprietor who is on the side of the defendants is not enforcing the contract contained in the kabuliyat. In those circumstances it seems to me that the matter is covered by the decision that one of two joint lessors or lessees cannot enforce covenants of the lease. There are a number of decisions in India, but I refer to the decision in T. M. Fairclough and Sons, Limited v. Berliner (3). It is true that in that case Maugham, J. was construing the Law of Property Act of 1925 in England in which the word 'lease' was used, but that is immaterial as it was declaratory of the common law and the question that arose was whether the lessee being entitled to relief against forfeiture out of a number of lessees would be entitled to such relief in the absence of a joint claim by his joint lessors, and it was held that he was not.

(1) 16 P. L. T. 451; 157 Ind. Cas. 98; A. I. R. 1935 Pat. 291; 14 Pat. 672; 1 B. R. 715; 9 R. P. 90 (F. B.).

(2) A. I. R. 1931 P. O. 79; 131 Ind. Cas. 762; 60 M. L. J. 538; 33 L. W. 586; 53 O. L. J. 359; 35 O. W. N. 550; 15 R. D. 354; 8 O. W. N. 739; (1931) M. W. N. 480; Ind. Rul. (1931) P. O. 154; 33 Bom. L. R. 913; 58 O. 1235; 58 I. A. 91 (P. O.).

(3) (1931) 1 Ch. D. 60; 100 L. J. Ch. 29; 144 L. T. 175; 74 S. J. 703; 47 T. L. R. 4.

It was contended by Mr. Chatterjee on behalf of the respondents in this case that in the circumstances the plaintiff cannot enforce the term of the agreement relating to the erection of a thatched house. I think the contention is right. There is another aspect of the case which I have already stated at the commencement of my judgment, and that is that on the true construction of the kabuliyat it can be construed that only a lease from month to month was granted under s. 106. It seems therefore unjust in the circumstances that the plaintiff claimed that the structure to which he objected should be demolished; he should give the defendant a notice to quit. In my judgment the appeal fails and the action should be dismissed with costs.

D.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT Special Bench

Application for process for contempt of Court in F. A. No. 1 of 1937

December 2, 1938

COSTELLO, BISWAS AND LODGE, JJ.

Srimati BIBHABATI DEVI AND OTHERS—

DEBENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

KUMAR RAMENDRA NARAYAN ROY,

PLAINTIFF AND ANOTHER, DEBENDENT—

RESPONDENTS

Contempt of Court—Publication of pamphlet during pendency of proceedings, when amounts to contempt of Court.

A pamphlet published during the pendency of proceedings is contempt of Court, if (1) it assumes the truth of certain facts which are connected directly or indirectly with the matters under consideration and awaiting decision in the appeal itself, (2) the document contains reflections of the gravest possible nature upon the conduct and the character of certain of the persons in the appeal, and (3) the pamphlet purports to predict that the appellants will be or are likely to be successful in the appeal and adds the comment in effect that if they are successful, law and justice will be defeated. St. James Evening Post Case: Roach v. Garvan (1) and Tichborne v. Tichborne (2), relied on.

Mr. Phani Bhusan Chakravarti, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Sarat Chandra Janah, for Nagendra Nath Das.

Costello, J.—This is an application made on behalf of Bibhabati Devi who is one of the appellants in the appeal now pending before this Court or rather not only pending but proceeding day by day before this Court. The application is also supported by or on behalf of the respondents in the appeal and in effect, therefore, it is a joint application by the principal parties in the appeal. We were asked to issue a rule calling upon one Nagendra Nath Das to show cause why he should not be dealt with by the Court for a contempt constituted by or contained in a pamphlet printed in the Bengali language, the title of which rendered into English is 'Fight between the Rani and the Sannyasi (new series).' The pamphlet relates to what is commonly called the Bhowal raj case and upon the outside page or cover of the pamphlet there appears a portrait of the plaintiff in that case in the dress of the Second Kumar of Bhowal. That portrait is one of the actual exhibits in the case being Ex. 58. The pamphlet is, beyond all question, defamatory both of Bibhabati Devi and her brother Satya; I think I should not be overstating the matter to say that it is both disgraceful and dastardly. Our task in adjudicating on this matter is rendered easier from one point of view by the fact that Nagendra Nath Das is not only himself present in Court but is represented by an Advocate, Mr. Janah, and Mr. Janah stated at the outset of the hearing that his client pleaded guilty to the charge brought against him in these proceedings. He clearly and frankly admitted on behalf of the respondent that the pamphlet complained of is undoubtedly a contempt of Court. We have therefore not to consider in any detail the contents of this document which may be described as being in the highest degree scurrilous and contemptible. If, however, this publication had merely amounted to a libel upon Bibhabati and her brother Satya, it might have been possible to argue that it was not a matter which could be dealt with in proceedings for contempt of Court and that the persons aggrieved ought to be left to pursue the appropriate remedy in another place. But this publication contains statements and innuendoes which undoubtedly transcend the character of a libel only. Mr. Chuckerbutty, to whom we are indebted for his very clear and able argument before us, contended, and in our opinion rightly, that this pamphlet comes within the definition of "contempt of Court" on three grounds. First of all, it assumes the truth of certain facts which are connected directly or indirectly with the matters under consideration and awaiting decision in the appeal.

itself. Secondly, the document contains reflections of the gravest possible nature upon the conduct and the character of certain of the persons in the appeal, viz. Bibhabati Debi herself and her brother Satya who, though not technically a party is a person whose name figures very largely throughout the proceedings. Lastly, the pamphlet purports to predict that the appellants will be or are likely to be successful in the appeal and adds the comment in effect that if they are successful, law and justice will be defeated. These are the points put forward by Mr. Chuckerbutty.

We have been taken through the pamphlet and we have considered it carefully from the beginning to the end and we have no doubt whatever that the first part of it and the last part of it, that is to say, the part which is in a sort of doggerel verse and the part which is in the blank verse both contain statements which entirely justify the propositions put forward by Mr. Chuckerbutty. We are of opinion that this matter falls within the ambit of the classic definition of "contempt of Court" which is contained in the judgment of Lord Hardwick (who was then the Lord Chancellor of England) in St. James Evening Post Case: Roach v. Garian (1) decided in the year 1742. The passage is this:

"There are, three different sorts of contempt; one kind of contempt is scandalizing the Court itself. There may be likewise a contempt of this Court in abusing parties who are concerned in causes here. There may be also a contempt of this Court in prejudicing mankind against persons before the cause is heard."

And then follows this pregnant observation:

"There cannot be anything of greater consequence than to keep the streams of justice clear and pure, that parties may proceed with safety both to themselves and their characters."

Those observations of the learned and noble lord find a place in some of the judgments given in cases of contempt of Court decided subsequently, notably in Tichborne v. Tichborne (2) where Vice-Chancellor Stuart, after citing the passage to which I have referred, came to the conclusion that by a publication commenting on the position of the claimant in the well-known Tichborne case (2) there had been a contempt of Court. I desire to say that we are not in this present proceeding concerned with the dignity or prestige of the Court itself. The publication of the pamphlet now complained of can have and will have no possible influence upon the proceedings or the decision in the appeal. But what we are concerned with is to take measures to stop, as far as possible, attacks upon the parties to legal proceedings and to prevent irresponsible and scandalous comments on proceedings pending before a Court of law.

Mr. Janah having stated that his client pleaded guilty to having committed a contempt of Court endeavoured to urge in mitigation of the offence that his client is a young man of no great education in that he had only read as far as the seventh standard. It appears, however, that Nagendra Nath Das is not only the printer and publisher of this offending pamphlet, but he is the actual writer of it. The words used are his words. If his ability as a poet or rhymester is not of a very high order, that in our opinion is no reason whatever why he should use such ability as he does possess to compose a pamphlet of this character. It was brought to our knowledge by an admission made voluntarily by the respondent that this is not the first time he has indulged in the malpractice of publishing scurrilous and defamatory pamphlets or, at any rate, commentaries on proceedings pending before a Court. He admitted that he has published a document, apparently more or less similar in character to the one before us, commenting upon a case now pending in a Court at Alipore. The offence with which we are now dealing therefore is not his first offence. Mr. Janah further urged in mitigation that the respondent is a young man. We ascertained that he has reached the age of 30 years and one would have thought that that might be taken to be an age of some discretion and some commonsense when he must have known perfectly well that what he was doing was, to say the least of it, a most improper and risky thing. At the very end of the proceedings Mr. Janah on behalf of his client tendered an apology to the Court and stated that Nagendra Nath Das would give an undertaking to destroy such copies of this production as are still in his possession. We should have appreciated that attitude better, had he also given an undertaking not to repeat an offence of that kind in the future. It is perhaps not without some significance that no written answer to the charge has been put before us and the apology was merely a verbal one given, as I have stated, at a somewhat late stage of the proceedings.

(1) (1742) 2 Atk. 469; 26 E. R. 683.

(2) (1870) 39 L. J. Ch. 398; 22 L. T. 55; 18 W. R. 621.

We regard this matter in the gravest possible light and we desire to make these proceedings an opportunity of letting it to be known publicly and as widely as possible that comments of this kind on pending proceedings or indeed comments of any kind on pending proceedings will not be tolerated. In order to mark our sense of gravity of this offence, after having taken into careful consideration all that has been urged by Mr. Janah on behalf of his client, we are of opinion that we must deal with this man in a way which will not only punish him personally but what is even, in a sense of greater importance will also deter other evilly-minded persons from committing an offence of this kind in the future. We, accordingly, direct that Nagendra Nath Das be committed to civil prison for a period of three calendar months. He will be taken into custody by the Sheriff. We further direct that the copies of the offending pamphlet be made over to the Sheriff.

D.

Order accordingly.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 9 of 1934

March 22, 1934

LEACH, C. J. AND MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

OFFICIAL RECEIVER, WEST

TANJORE—APPELLANT

versus

SAMUDRAVIJAYAN CHETTIAR

AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 11—Absolute estate—Words repugnant to, should be ignored.

Where an instrument recites that the donor has conveyed properties to the donees on account of affection, in consideration of service being rendered by them to the donor and, because they were the donor's only heirs, and with power to enjoy them with all rights, the intention of the donor is to create absolute estate and any subsequent words which are repugnant to an absolute title must be ignored. 65 Ind. Cas. 974 (1) and 134 Ind. Cas. 648 (2), relied on.

A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge, Kumbakonam, in O. S. No. 28 of 1928.

Mr. K. S. Desikan, for the Appellant.

Messrs. R. Sundaralingam and K. R. Rangaswami Ayyangar, for the Respondents.

Leach, C. J.—The appellant is the Official Receiver of West Tanjore District. He represents the estate of one Ramappa Chettiar, an insolvent. The suit out of which this appeal arises was filed by Ramappa's son, Samudravijayan, for a declaration that his father has merely a life-interest in certain immovable properties and for an injunction restraining the appellant from offering for sale more than the alleged life-interest. He also sought a decree for partition of other properties. The properties in respect of which the plaintiff alleged his father has a life-interest are described in Sch. A to the plaint and the properties in respect of which partition was sought in Schs. B and C. The suit succeeded so far as it concerned the properties described in Sch. A, but it was dismissed so far as it concerned the other properties. The appellant contends that the learned Subordinate Judge of Kumbakonam who tried the case was wrong in holding that Ramappa's interest in the A schedule properties was limited to a life-estate. He maintains that Ramappa's interest was that of an absolute owner. The appeal is limited to this question. The original owner of the properties was one K. S. Ramu Chettiar, who died in 1873, leaving a widow, Marudevi Ammal, and an adopted son Samudravijayan. The adopted son died in 1897, leaving two sons, Ramappa (the father of the plaintiff) and Surendranath. They were the 38th and 39th defendants in the appeal. Ramu Chettiar left a will under which properties set out in Sch. A were bequeathed to the widow, and it is common ground that she acquired an absolute interest in them. By a deed dated March 15, 1912, she gave these properties to Ramappa and Surendranath, and the dispute is with regard to the effect of this deed, the material portion of which reads as follows:

"On account of the affection I have towards my grandsons aforesaid—(1) Ramappa Chettiar and (2) Surendranath Chettiar—and in consideration of the service that is being rendered by them to me and as only the said two persons are my proper heirs, I have with all my heart and by means of this settlement deed given away this day the properties described in Sch. B thereof, to both of them aforesaid, with power to enjoy them with all rights. But from and out of the income from the said properties, I shall, during my life, pay the Government ~~tax~~ and enjoy the balance left. Afterwards both of them shall divide off the said properties into two moities as they please and enjoy the same. After the death of the said two persons, their (respective) heirs shall succeed thereto. Both of them, individuals numbers 1 and 2 shall enjoy the properties described in Sch. B aforesaid, without making any alienation thereof by way of gift, exchange, sale, etc. The value of the nanja, punja, etc., and house described in Sch. B aforesaid is Rs 16,000. To this effect I have with all my heart and bona fide executed this settlement deed. I have delivered two documents as title deeds hereto. This settlement deed shall remain with Surendranath Chettiar of you."

The appellant's case is that as the donor conveyed the suit properties "with power to enjoy them with all rights" she created an absolute title in the donees and any words which follow are repugnant to an absolute title must be ignored. He relies on s. 11, T. P. Act, which states that where on a transfer of property, an interest therein is created absolutely in favour of any person, but the terms of the transfer direct that such interest shall be applied or enjoyed by him in a particular manner, he shall be entitled to receive and dispose of such interest as if there were no such directions. The respondent contends that the document must be looked at as a whole and says that when this is done, it is apparent that the intention of the donor was to give to Ramappa and Surendranath merely a life-interest in the properties. He points to s. 82, Succession Act, and argues that if the meaning of any clause in a will is to be collected from the entire instrument, the same principle must apply when the Court is interpreting a deed of gift.

While the Court must examine the entire instrument in order to see what its effect is, the examination must be carried out in the light of s. 11, T. P. Act, when the instrument is one transferring immovable property. If the examination discloses that the transferor has used words creating an absolute interest, these words must be given effect to, notwithstanding that later words are used which restrict the right of full ownership. In the present case the properties were conveyed to Ramappa and Surendranath on account of affection, in consideration of "service" and, because they were the donor's only heirs, and the words "with power to enjoy them with all rights" can only imply full ownership. It is conceded by the respondent that if the instrument stopped there, it would operate to create an absolute estate in the donees. This being so, it is arguable that by reason of s. 11, T. P. Act, anything which comes after should be ignored. The words of gift are, however, followed immediately by these words:

"But from and out of the income from the said properties I shall, during my life, pay the Government ~~tax~~ and enjoy the balance." and we consider that they must be read in conjunction with the words of gift. Reading the document in this way, there is a conveyance to Ramappa and Surendranath absolutely, subject to the condition that the donor should enjoy the income during her life. In other words, she reserved to herself a life-interest. This is emphasized by the words which come next:

"Afterwards both of them shall divide off the said properties into two moities as they please and enjoy the same."

"Afterwards" means the donor's death, and on this event the properties are to be divided equally between the two donees without any restriction. The respondent would have it that the provision against alienation which comes later means that the donees were to have only a life-interest. It appears to us that this provision was inserted in order to prevent the donees selling the property during the donor's life-time as the sale would deprive her of the income. Be that as it may, the words prohibiting alienation must be disregarded because they limit the absolute estate which the donor conveyed to the donees with effect from her death. I should mention that the donor died in 1918, and as the result of partition agreements between Ramappa and Surendranath the properties conveyed by the deed were allotted to Ramappa.

In Bhaidas Sirdas v. Bai Gulab (1) the Judicial Committee had to consider a will left by a Hindu, who appointed his wife his executrix, constituted her the owner of his property and provided that she should leave whatever might remain after her death to her two daughters "as she liked." By cl. 18 of the will he directed his widow to defray the expenses of a religious object out of the rents of the property left to her, and authorized her to apply the surplus income for the maintenance of herself and her daughters. She was given an express power to mortgage or sell and by another clause the daughters were to be the executrices upon her death with power to deal with and manage the entire property. Their Lordships held that the widow took an absolute estate. The limitations which followed were not sufficient to displace the effect of the clause which constituted her the absolute owner of the property.

In Saraju Bala Debi v. Jyotismoyee Debi (2) which was also decided by the

(1) 48 B 153; 85 Ind. Cas. 974; A I R 1922 P O 193; 49 I A 1; 26 O W N 129; 15 L W 412; 20 A L J 289; 42 M L J 385; 35 O L J 314; 24 Bom. L R 551 (P O).

(2) 59 O 142; 134 Ind. Cas. 648; A I R 1931 P O 179; 58 I A 270; (1931) A L J 575; 35 O W N 903; 34 L W 51; 8 O W N 944; 33 Bom. L R 1257; (1931) M W N 989; 61 M L J 501; Ind. Rul. (1931) P O 296; 54 O L J 333 (P O).

Privy Council a Hindu executed three documents, whereby he conveyed to his daughter, her sons, and their sons successively and her daughters immovable properties subject to a fixed rent with the right to transfer by sale or gift under certain conditions. The conditions were: (1) The properties were not to pass to the heirs of the grantee's daughters; (2) they were not to be transferred by gift except to a limited extent for religious purposes, and (3) the grantor and his heirs were to have a right of pre-emption in certain circumstances. The Privy Council held that the grantee took an absolute estate. Their Lordships examined the conditions and held that they were to be disregarded as being repugnant restrictions. That is the position here. There is no doubt that it was the intention of the donor to convey the properties to Ramappa and Surendra-nath absolutely and the instrument was worded to give effect to this intention. Therefore, the restriction on alienation must be ignored. For the reasons indicated, we are of the opinion that the learned trial Judge was wrong in holding that Ramappa had merely a life-interest, and we allow this appeal.

The learned Advocate for the appellant has also contended that the suit was bad as notice had not been given in accordance with s. 80, Civil P. C. In view of our decision on the main question in the appeal, it is not necessary to decide whether the suit was properly instituted. The plaintiff-respondent will pay the appellant's costs in this Court and in the Court below. The plaintiff-respondent will also pay to the appellant the court-fee which the appellant had to pay as the result of the suit having been filed in forma pauperis.

N-S.

Appeal allowed.

ODDH CHIEF COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 109 of 1937

November 16, 1939

ZIA-UL HASAN AND RADHA KRISHNA, JJ.
ANAND BEHARI LAL KHANDLWAL
— PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

DEPUTY COMMISSIONER, BARA
BANKI, IN CHARGE OF ASDAMAU

ESTATE—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

U. P. Court of Wards Act (IV of 1912), ss 21 (3), 17 to 23, 52—Exclusion of period under—How calculated—Court of Wards, if can acknowledge or pay off time-barred debt of its ward—Claim notified under

s. 17—Creditor or decree-holder, whether precluded from suing or executing decree—Court of Wards, if under statutory liability to discharge debt or decree even if time-barred—S. 52, applicability—Words "without discharging..... in Chap. IV", meaning of—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 25 (3)—Manager of Court of Wards, whether agent generally or specially authorised to pay time barred debt—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 3—Manager, Court of Wards agreeing to pay decree-holder without seeing whether decree was barred by time—Decree barred by time then—Agreement, if enforceable.

Section 21, U. P. Court of Wards Act lays down that the time shall not run against the decree-holder so far as the execution of the decree is concerned in respect of which the creditor has notified his claim during the period mentioned in cl. (3):

Held, that the application for execution was barred much before the date when the application under s. 4 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act was made. [p. 292, col. 2.]

There is no provision in the Court of Wards Act which would entitle the Court of Wards to acknowledge or pay off a time-barred debt of its ward. [p. 293, col. 1.]

There is nothing in ss. 17 to 23, U. P. Court of Wards Act which would justify the argument that remedies under the general law are suspended as soon as a claim is notified under s. 17 of the Act. There is nothing in the provisions of the Act which would show that a creditor or decree-holder is precluded from instituting the suit or executing the decree after notifying his claim under s. 17 or that the Court of Wards is placed under a statutory liability to discharge that debt or decree in spite of the fact that the enforcement of that debt or decree in a Civil Court may become in the meantime barred by time. 166 Ind. Cas. 928 (1), relied on. [p. 293, col. 2.]

Section 52, applies to cases where the estate is released from the superintendence by the Court of Wards before the ascertainment of debts, and ss. 20 and 21 apply where the debts are ascertained by the Collector under Chap. IV of the Act. Chapter IV of the Court of Wards deals not with discharging the liabilities of the ward but with their ascertainment only, and the words "without discharging the liabilities thereof in the manner provided in Chap. IV" in s. 52 mean and stand for "without ascertaining the liabilities thereof in the manner provided in Chap. IV." [p. 293, col. 1.]

The Deputy Commissioner, acting on behalf of the Court of Wards, is not an agent generally or especially authorised to pay a time barred debt of the ward.

Where a Manager of Court of Wards does not apply his mind to the question whether the decree-holder's claim was within time or not, an agreement entered into by him with the decree-holder to pay a certain amount in full satisfaction of the decree which had by that time become barred by time, is not a lawful agreement capable of enforcement by Court under the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the Manager is not estopped in any manner from resiling from the settlement. [p. 293, col. 1.]

F. C. A. against the order of the Special Judge, First Grade, Bara Banki, dated September 10, 1937.

Messrs. D. K. Seth and Mohammad Naziruddin, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. S. Gupta, the Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a creditor's appeal under s. 45 of the Encumbered Estates Act against the order of the Special Judge, First Grade, District Bara Banki, dismissing his claim with costs.

Munshi Murlidhar held a decree for a sum of Rs. 1,470-11-0 and costs against Pandit Pyare Lal Pande, Taluqdar. The estate of the judgment-debtor was taken under the superintendence of the Court of Wards and the notification required by s. 17 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act was issued on March 31, 1931, and published in the U. P. Gazette on April 11, 1931. The creditor notified his claim and it was accepted by the Board of Revenue for a sum of Rs. 1,604-11-0 (vide Ex. A-1, a letter of the Deputy Commissioner of Bara Banki, dated March 29, 1932). Munshi Murlidhar died in April, 1934, and was succeeded by his widow Mst. Basanti Devi.

Thereafter an application under s. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act was made by the Deputy Commissioner, in charge of the Court of Wards, on November 25, 1935, and in this application Mst. Basanti Devi's decree was admitted as a subsisting debt. After the application had been forwarded to the Special Judge by the Collector under s. 6, the Deputy Commissioner in charge of the estate filed the written statement under s. 8 of the Encumbered Estates Act, and in this written statement also the decree in favour of Mst. Basanti Devi was admitted as a subsisting debt. Mst. Basanti Devi filed her claim on the basis of the said decree under s. 9 of the Encumbered Estates Act on April 25, 1936, after obtaining a certificate as required by s. 21 (a) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act from the Deputy Commissioner of Bara Banki. In the replication filed by the Court of Wards on September 14, 1936, the debt was again admitted to be subsisting.

During the pendency of these Encumbered Estates proceedings, negotiations were carried on between the Court of Wards and the decree-holder for payment of the decree and it appears that in February, 1937, it was agreed upon that Rs. 1,600 would be paid and accepted in full satisfaction of the decree. A cheque for the amount seems to have been drawn up by the Court of Wards the same day, which was cancelled later on.

An application under O. VI, r. 17 of the Civil P. C., was made by the Deputy Commissioner of Bara Banki, in charge of the estate, for the amendment of his application dated November 25, 1935, as well as the replication dated September 14, 1936, on the allegation that the claim under the decree mentioned above was barred by time and the name of Munshi Murlidhar should be deleted from the list of creditors. The learned Special Judge allowed the application and held that the execution of the decree had become barred by time before the application under s. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act was made, and dismissed the claim.

It appears that after the order passed by the Court below Mst. Basanti Devi died and the present appellant has appealed as the legal representative of the decree-holder.

The learned Counsel for the appellant has argued that

(1) the execution of the decree was not barred before the order passed by the Collector under s. 6 of the Encumbered Estates Act,

(2) that it was not open to the respondent to go back upon the settlement dated February 23, 1937, and the amendment asked for should not have been allowed by the Court below,

(3) that after admitting the claim of the creditor under s. 19 of the Court of Wards Act, the respondent was under a statutory liability to discharge the debt out of the estate,

(4) that there can be no question of limitation after the admission of the claim as is clear from the provisions of s. 52 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act and that the appellant cannot be put in a worse position during the continuance of the superintendence of the Court of Wards than if the estate were released now.

1st Point.—As regards the first point, i.e. the question whether an application for the execution of the decree was barred by time before the order passed under s. 6 or the application under s. 4 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, the question depends upon a proper computation of the period of limitation available with reference to the provision of s. 21 (3) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act and the effect of the acknowledgment of liability contained in the letter dated March 29, 1932, by which the claim of the creditor was admitted by the Court of Wards. The learned Counsel for the appellant argued that an acknowledgment of liability in writing was made on March 29, 1932, before the expiration of the period prescribed for execution application and that entitled him under

s. 19 of the Indian Lim. Act to a fresh limitation from the time when the acknowledgment was signed and that the acknowledgment bears the date of March 29, 1932, and so an application for execution could, under the law of limitation applicable, be made up to March 29, 1935. He then adds the days between March 31, 1931, the date of the notice under s. 17 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, and March 29, 1932, (March 29, 1932, is taken roughly for the purposes of this case as the date of confirmation by the Court of Wards of the Collector's decision under s. 19 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act) and thus says that the application for execution was in time up to March 27, 1936, i. e., a date long after the date of the application under s. 4 or the order of the Collector under s. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act. It may be noted that there is no evidence as to the date on which the order under s. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act was passed by the Collector but the parties have agreed that the date of the application under s. 4 be taken as the date of the order under s. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act.

This method of calculation, in our opinion, is incorrect and not according to law. Section 21 (3) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, runs as follows:—

"(3) In computing the period of limitation prescribed by the Indian Lim. Act, 1908, or s. 48 of the Civil P. O., for any application for the execution of a decree proceedings in which have been stayed or temporarily barred under sub-s. (1) the time from the date of notice or of the decree, if it was passed subsequently to the publication of the notice, to the date when the Collector's decision under s. 19 is confirmed by the Court of Wards, shall be excluded."

This section provides for exclusion of time between the date of the notice under s. 17 of the Court of Wards Act and the date of confirmation, in other words, this section lays down that the time shall not run against the decree-holder so far as the execution of the decree is concerned in respect of which the creditor has notified his claim during the period mentioned in cl. (3). The calculation made by the learned Counsel for the appellant has the effect, not of excluding the said period, but that of adding that period at the end of the limitation calculated on the basis of the provisions of the Indian Lim. Act. The correct calculation, in our opinion, should proceed as follows:—

The decree was dated April 30, 1930. The notification under s. 17 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act was issued on March 31, 1931, by which date one day short of 11 months had expired. A period of two days less than a year, from March 31, 1931, up to March 29, 1932, remains suspended by virtue of the provisions contained in cl. (3) of s. 21 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act. Time started to run again against the decree-holder from March 30, 1932, and from that date he was entitled to the remaining period of 25 months and one day, which would be completed on or about May 1, 1934. This date falls long before the date on which the application under s. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act was made. It may be that in between the date of the decree, i. e., April 30, 1930, and the last day of limitation, i. e., May 1, 1934, there was an acknowledgment of liability in writing by the Court of Wards but by virtue of s. 19 of the Indian Lim. Act, the longest period to which the decree-holder would be entitled would be three years of the date of the acknowledgment. The acknowledgment is of March 20, 1932, and the period of limitation would be extended up to March 29, 1935. This date again falls long before the date on which the application under s. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act was made. So in neither case the application for execution of the decree was within time by the time the Court of Wards applied to obtain the benefit of the Encumbered Estates Act.

We have shown above that the error in the calculation made by the learned Counsel for the appellant consists in not excluding the period prescribed by s. 21 (3) of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, but adding that period to the end of the period calculated from the date of the acknowledgment. The effect of this is to claim a larger period under s. 19 of the Indian Lim. Act than the period provided by that section, which is contrary to law. We hold, therefore, that the application for execution was barred much before the date when the application under s. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act was made.

2nd Point.—We have shown above in the narration of facts that a compromise was agreed upon between the parties by which it was agreed that Rs. 1,600 would be paid in full satisfaction of the decree and a cheque was drawn on that date but cancelled later on. It is true that under s. 25 (3) of the Indian Contract Act an agreement or compromise, made in writing and signed by the person to be charged therewith, or by his agent generally or especially authorised in that behalf, to pay the debt of which the creditor could have enforced payment but for the law of limitation, is a contract, and as such, enforceable between the parties. But the question in the present case is that the Deputy Commissioner, acting on behalf of the Court of Wards, was not an agent generally or especially authorised to pay a time-barred debt. We do not know of any provision in the Court of Wards Act which would entitle the Court of Wards to acknowledge or pay off a time barred debt of its ward. The action of the Court of Wards in agreeing to pay Rs. 1,600 was not for the benefit of the minor. The Deputy Commissioner did not apply his mind to the question whether the decree-holder's claim was within time or not and an agreement entered into by him in these circumstances was not, in our opinion, a lawful agreement capable of enforcement by Court under the provisions of O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Civil P. O. We are, therefore, of opinion that the respondent was not estopped in any manner from resiling from the settlement.

3rd Point.—Chapter IV of the Court of Wards Act lays down the provisions for the "ascertainment of debts" after a particular estate is taken under the Court of Wards. Section 17 lays down the procedure for the publication of notice to claimants and for the manner in which the creditors should present their claims. Section 18 provides for the effect of failure to notify claim. Section 19 lays down the powers of the Collector in regard to claims notified or deemed to have been notified under ss. 17 and 18 as regards allowing or disallowing claims in whole or in part; Section 20 lays down clearly that nothing in ss. 18 and 19 shall be construed to prevent any person from instituting or continuing in any competent Court any suit or proceeding in respect of any claim which has been disallowed and s. 21 lays down for conditions under which a fresh proceeding in execution of any decree against the ward may be instituted and for exclusion of time between the date of notice under s. 17 and the confirmation of the decision of the Collector by the Court of Wards. Section 22 provides that documents not produced before the Collector would be inadmissible in evidence in certain cases and s. 23 provides for the stay of process of execution in a Civil Court against the property of the ward. There is nothing in these sections which would justify the argument that remedies under the general law are suspended as soon as a claim is notified under s. 17 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act. We find nothing in the provisions of the Court of Wards Act which would show that a creditor or decree-holder is precluded from instituting the suit or executing the decree after notifying his claim under s. 17 or that the Court of Wards is placed under a statutory liability to discharge that debt or decree in spite of the fact that the enforcement of that debt or decree in a Civil Court may become in the meantime barred by time. A decision of this Court reported in Mathura Prasad v. The Deputy Commissioner of Kheri, Manager of the Court of Wards, Mahewa Estate (1937 O. W. N., p. 165) (1) fully supports our view and we are of opinion that this contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant has no force.

4th Point.—In support of this contention the learned Counsel for the appellant has referred us to the provisions of s. 52 of the Court of Wards Act which runs as follows:—

"When the Court of Wards after assuming the superintendence of the property of a ward releases the same without discharging the liabilities thereof in the manner provided in Chap. IV, the time from the publication of notice under s. 17 to the date of such release shall be excluded in computing the period of limitation applicable to suits or applications for the recovery of all claims outstanding against the ward at the date of such notice."

His contention is that if the Court of Wards were to release the estate from its superintendence without discharging the decree in favour of the appellant, then by virtue of the above provision the period between the publication of notice under s. 17 and the date of such release shall be excluded in computing the period of limitation applicable to his application for execution. If the Court of Wards were to release the estate to-day, his application for execution would be within time and so it would be anomalous to suppose that it could be barred by time before the release. In our view the contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant on this point is based upon a misconception of the provisions of s. 52 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act. The confusion is created by the use of the word "discharging" in s. 52. After a careful consideration of the language of the relevant sections we are of opinion that s. 52 applies to cases where the estate is released from the superintendence by the Court of Wards before the ascertainment of debts, and ss. 20 and 21 apply where the debts are ascertained by the Collector under Chap IV of the Act. Chapter IV of the Court of Wards deals not with discharging the liabilities of the ward but with their ascertainment only, and in our opinion the words "without discharging the liabilities thereof in the manner provided in Chap. IV" in s. 52 mean and stand for "without ascertaining the liabilities thereof in the manner provided in Chap. IV". We are, therefore, of opinion that the argument of the learned Counsel for the appellant, which is based upon a misconception of the meaning and application of s. 52 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, has no force.

(1) 1937 O W N 165; 166 Ind Cas. 928; 1937 O L R 77; 9 R O 351; A I R 1937 Oudh 282; 13 Luck. 171.

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs

S.

Appeal dismissed.

FEDERAL COURT

Appeal from the High Court at Patna
October 12, 1939

GWYER, C. J., SULAIMAN AND
VARADACHARIAR, JJ.

JAGDISH JHA AND OTHERS

—APPELLANTS

versus

AMAN KHAN—RESPONDENT

Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (VII of 1939), s. 7—S. 7 which re-enacts s. 11, Bihar Money-lenders Act (III of 1938), is valid.

Section 11 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act (III of 1938), has now been re-enacted as s. 7 of the Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (VII of 1939); and, as this Act has been passed in conformity with the procedure prescribed in s. 107 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1935, its validity is not open to question.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit instituted by the respondent for the recovery of money claimed to be due under a mortgage-bond executed in his favour by some of the appellants on April 16, 1921. The other defendants are minor members of the mortgagors' family. The bond provided for payment of compound interest at Re. 1-1-0 per cent. per mensem with yearly rests. Certain of the defendants did not contest the case, but the others put the plaintiff to proof of his claim generally; they also contended that the rate of interest was excessive and not justified by necessity.

The question of the interest seems to have been the main point in controversy in the litigation. The trial Court allowed only simple interest at Re. 1-4-0 per cent. per mensem; but on appeal by the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court allowed compound interest in accordance with the terms of the mortgage-bond. The third defendant carried the matter in second appeal to the Patna High Court, and during the pendency of the appeal before the High Court, the Bihar Legislature passed the Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938 (No. III of 1938). Section 11 of that Act provided that "no Court shall, in any suit brought by a money-lender in respect of a loan advanced before or after the commencement of this Act, pass a decree for an amount of interest for the period preceding the institution of the suit which, together with any amount already realised as interest through Court or otherwise is greater than the amounts of the loan advanced".

The appellant naturally relied upon this enactment in support of the second appeal. When the second appeal came on for hearing, the learned Judges of the High Court seem to have expressed themselves against the contention of the defendants as it stood independently of the Money-lenders Act; the contention based on s. 11 of the Act was referred to a Full Bench which upheld the mortgagee's contention that that section was void under s. 107 of the Constitution Act, as being repugnant to an existing Indian Law; the decision is reported in Sadanand Jha v. Aman Khan (1). It is against the decree of the High Court dismissing the second appeal on this ground that this appeal has been preferred by the defendants.

Section 11 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938 (No. III of 1938), has now been re-enacted as s. 7 of the Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act, 1939 (No. VII of 1939), and, as this Act has been passed in conformity with the procedure prescribed in s. 107 (2) of the Constitution Act, its validity is not open to question. Section 7 of the new Act has in terms been made applicable even to suits instituted before the commencement of the Act and the appellants are accordingly entitled to claim the benefit of the section. It is therefore unnecessary to consider whether s. 11 of the Bihar Money-lenders Act, 1938 (No. III of 1938), was or was not void, on the grounds raised before the High Court.

(1) 12 Pat. 13; 179 Ind. Cas. 379; A I R 1939 Pat 55; 20 P L T 1; 5 B R 265; 11 R P 357.

We, therefore, allow this appeal. The case is remitted to the High Court with a direction to pass a preliminary decree for Rs. 400 principal, and Rs. 119 (that is, Rs. 400 less Rs. 281 already paid) for interest up to February 26, 1934, the date of the institution of the suit. There will be further interest at the rate of six per cent. per mensem on Rs. 400, the principal amount, from February 26, 1934, up to the date to be fixed by the High Court for payment; after that date, interest at six per cent. per annum will be payable on the consolidated amount up to the date of payment. The plaintiff will retain the costs awarded to him in the first two Courts, that is to say, the Munsif's Court and the District Judge's Court; there will be no order as to costs in the High Court and in this Court.

s.

*Appeal allowed.OUDH CHIEF COURT

Appeal No. 1 of 1937

November 22, 1939

YORKH AND RADHA KRISHNA, JJ.

Musammât SAKINA BEGUM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANTversusPandit DURGA SAHAI AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 19 (1)—Applicability—Remission claimed on account of slump in prices—Section, if applies—Sanction of Deputy Commissioner, if must be taken in each and every case.

Section 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act has no application to a case where an under-proprietor claims remission on account of the slump in prices due to abundance in produce of the land.

The only construction to which the language of s. 19 (1), Oudh Rent Act lends itself is that a separate previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner for remission should be obtained in each case by a Court seised of a suit for arrears of rent before it can allow that remission from the rent payable by an under-proprietor. The section clearly means that what the Court has to do in each case, when considering the question of remission, is first to determine as to what would be the amount to be allowed as a remission on equitable grounds and then to obtain the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner in respect thereof. The sanction of the Deputy Commissioner would naturally depend upon what the Court has determined to be an equitable remission. Both the Court and the Deputy Commissioner have to determine the question of remission judicially after giving due consideration to the facts of each individual case, and it is hardly conceivable that a general order of allowing remission in a particular locality was in the contemplation of the Legislature when it used the words "with the previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner" in the section. [p. 296, col. 2]

A. against the order of Mr. Justice Zia-ul Hasan, Lucknow, dated December 17, 1936.

Messrs. Ghulam Inam and Kalbe Abbas (Rae Barali), for the Appellant.

Mr. L. S. Misra, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiff's appeal under s. 12 (2) of the Oudh Courts Act from an appellate decree of a learned Single Judge of this Court in a Second Rent Appeal.

The plaintiff-appellant brought a suit for recovery of Rs. 937-9-0 under s. 103 (2) of the Oudh Rent Act for arrears of rent for 1339 to 1341 Fasli against the defendants-respondents. It may be noted that the plaintiff allowed a remission to the defendants for the years in suit to the extent of the remission made in the land revenue in her favour. The trial Court allowed remissions in the rent to the defendants to the extent of Rs. 6-9-5-9, which was double the amount of revenue remitted to the plaintiff. The trial Court was of opinion that such remissions were allowable to the defendants under s. 19-A of the Oudh Rent Act.

On an appeal by the plaintiff, the learned District Judge took the view that s. 19-A of the Oudh Rent Act had no application in the case of the defendants, who were admitted before him to carry the status of under-proprietors. He raised the amount of the decree by a sum of Rs. 317-4-9 on the view that under the terms of the perpetual lease (Ex. A-1), the title deed of the defendants, remission only to the extent of the remission in revenue could be allowed.

In second appeal, which came on before a Single Judge of this Court, it was held that although s. 19-A was not applicable, yet the defendants-respondents were entitled to an appropriate reduction in their rent under s. 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act. A reduction in rent was, therefore, allowed to the defendants at the rate of 1½ times the remission allowed by the Government in the land revenue plus cesses calculated according to s. 8 of the Local Rates Act. There were other points in contest between the parties but we are no longer concerned with them in this appeal.

The only point which has been taken in this appeal is that s. 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act has no application to the present case.

A faint attempt was made on behalf of the appellant to urge that the status of the defendants-respondents was not that of under-proprietors and that they were mere thekadars as recorded in the khewat. From the judgment of the learned District Judge it is clear that it was the appellant's own case that the respondents were under-proprietors and we find that the decision of the learned District Judge as well as the decision in Second Rent Appeal No. 23 of 1935 in this Court proceeded on that footing. It is too late for the appellant to raise this question now and we disallow it.

As regards the chief point in controversy in this appeal, the learned Counsel for the appellant has urged that s. 19 (1), is not applicable, that that section applies only when there has been a diminution in the area of the land in the occupation of the under-proprietor by diluvian or otherwise, or if the produce of that land has been diminished by drought, hail, or other calamity beyond his control. It is further contended that no remission from the rent payable can be allowed by a Court unless previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner has been obtained. Section 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act reads as follows :—

"Notwithstanding anything in the last foregoing section, a Court when it makes a decree for an arrear of rent, may, with the previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner, allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable, if the area of the land in his occupation has been materially diminished by diluvian or otherwise, or if the produce of that land has been diminished by drought, hail, or other calamity beyond his control, to such an extent that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot, in the opinion of the Court, be paid."

On a perusal of the record of the present case it appears that the defendants claimed remission on account of slump in prices, which slump was due to abundance in produce of the land, and so it is clear that the case does not fall within the clause reproduced above. It is rather surprising that this contention in the form in which it has been addressed to us was not presented before our learned brother, who decided the Second Rent Appeal, and that accounts for the absence of any reference to it in the judgment under appeal. It was urged on behalf of the respondents that Ex. 2, which was prepared by the patwari under the supervision of the Qanungo, allows remission on grounds other than slump in prices also and that the defendants were entitled to remission in respect of those grounds. There is no independent evidence at all on the record to establish any ground for remission other than the slump in prices. The defendants must be held bound by their pleadings and in their pleadings the ground upon which they claimed remission was the slump in prices. We are of opinion, that on the facts of the case, s. 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act does not arise for application.

On the second point, the view taken by the learned Single Judge was that s. 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act did not contemplate that the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner should be obtained in each and every case by the Court deciding the case for arrears of rent, and it was quite sufficient if the Deputy Commissioner had passed general orders with regard to remissions in rent of under-proprietors in respect of a particular area. The learned Judge was of opinion, that such general orders must be deemed to exist in view of the fact that the statement (Ex. 2) was prepared by the patwari on that footing. We regret we do not find ourselves in agreement with this view of the learned Judge. In our view, the only construction to which the language of s. 19 (1) lends itself is that a separate previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner for remission should be obtained in each case by a Court seized of a suit for arrears of rent before it can allow that remission from the rent payable by an under-proprietor. The words "A Court when it makes a decree for an arrear of rent, may, with the previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner, allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable" clearly mean that what the Court has to do in each case, when considering the question of remission, is first to determine as to what would be the amount to be allowed as a remission on equitable grounds and then to obtain the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner in respect thereof. The sanction of the Deputy Commissioner would naturally depend upon what the Court has determined to be an equitable remission. Both the Court and the Deputy Commissioner have to determine the question of remission judicially after giving due consideration to the facts of each individual case, and it is hardly conceivable that a general order of allowing remission in a particular locality was in the contemplation of the Legislature when it used the words "with the previous sanction of the Deputy Commissioner" in s. 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act. In this connection it may be noted that s. 120 of the Oudh Rent Act provides for an appeal from an order of the Deputy Commissioner sanctioning a remission of rent under s. 19 of the Oudh Rent Act. How can a general order of the Deputy Commissioner allowing remission of rent in a particular locality be the subject of an appeal under this section is not easy to contemplate. The provision contained in s. 120 for an appeal against the order of sanction by the Deputy Commissioner strongly supports the view that we have expressed above. We also get support for our view from the Board of Revenue Circular No. 11 (Department II) in Volume I of 1918 referred to us. It lays down that the file of the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner will be kept separate from the file of the rent suit. This circular seems to have been enacted for the facility of appeals under s. 120 of the Oudh Rent Act. An appeal under s. 120 of the Oudh Rent Act lies to the Commissioner, while an appeal from a decree in the suit itself lies to the District Judge, if the value of the suit does not exceed Rs. 5,000 and to the Chief Court if the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 5,000 (vide s. 119 of the Oudh Rent Act). Neither s. 120 of the Oudh Rent Act nor the circular of the Board of Revenue referred to above was brought to the notice of our learned brother in the Second Rent Appeal. We have further examined Ex. 2, the statement of the patwari, and find no reference in it to any general order in respect of the remission in the locality in which the land in suit is situated such as has been referred to in support of the application under s. 19 of the Oudh Rent Act. We hold further that for this reason also s. 19 (1) of the Oudh Rent Act has no application.

Lastly, it has been argued by the learned Counsel for the respondent that under s. 2 of the U. P. Regularization of Remissions Act (XIV of 1938) the general order of the Deputy Commissioner allowing remission cannot be questioned in any Civil or Revenue Court. The application of this section does not arise for consideration in view of the fact, as observed above, that in the present case there is no evidence of any such order as has been relied upon.

The result is that this appeal succeeds. The appellant was satisfied with the decree of the first Appellate Court and did not appeal against it and so that decree is upheld. The appellant will get costs in this Court of this appeal and the Second Rent Appeal from the respondents.

s.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Original Decree No. 40 of 1937
September 8, 1939

DHAVLE, AND MANOHAR LALL, JJ.

A. JAMES—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

*versus*Ch. ACHAIBAR SINGH alias

AKHAJ SINGH AND OTHERS—(DEFENDANTS)

AND BASDEO SINGH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Contribution—Suit for—Liabilities of all parties must be determined once for all—Necessary party not impleaded—Effect.

In a suit for contribution, the respective liabilities of all the parties should be ascertained and determined once for all and nothing should be left undetermined which may lead to further litigation for the ascertainment of such liability between two or more of the parties to the suit. Hence a suit for contribution would fail in limine where a person who is a necessary party and in whose absence the liabilities of the parties to the suit cannot be satisfactorily ascertained, is not impleaded in the suit. [p. 299, col. 1.]

In a suit for contribution the consideration that the plaintiffs were no parties to the contract between defendants inter se is by no means conclusive of the matter. 14 Ind. Cas. 179 (1), referred to. [p. 298, col. 2.]

A. From a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Gaya, dated December 22, 1936.

Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherji and Mr. K. N. Varma, for the Appellant.

Dr. D. N. Mitter and Messrs. Sarjoo Prasad, Dhyan Chandra, A. N. Lall and Lal Narayan Sinha, for the Respondents.

Dhavle, J.—This is an appeal by defendant No. 13 in a suit for recovery of Rs. 5,879-5-0 which the plaintiffs said they had to deposit under pressure of execution proceedings and which they claimed ought to have been paid by defendants Nos. 1 to 12 and 13.

In May, 1922, one Janki Lal mortgaged his entire jagirdari right in Mauza Lenjhua and his interest in six other villages to Ramkrit Narain. In May, 1924, he entered into an agreement with the representatives of defendants Nos. 1 to 12 to sell Lenjhua to them, leaving it to them to pay off the mortgage of 1922. The case of the plaintiffs was that defendants Nos. 1 to 12 took the plaintiffs in as co-partners for a moiety in the proposed sale and gave them an express assurance and undertaking that the defendants Nos. 1 to 12 would play their part properly in obtaining the discharge of the mortgage and would see that the plaintiffs did not have to pay more than a moiety of the mortgage debt. On September 12, 1924, Janki executed two kabalas for eight annas each of Mauza

Lenjhua, one in favour of the plaintiffs and the other in favour of defendants Nos. 1 to 12. Out of the consideration money Rs. 12,083-15-0 was left with each set of vendees to pay in discharge of the mortgage of Ramkrit Narain, Janki representing that these two sums of Rs. 12,083-15-0 each represented all that was due upon the mortgage, the rest having already been paid of by him. When the plaintiffs attempted to pay the mortgagee it was discovered that the mortgagee claimed Rs. 1,200 more than had been admitted by Janki Lal to his vendees to be due to the mortgagee. In March 1929 defendants Nos. 1 to 12 transferred their moiety of Mauza Lenjhua to defendant No. 13 for Rs. 22,000 which was to be paid by defendant No. 13 to the mortgagee as the proportionate share of the outstanding mortgage debt. Shortly after this the mortgagee sued to enforce his mortgage, and in March, 1930, he obtained a decree for Rs. 54,631-12-6 inclusive of costs. A question had been raised during the trial of the mortgage suit regarding the order in which the mortgaged properties were to be brought to sale and the Court had decided that unless the decretal amount was paid within five months of the date of the preliminary decree, the two sets of vendees of Janki Lal were to be at liberty within one month after the expiry of the said period of five months to deposit in Court to the credit of the mortgagee Rs. 12,083-15-0 besides interests at 12 per cent. with quarterly rests from September 12, 1924, to the date of deposit. The Court directed that if such deposits were made, the mortgaged properties were to be sold in the same order as that given in the mortgage bond—I may observe in passing that in this document Mauza Lenjhua figures as Item No. 6. The Court further directed that if such deposits were not made by the two sets of vendees or by any set out of them, then the whole Mauza of Lenjhua or the moiety of the defaulting set of vendees as the case may be should be sold first and the remaining mortgaged properties or a sufficient part thereof be sold in the same order as given in the mortgage bond. Acting in accordance with this part of the mortgage decree, the plaintiffs deposited Rs. 24,476-12-6 on the due date, but defendant No. 13 did nothing of the kind. The result was that the defendants' moiety of Mauza Lenjhua was brought to sale first and sold for Rs. 11,100. The other six mauza covered by the mortgage were then put up to sale and fetched Rs. 18,671. I have already said that Mauza Lenjhua was No. 6 in the list of properties, but the plaintiffs had obtained from the High Court an order staying the sale of their moiety in the mauza, with the result that Mauza Bahera, which appeared later in the mortgage bond, was sold before the plaintiffs' moiety. The plaintiffs' deposit and the execution sales thus brought in a little over Rs. 54,000, and the amount for which execution was being levied was Rs. 5,879-5-0 in excess of the amount already realised. When the executing Court wanted to proceed against the plaintiffs' moiety in order to realise this balance, they averted the sale by paying the amount. They then brought the present suit and the foundation of the suit appears from such paragraphs as Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 18 of the plaint to have been that the plaintiffs took their moiety on the clear guarantee given by defendants Nos. 1 to 12 that they would not have to run any risk or losses with respect to their purchase and on the express assurance and undertaking given by them that they would pay their quota of the mortgage debt, etc. (to quote from para. 18 of the plaint). Defendants Nos. 1 to 12 denied giving any such undertaking, and the issue framed on the point ran. "Was there any assurance given by defendants Nos. 1 to 3 as pleaded in para. 7 of the plaint?" The learned Subordinate Judge answered this issue against the plaintiffs, and it has not been contended before us on behalf of the plaintiff-respondents that the finding is open to any exception. Janki was not impleaded in the suit and, though the defendants contended that the suit was bad for his non-joinder, the learned Subordinate Judge held that Janki was not a necessary party to this suit, as it appeared that in the execution proceedings he had paid more than he was liable to pay and therefore the ultimate liability was upon defendant No. 13. The suit was accordingly decreed against defendant No. 13.

Sir Manmatha Nath Mukherji who appears for this defendant No. 13, the appellant, contended that the sale deed taken by this defendant from defendants Nos. 1 to 12 did not make him liable at all in the circumstances and certainly not liable to the plaintiffs as they were strangers to the contract. But the suit is in essence a contribution suit, and the consideration that the plaintiffs were no parties to the contract between defendants Nos. 1 to 12 and defendant No. 13 is by no means conclusive of the matter, for in the case of Shah Muhammad Abbas v. Muhammad Hamid, 14 Ind. Cas. 179 (1) which was noticed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Ganeshi Lal v. Charan Singh (2) there was a contract to which the defendants were no parties and yet it could be said that there had passed to them the benefit of the contract with the plaintiffs, the prior purchasers of a part of the mortgaged properties, who had undertaken to apply the consideration money towards the payment of the mortgage.

The real difficulties of the case, however, came to light when Dr. Mitter began replying for the plaintiffs respondents and appealed to the doctrine of contribution as bot-tomed and fixed on the general principles of justice, and not as springing from contract, though contract may qualify it Dering v. Earl of Winchelsea (3). Now this doctrine of contribution was developed in the Courts of equity because these Courts could much more effectually than the common law Courts adjust losses so that they fell in due proportion upon all the persons liable. It thus became a fixed principle that in a suit for contribution the respective liabilities of the parties should be ascertained and determined once for all and nothing should be left undetermined which may lead to further litigation for the ascertainment of such liability between two or more of the parties to the suit. In the present case, however, Janki Lal has not been impleaded by the plaintiff respondents, and the defect is not merely formal. In the first place, it appears that by the terms of the sale deed which the plaintiffs took from Janki Lal, they had something in the nature of an indemnity from Janki Lal in respect of any sums that they may have to pay to the mortgagee in excess of the amount of Rs. 12,083-15-0 with interest which they had agreed to pay. Secondly, the amount decreed in the mortgage suit includes Rs. 2,592-12-0 as costs awarded to the mortgagee but obviously not apportioned among the various sets of defendants in that suit and in particular Janki, our plaintiffs, our defendants Nos. 1 to 12 and also our defendant No. 13. The total decretal amount, moreover, was

Rs. 54,631-2-6, while the amount for which execution has been levied is Rs. 60,127-1-6, and the difference between these two amounts has also yet to be apportioned. It is obvious that in both these items the plaintiffs must bear a share, but what that share may be it is impossible to determine in the absence of Janki. If, as the lower Court has said, Janki has paid more than he was liable to pay, a suit for contribution not based on any contract between the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 12 and 13 ought to settle once for all what Janki is entitled to. It will be wrong to leave defendant No. 13 exposed to another suit by Janki Lal. Nor does it appear that the suit as framed raised the question of the liability of defendant No. 13 to defendants Nos. 1 to 12 in the form in which it ought to have been raised and decided. The suit was therefore not properly constituted, and the lower Court was plainly in error in holding defendant No. 13 liable for the entire amount claimed while his exact liability cannot be determined in the absence of Janki Lal.

This was so plain that Dr. Mitter at once asked for leave to implead Janki Lal at this stage and for a remand. In my opinion this prayer ought not to be allowed for the double reason that the plaintiffs deliberately left out Janki Lal in spite of the direct indemnity they had from him and that they founded the suit upon an alleged assurance from defendants Nos. 1 to 12 which they failed to prove and which appears to be a figment of their imagination.

I would therefore allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower Court and dismiss the suit. In the circumstances, I would make no order about costs.

Manohar Lall, J.—I agree. In my opinion the suit being a suit for contribution fails in limine on the simple ground that Janki Lal, the vendor of the plaintiffs, who is necessary party, is not before the Court and in his absence the liabilities of the parties cannot be satisfactorily ascertained. I do not think this Court would be exercising a wise discretion in allowing the plaintiffs to add Janki Lal as a defendant at this late stage.

s.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 14 Ind. Cas. 179; 9 A L J 499.

(2) 52 A 358; 124 Ind. Cas. 911; 57 I A 189; (1930) A L J 753; 31 O W N 661; Ind. Rul. (1930) P O 287; A I R 1930 P O 183; 32 Bom. L R 1146; 59 M L J 177; 52 O L J 117; 32 L W 19 (P O).

(3) (1787) W & T Leading Cases in Eq. II (9th Ed.) p. 488; 1 Cox Eq. Cas. 318; 29 E R 1184.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Civil Rule No. 1018 of 1938

November 9, 1938

S. K. GHOSH AND LODGE, JJ.
NANI GOPAL MUKHERJEE—
JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—PETITIONER

versus

SRISH CHANDRA NANDY AND OTHERS—
JUDGMENT-DEBTORS—OPPOSITE PARTY

*Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 42—
 Ordinary Civil Court passing rent decree in rent suit under Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885)—Decree transferred to Small Cause Court for execution—latter Court, if can execute it*

Where an ordinary Civil Court, in a suit for rent under Bengal Ten. Act, passes a decree for rent and that decree is transferred for execution to the Court of Small Causes, the latter Court has jurisdiction to execute it.

O. Rule issued from an order of the Small Cause Court Judge, Sealdah, 24-Parganas, dated June 11, 1938.

Messrs. Rishindra Nath Sircar and Subodh Chandra Dutt, for the Petitioner.

Dr. Basak and Mr. Rama Prosad Mukherjee, for the Opposite Party.

S. K. Ghose, J. — This Rule is directed against an order of the learned Small Cause Court Judge at Sealdah overruling the petitioners' objection as to the execution of the decree. It appears that the opposite party landlord brought a rent suit No. 1022 of 1930, in the Court of the Munsif at Ranaghat and impleading the petitioner as one of the defendants-tenants. A decree was obtained and in execution thereof, opposite party No. 1 purchased the suit lands on March 8, 1934, the sale being confirmed on April 24, 1934. Before that date, opposite party No. 1 brought another rent suit against the same persons, being Rent Suit No. 790 of 1934 for the recovery of arrears of rent for the period 1337 to 1340. A decree was obtained on July 26, 1934. On November 29, 1937, this decree was transferred for execution to the District Judge of the 24-Parganas who again transferred it to the Court of Small Causes at Sealdah. The latter Court directed attachment of the movable properties of the petitioner. The petitioner thereupon filed an objection which was however overruled by the Small Cause Court by his order dated June 11, 1938. Against that order the present Rule has been obtained. It appears from the order complained against that the only point which was pressed in the lower Court was that the execution case is barred by the special law of limitation under Art. 6, Part 3, Sch. (iii), Bengal Ten. Act. The learned Judge held that the decree obtained is not a rent decree but a money decree and so the execution case is not barred by limitation. It is contended in this Court that at least the ordinary law of limitation should apply. But we are not satisfied from any evidence on the record that the present application for execution was filed more than three years after the previous application. The point does not appear to have been pressed in the lower Court and the question of fact was not investigated. Then, as to the special law of limitation under the Bengal Ten. Act, it is conceded by the learned Advocate for the petitioner that the present decree is not executable under s. 65, Bengal Ten. Act, there being no relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties at the time of the decree. That being so, the petitioner is not entitled to plead limitation as specially provided for in the Bengal Ten. Act.

It is, however, strongly contended that the decree was a decree for rent and the suit would come under cl. 8, Sch. II, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, as a suit which is excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes. This point again does not appear to have been pressed in the lower Court. Clause 8 aforesaid is subject to an exception where the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested with the authority of exercising jurisdiction with respect to suits for the recovery of rent. Here, again, there is a question of fact which might well have been raised and decided in the lower Court, but it was not so investigated. The learned Advocate for the opposite party said that there was no reason to suppose that the learned Judge in the Court below was so invested. But conceding that the suit comes under the exception, what we have got here is a decree which has already been passed and is sought to be executed. Dr. Basak has contended that s. 7, Civil P. C., read with s. 39 of the same Code does not prohibit an ordinary Civil Court from transferring a decree to a Court of Small Causes for execution, and once such decree has been so transferred, the Small Cause Court would, under s. 42, be entitled to deal with it. That a decree made in a suit which is excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes may be transferred to a Court of Small Causes for execution is contemplated by the fact that there are separate clauses, sub-cl. (i) and (ii) in cl. (a), s. 7, Civil P. C. Moreover, s. 34, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, specifically lays down a procedure to be observed in the case of transfer of decrees as between a Court of Small Causes and a Court of ordinary jurisdiction. From this point of view, it may be said that the Court of Small Causes was within its jurisdiction in proceeding to execute a decree which had been transferred to it by a Court of competent civil jurisdiction. The learned Advocate for the petitioner has contended that the decree cannot be executed by the landlord, because the relationship of landlord and tenant did not subsist at the time of the decree. It is not, however, open to him to take up this position, having regard to the fact that the decree was transferred to the executing Court. In these circumstances the petitioner has not been able to satisfy us that there is a case for revision. The Rule accordingly is discharged with costs, three gold mohurs.

Lodge, J.—I agree.

D. Rule discharged.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Application No. 9 of 1937

November 23, 1939

HAMILTON, J.

DURGA PRASAD—DEBTEE-HOLDER

—APPLICANT

versus

SEETTA PRASAD TEWARI—

JUDGMENT-DEBTOR AND ANOTHER—

DEBTEE HOLDER—OPPOSITE PARTY

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXVIII, r. 10—Applicability, where property attached before judgment is cash—Attachment—Before judgment—Priority.

The principle of O. XXXVIII, r. 10, Civil P. C., also applies to a case where property attached before judgment is cash. Where therefore a sum of money is attached before judgment by a person in his suit and another decree-holder attaches the same sum in execution of his decree, the person who has obtained attachment before judgment cannot claim priority after his suit is decreed. 91 Ind. Cas. 93 (3), referred to.

App. for revision of the order of the Judge of Small Cause Court, Lucknow, dated October 6, 1936.

Mr. Govind Behari Lal, for the Applicant.

Mr. R. P. Shukla, for Opposite Party No. 2.

Judgment.—This is an application in revision against a decision of a Judge of the Small Cause Court.

The applicant obtained a decree on May 26, 1936, and on the following day, May 27, 1936, applied for attachment of a sum of money standing in deposit in a Bank in the name of his judgment-debtor. The attachment order was passed on July 6, 1936, and in answer to that order the money was actually paid into Court by the Bank on July 22, 1936. On May 11, 1936, that is to say, before the decree of the applicant, the opposite party had before judgment attached that money in the Bank and it was not till August 21, 1936, that his suit was decreed. On September 11, 1936, he then applied for execution of his decree by calling for the money from the Bank and on the following day he claimed priority. The learned Small Cause Court Judge considered that the opposite party was entitled to priority because his attachment was earlier although it was attachment before judgment only. He held that O. XXXVIII, r. 10, does not apply. It is true that O. XXXVIII, r. 10, states that an attachment before judgment does not bar a person holding a decree from applying for the sale of the property under attachment and in the present case there is no question of sale of property because cash was attached, but I do not see why the principle should not be followed merely because the attached property is cash in one case and something else in the other. Bisheshar Das v. Ambika Prasad (I. L. R. 37 All. 575) (1) and Profulla Nath Tagore v. Asia Khatun (A. I. R. 1934 Calcutta 426) (2) refer to cases of sale of property to which O. XXXVIII, r. 10 applies but S. Cassam v. K. S. M. M. Abdul Kader (A. I. R. 1926 Rangoon, 85) (3) referred to a sum of money, and O. XXXVIII, r. 10, was referred to by way of analogy. I am satisfied, therefore, that the person who first obtains his attachment cannot claim priority if the attachment is one before judgment.

I therefore allow the application and set aside the order of the Court below, with costs and send the case back for further steps.

s.

Application allowed.

(1) 37 A 575; 29 Ind. Cas. 622; 13 A L J 733; A I R 1915 All. 275.

(2) A I R 1934 Cal. 426; 151 Ind. Cas. 317; 59 O L J 18; 7 R O 105 (3).

(3) A I R 1926 Rang. 85; 91 Ind. Cas. 93.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Criminal Miscellaneous No. 467 of 1939

September 15, 1939

MULLA, J.

ISRAR HUSAIN—APPLICANT*versusEMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 491—Powers of High Court under, to enquire into conduct of Political Agent before issuing warrant of arrest under s. 7, Extradition Act.

The powers of the High Court under s. 491, Criminal P. O., are limited and they do not authorize the High Court to enter as it were upon an enquiry into the conduct of the Political Agent before issuing a warrant of arrest under s. 7, Extradition Act. All that the High Court is concerned with while exercising its power under s. 491, is to see that the authority under which a person is being detained is on the face of it legal and valid. If there are any formal defects in the warrant under which the applicant is arrested, the High Court can certainly take notice of them and can upon that basis hold that the warrant is on the face of it invalid. It would necessarily follow in that event that the detention of the applicant was unlawful, but this is the limit beyond which the High Court cannot go in the exercise of its power under s. 491. 134 Ind. Cas. 594 (1), 91 Ind. Cas. 69 (2) and 1 Ind. Cas. 198 (3), relied on, 151 Ind. Cas. 279 (4), explained and distinguished.

Mr. M. A. Aziz, for the Applicant.

The Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Order.—This is an application under s. 491, Criminal P. O., by one Israr Husain who has been arrested by the District Magistrate of Basti under a warrant issued by the Political Agent of Bhopal in accordance with s. 7, Extradition Act, (Act No. XV of 1903). The applicant was until May 11, 1938, in the service of the Bhopal State as a Nazir and it appears that the State has preferred a charge against him under s. 409, I. P. O., which is the law of that State also. An offence under s. 409, I. P. O., is an extraditable offence within the meaning of s. 7, Extradition Act, inasmuch it is one of the offences mentioned in Sch. I to the Act. It is not alleged that the applicant is not a person against whom a warrant can be issued under s. 7, Extradition Act. Nor is there any allegation that there is any formal defect in the warrant itself. The whole basis of the present application is the allegation that the Political Agent before issuing the warrant in question did not observe the procedure laid down in the rules framed by the Governor-General in Council under s. 22, Extradition Act. It is contended that the failure to follow that procedure which was mandatory renders the warrant illegal and invalid and hence this Court can in the exercise of its powers under s. 491, Criminal P. O., hold that the applicant is being detained in unlawful custody and can set him at liberty. I have carefully considered this contention but I find no force in it. It is true that there is no material before this Court to show that the Political Agent followed the necessary procedure before issuing the warrant in question but that does not by any means lead to the conclusion that the procedure was not followed at all. It is quite impossible for this Court to hold merely on the basis of the applicant's allegation that the procedure required under the rules was not followed by the Political Agent before issuing the warrant in question. Again I am strongly of the opinion that the powers of this Court under s. 491, Criminal P. O., are limited and they do not authorize this Court to enter as it were upon an enquiry into the conduct of the Political Agent. What the applicant wants this Court to do is to investigate into the proceedings of the Political Agent, but in my opinion this Court has no power to make any such investigation under s. 491, Criminal P. O. All that this Court is concerned with while exercising its power under s. 491, Criminal P. O., is to see that the authority under which a person is being detained is on the face of it legal and valid. If there are any formal defects in the warrant under which the applicant is arrested, this Court can certainly take notice of them and can upon that basis hold that the warrant is on the face of it invalid. It would necessarily follow in that event that the detention of the applicant was unlawful, but in my view this is the limit beyond which this Court cannot go in the exercise of its power under s. 491, Criminal P. O. I find that the view which I have taken is supported by several decisions of other Courts, for example, Baijnath v. Emperor, 134 Ind. Cas. 594 (1), Jamna v. Emperor, 91 Ind. Cas. 69 (2) and Giyan Chand v. Emperor (3). The learned Counsel for the applicant has relied upon the decision of a Bench of this Court in Sandal Singh v. District Magistrate and Superintendent, Dehra Dun (4). In that case it was held,

(1) 134 Ind. Cas. 594; A I R 1931 Oudh 394; (1931) Cr. Cas. 826; 32 Cr. L J 1243; 8 O W N 933; Ind. Rul. (1931) Oudh 326.

(2) 91 Ind. Cas. 69; A I R 1926 Sind 126; 27 Cr. L J 37; 20 S L R 128.

(3) 3 P R 1909 Cr.; 1 Ind. Cas. 198; 9 Cr. L J 3; 36 P W R 1908 Cr.

(4) (1934) A L J 556; 151 Ind. Cas. 279; A I R 1934 All. 148; (1934) Cr. Cas. 214; 35 Cr. L J 1296; 56 A 409; 7 R A 128 (2).

that

"the power of the High Court, however, to interfere under s. 491, Criminal P. O. remains untouched by the Extradition Act, and the High Court is entitled to enquire into the question whether a person arrested under an extradition warrant was illegally or improperly detained in public or private custody, and if the High Court is satisfied that he was so detained, to order that he be set at liberty."

A close examination of the decision will show that the point which arose for consideration in that case was that one of the three conditions precedent for the issue of a legal warrant under s. 7, Extradition Act, had not been fulfilled and this Court decided that it had the power to hold that in the absence of that condition precedent, the Political Agent had no authority to issue a warrant under s. 7, Extradition Act. I do not find any conflict at all between that decision and the view which I have taken in the present case. There was no question raised in that case that the Political Agent had not followed the rules and in consequence thereof the warrant issued by him was invalid. It does not afford any authority for the proposition that this Court can enter upon an enquiry into the conduct of the Political Agent before issuing a warrant of arrest under s. 7, Extradition Act. The result therefore is that I see no reason to interfere and dismiss this application. The stay order is discharged and the District Magistrate of Basti can now proceed to execute the warrant in accordance with the law.

8. Application dismissed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeal No. 641 of 1939

August 21, 1939

DUNKLEY AND WRIGHT, JJ.

NGA SAR KEE—APPELLANT

versus

THE KING—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 537, 239—Two persons charged with same offence of murder—Prosecution evidence mutually exclusive—Joint trial, legality—Criminal trial—Duty of prosecution—Public prosecutor should not withhold evidence.

When one accused is charged with having murdered a certain person at a certain place, and another accused is charged with having murdered the same person at the same time and place, and both these accused are being prosecuted because there is evidence against both, but the evidence is of such a character that both of them cannot be convicted, and if one set of evidence is believed, one of the accused will have to be convicted, whereas if the other set of evidence is believed, the other accused will have to be convicted; it cannot be said that those persons are charged with the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction within the meaning of s. 239, Criminal P. O. "The same offence" means an offence arising out of the same act or series of acts and can mean nothing else. When the prosecution evidence against two persons is mutually exclusive, there is no provision of the Code under which those persons can be tried together; and the joint trial of the two persons is not a mere irregularity which can be cured under s. 537, Criminal P. O., it is an illegality which goes to the very root of the trial. 21 Ind. Cas. 183 (1) and Subramania Ayyar v. Emperor (2), followed. [p 304, col. 7.]

It is the duty of a Public Prosecutor to conduct the case for the Crown fairly; his object should be, not to obtain an unrighteous conviction, but, as representing the Crown, to see that justice is vindicated; and in exercising his discretion as to the witnesses whom he should or should not call, he should bear that in mind. It is his bounden duty to place before the Court for the adjudication of the Court, all the evidence against the accused persons and should not withhold certain evidence by not calling the principal witness on the ground that he did not believe the witness's evidence. It is for the Judge not for the Public Prosecutor to decide whether the evidence should be believed or not. Nga Aung Gyi v. King-Emperor (3), relied on. [p. 305, col. 1.]

Or. A. from an order of the Sessions Judge, Thaton, dated July 25, 1939.

Mr. C. A. Soorma, for the Appellant.

Mr. U Tun Byu, for the Govt. Advocate, for the Crown.

Dunkley, J.—We have with reluctance, come to the conclusion that we must order a re-trial of the appellant before another Sessions Judge, owing to the illegality of his original trial. The appellant was charged before the learned Sessions Judge of Thaton with having committed the offence of murder by causing the death of a person named Maung Kywe. Without any doubt, Maung Kywe met his death on the night of January 31, 1939, by reason of being cut and stabbed with some sharp-edged and sharp-pointed instrument. It was in evidence before the learned Sessions Judge that the first statements that were recorded in the investigation of the offence, which resulted in Maung Kywe's death led to the suspicion that this offence was committed by a man named Maung Yaung. Subsequently, further investigation elicited that there was evidence also that the appellant Sar Kee, had committed this offence. The consequence was that the Police sent up for trial, in one and the same trial, both Maung Yaung and Maung Sar Kee. Each of them was separately charged with the offence of murder, under s. 302, I. P. O. by causing the death of Maung Kywe on the night of January 31, 1939, and both of them were committed to stand their trial before the Sessions Court on this charge. The trial before the Sessions Court was a joint trial of the two appellants. The learned Sessions Judge, at the beginning of his judgment, has stated that the case presented difficulties from the outset as the two accused were not charged with having murdered the deceased jointly, but there were two sets of conflicting evidence one to prove that accused No. 1 Maung Yaung, was the assailant of the deceased, Maung Kywe, and the other to establish the guilt of Sar Kee, accused No. 2, "for the same offence." With due respect to the learned Sessions Judge, there was no evidence to establish that Sar Kee was guilty of the same offence as Maung Yaung. It was attempted to establish that he was guilty of the murder of Maung Kywe, but that does not make it the same offence as the offence of Maung Yaung, presupposing that Maung Yaung had committed this murder. The trial before the learned Sessions Judge was an illegal trial ab initio. The authority for this proposition—an authority which has never been doubted and has, in fact, been followed in several unreported decisions of this Court—is Azim-ud-din v. Emperor (1) and this case was binding upon the learned Sessions Judge and ought to have been followed by him. Had he referred to it, it would have been at once apparent to him that the two accused, Maung Yaung and Maung Sar Kee could not be tried together. The head-note of Azim-ud-din's case (1) reads as follows:

"Two persons accused of an offence cannot be tried together if the prosecution cases against them are mutually exclusive. The words 'accused of the same offence' in s. 239, Criminal P. O., imply that the co-accused have acted in concert or association."

Referring to the provisions of the Criminal P. O., in which this decision is based, s. 232 of the Code specifically lays down that for every distinct offence of which any person is accused, there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in ss. 234, 235, 236 and 239. Consequently, when there is one charge against one person and another charge against another person, those charges must be the subject of separate trials, unless the Criminal P. O. points that the two charges and therefore the two accused may be jointly tried. Section 239 lays down the only circumstances in which accused persons may be jointly tried. Clause (a) of this section says:

"The following persons may be charged and tried together, namely persons accused of the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction."

When one accused is charged with having murdered a certain person at a certain place, and another accused is charged with having murdered the same person at the same time and place, and both these accused are being prosecuted because there is evidence against both, but the evidence is of such a character that both of them cannot be convicted, and if one set of evidence is believed, one of the accused will have to be convicted, whereas if the other set of evidence is believed, the other accused will have to be convicted, it cannot be said that those persons are charged with the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction. "The same offence" means an offence arising out of the same act or series of acts and can mean nothing else. This is clear from the words of the clause "committed in the course of the same transaction." When the prosecution evidence against two persons is mutually exclusive, there is no provision of the Code under which those persons can be tried together; and the joint trial of the two persons is not a mere irregularity which can be cured under s. 537, Criminal P. O., it is an illegality which goes to the very root of the trial. In Subramania Ayyar v. Emperor (2), their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the disregard of an express provision of the law as to the mode of trial was not a mere irregularity such as could be remedied by s. 537, Criminal P. O., and that such a phrase as "irregularity" is not appropriate to the illegality of trying an accused person for more different offences at the same time, and those offences being spread over a longer period than by law could have been joined together in one judgment. For myself, I can see no distinction between trying one person on a multiplicity of charges such as is not allowed by law, and trying two persons in one and the same trial where such joint trial is not allowed by law. I am therefore compelled to hold that the trial of this case before the learned Sessions Judge of Thaton was an illegal trial, and hence there must be a fresh trial of the appellant before some other Sessions Court.

It is unfortunately necessary, before we part with this case, to make some reference to the impropriety of the manner in which the learned Public Prosecutor for Thaton conducted the prosecution. There were for trial before the Sessions Court two persons, namely, Maung Yaung and the appellant. It is laid down in Nga Aung Gyi v. King-Emperor (3) that it is the duty of a Public Prosecutor to conduct the case for the Crown fairly; his object should be, not to obtain an unrighteous conviction, but, as representing the Crown, to see that justice is vindicated; and in exercising his discretion as to the witnesses whom he should or should not call, he should bear that in mind. It therefore was in this case his bounden duty to place before the Court for the adjudication of the Court, all the evidence against both these accused persons. Yet he asked the permission of the Court not to call the principal witness against the accused, Maung Yaung, on the ground that he did not believe this witness's evidence. As the learned Sessions Judge has stated in the course of his judgment, this action on the part of the learned Public Prosecutor was constituting himself the Judge of the case, that is, coming to a conclusion, in regard to the guilt or innocence of one accused and therefore pressing unduly for a conviction of the other accused, namely the present appellant. If the learned Public Prosecutor had come to the conclusion after the proceedings in the committing Court, that there was no creditable evidence against Maung Yaung his proper procedure was to have made an application to the learned Sessions Judge for permission to withdraw the case against Maung Yaung. In my view, if he had made such an application, it would necessarily have been rejected, because the trial showed that there was considerable evidence against Maung Yaung and it was for the Judge, and not for the Public Prosecutor, to decide whether that evidence should be believed or not and it was therefore essential that the Public Prosecutor should place the whole of this evidence before the Court. The learned Sessions Judge, has in the course of his judgement, commented on the fact that neither of the accused persons called any defence evidence. The answer is that they were not able to do so because the defence evidence of each was the prosecution evidence against the other, and had therefore been called as prosecution evidence in the case. It is undesirable that we should express any opinion regarding the evidence against the present appellant or its credibility at this stage, because as I have already said, it is clearly essential that there should be a re-trial and therefore we accept this appeal, set aside the conviction and sentence of the appellant and order the re-trial of the appellant before the Sessions Court of Moulmein on the same charge.

(1) 7 L. B. R. 68, 21 Ind. Cas. 163; 14 Cr. L. J. 563; 6 Bur. L. T. 191.

(2) 25 M. 61; 28 I. A. 257; 11 M. L. J. 233; 8 Sar. 160; 2 Weir 271; 3 Bom. L. R. 510; 5 O. W. N. 866 (P. O.).

Wright, J.—I agree.

D.

Appeal accepted.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Appeal from the Oudh Chief Court

October 10, 1939

LORD MACMILLAN, SIR GEORGE RANKIN

AND MR. M. R. JAYAKAR.

Babu BHAGWAN DIN AND OTHERS.

—APPELLANTS

versus

GIR HAR SAROOP AND OTHERS

—RESPONDENTS

Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920), ss. 3, 5, 6, 12—Application under s. 3—Proceedings, nature of—Res judicata—Decision, if operates as res judicata to bar regular suit even in case of person party to proceedings—S. 6, intention of—"If a trustee . . . fails to comply," construction—Trust—Public trust—Dedication—Nature of evidence to prove—Inference from user—Value of public user as evidence of dedication—Held, that grant was not made by way of trust for public religious purpose but to grantee and his heirs in perpetuity.

The decision of the District Judge under the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act—a decision from which by s. 12 there is no appeal—is a decision in a summary proceeding which is not a suit nor of the same character as a suit; it has not been made final by any provision in the Act; and the doctrine of res judicata does not apply so as to bar a regular suit even in the case of a person who was a party to the proceedings under the Act. [p. 307, col. 2.]

The existence of a public trust is the foundation of the proceedings authorised by s. 3 of the Act: prima facie while the District Judge may have to come to a decision upon this point in order to satisfy himself on the question of his own jurisdiction, he cannot by an erroneous decision thereon give himself jurisdiction. No matter how long or how peaceably an individual may have been in possession and enjoyment of property, it is always possible for persons claiming to be acting for the public to lay claim to the property as having been impressed with a trust of a charitable or religious nature. It would be both drastic and anomalous to provide that a person in possession, if not willing to bring a suit to establish his own title affirmatively, must be content to abide without right of appeal by the decision of the District Judge in a proceeding of this character. [Ibid.]

The terms of s. 6 of the Act are intended to define the consequences of an order made by the District Judge directing the persons to furnish particulars of the property, etc., but the words "if a trustee without reasonable excuse fails to comply" in s. 6 cannot be read to exclude a contention in a regular suit that the plaintiff is not a trustee or to prevent a similar contention being raised by a defendant to a suit under s. 92 of the Oivi. P. O. [p. 308, col. 1.]

It would be an error in method if the subsequent history of the temple is not looked at in the light of the grant of the property. While it is certainly possible that in the course of years the temple should have been so dealt with as to become dedicated for the benefit of the Hindu public as a public temple, such a dedication requires to be proved. Where the general effect of the evidence is that the family have treated the temple as family property, dividing the various forms of profit whether offerings or rents, closing it so as to exclude the public from worship when marriage or other ceremonies required the attendance of the members of the family at its original home, and erecting samadhs to the honour of its dead, in these circumstances, it is not enough to deprive the family of their private property to show that Hindus willing to worship have never been turned away or even that the deity has acquired considerable popularity among Hindus of the locality or among persons resorting to the annual mela. Worshippers are naturally welcome at a temple because of the offerings they bring and the repute they give to the idol: they do not have to be turned away on pain of forfeiture of the temple property as having become property belonging to a public trust. Facts and circumstances, in order to be accepted as sufficient proof of dedication of a temple as a public temple, must be considered in their historical setting and dedication to the public is not to be readily inferred when it is known that the temple property was acquired by grant to an individual or family. Such an inference, if made from the fact of user by the public, is hazardous, since it would not in general be consonant with Hindu sentiments or practice that worshippers should be turned away; and as worship generally implies offerings of some kind it is not to be expected that the managers of a private temple should, in all circumstances, desire to discourage popularity. The value of public user as evidence of dedication depends on the circumstances which give strength to the inference that the user was as of right. 151 Ind. Cas. 329 (5), referred to, 81 Ind. Cas. 518 (4), distinguished.

Held, that the grant was not a grant to the idol or an endowment of a temple or a gift made by way of trust for a public religious purpose. The grant was to the grantee and his heirs in perpetuity. The reference to the grantee's heirs, and the Arabic terminology naslan ba'da naslan wa bainan ba'da bainan (descendant after descendant and generation after generation) were not reconcilable with the view that the grantor was in effect making a waf for a Hindu religious purpose, even if it be assumed that this was not otherwise an untenable hypothesis. [p. 309, col. 1.]

Mr. P. V. Subba Row, for the Appellants.

Mr. Y. B. W. Ramsay, for the Respondents.

Sir George Rankin.—On April 14, 1930, the first two appellants (uncle and nephew) filed before the District Judge at Lucknow an application under s. 3 of the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920) for an order directing accounts to be furnished in respect of a certain temple in Lucknow together with land and houses adjacent thereto and occupied therewith. The principal deity is Bhaironji and from this idol the temple takes its name but there are other idols also in different parts of the temple compound, which is now of an area variously stated as about four bighas or 16 biswas. The respondents to the application were five in number, three men and two women: with certain other members of their family, they are now respondents before the Board in this consolidated appeal. They claim to be direct descendants of one Daryao Gir to whom a grant was made in 1781 of the land now in question by the then reigning Nawab of Oudh. It has been found and it does not appear to be in doubt that the members of this family are grihastha fakirs being at once goshains and householders. The family comes from the Bijnore District "on the Dhampur side" and is a joint Hindu family of the usual type. At the time of the application to the District Judge members of the family had been continuously in occupation and control of the temple and a number of samadhs or tombs had been set up containing the ashes of goshains who had belonged to the family. No interference with the management of the temple or the conduct of its worship whether on behalf of the public or otherwise had at any time taken place. It was not alleged in the application that the family had been guilty of any neglect or mis-management and the contrary has now been held by the Courts in India. The District Judge gave to the five respondents before him an option to bring a suit for a declaration that the property was not subject to a trust for a public purpose of a charitable or religious nature but they did not take this course. Accordingly he threw upon them the burden of disproving this allegation and after hearing nine witnesses for the applicants and two of the respondent goshains, and after considering certain documents, he held that there was a strong prima facie case that the temple formed the subject of a public trust and that the goshains had failed to establish the opposite. He therefore directed the goshains before him to furnish particulars of the extent of the property, the nature of the buildings and the income for the past year (October 1, 1930). This order was not complied with, and on September 16, 1931, the first two appellants brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Mohanlalganj. Suit No. 108-7 of 1931 against the same five members of the respondents' family. The suit was framed under s. 92, Civil P. C.; relying upon the failure to furnish particulars as ordered by the District Judge, the plaint asked for removal of the defendants, the appointment of new trustees and the framing of a scheme for the management of the temple. Before judgment had been given in this suit, another suit—No. 8-130 of 1931—was on December 23, 1931, brought in the same Court by 14 plaintiffs, claiming that they and four of the persons impleaded as defendants were members of the joint Hindu family to whom the temple belonged. This meant that 13 persons who had not been made parties to the proceedings before the District Judge were now putting their rights in suit as descendants of Daryao Gir and his co-parceners. The contesting defendants to this suit included the first two appellants—that is the uncle and nephew who had initiated the proceedings before the District Judge. Judgment in the former of these Suits (No. 108-7) was given on February 22, 1932, by the learned Subordinate Judge at Mohanlalganj. He held that the five goshains, defendants before him, had not proved that 13 other members of their family were interested and he left this to be determined in the other suit. He considered that the order of the District Judge concluded the question whether the temple was or was not the subject of a public religious trust and he decreed the suit, removing the five defendants, appointing new trustees and approving a scheme. About a year later (February 28, 1933), judgment in Suit No. 8-130 of 1931 was delivered by another Subordinate Judge (at Malihabad) holding that the temple property was the private and personal property of the 18 persons (14 plaintiffs and four defendants) of the respondents' family on behalf of whom it had been claimed. Both of these decisions were taken on appeal to the Chief Court at Lucknow and on October 23, 1934, Nanuvutty and Zia-ul Hasan, JJ. delivered one judgment covering the two appeals. They held that the temple property was not impressed with a public trust but was private property belonging to the joint family of the goshains. Hence the two appeals, which are now before the Board as a consolidated appeal.

The first question is whether the order of the District Judge made under the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act, 1920, precludes the respondents from disputing that the temple is the subject of a public religious trust. That order was made in the presence of five members only of the family and it is not shown that the other members are bound by it according to any principle of representation. Hence it is difficult to see how these other members can be prevented from claiming the property as belonging to their joint family. The Chief Court have refused for other reasons also to regard the District Judge's order as conclusive. In this they have followed, the decisions of a Bench of the Lahore High Court in Prem Nath v. Har Ram (1) and a Single Judge of the Bombay High Court in Haidarali v. Gulammohiuddin (2) and have agreed with the view of Niamutulla, J. in Mahadeo Bharthi v. Mahadeo Rai (3) in preference to the opinion of Mukerji, J. in the case last-mentioned. Their Lordships agree with the Chief Court. They hold that the decision of the District Judge under the Act of 1920—a decision from which by s. 12 there is no appeal—is a decision in a summary proceeding which is not a suit nor of the same character as a suit; that it has not been made final by any provision in the Act; and that the doctrine of res judicata does not apply so as to bar a regular suit even in the case of a person who was a party to the proceedings under the Act. The existence of a public trust is the foundation of the proceedings authorised by s. 3 of the Act: prima facie while the District Judge may have to come to a decision upon this point in order to satisfy himself on the question of his own jurisdiction, he cannot, by an erroneous decision thereon, give himself jurisdiction. To produce this result there must be some provision in the Act which requires a contrary construction. No matter how long or how peaceably an individual may have been in possession and enjoyment of property, it is always possible for persons claiming to be acting for the public to lay claim to the property as having been impressed with a trust of a charitable or religious nature. It is readily intelligible that the District Judge should be required to stay proceedings under the Act in any case in which the person against whom they have been taken is willing to bring a suit. But it would be both drastic and anomalous to provide that a person in possession, is not willing to bring a suit to establish his own title affirmatively, must be content to abide without right of appeal by the decision of the District Judge in a proceeding of this character.

(1) A I R 1934 Lah. 771; 154 Ind. Cas. 229; 36 P L R 13; 7 R L 531; 16 L 83.

(2) 58 B 623, 152 Ind. Cas. 781; 36 Bom. L R 687; A I R 1934 Bom. 343; 7 R B 180.

(3) 51 A 805; 118 Ind. Cas. 513; A I R 1929 Lah. 506; (1929) A L J 653; Ind. Rul. (1929) All. 865.

The terms of s. 6 of the Act are intended, in their Lordships' view, to define the consequences of such an order as was made in this case by the District Judge on October 1, 1930, but the words "if a trustee without reasonable excuse fails to comply" cannot be read to exclude a contention in a regular suit that the plaintiff is not a trustee or to prevent a similar contention being raised by a defendant to a suit under s. 92 of the Code.

Upon the merits, it is desirable to consider first the documents. The main document of title has already been mentioned. It is exhibit No. 4 dated April 2, 1781, whereby the Nawab of Oudh granted the property now in question to the respondents' ancestor, Daryao Gir. The grant runs as follows:—

"The present and future state officials of Haveli Lucknow, suburbs and the province of Akhtar-nagar, Oudh, should know that five pucca bighas waste land, free from Government revenue, mal and sewa, in the immediate vicinity of village Nawagaon, included in the said Haveli whereon lies the house of Bhairon, has been granted along with the said house, in the name of Daryao Gir goshain, the mahant, free of all dues and shall not be shown in the record: that the said land shall, generation after generation and descent after descent, be left in the possession and enjoyment of the said person and his heirs and they (officials) should not interfere and meddle with the same for any reason so that the said person having remained in possession of the said land and constructed a house, etc., should with contentment and devotion remain engaged in praying for His Highness."

This grant was construed by a Court of the Nawab in 1843 when members of the respondents' family took proceedings to eject certain dhobis (washermen) who had been allowed to set up and live in a thatched hut in the courtyard of the temple. It was held to be a grant of five bighas of the waste land to Daryao Gir, ancestor of the fakirs, to be held generation after generation as a muafi (revenue free grant) and that the fakirs had been long in possession. There is also the Khasra compiled after 1857 at the time of the First Settlement of the city of Lucknow soon after the annexation of Oudh by the British. This shows the plot as "mud house of Bhaironji" and under the heading "name of owner by virtue of possession" are inserted "Kosri Gir and Jawahir Gir and Kalyan Gir disciples of Daryao Gir". These are the main documents in the case but there are in addition a number of sarkhats, or leases of shop rooms on the outskirts of the temple property. These are expressed to be granted by individual members of the respondents' family: as the trial Judge (in Suit No. 8-130) has pointed out, the lessors were representative of each of the three branches of the family. The Chief Court noticed that there is no lease in the name of the idol as distinct from the names of individual goshains. In these leases the goshains are sometimes referred to as "owners" of the shop or kothri: in one at least, as owners of the asthan Sri Bhaironji.

It will be convenient to indicate the main features of the evidence before attempting to draw any inferences from the documents. The appellants rely strongly on the fact that for many years Hindu members of the public have resorted to the temple for worship and darshan without let or hindrance. About 46 years before the trial, a mela or fair had been started by some musicians and dancers and had become an annual function towards which public subscriptions were collected. There was some evidence that part of these monies had been spent upon whitewashing and repairing the temple but the Chief Court does not consider this to be established; though it is certain that the temple and its goshains profited from the increased resort to the temple during the mela.

The appellants maintain that upon a review of the history of the temple, they have established that it was held out to the public as a public temple and that the Courts in India should have applied to it the reasoning of the Board in the Madras case of Pujari Lakshmana Goundan v. Subramania Ayyar (4). The facts which have been held by the Courts below to tell in favour of the respondents are that there had been no previous interference with the temple on behalf of the public; that the goshains took the offerings for themselves; that they divided them according to their shares as members of different branches of the family; that they spent money on repairs; that they gave leases in their individual names and not in the name of the idol; that they closed the temple when they had occasion to go to their native village for family ceremonies, e. g., marriages; and that tombs to certain members of the family were put up though they could not claim to be famous saints.

(4) 29 O W N 112; 81 Ind. Cas. 518; A I R 1924 P O 44; 19 L W 255; 22 A L J 169; (1924) M W N 278; 10 O & A L R 608; L R 5 A (P O) 125 (P O).

Their Lordships agree with the Chief Court in holding that the grant of 1781 is not a grant to the idol or an endowment of a temple or a gift made by way of trust for a public religious purpose. The grant is to Daryao Gir and his heirs in perpetuity. Had it been intended as an endowment for an idol it would have been very differently expressed: the reference to the grantee's heirs, and the Arabic terminology naslan ba'da naslin wa batnan ba'da batnin (descendant after descendant and generation after generation) are not reconcilable with the view that the grantor was in effect making a waqf for a Hindu religious purpose, even if it be assumed that this is not otherwise an untenable hypothesis. While it is true that the origin of the idol is not completely traced—the respondents' allegation that it was founded or set up by Kishore Gir, father of the grantee, not being established by evidence—the grant of 1781 discloses the existence of a fakir with an idol in a mud hut squatting upon waste land which did not belong to him and which was given to him for the first time by the grant. It would, in their Lordships' opinion be an error in method if the subsequent history of the little temple was not looked at in the light of this grant. While it is certainly possible that in the course of years the temple should have been so dealt with as to become dedicated for the benefit of the Hindu public as a public temple, such a dedication requires to be proved. Their Lordships consider that in Suit No. 8-130, the Courts in India have followed a proper method and arrived at a correct conclusion upon the point. The decision of 1843 shows the position to have then been as in 1781 and the khassra at the time of the Settlement of Lucknow shows no variation—there is still a mud hut with an idol in it and the "owners" are members of the respondents' family, though described as "disciples of Daryao Gir". The general effect of the evidence is that the family have treated the temple as family property, dividing the various forms of profit whether offerings or rents, closing it so as to exclude the public from worship when marriage or other ceremonies required the attendance of the members of the family at its original home, and erecting samadhs to the honour of its dead. In these circumstances it is not enough, in their Lordships' opinion, to deprive the family of their private property to show that Hindus willing to worship have never been turned away or even that the deity has acquired considerable popularity among Hindus of the locality or among persons resorting to the annual mela. Worshippers are naturally welcome at a temple because of the offerings they bring and the repute they give to the idol: they do not have to be turned away on pain of forfeiture of the temple property as having become property belonging to a Public Trust. Facts and circumstances, in order to be accepted as sufficient proof of dedication of a temple as a public temple, must be considered in their historical setting in such a case as the present; and dedication to the public is not to be readily inferred when it is known that the temple property was acquired by grant to an individual or family. Such an inference if made from the fact of user by the public is hazardous, since it would not in general be consonant with Hindu sentiments or practice that worshippers should be turned away; and as worship generally implies offerings of some kind, it is not to be expected that the managers of a private temple should in all circumstances desire to discourage popularity. Thus in Mundancheri Koman v. Achuthan Nair (5), the Board expressed itself as being slow to act on the mere fact of the public having been freely admitted to a temple. The value of public user as evidence of dedication depends on the circumstances which give strength to the inference that the user was as of right. Their Lordships do not consider that the case before them is in general outline the same as the case of the Madras temple, Pujari Lakshmana Goundan v. Subramania Ayyar (supra) (4) in which it was held that the founder who had enlarged the house in which the idol had been installed by him, constructed circular roads for processions, built a rest house in the village for worshippers, and so forth, had held out and represented to the Hindu public that it was a public temple. The Chief Court have, in the opinion of the Board, correctly estimated the particular facts of the case before them and have rightly negatived the contentions that the temple is a public temple and that the property in suit is impressed with a trust of a public religious character.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that this consolidated appeal should be dismissed. The appellants must pay the respondents' costs.
 (5) 61 I A 405; 151 Ind. Cas. 329; 7 R P O 55; A I R 1934 P O 230; 11 O W N 1150; 40 L W 428; (1934) M W N 1055; 67 M L J 788; 60 O L J 344; 58 M 91; 1934 A L R 898; 1934 O L R 764; 39 O W N 518 (P O).

s. Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. H. S. L. Polak & Co.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. James Gray & Co.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeal No. 215 of 1939

August 18, 1939

NIYOGI AND GRUBE, JJ.

MOTILAL AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT

Criminal trial—Identification—Articles not mixed with similar articles—Value of identification—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 27—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 162, 342—Provisions of, if contradictory—S. 162, if alters s. 27, Evidence Act—Statement of accused to Police that he would point out ornaments of deceased, admissibility—Confession in dock under s. 342—If can be taken against co-accused under s. 30 Evidence Act.

Where during the identification of articles recovered from the accused, they were not mixed with similar articles, this omission would not make the identification inadmissible although it would detract from the weight that would otherwise be attached to that evidence. [p. 312, col. 1.]

The provisions of s. 27 of the Evi. Act are quite independent of s. 162 of the Criminal P. O., and the amendment of that section made in 1923, was not intended to abrogate or impair the effect of s. 27 of the Evi. Act. The statement made by the accused that he would produce deceased's ornaments which distinctly led to the discovery of the ornaments falls within the ambit of s. 27. 114 Ind. Cas. 273 (3), followed. [p. 312, col. 2.]

Section 27 contemplates the discovery of material evidence. The material discovered would have no value unless it is relevant to the fact in issue and connected in some manner with the crime under investigation. Any information given by an accused person showing the relevancy of a fact to the crime must form an integral part of the discovery of the fact itself, namely material evidence, although it may indirectly amount to a confession. Consequently, the statement made by the accused that he would point out the deceased's ornaments would be admissible. That would only show his knowledge of the ornaments belonging to the deceased but would not prove by itself his complicity in the crime of murder. [p. 313, col. 2.]

[Case-law referred to.]

Quære—Whether a confession made by an accused in the dock, when examined under s. 342 of the Criminal P. O., can be taken into consideration under s. 30 Evi. Act against the other accused persons.

[Case-law referred to.]

Or. A. from the order of the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge, Balaghat, dated June 27, 1939.

Mr. W. C. Dutt, for the Appellants.

Mr. W. R. Puranik, for the Crown.

Judgment.—Motilal, his brother Mojilal, and Saktya, their servant, and Jhullu, Benya and Sudama, were tried in the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge, Balaghat, on the charge of murdering one Ghudnya, son of Langdya Mahar of village Datta on the night of February 10, 1939, and also of robbing him of his ornaments—offences punishable respectively under ss. 302 and 396, read with s. 34, I. P. O. Motilal, Mojilal and Saktya were convicted of both the offences and the first two were sentenced to death subject to confirmation by this Court and also to transportation for life; Saktya was sentenced to transportation for life and five years' rigorous imprisonment which was to run concurrently, and the others were acquitted. Motilal and Mojilal have preferred a joint appeal, Criminal Appeal No. 215 of 1939, and Saktya filed a separate appeal, Criminal Appeal No. 219 of 1939. This judgment governs the disposal of both.

The deceased Ghudnya worked as a labourer on the field of Motilal and Mojilal. He was the only son of his father and had been married two years before his murder. He was in the habit of wearing three gold earrings and a pair of silver Kadas on his wrist. On Friday, February 10, 1939, he and his wife worked as usual in the field of Motilal and Mojilal and returned in the evening. He took his meals along with his father and then left his house. At midnight when his wife got up from sleep and found that Ghudnya had not returned home she woke up her father-in-law. They made search for him in the night but in vain. The search made on the next day also proved fruitless. On Sunday, that is February 12, 1939, one Gopal brought the news that a blood-stained cloth was seen in the field of one Bhola Kumbhar. The deceased's father and his wife went to the field and discovered the trunk of a dead body which was kept away in the recess of an embankment of Bhola Kumbhar's field. The head was missing. They forthwith reported the matter to the Mukaddam Anantsingh stating that on Friday Ghudnya after taking his meals had left his house at about 10 o'clock and that he had three gold Balis (earrings) weighing 1½ tola worth Rs. 42-8-0 and two silver Kadas weighing 7 tolas worth Rs. 3-8-0. The report was sent to the Kirnapur Police Station on the same day and Sikandar Khan, Sub-Inspector arrived at the village Datta on February 13, 1939, for investigation. He found the head in the adjoining field. The clothes found on the body were seized as also a bunch of keys attached to a thread tied round his waist. As the body was in an advanced state of decomposition, Dr. Ghadge, Assistant Medical Officer, Balaghat, who held the post mortem examination, was unable to pronounce any opinion as to the cause of death.

On February 15, 1939, that is Wednesday, an axe known as Pharsa, an iron file, a dhoti, a bandi and the handle of the axe were seized from Motilal. On the next day two shirts were seized from the accused Mojilal and a blood-stained dhoti and a shirt from Saktya. On that day Motilal led the Sub-Inspector to his house and produced three gold earrings and a pair of silver kadas which had been tied in a piece of cloth, which he had dug out from a corner of the chhapri of a dilapidated house standing in his badi. These ornaments were recognised by the deceased's wife and father as those which had been worn by the deceased when he had left his house on the fateful night.

It may be useful to describe the place where the murder is alleged to have been committed. Some distance away from the village; towards the north-west there lies a hillock by the side of which flows a river called Deo Nadi. Bbola Kumbhar's field where the dead body was found is to the east of the hillock and to the north-west of the village. At the western end of the village there is a Chaori along which the road passes towards the hillock. Musammam Kumharin (P. W. No. 8) who lives close to the Chaori saw in the afternoon preceding the day on which Ghudnya disappeared Motilal and Mojilal and others including Ghudnya gathered near the Chaori and Jhullu. One of the accused had come to her to ask for fire presumably for smoke. In the evening of the material night she saw Jhullu, Saktya and Ghudnya the deceased on the road near her house. Ghudnya had a pot in his hand. Arjun (P. W. No. 15) who lives in the neighbourhood of the deceased saw Ghudnya going past his yard and at the same time heard the voice of Jhullu saying that Ghudnya had come which was the signal for Benya, Sudama and Saktya to come out of their house and go towards the west out of the village. Sakhan Marar (P. W. No. 12) who is the servant of Anantsingh Patel had carried meals to his father in his field laying in the same direction and was returning home. He first met at some distance outside the village Motilal and Mojilal going along the fields of Kanhaiya and Bbola Kumbhar. As he proceeded further he saw Benya, Sudama and the deceased Ghudnya sitting on a log of wood near a well. Still later in his progress back to his house he met Jhullu and Saktya with whom he had some talk. They were going in the direction in which Benya, Sudama and Ghudnya were sitting. Later in the night Kanhaiya (P. W. No. 13) and Laxman (P. W. No. 14) heard voices of Motilal and Mojilal and Ghudnya. These two witnesses have their plantations in the river flowing by the hillock. The gist of their evidence is that Ghudnya in plaintive tones was imploring them to take away the ornaments but save his life as he was the only son of his father. His voice ended with the words "Oh mother" which was followed by a hush. The witnesses observed the figures of the people which were at a distance of about 300 feet.

The ornaments produced by Motilal were identified by the deceased's father Langdya (P. W. No. 9) and his wife Bunda (P. W. No. 11) as well as Nandram goldsmith, (P. W. No. 16), the goldsmith who had made the ornaments. Kanhaiya (P. W. No. 13), Arjun (P. W. No. 15) and Suratsingh malguzar (P. W. No. 19) testified that Ghudnya was in the habit of wearing three earrings and two Kadas. Mojilal denied knowledge of the ornaments belonging to Ghudnya. Motilal, however, pleaded that they had belonged to his deceased father and that he had buried them in his house to conceal them from his brother Mojilal because he had already unjustly appropriated all the ornaments of their mother. Motilal, however, did not give any evidence to substantiate his plea. The articles were sent to the Chemical Examiner and the Imperial Serologist. The Chemical Examiner detected blood on the iron axe blade and the iron file recovered from Motilal by applying benzidine test, but the presence of blood could not be confirmed by the spectroscopic method. He detected bloodstains by spectroscopic test on dhoti, bandi and the handle of the axe recovered from Motilal and two shirts recovered from Mojilal and the dhoti and shirt recovered from Saktya. The Serologist was unable to determine the origin of the bloodstains as they were disintegrated. Both Motilal and Mojilal admitted that Saktya and the other accused (acquitted) were their servants, but they denied the commission of the crime. Saktya, however, admitted that Motilal, Mojilal, Ghudnya and himself assembled near the hillock towards the river and that Motilal murdered Ghudnya and stripped him of his ornaments and kept them to himself. Although he admitted his presence, he was cautious enough to deny that he took part in committing the murder.

The assessors unanimously gave their opinion that Motilal and Mojilal were guilty of murder and robbery. In regard to Saktya, one of the four assessors declared him guilty of both the offences, while the rest declared him not guilty.

On behalf of Motilal it is contended that the identification of the ornaments made by Langdya (P. W. No. 9), the deceased's father and Bunda (P. W. No. 11) the deceased's wife, was inconclusive for the reason that the ornaments were not mixed with other similar ornaments. It is true that there has been an omission to take this step but that would not make the identification inadmissible although it would detract from the weight that would otherwise be attached to that evidence. There are, however, circumstances to show that these ornaments were those which had been worn by Ghudnya. In the first information report, Ex. P-1, which Ghudnya's father made to the Patel, there is mention of three balis and two kadas. Kanhaiya (P. W. No. 13), Arjun (P. W. No. 15), Nandram (P. W. No. 14) and Suratsingh (P. W. No. 19) affirmed that Ghudnya used to wear these ornaments. Although Nandram (P. W. No. 16) was not able to state the distinctive marks on those ornaments he was definite that he made those ornaments for Ghudnya. The ornaments were of a nature which are worn only by men, a fact which derives confirmation from the plea raised by Motilal that they belonged to his father. The actual weight of the ornament and their value materially agrees with those stated by the deceased's father in his report to the Patel. No attempt was made by Motilal to substantiate his plea that the ornaments had belonged to his father and it is significant that Mojilal who must also have seen his father wearing these ornaments did not take the plea. All these facts taken together and considered as a whole leave no room for doubt that these ornaments belonged to the deceased Ghudnya. Moreover, there is evidence to prove that Motilal stated to the Sub-Inspector that he would produce Ghudnya's ornaments: see Suratsingh (P. W. No. 19) and Sikandar Khan (P. W. No. 20) and that he led the Sub-Inspector to his house and produced the ornaments. It is strenuously contended that the statement made by Motilal that he would produce Ghudnya's ornaments is inadmissible for the reason that it was not an information which distinctly led to the discovery of the ornaments but that it was a mere statement which could not be proved in view of s. 162, Criminal P. O. It is true, as held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Pakala Narayana Swami v. Emperor (1), that the words of s. 162, Criminal P. O. are wide enough to exclude a confessional statement made to a Police Officer in the course of investigation whether a discovery is made or not. Their Lordships, however, left the question open whether or not such a statement would be admissible under s. 27 of the Evi. Act which is a special law within the meaning of s. 1 (2), Criminal P. O. In Emperor v. Faujdar (2) it was pointed out that there is no contradiction between s. 162 of the Criminal P. O. and s. 27 of the Evi. Act and that by virtue of s. 1 (2) of the Criminal P. O. any provision of the Evi. Act which is a special law as defined by s. 4 of the Code, cannot be affected by the Criminal P. O. in the absence of a specific provision to the contrary made in that Code; and that there is no such specific provision modifying or altering s. 27 of the Evi. Act. The terms of s. 162 of the Criminal P. O. as amended by Act XVIII of 1923 do not alter the provisions of s. 27 of the Evi. Act. That was the view taken by a Bench of two Judges of the late Court of Judicial Commissioner in a case reported in Gola v. Emperor (3) where it was laid down that the provisions of s. 27 of the Evi. Act are quite independent of s. 162 of the Criminal P. O. and that the amendment of that section made in 1923 was not intended to abrogate or impair the effect of s. 27 of the Evi. Act. We are in respectful agreement with this view and hold that the statement falls within the ambit of s. 27 of the Evi. Act. It is urged that when Motilal himself produced the incriminating articles and did not give any information to enable the Police to discover them, any statement made by him would not be covered by s. 27 of the Evi. Act and that in any case the statement made by him that he would point out Ghudnya's ornaments was not admissible as it was in the nature of a confession. In Nahru v. Emperor (4) it was pointed out that the statement that the accused had deposited two kadas belonging to the deceased in a certain place and offered to show the Police the spot is admissible under s. 8 of the Evi Act. The statement therefore is not admissible. The contention is, moreover, untenable in view of the plain terms of s. 27. The relevant words are: when any fact is deposed to as discovered in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence in the custody of a Police Officer so much of such information whether it amounts to a confession or not as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved. The word used is "information" not "statement". The information may be conveyed by words or by conduct. If an accused person says: "Come with me, I shall show certain property" and he leads the Police with him, he is undoubtedly giving information which puts the Police in motion, and consequently the information given by him coupled with his conduct must fall within the purview of s. 27. As to the extent to which a confession involved in the information supplied by the accused can be proved, there has been no doubt some divergence of judicial opinion as will be evident by a reference to Sukhan v. Emperor (5) and Athappa Goundan v. Emperor (6). In Maganlal v. Emperor (7) it was pointed out that although the interpretation of s. 27 has now been held to allow the admissibility of such statements as "I buried the knife with which I committed the murder in such and such field", that doctrine has never been extended to include statements concerning the source from which an article recovered was obtained. A statement such as "this is the revolver which was stolen" is admissible for the obvious reason that the statement actually leading to the recovery without an admission as to what the property is would be unintelligible. This view appears to reflect faithfully the intention of the legislature. Section 27 contemplates the discovery of material evidence. The material discovered would have no value unless it is relevant to the fact in issue and connected in some manner with the crime under investigation. Any information given by an accused person showing the relevancy of a fact to the crime must form an integral part of the discovery of the fact itself, namely material evidence, although it may indirectly amount to a confession. Consequently the statement made by Motilal that he would point out Ghudnya's ornaments would be admissible. That would only show his knowledge of the ornaments belonging to Ghudnya but would not prove by itself his complicity in the crime of murder.

(1) A I R 1930 P O 47; 180 Ind. Cas. 1; 1930 O L R 134; (1930) M W N 185; 40 Cr. L J 364; 11 R P O 166; 1930 O W N 283; 20 P L T 265; 49 L W 349; 43 O W N 473; (1930) A L J 298; 41 Bom. L R 428; 41 P L R 273; 69 O L J 273; 5 B R 449; (1930) 1 M L J 756; 18 Pat. 234; 66 I A 66 (P O).

(2) 55 A 463; 144 Ind. Cas. 1021 (2); L R 14 A 153 Cr.; A I R 1933 All. 440; (1933) Cr. Cas. 746; 6 R A 43; 34 Cr. L J 875; (1933) A L J 1518.

(3) 24 N L R 158; 114 Ind. Cas. 273; A I R 1929 Nag. 17; 30 Cr. L J 258; Ind. Rul. (1929) Nag. 49 (F B).

Considering the evidence bearing on the identification of ornaments together with the statement made by Motilal, it must be held that the ornaments were taken away from the person of Ghudnya.

The credibility of the evidence of Kanhaiya (P. W. No. 13), Laxman (P. W. No. 14) and Arjun (P. W. No. 15) is sought to be impeached on the ground that they did not disclose their information until the Sub-Inspector enquired of them. Such conduct is by no means unusual with the villagers who persuade themselves that it would be inviting trouble on themselves to disclose their knowledge to anybody in the village. The evidence of Kumharin (P. W. No. 8) and Sakhan (P. W. No. 12) clearly indicates the association of Motilal and Mojilal and Saktya with the deceased Ghudnya on the night of the murder. The iron axe blade and iron file, dhoti and bandi and the handle of the axe which were recovered from Motilal were found to be blood-stained by the Chemical Examiner. The first two articles reacted to the benzidine test and blood on the rest of the articles was detected by spectroscopic test. Two shirts Ar.s. G-1 and G-2 recovered from Mojilal also indicated the presence of blood when subjected to spectroscopic test by the Chemical Examiner.

The evidence reviewed above clearly brings the guilt home to Motilal and Mojilal. The lower Court took into consideration under s. 30 of the Evi. Act, the

(4) 1 L R (1937) Nag. 268 at p. 273; 168 Ind. Cas. 962; 38 Cr. L J 642; 9 R N 281; A I R 1937 Nag. 220.

(5) 10 L R 283; 115 Ind. Cas. 6; A I R 1929 Lah. 344; 30 P L R 197; 30 Cr. L J 414; 11 L L J 159; Ind. Rul. (1929) Lah. 342 (F B).

(6) 1 L R (1937) Mad. 695; 171 Ind. Cas. 245; A I R 1937 Mad. 618; (1937) M W N 442; 46 L W 152; (1937) 2 M L J 60; 10 R M 321; 38 Cr. L J 1027 (F B).

(7) 30 N L R 269 at p. 281; 150 Ind. Cas. 623; (1934) Cr. Cas. 276; A I R 1934 Nag. 71; 7 R N 10; 35 Cr. L J 1097.

confession made by Saktya against Motilal and Mojilal. There is divergence of judicial opinion whether a confession made by an accused in the dock, when examined under s. 342 of the Criminal P. O. can be taken into consideration under s. 30 against the other accused persons. In Ganpat v. Emperor (8) it was held that it could be so taken into consideration, but the judicial opinion on the point is not unanimous as will appear from Dial Singh v. Emperor (9), Emperor v. Mahadeo Prasad (10), Emperor v. William Cooper (11) and In re Marudamethu Padayachi (12). It is unnecessary to go into this question as we are of opinion that owing to the wavering nature of the statement and the late stage at which it was given which no doubt took the other accused by surprise, we should exercise our discretion by not taking the statement into consideration against the other accused, even if we are legally entitled to do so.

Excluding Saktya's statement from consideration we find that the evidence on record fully warrants the convictions of Motilal and Mojilal.

Saktya on his own admission participated in the crime. He is, therefore, clearly guilty along with the two others of both the offences.

We affirm the convictions and sentences passed against Motilal and Mojilal and dismiss their appeal.

As to Saktya, he is not yet out of his teens and being a servant of Motilal and Mojilal he must have been pressed to join their masters. Although he accompanied his masters it does not appear that he took actual part in the murder; nor did he derive any benefit out of the crime. We therefore recommend his case to the Provincial Gov. for the exercise of clemency under s. 401, Criminal P. O.

D. Appeal dismissed.

(8) 27 N L R 163; 134 Ind. Cas. 686; A I R 1931 Nag. 169; 32 Cr. L J 1222; Ind. Rul. (1931) Nag. 174; (1931) Cr. Cas. 830

(9) 16 L 651; 161 Ind. Cas. 898; A I R 1936 Lah 337; 37 P L R 806; 8 R L 814; (1936, Cr. Cas. 258; 37 Cr. L J 508.

(10) 45 A 323; 76 Ind. Cas. 1025; 21 A L J 179; A I R 1923 All. 323; 25 Cr. L J 305.

(11) 54 B 531; 127 Ind. Cas. 105; 32 Bom. L R 747; A I R 1930 Bom. 354; 3 Cr. L J 1137; Ind. Rul. (1930) Bom. 489; (1930) Cr. Cas. 786.

(12) 54 M 788; 134 Ind. Cas. 63; 34 L W 162; (1931) M W N 886; 61 M L J 358; 32 Cr. L J 1099; Ind. Rul. (1931) Mad. 815; A I R 1931 Mad. 820 (F B).

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Case No. 239 of 1937

November 25, 1938

YOUNG, C. J.

In the matter of PEOPLES BANK OF NORTHERN INDIA, LTD., LAHORE
(IN LIQUIDATION)

Companies Act (VII of 1913), s. 234—Lahore High Court's Rules and Orders, Vol. II, Chap. I—R. 68—Liquidator must make out case that compromise will be beneficial—Unwilling liquidator, if can be compelled to compromise debt due to Company.

The liquidator cannot consider a mere matter of pity or mercy. He must make out a case that the compromise will be beneficial to the Company; for example, that there is a contested claim, and if the compromise is entered into, the payment would be made very much sooner than if the claim was contested; or on similar grounds.

The Court has no jurisdiction to compel an unwilling liquidator to compromise a debt due to the Company in liquidation. In re East of England Banking Co. (Pearson's case) (1) and In re The International Contract Co., (Hankey's case) (2), relied on.

Messrs. Mohammad Monir and Besant Krishen, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. Bhagwati Shankar, Official Liquidator and Lakshman Saroop, for the Respondent.

Order—This is a petition by Khan Bahadur Mian Chiragh Din praying that the Court should make an order reducing the amount payable by him to the Liquidator of the Peoples Bank of Northern India. Before the Bank closed its doors, the Khan Bahadur owed the Bank money on three accounts. When the Company was wound up in May, 1935, and an Official Liquidator was appointed, on a report by the Liquidator, the Court reduced the interest payable on the amount due to six per cent. as from the compulsory order and the Court further reduced the interest from $9\frac{1}{2}$ and $9\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{1}{4}$ and $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. as from the date of the suspension of the business of the Bank in September 1931 up to the date of the compulsory order. The Khan Bahadur has paid Rs. 13,000 in part payment of the amount due. He now petitions the Court to make a further reduction in his favour. The Liquidator opposes any reduction. The position in law appears to be clear. Rule 68 of this Court's Rules and Orders, Vol. II, Chap. I, is as follows:

"Every application for the sanction of the Judge to a compromise with any contributory or other person indebted to the Company shall be supported by the affidavit of the Official Liquidator stating that he has investigated the affairs of such contributory or person and believes that the proposed compromise will be beneficial to the Company, and giving his reasons for such belief."

It is clear from this Rule that the Liquidator cannot consider a mere matter of pity or mercy. He must make out a case that the compromise will be beneficial to the Company; for example, that there is a contested claim, and if the compromise is entered into, the payment would be made very much sooner than if the claim was contested; or on similar grounds. It would be difficult, if the Liquidator is satisfied, that the whole amount can easily be paid by the debtor, for him to file an affidavit as contemplated by r. 68. Further, s. 234, Companies Act, is as follows:

"The Liquidator may, with the sanction of the Court when the Company is being wound up by the Court do the following things or any of them;—
(iii) compromise.... debts and liabilities and all claims....."

This section is the equivalent of s. 160, English Companies Act, 1862. The English section has had the consideration of the Courts in England. In In re East of England Banking Co. (Pearson's case) (1) it was held that the Court had no jurisdiction to order the Liquidator in a winding up to consent to a compromise with a contributory. In that case the Company Judge had taken a strong view that the contributory was in a very poverty-stricken condition and that the Liquidator ought to accept a compromise which had been offered. The Court of Appeal set aside the order of the Company Judge and held that:

"the Court has no more power to compel the Liquidator to accept a compromise than to compel an ordinary suitor to take less than is due to him. I am of opinion that the only power is in the Liquidator with the sanction of the Court, and that there is no power in the Court to order a compromise, whether the Liquidator recommends it or not."

In In re The International Contract Co. (Hankey's case), (2) it was held in the case of a suggested compromise of a creditor's claim that the Court had no jurisdiction to compel the Liquidator of a Company to accept a compromise of a creditor's disputed claims against the Company. It is quite clear from these authorities that in this case the Court has no jurisdiction to compel an unwilling Liquidator to compromise a debt due to the Company in liquidation. The Liquidator in this case is not in a position to file an affidavit that the proposed reduction in the debt will be beneficial to the Company in liquidation. The petition, therefore, must be dismissed.

D. Petition dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Criminal Appeal No. 43 of 1939

June 12, 1939

BROOMFIELD, AG. C. J. AND SEN, J.

EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

KALLAPPA GURAPPA KOTAGUNSHI

AND OTHERS—ACCUSED

Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887), ss. 13, 4—Game of cards called pettin-ata, if comes within mischief of Act—Club and common gaming house, distinction.

"Mere skill" means pure skill, skill and nothing else. A game in which there is a substantial element of chance cannot be described as a game of mere skill or pure skill. As the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act now stands, and in particular in view of the provisions of s. 13 it is clear that if a game is played for stakes, it amounts to gaming and comes within the mischief of the Act, quite irrespective of the question whether chance or skill predominates, provided of course that it is not a game of mere skill, that is to say, a game in which there is no element of chance at all. Of course, if the element of chance in a game is so small as to be negligible, it may be reasonable to ignore it. A game of cards called pettin-ata played for money stake is not a game of mere skill, and comes within the mischief of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act. 189 Ind. Cas 35 (1), commented upon. [p. 316, cols. 1 & 2.]

In the case of a club, it is not usual for a charge to be made for the profit and benefit of the owner or occupier of the premises. In the case of a common gaming house, all those participating in the game pay certain amount for the benefit of the owner of the premises. The other point is that in the case of a club the place is not open to any member of the public, but only to members of the club and perhaps their guests.

Mr. R. A. Jahagirdar, the Government Pleader, for the Crown.

Messrs. S. A. Desai, C. A. Desai and G. R. Madbhavi, for all accused and accused No. 1, respectively.

Broomfield, Ag. C. J.—The accused in this case were charged with offences under ss. 4 and 5, Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, 1887, and were convicted and ordered to pay fines of varying amount. On appeal, the Sessions Judge of Dharwar set aside the convictions and acquitted the accused. The Government of Bombay has now appealed against the order of acquittal. The facts need only be mentioned very briefly. The Police Sub-Inspector of Hubli, having received information that accused No. 1 was using his house at Hubli as a common gaming house, obtained a special warrant from the Magistrate and searched the house on February 9, 1938. At the time of the raid seven persons were found sitting in the room and playing a game of cards called pettin-ata for money stakes. One of the seven persons absconded, and of the six who were charged in the case, one accused No. 2, was examined as a witness. The Magistrate acquitted accused No. 6, and convicted Nos. 1, 3, 4 and 5.

(1) (1872) 7 Ch. A 309; 41 L J Ch. 524; 26 L T 379; 20 W R 394.

(2) (1872) 41 L J Ch. 385; 26 L T 358; 20 W R 508.

The only point that was argued in the appeal before the Sessions Judge was whether this game pettin-ata is a gambling game or not. The game has been thus described by accused No. 2 who, as I say, was examined as a witness in the case, and who gave a demonstration of the game before the Magistrate and the Sessions Judge. The game is played by four or six persons, each player being dealt eight cards. After the cards are dealt, the players make a call in turn contracting to make so many tricks. The maker of the highest call declares the trump suit. Each of the players contributes a certain stake, usually one anna, to the pool. If the player who makes the highest call makes the number of tricks he contracts to make, he takes the amount of the pool; but if he fails he has to contribute an equal amount to the pool. So that after the hand is played, if the highest bidder is unsuccessful, the pool is doubled. The game consists of three deals. If in the third hand the highest bidder is successful, he takes the whole of the pool; if he fails, the pool is divided equally among all the players including the unsuccessful final bidder.

The view taken by the learned Sessions Judge is that it cannot be regarded as a game of mere chance, and that there is an element of skill in it. That is perfectly true, but, unfortunately, it is not the point which arises on the construction of the Act. Section 13, which is the important section, says that nothing in this Act shall be held to apply to any game of mere skill wherever played. "Mere skill" means pure skill, skill and nothing else. It is sufficiently obvious, we think, without reference to any authorities, that a game in which there is a substantial element of chance cannot be described as a game of mere skill or pure skill. The game, which has been described in this case, is similar to the well-known game of nap. It is a rather elaborate form of nap, having some similarity, no doubt, to contract bridge. I should say myself that there is far more chance than skill in the game. But, in any case, it cannot possibly be denied that there is a very substantial element of chance in it. That being so, it is not a game of mere skill, and comes within the mischief of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act. The learned Sessions Judge appears to have relied on some observations of the learned Judicial Commissioner of Sind in Mahomed Hassan v. Emperor (1). The Court was there dealing with a game called Corinthian bagatelle, not a card game, and the observation of the learned Judicial Commissioner, on which the Sessions Judge relied, was as follows (p. 99*):

".....no game can be a game of skill alone, that in any game in which even great skill is required, chance must play a certain part, and we think there is force in this argument. Even a skilled player in a game of mere skill may be lucky or unlucky, so that we think that even in a game of mere skill chance must play its part. But we do not think that it is necessary to decide in terms of mathematical precision the relative proportion of chance to skill when deciding whether a game is a game of mere skill within the provisions of s. 13. We are satisfied in this particular case that it cannot be said that the game before us is a game of mere skill, because it is quite clear to us that the elements of chance most strongly preponderate. We think, therefore, on the point that the game is a game of mere skill."

It is not very clear I think that the learned Judge meant to lay down the proposition that the question whether a game is a gambling game or not depends on whether chance or skill preponderates in it. But, if that is the meaning of the observations cited, we can only say respectfully, but emphatically, that we do not agree. It has been pointed out in Emperor v. Ajun Singh (2) and Emperor v. Musa (3) that, under the provisions of the gambling law as they formerly stood before amendment, the question whether skill or chance predominates in a game was of importance. As the Act now stands, and in particular in view of the provisions of s. 13 it is clear that if a game is played for stakes, it amounts to gaming and comes within the mischief of the Act, quite irrespective of the question whether chance or skill predominates, provided of course that it is not a game of mere skill, that is to say, a game in which there is no element

(1) A I R 1937 Sind 99; 169 Ind. Cas. 35; 31 S L R 44; 38 Cr. L J 668; 9 R S 255.

(2) 57 O 520; 125 Ind. Cas. 643; A I R 1929 Cal. 769; (1929) Cr. Cas. 513; 31 Cr. L J 901; 33 O W N 910; Ind. Rul. (1930) Cal. 563.

(3) 40 M 556; 36 Ind. Cas. 839; A I R 1917 Mad 124; 18 Cr. L J 7; 31 M L J 285; (1916) M W N 196; 4 L W 503.

* Page of A I R 1937 Sind—[Ed.]

of chance at all. Of course, if the element of chance in a game is so small as to be negligible, it may be reasonable to ignore it. But that is not the case with the game with which we are concerned here.

The learned Sessions Judge has observed, in the course of his judgment, that the game is just like auction or contract bridge played in respectable clubs. He has, however, omitted to observe two very important distinctions. The first is, that in the case of a club it is not usual for a charge to be made for the profit and benefit of the owner or occupier of the premises. In the present case it is proved that all those participating in the game pay four annas for the benefit of accused No. 1, the owner of the premises. The other point is that in the case of a club, the place is not open to any member of the public, but only to members of the club and perhaps their guests. The facts here clearly bring the case within the definition of a common gaming house in s. 1. Mr. Desai, who appears for the accused, took exception to the Magistrate's order for confiscation of a sum of Rs. 48 which appears to have been found lying on the carpet round which the accused were sitting. He says that the prosecution have not shown the connection between this money and the gambling. The point does not appear to have been taken before the Sessions Judge, and in any case, we think, there is no substance in it. As the accused were playing cards for money, and this money was lying on the carpet on which they were playing, the connection between the money and the gambling is sufficiently obvious. We think the convictions of the accused were right, and the Sessions Judge was not justified in interfering. We therefore set aside the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge and restore the convictions and sentences of all the accused.

B.

Convictions restored.

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Civil Revision No. 151 of 1939

July 5, 1939

RAM LALL, J.

JAGAN NATH—DEBTEE—HOLDER—

PETITIONER

versus

ALLAH DAD—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—

RESPONDENT

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 60(1) (i) —Employee contracting himself out of benefits of

s. 60, by agreeing to pay decretal amount in instalments—Salary, if can be attached.

Where a railway employee agrees to a compromise decree in favour of his creditor agreeing to pay the decretal amount by monthly instalments, he contracts himself out of any benefits of s. 60, Civil P. C., in the matter of the attachment of his salary. Chittar Mal v. Ram Devi (1), applied.

O. R. of an order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Rawalpindi Cantonment, dated December 20, 1938.

Mr. Qabul Chand Mital, for the Petitioner.

Order.—Jagan Nath, petitioner, obtained a decree against Allah Dad, respondent, who is employed by the North Western Railway in the power house at Rawalpindi. The decree was obtained on April 4, 1938, as a result of a compromise, the relevant conditions of which were to the effect that a sum of Rs. 80 was held to be due which was agreed to be paid by five instalments, the first four being of Rs. 15 per mensem and the last of Rs. 20. It was also stipulated that if there was a default in the payment of these instalments the whole sum would be payable at once. Apparently these instalments were not paid and the decree-holder sued out execution of the whole of the decretal amount. An objection was taken that the pay of a railway employee could not be attached if it was below Rs. 100. This objection was allowed and the application for execution was dismissed and consigned to the record room the decree not having been satisfied. Against this order dated December 20, 1938, a revision petition has been filed in this Court and the principal ground urged before me is that the compromise on which the decree was passed constituted a contract between the parties by which the judgment-debtor had waived any legal right to object to the attachment of his pay. Objection to such an attachment could be taken under s. 60, Civil P. C. which would exempt the salary of the judgment-debtor in this case from attachment, but the provisions of this section confer a benefit which a person can contract himself out of. In Chittar Mal v. Ram Devi (1), Young, C. J., in delivering the judgment of a Division Bench held that there was nothing in s. 60, Civil P. C. to prevent an agriculturist voluntarily selling or otherwise alienating his house and that if an agriculturist mortgaged his house, he was deemed to have waived the privileges given to him by this section. Applying this principle it appears to me that by entering into a compromise the judgment-

(1) A I R 1935 Lah. 164.

debtor-respondent had contracted himself out of any benefit that s. 60 conferred on him in the matter of the attachment of his salary. In these circumstances I would accept this revision petition but make no order as to costs.

D.

Petition accepted.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT
Criminal Revision No. 295 of 1939
September 12, 1939

NIYOGI, J.

EMPEROR—APPLICANT*versus(SURETY) KARBALAI HUSSAIN—*NON-APPLICANT

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 496, 109, 117—Surety bond for proceedings under s. 109—S. 496, if applies to proceedings under s. 109—Form of bond.

Section 496, Criminal P. O., applies to proceedings under s. 109 of the Code. Section 496 does not merely refer to an accused person but generally to "any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence who appears or is brought before a Court." 145 Ind. Cas 344 (1), relied on.

In the absence of any special form prescribed by law with reference to the preventive sections of the Criminal P. O., there is nothing to prevent the use of the printed form prescribed for appearance under ss. 496—499, specially when the bond makes it clear what the nature of the proceedings was and in which Court accused was to appear.

Or. Ref. made by the Additional Sessions Judge, Jubbulpore, on July 13, 1939.

Mr. Fida Hussain, for the Non-Applicant (Surety).

Order.—On March 13, 1939, proceedings under s. 109 of the Criminal P. O. were initiated against Premlal Ahir of Dewas before Mr. S. C. Rai, Magistrate, I Class, Jubbulpore, camping at Tripuri. Premlal was produced from custody and the Magistrate, after examining four witnesses, adjourned the case to March 21, 1939, at Jubbulpore. He was not released on bail on that day as he had no surety to offer bail. Premlal produced a surety on March 20, 1939, and obtained an order from the Magistrate for his release on executing a bail bond with a surety for the sum of Rs. 200. On March 21, 1939, which was the date of hearing, Premlal was absent and as it was found that he had absconded, the proceedings against him were withdrawn.

The non-applicant Karbalai Hussain stood surety for Premlal and executed the bail bond on March 20, 1939, in the sum of Rs. 200 giving security for Premlal's attendance in the Court. He was therefore called upon to show cause why the whole amount of Rs. 200 should not be recovered from him and he was ordered to pay Rs. 200 as the bond had been forfeited. His appeal in the Court of the District Magistrate, Jubbulpore, proved unsuccessful. On an application made by Karbalai Hussain for the revision of the District Magistrate's order, the Additional Sessions Judge, Jubbulpore, has reported this case under s. 438, Criminal P. O., with a recommendation that as the bail bond was not according to law, the order of forfeiture of the bond should be quashed.

The learned Additional Sessions Judge appears to be of the opinion that s. 496 does not apply to proceedings under s. 109, Criminal P. O. In view of the plain terms of that section. I cannot agree with his opinion. Section 496 does not merely refer to an accused person but generally to "any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence who appears or is brought before a Court." The proviso to that section makes it clear that the substantive part of the section applies to s. 117, sub-s. 3. Section 117 has to be read with s. 112 which in turn refers to ss. 107, 108, 109 and 110. The order contemplated by s. 112 is a preliminary order which is followed by an enquiry under s. 117. That section directs that when the order under s. 112 requires security for good behaviour, the procedure prescribed for conducting trials in the warrant case should be followed save that no charge need be framed. Pending the completion of the enquiry the Magistrate is invested with power to direct the person concerned to execute a bond forthwith, with or without sureties, for maintaining good behaviour until the completion of the enquiry. The proviso to s. 496 refers to this power of the Magistrate and leaves it unaffected by anything that is said in that section. I feel no doubt at all that s. 496 authorises the Magistrate conducting an enquiry under s. 117, Criminal P. O., to release the person concerned in the enquiry on bail with or without surety to ensure his attendance in Court. I am fortified in this view by a case reported in U Gandama v. Emperor (1).

It is urged here that the bond which the non-applicant was called upon to execute was inappropriate for the proceedings under s. 109, Criminal P. O. It is true that the form which was used was the prescribed printed form of bail bond for appearance before a Magistrate, under ss. 496 and 499, and the wording of it indicates that it is to be used in the committal proceedings, but, in the absence of any special form prescribed by law with reference to the preventive sections of the Criminal P. O. there is nothing to suppose that the use of the prescribed printed form would be illegal and therefore invalid. The bond in the present case makes clear what the nature of the proceedings was and in which Court Premlal was to appear. The non-applicant cannot be heard to say that he was in any way misled by the terms of the bond which he had executed. Having signed the form he must be presumed to know that he had given security for the attendance of Premlal in the Court of Mr. S. C. Raj, Magistrate, 1st Class, Jubbulpore, in the proceedings under s. 109, Criminal P. O.

(1) A I R 1933 Rang. 164; 145 Ind. Cas. 344; (1933) Cr. Cas. 763; 6 R. Rang. 41; 34 Cr. L J 950 (2).

For the foregoing reasons I do not see my way to accept the reference. I affirm the District Magistrate's order.

D.

Revision dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Government Appeal No. 6 and Criminal Revision No. 599 of 1939

August 14, 1939

McNAIR AND KHUNDKAR, JJ.
SUPERINTENDENT AND REMEM-BRANCER OF LEGAL AFFAIRS, BENGAL—APPELLANT

versus

L. N. BIRLA AND ANOTHER—ACCUSED—
RESPONDENTS

Factories Act (XXV of 1934), s. 71—Procedure contemplated by s. 71 (1)—Admission of offence by alleged actual offender—Whether proof that manager or occupier used due diligence or that the offence was committed without his connivance—S. 71 (2), scope of—Exception to general rule that person primarily responsible is manager or occupier.

The complaint is made in the first instance by the Inspector of Factories against the manager or occupier under s. 60, Factories Act. The manager or occupier is then entitled under s. 71 to complain against the actual offender and if he does so, the actual offender is given notice and brought before the Court and the trial proceeds as against both persons complained against; for, the section contemplates both sets of complainants and accused being before the Court at the same time. The carriage of proceedings is with the original complainant on whom the onus lies of proving that the offence has been committed. Both parties complained against are concerned with the finding on this issue and both are entitled to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses at this stage, and to lead evidence to disprove the charge, but being accused persons they would not be entitled to give evidence themselves. If the prosecution fails to prove the offence, both the accused must be acquitted. If the offence is proved, the Court should record an order to that effect and the manager or occupier is guilty under s. 60 of the Act. Section 71, however, affords the manager or occupier an opportunity of escaping liability provided he can give satisfactory proof of the facts required by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b). The onus of proof, however, is now shifted to the manager or occupier and he is entitled to call evidence or to give evidence himself. The actual offender, who is, the ultimate accused, would be entitled to call evidence, but not to give evidence himself. The difference in procedure being due to the fact that the actual offender occupies the role only of an accused, whereas the occupier or manager at this stage, besides being an accused, has to discharge the onus of positive proof required by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b), and in all probability he alone is capable of proving certain facts of which proof is thereby required. The Crown, which has initiated the proceedings, and has throughout retained the carriage of the proceedings, is entitled at this stage to cross-examine the occupier or manager if he gives evidence, and any witnesses called by him in support of his charge, and to call rebutting evidence. 117 Ind. Cas. 673 (1), referred to. [p. 322, cols. 1 & 2.]

The Magistrate cannot convict the alleged actual offender or discharge the manager or occupier until the proof envisaged by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b) is before him. It is true that s. 342 (3), Criminal P. O., permits the Court to take into consideration the answers given by the accused. But an admission of the offence by one of the accused is no proof that the other accused had used due diligence to prevent the offence, or that the offence was committed without his connivance. [p. 321, col. 1.]

Section 71 (2), is by way of exception to the general rule that the person primarily responsible is the manager or occupier. The whole scheme of the Factories Act is to bring pressure on the controlling authority to see that the provisions which the Legislature has made for the safety and welfare of employees are carried out. [p. 322, col. 1.]

Sir A. K. Roy, Advocate-General and Mr. Anil Ch Roy Choudhury, for the Crown.

Messrs. N. K. Basu, S. K. Basu and Ajit Kumar Basu, for L. N. Birla.

Mr. Sudhansu S. Mukherjee, for B. K. Rana.

McNair, J. — The Local Govt. has appealed against the discharge of L. N. Birla in a case under ss. 60 (a) (iii), 32 (a) and 24 (1) (c), Factories Act, 1934, and r. 46, of the Bengal Factories Rules, 1935. In the connected proceeding, Revision No. 599 of 1939, a Rule has been issued at the instance of the Local Govt. calling upon B. K. Rana to show cause why the order of conviction and sentence passed upon him under the same sections of the Factories Act and the Factories Rules should not be set aside and such further or other order be made as to this Court may seem fit and proper. These cases are two out of six cases instituted by the Local Govt. against L. N. Birla for various alleged contraventions of the Factories Act and the rules made thereunder. The Keshoram Cotton Mills, Ltd., is the occupier of the factory and L. N. Birla is admittedly one of the directors of that company. Proceedings have been instituted against Birla as the person responsible for the alleged offences, and Birla has in each case before us complained against Rana as the "actual offender" and has claimed discharge from liability under the provisions of s. 71 of the Act. The Local Govt. contend that the procedure adopted by the trying Magistrate was irregular and that the conviction of Rana and the acquittal of Birla was in each case without jurisdiction and illegal. We have called for the records in all the connected cases and we are satisfied that the learned Magistrate adopted the same procedure at each trial.

The proceedings arose out of an inspection by Mr. R. O. Parsons, Inspector of Factories, Bengal, of the Keshoram Cotton Mills on August 1 and 3, 1938, when he found that various provisions of the Factories Act had been contravened. In the appeal before us the contravention related to inadequate fencing of the mill machinery. Under s. 60 of the Act, the "manager and occupier shall each be punishable for such contravention." Mr. Wright, who was the manager at the time of the inspection, had already left. Section 70 (2) of the Act provides that "where the occupier of a factory is a company, any one of the directors thereof... may be prosecuted and punished... for any offence for which the occupier of the factory is punishable"

The company had not given notice as permitted by the proviso to s. 70 (2) nominating a director to be "the occupier," and Birla was therefore prima facie punishable as one of the directors. Section 71 (1), Factories Act, provides:

"Where the occupier or manager of a factory is charged with an offence against this Act, he shall be entitled upon complaint duly made by him to have any other person whom he charges as the actual offender brought before the Court at the time appointed for hearing the charge; and if, after the commission of the offence has been proved, the occupier or manager of the factory proves to the satisfaction of the Court—

(a) that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act, and

(b) that the said other person committed the offence in question without his knowledge, consent or connivance that other person shall be convicted of the offence and shall be liable to the like fine as if he were the occupier or manager, and the occupier or manager shall be discharged from any liability under this Act."

The Inspector's complaint was received on October 10, 1938. On November 19, Birla availed himself of the provisions of s. 71 (1), Factories Act, and complained against Rana praying that he might be brought before the Court at the hearing of Birla's case. Notice was issued to Rana on some date between November 22 and 27. On February 20, 1939, the Magistrate heard law points. Rana was absent and the defence undertook to produce him. After various adjournments the case again came on for trial on March 28, when Birla was represented under the provisions of s. 205, Criminal P. O., by his mukhtar, Nani Lal Ghosh, who was examined under s. 242 and pleaded not guilty. Inspector Parsons then gave evidence of the commission of the offence and was cross-examined on behalf of Birla. Rana was offered an opportunity to cross-examine the witness but refused. The learned Magistrate then further examined Nani Lal Ghosh under s. 342, Criminal P. O. when he stated:

"I am innocent. Rana was in charge, it is he who committed the offence; I had no knowledge about the matter or gave consent in the matter."

The learned Magistrate held that the offence had been committed. He then started a fresh order-sheet and proceeded with the trial of Rana on the complaint of Birla. Rana on being examined under s. 242, Criminal P. O., pleaded guilty. The learned Advocate for the Crown at that stage contended that in view of the provisions of ss. 60 and 71 (1), Factories Act, Rana could not be convicted nor Birla discharged until Birla had proved the matters set out in cls. (a) and (b) of s. 71 (1), viz., that he had used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, and that Rana had committed the offence without his knowledge, consent or connivance. The Magistrate overruled this plea and refused to allow the learned Advocate for the Crown to adduce evidence that no due diligence had been exercised by the occupier of the factory in connection with these offences.

The learned Advocate for Birla contends that the latter plea does not appear on the record and that although the petition contains a statement to that effect, the petition is not verified by an affidavit. We find from the connected records that the Crown has in some instances put in a petition praying for leave to adduce evidence and we see no reason for disbelieving the statement in the petition that the learned Magistrate said that he would note the plea of the Crown and that it was unnecessary to put in a petition in each case. Rana was convicted on his plea of guilty and fined Rs. 50 and Birla was discharged. The contention on behalf of the Crown is that Birla is the "occupier", and as such, primarily liable if an offence has been committed, and that he can only avoid punishment by proving due diligence and lack of knowledge, &c. as provided by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b), Factories Act. Until he has given such proof to the satisfaction of the Court, he cannot be discharged. In the present instance Birla has not given evidence himself and he has not called evidence on which the learned Magistrate could come to a finding that Birla had proved to his satisfaction the facts required by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b). The words of s. 71, Factories Act, 1934, are identical with the words of s. 42, Factories Act, 1911, and it was held in Government of Bengal v. J. A. Murray (1) where the procedure under s. 42 of the former Act was explained, that, it was incumbent on the manager or occupier to give evidence himself in order to discharge the onus which is upon him when he avails himself of the provisions of the Act which alone grant him exemption from liability. In Government of Bengal v. J. A. Murray (1) the manager Murray gave evidence on oath and was acquitted on his own sworn testimony. The Crown appealed on the ground amongst others, that Murray as an accused could not give evidence. This Court held that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was not irregular and on this point stated as follows:

"The structure of the portion of the section quoted above (i. e., s. 41 (1) of the Act of 1911) indicates that one proceeding is split up into two proceedings and that while the manager or occupier is accused of having committed an offence under the Act, he is also a complainant on his complaint against the other person or persons he has brought in. In the proceeding in which the manager or the occupier is the complainant, he is liable to be cross-examined by the other person or persons who has or have been brought before the Court on his complaint. This, of course, must mean that the manager or occupier qua complainant must give evidence himself. The procedure indicated above is a special one prescribed by the Act and it would appear from an examination of the record in this case that the Magistrate has in no way departed from that procedure. In our opinion, there is no substance in the objection that the manager or occupier who initially is charged with an offence against the Act cannot go into the witness-box and give evidence himself. In the circumstances contemplated in the latter part of the section quoted above, he goes into the witness-box not as an accused in the case originally started against him but in his own right as a complainant on his complaint against the other person or persons whom he has brought in."

As stated by the learned Judge in the judgment quoted—"The procedure is a special one provided by the Act."

The offence is a statutory offence and the Legislature has laid down the procedure to be adopted in ascertaining whether the offence has or has not been committed and the person or persons responsible. The learned Advocate-General has drawn our attention to the words of s. 141, English Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, which, except for a provision as to costs, is almost identical with the words of ss. 71 of the Indian Act. Undoubtedly, the draftsman of the Indian Act took the English section as his model, but apparently he was unmindful at the time of the very considerable difference in the criminal procedure of the two countries, which in England, permits the accused to give evidence on oath. Be that as it may, the procedure to be adopted in the trial of cases under the Factories Act has been laid down by that Act and a Bench of this Court has held that according to that procedure the manager or occupier is not only a competent witness but "qua complainant he must give evidence himself." It is difficult to conceive how otherwise he could satisfy the Court that the "other person committed the offence without his knowledge, consent or connivance." It is certainly not proved by the statements of Nani Lal Ghosh under ss. 242 or 342, Criminal P. O. It is true that s. 342 (3) permits the Court to take into consideration the answers given by the accused. That is is very different to saying that an admission of the offence by one of the accused is proof that the other accused had used due diligence to prevent the offence, or that the offence was committed without his connivance. For the defence, reference has been made to a number of cases to support the contention that the statement by Nani Lal Ghosh may be taken for all purposes as the statement of Birla. Admitting that to be so, the authorities do not assist us in the present inquiry, for they do not contemplate a provision such as that contained in s. 71 (1) requiring the "occupier" to adduce proof. In the case before us the Magistrate had no power to convict Rana or discharge Birla until the proof envisaged by ss. 71 (1) (a) and (b) was before him. No such proof was given and no findings on those matters are recorded.

(1) 56 C 400; 117 Ind. Cas. 673; A I R 1928 Cal. 557; 30 Or. L J 818; 32 O W N 923; Ind. Rul. (1929) Cal. 561.

Mr. N. K. Basu for Birla complains that there should be an appeal by the Crown from the acquittal of his client when the actual offender has been convicted and he argues that the general policy of the law is to proceed against the person actually responsible for the offence. In support of this argument he refers to s. 72 (2), Factories Act, which empowers the Inspector to proceed against the actual offender without first proceeding against the occupier or manager. But s. 71 (2) is by way of exception to the general rule that the person primarily responsible is the manager or occupier. The whole scheme of the Factories Act appears to be to bring pressure on the controlling authority to see that the provisions which the Legislature has made for the safety and welfare of employees are carried out. Section 9 provides for the nomination of a "manager," s. 2 (1) defines "occupier," s. 70 provides for the determination of the occupier in the case of a firm or company, s. 60 provides that if there is any contravention of the Act, the manager and occupier shall each be punished. Clearly, the primary responsibility is laid upon the person in ultimate control and he can only avoid liability by giving the proof required by s. 71; and that section requires proof not only of the actual offender but proof that the controlling authority has not shirked his responsibility. Then and not till then can he be discharged. This Court has already pointed out in Government of Bengal v. J. A. Murray (1) that the offence is an offence created by the statute and that the statute also provides the procedure for determining the offender. That procedure is in many ways different to the procedure contemplated by the Criminal Procedure Code and no doubt that is the reason why the lower Court has failed to appreciate the interpretation of the statute which has already been given in the case to which I have referred. It appears, therefore, desirable once again to set forth the procedure which in our view is contemplated by the Legislature in s. 71 (1), Factories Act, 1934.

The complaint is made in the first instance by the Inspector of Factories against the manager or occupier under s. 60, Factories Act. The manager or occupier is then entitled under s. 71 to complain against the actual offender and if he does so, the actual offender is given notice and brought before the Court and the trial proceeds as against both persons complained against; for, as stated in Government of Bengal v. J. A. Murray (1) at p. 405* "the section contemplates both sets of complainants and accused being before the Court at the same time." The carriage of proceedings is with the original complainant on whom the onus lies of proving that the offence has been committed. Both parties complained against are concerned with the finding on this issue and both are entitled to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses at this stage, and to lead evidence to disprove the charge, but being accused persons they would not be entitled to give evidence themselves. If the prosecution fails to prove the offence both the accused must be acquitted. If the offence is proved, the Court should record an order to that effect and the manager or occupier is guilty under s. 60 of the Act. Section 71, however, affords the manager or occupier an opportunity of escaping liability provided he can give satisfactory proof of the facts required by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b). The onus of proof, however, is now shifted to the manager or occupier and he is entitled to call evidence or to give evidence himself. The actual offender, who is, if I may so name him, the ultimate accused, would be entitled to call evidence, but not to give evidence himself. The difference in procedure being due to the fact that the actual offender occupies the role only of an accused, whereas the occupier or manager at this stage, besides being an accused, has to discharge the onus being an accused, has to discharge the onus of positive proof required by s. 71 (1) (a) and (b), and in all probability he alone is capable of proving certain facts of which proof is thereby required.

In our view the Crown, which has initiated the proceedings, and has throughout retained the carriage of the proceedings, is entitled at this stage to cross-examine the occupier or manager if he gives evidence, and any witnesses called by him in support of his charge, and to call rebutting evidence. The relevant section of the English Act on which the Indian section is based has placed the matter beyond all doubt by the insertion of the following proviso in the English Factories Act, 1937.

"The prosecution shall have the right in any such case to cross-examine the occupier or owner if he gives evidence and any witnesses called by him in support of his charge, and to call rebutting evidence."

It is true that no such proviso appears in the Indian Act but it appears to us to be beyond doubt that such would be the rights of the prosecution in India as well as in England in the procedure contemplated by both the English and the Indian Acts. In the result the appeal of the Legal Remembrancer is allowed, and the Rule in Revision No. 599 of 1939 is made absolute. The conviction of Rana and the discharge of Birla are both set aside. The learned Advocate for Birla has stated that his client pleads guilty and prays that this Court will now deal with the case. The Crown has no objection. We find Birla guilty. He is convicted of the offence and fined Rs. 100 or in default, simple imprisonment for one month. Rana is acquitted and the fine, if paid by him, must be refunded.

Khundkar, J.—I agree.

D. Order accordingly.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Reference No. 34 of 1937

May 30, 1939

DAVIS, J. C. AND TYABJI, J.
COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX,
BOMBAY PRESIDENCY, SIND AND BALUCHISTAN—APPLICANT

versus

KARACHI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

—ASSEESSEE—OPPONENT

Income Tax Act (XI of 1922), ss. 2 (4), 10—Karachi Chamber of Commerce realising measurement fees from its members—Such realisation whether taxable as profits.

Where the members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce provide for themselves certain facilities in trade and pay for these facilities such as a measurer of merchandise, they combine as a Chamber and provide these facilities for themselves as members of that Chamber and when they pay more than is actually necessary for the provision of these services, then the surplus, whether it is handed back or not, is not a profit on trade within the meaning of ss. 2 (4) and 10, Income Tax Act. It is not a profit but it is savings and not taxable income, though interest in these savings would be income liable to taxation. The fact that the public measurer serves also the public or that the members are incorporated as a Chamber under s. 20, Companies Act, does not destroy the mutuality between the Association and its members. Oarissle and Silloth Golf Club v. Smith (6), relied on, Liverpool Corn Trade Association, Ltd. v. Monks (1), distinguished. [p. 314, col. 2]

Before there can be mutuality between an Association and its members, the services must be supplied by the Association to its members as such, services for which the members themselves pay from which payments any surplus is saving and not profits or gains. The nature of the services is not the test. The test is not the purpose of the Association but its nature. If the Association is of the nature of a club and its services are solely for the benefit of its members or, if not solely for the benefit of its members, the services for its members and the costs thereof are clearly separable from its services to non-members and the costs thereof, then there is no profit but merely a surplus or saving; if no, then there is a taxable profit or gain. There is in principle no difference between a club which provides a marker for tennis on payment by the individual club members and a Chamber of Commerce which supplies a measurer of merchandise on payment by its members. Both are employees of the Association provided at the cost of and for the benefit of its members, and if there is a surplus or saving on the year's working, it is not taxable profit or gain. It may be handed back; it may be kept for some future contingency; the test is whether it is the members' money. [p. 325, col. 1.]

Ref. made by the Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Sind and Baluchistan, dated April 3, 1937.

Mr. Partabrai D. Punwani, Advocate-General, for the Applicant.

Mr. D. N. O'Sullivan, for the Opponent.

Davis, J. C.—The learned Commissioner of Income-tax for Bombay and Sind has stated a case under s. 66 (2), Income Tax Act, and has referred to us the question arising in the following terms:

"Are the measurement fees and/or charges realized by the Karachi Chamber of Commerce from its members taxable income in view of the constitution of the said Chamber and/or its Memorandum and Articles of Association?"

The opinion of the learned Commissioner is that such fees are taxable because they are the profits of a business or trade within the meaning of ss. 2 (4) and 10, Income Tax Act, and that the assessee has admitted this by admitting as subject to taxation the fees collected from outsiders; and there is in the opinion of the Commissioner nothing to distinguish these fees from the fees collected from members of the Chamber for whom the Chamber performs the same service of measuring and granting measurement, certificates on merchandise to be shipped from the Port of Karachi. The learned Commissioner relies as an authority principally on the case in Liverpool Corn Trade Association, Ltd. v. Monks (1) distinguishing the well-known case in New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2) as being a case merely of payments into and drawings from a common fund and National Association of Local Government Officers v. Watkins (3) at p. 503, as being a case of an

(1) (1926) 2 K B 110; 95 L J K B 519; 131 L T 736; 10 Tax Cas. 442; 42 T L R 393.

(2) (1889) 14 A C 381; 2 Tax Cas. 460; 59 L J Q B 291.

(3) (1931) 18 Tax Cas. 499 at p. 503.

members for which facilities the members pay themselves; and it matters not that payments are not made in lump sums at one time, but in proportion to the services rendered from time to time. The case of the Liverpool Corn Trade Association is distinguished from this case by the fact that in this case there are no shares and no share-holders and no dividends and reliance is placed particularly upon the case in Carlisle and Silloth Golf Club v. Smith (6) and National Association of Local Government Officers v. Watkins (3) at p. 503*; it is further urged that it makes no difference that the Chamber is incorporated under s. 26, Companies Act, and that in the two cases last named, the Associations were unincorporated because even between a legal entity and its constituent members there may be complete mutuality; and that where, as in this case, the fees for the performances rendered by members and non-members can be easily separable, the complete mutuality which exists between the Chamber and its members is not destroyed. In these class of cases the word "mutual" is a word to conjure with. In Municipal Mutual Insurance, Ltd. v. Hills (5) Rowlatt, J. said:

"Now I do not think that one can make cases on this point turn upon an analysis of the word 'mutual,' a word that is very much abused ... But for the purposes of these decisions, the point is as I have pointed out before, and I think the Solicitor-General adopted what I said, whether there is any profit, that is to say, whether you get more than this, that a (4) (1885) 2 Tax Cas. 100; 55 L J Q B 92; 53 L T 634; 34 W R 233; 50 J P 116; 10 A C 438.

(5) (1932) 16 Tax Cas. 430; 147 L T 62; 48 T L R 301; 42 Ll. L Rep. 173.

(6) (1912) 2 K B 177; 81 L J K B 581.

*Page of (1934) 18 Tax. Cas.—[Ed.]

carrying its share-holders, or if any other trading company by trading with its share-holders even if it is limited to trading with them, makes a profit, that profit belongs to the share-holders in a sense, but it belongs to them qua share-holders. It does not come back to them as purchasers or customers; it comes back to them as share-holders upon their shares. Where all that a company does is to collect, money from a certain number of people, it matters not whether they are called members of the company or participating policy-holders, and apply it for the benefit of those same people, not as share-holders in the company but as the people who subscribed it, then, as I understand Style's case (2) there is no profit. If the people were to do the thing for themselves, there would be no profit, and the fact that they incorporate a legal entity to do it for them makes no difference; there is still no profit. This is not because the entity of the company is to be disregarded; it is because there is no profit, the money being simply collected from those people and handed back to them, not in the character of share-holders, but in the character of those who have paid it. That as I understand, is the effect of the decision in Style's case (2)."

If, therefore, the members of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce provide for themselves certain facilities in trade and pay for these facilities, then it matters not that they are incorporated under s. 26, Companies Act. If they combine as a Chamber and provide these facilities for themselves as members of that Chamber and they pay more than is actually necessary for the provision of these services, then the surplus, whether it is handed back or not, does not appear to me to be a profit on trade within the meaning of ss. 2 (4) and 10, Income Tax Act. It is not a profit but it is savings; interest on these savings would indeed be income liable to taxation, and this is not denied, but the surplus or what is saved is the Chamber's own money, the members' own money paid by them to themselves, though incorporated as a Chamber, for service to be rendered to themselves by themselves though incorporated as a Chamber, not as customers of the Chamber but as members of the Chamber itself. There would be no difficulty, I think, in this interpretation of the assessee's case but for the fact that the office of the Public Measurer serves not only members of the Chamber but members of the public as well. Now, does this destroy the mutual basis of the members dealing with the Chamber? The learned Commissioner is of the opinion that this is fatal to the assessee's case; the assessee argues that the Public Measurer is first the Chamber Measurer; it may be that according to s. 26, Companies Act, they should not perform this service to members of the public, but that does not destroy the mutuality of these services as between the Chamber and its members, the value of which in fees can be easily ascertained and separated from the fees paid by outsiders.

(7) (1927) 1 K B 33; 95 L J K B 990; 135 L T 673; 42 T L R 703; 11 Tax Cas. 790.

*Page of (1927) 1 K. B.—[Ed.]

My own opinion is that in the particular circumstances of this case, this provision of a service to the public is not fatal to the assessee's case, I do not think any importance is to be attached to the fact that the services rendered by the Chamber to its members relate to business or trade. The nature of the services is not the test. A tennis or a golf club may be owned by a company which may have share-holders and may have dividends, but it nevertheless makes a taxable profit. The test, in my opinion, is not the purpose of the Association but its nature. Is it of the nature of a club? Are its services solely for the benefit of its members or, if not solely for the benefit of its members, are the services for its members and the cost thereof clearly separable from its services to non-members and the costs thereof? If yes, then there is no profit but merely a surplus or saving: if no, then there is a taxable profit or gain. There is in principle no difference between a club which provides a marker for tennis on payment by the individual club members and a Chamber of Commerce which supplies a measurer of merchandise on payment by its members. Both are employees of the Association provided at the cost of and for the benefit of its members, and if there is a surplus or saving on the year's working, it is not taxable profit or gain. It may be handed back; it may be kept for some future contingency; the test is whether it is the members' money.

In Thomas v. Evans & Co., Ltd. (7) there was a reserve fund of £200,000. Turning to the facts of this case, there can be no doubt that the Karachi Chamber of Commerce and its members are one and the same. It is true that under s. 26, Companies Act, the Chamber is an incorporated body, a legal entity, but it is made up of its members. Under Art. 1 of the Articles of Association the 'Chamber' means the Karachi Chamber of Commerce incorporated under s. 26, Companies Act, and 'Member' means a member of the Chamber. Its purpose as set out in its Memorandum of Association is to encourage the trade, commerce and manufactures of India and the interests of persons engaged therein and in particular of Sind. The Association, however, is not a Philanthropic Association but an Association of businessmen; its primary purpose is clearly to advance and protect the business interest of its own members and to provide buildings, organizations and services for that purpose. No bonus or dividend is to be paid and on the dissolution of the Association the property is not then to come back to the members, but it is to go to other institutions with like objects. There is nothing in all this incompatible with the assessee's case that here is a Chamber or Association, or even it may be called a club of businessmen associated together, for the purpose of furthering and protecting their own interest. Hence, presumably, the Commissioner's exemption of subscriptions amounting to over Rs. 13,000 from taxation, but these the Commissioner finds are from members only.

The bulk of the income of the Chamber, however, a sum of Rs. 40,573, comes from Measurement Fees which the Commissioner finds as to 29 per cent. and which fact is admitted by the assessee, comes from outsiders and therefore is, in his opinion, as to the whole liable to taxation. It is perhaps unfortunate that the Chamber have given their office of measurer the title of Public Measurer. Under bye-law No. 13 a Public Measurer is to be appointed under the authority of the Chamber to measure all merchandise, freight on which is ordinarily payable on measurement. Such measurement shall be taken

"II. No measurements shall be good except such as are taken by a Chamber Measurer, and with instruments bearing the stamp of the Chamber of Commerce.

* * * * *

VIII. Certificates of measurement shall be issued to shipper and-or to ship agents in such form and in such manner as the Committee for the time being shall, from time to time, approve.

IX. A fee, the amount of which shall in no case exceed one anna per bale, case or package, but which may be regulated by the Chamber from time to time, shall be levied on all merchandise measured by the Public Measurer.

X. No merchandise shall be measured without the production of the Custom House Pass or a requisition in writing by the Exporter which must detail name of shippers, name of vessel, number and marks of bales, case or packages, and destination and bearing the endorsement of the Measurement Fee Clerk to the effect that the fee has been paid. Members of the Chamber shall be permitted to run a monthly account provided they give an undertaking in writing to pay such monthly accounts on presentation."

XIV. The Measurer shall give a certificate of measurement and furnish the Shipper with a copy thereof. The certificate shall state: Name of shipper, name of vessel, number and marks of bales, cases or packages, destination, dimensions, date, time and place of measurement.

XVI. In cases of import cargo for which measurement is required, it shall be incumbent upon the party requiring such measurement to advise the Public Measurer when the cargo is ready for measurement, to send a representative, with transport for the Measurer and the callipers, to the Public Measurer's office, and actually to conduct the Measurer to the place where the cargo awaiting measurement lies."

XVIII. The salaries of the Measurers and all other expenses connected with this scheme of measurement shall be paid by the Chamber from the Fee Fund raised under these rules.

XIX. All matters pertaining to measurements, as defined above including the appointment of the Measurer, the fixing of fees, the payment of the same, and the doing of all things necessary for a proper and economical working of the scheme, shall be placed in the charge of the Committee of the Chamber."

Under bye-law No. 14—Rules for the weighment of bag cargo and drawing samples:

"1. The Chamber Measurer, if required, shall weigh bag cargo and other goods and issue certificates of such weights, all labour and other expenses in connection with such weighment to be borne by the applicant. The charge for weighing 2 per cent. of bags to be Rs. 30 for each thousand tons or part thereof and such samples shall be sealed with the Chamber seal."

Now, the learned Commissioner relies by analogy on the case of a railway whose profits are nonetheless profits and taxable as such because they come in part from share-holders, and, indeed, if it were clear that the members of the Chamber had recourse to the Public Measurer on precisely the same footing as members of the public, I should find that the Chamber were giving to their members services similar to those supplied by a railway company to its ticket-holders who are also share-holders, for it appears to me that before there can be mutuality between an association and its members, the services must be supplied by the Association to its members as such services for which the members themselves pay, from which payments any surplus is saving and not profits or gains. But looking to the realities of the case before us, it appears to me impossible to hold that members of the Chamber do not have recourse to the Public Measurer, despite his name, as members of the Association, having recourse to an officer of the Association for whom they themselves pay. If members, instead of paying for each act of measurement paid an extra subscription, of say, Rs. 100 each, irrespective of the services rendered to each particular member, it appears to me it would be difficult to say that their subscriptions were not exempt from taxation. It matters little, I think, that such payments are not made in a lump sum in advance and are proportionate to the services rendered. If the Chamber had kept two measurers, one for its members supported by the members' subscriptions, and one for the public, it would not have been difficult to show that the members' subscriptions which paid for the Members' Measurer as distinct from the Public Measurer, were exempt from taxation; it makes in practice, I think, no difference if the payments for the service of the measurers rendered to members and to non-members can be separated in the accounts. Though in r. 1 of bye-law No. 13 the somewhat grandiloquent title of "Public Measurer" is used, in r. 2 the more homely and private title of Chamber Measurer is used. Primarily, I think the Measurer is a Chamber Measurer but for the Chamber and its members there would be no Measurer. The great bulk of the work done is done for the members, and I can see in essence no difference between this case and the case in Carlisle and Silloth Golf Club v. Evans Co., Ltd. (6). I think, therefore, the answer to the question referred to us should be in the negative. The assessee is entitled to his costs including the fee of Rs. 100.

Tyabji, J.—I concur.

D. Answer in negative.

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 289 of 1934

March 22, 1938

VARADACHARIAR AND PANDRANG ROW, JJ.

A. SUBRAMANIA IYER—APPELLANT

versus

K. S. VENKATARAMA IYER AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), ss. 170, 171

172, 174, 178, 30, 38, 40—Board of Revenue—Powers of revision—S. 172, scope of—Whether gives power to Board to set right proceedings before Revenue Officer, before procedure under s. 170 has been gone through—Whether gives powers of revision suo motu—Steps contemplated by ss. 30, 38 and 40, if can be taken in course of settlement proceedings.

Section 172 of the Madras Estates Land Act, cannot be interpreted as giving powers of revision to the Board only after the re-publication under s. 170, cl. 3, had been made. All that s. 172 does is to fix the outer limit of time within which the powers of revision may be exercised. This does not necessarily imply that the Board has no power of interference before the re-publication. Its powers as an appellate authority under s. 171 can certainly be invoked and exercised independently of the question of confirmation by the Collector or re-publication under s. 170, cl. 3; under the provisions of s. 174 the orders passed under s. 171 are directed to be incorporated in the settlement record already published under s. 170 (3). Section 172 gives the Board powers of revision both suo motu and on the application of parties. Where the Board is satisfied that the proceedings before the Revenue Officer require to be set right, it need not wait till after the procedure under s. 170 has been gone through and can interfere at an earlier stage and give necessary directions. There is no warrant for saying that the Board has no jurisdiction to exercise its revisional powers till after the settlement record has been re-published after confirmation by the Collector. Section 172 only contemplates the Board directing a revision by the subordinate authority and not the fixing of rent by the Revenue Board itself. If, on the facts of any particular case, what the Board does in addition to what is contemplated by s. 172 amounts to little more than a mere arithmetical calculation or something of that kind, there is nothing in the nature of excess of jurisdiction in the exercise of such powers. Where, on the other hand, the Board proceeds to do something which is really more than a ministerial or arithmetical step and which if it had been directed to be done by the Revenue Officer would have involved a consideration of a number of matters which are not and cannot be before the Board at the time of passing the order, so much of the Board's order as goes beyond what is contemplated by s. 172 is done without jurisdiction. [p. 329, col. 2.]

By the order the Board of Revenue fixed the landlord's share at eighty-seven kalams per veli instead of sixty-five kalams fixed by the Collector and directed conversion into cash at certain average price per kalam subject to a deduction of fifteen per cent. on account of the distance of the village from the nearest town market. The Sub-Collector was asked to work out money rents on the above basis:

Held, that what the Board did in the matter of fixing cash rent was not within the powers conferred upon it by s. 172. If it had thought that it would be proper to fix rents on a cash basis, it must have sent the papers back to the Revenue Officer to make a re-settlement on that basis and not merely given him a direction to carry out a simple process of conversion of paddy rent into money rent at a price fixed by the Board itself. 164 Ind. Cas. 398 (1), Sappani Asari v. Collector of Coimbatore (2) and 98 Ind. Cas. 334 (3), referred to.

There is nothing in the scheme of Chap. XI, Madras Estates Land Act to restrict the authorities settling the rent to the system of payment theretofore in vogue. The provision in s. 178 against the commencement or continuation of proceedings under ss. 30, 38 and 40 of the Act during the pendency of settlement proceedings clearly implies the possibility that what could be done under these three sections might be done as part of the settlement proceedings. 178 Ind. Cas. 416 (4), relied on. [p. 329, col. 1.]

A. against the decree of the Sub-Judge Kumbakonam, in O. S. No. 1 of 1933.

Messrs. K. S. Krishnaswami Ayyangar and S. Ramachandra Ayyar, for the Appellant.

Mr. T. R. Venkatarama Sastri for Mr. M. S. Venkatarama Ayyar, for the Respondents.

Varadachariar, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit instituted by the tenants of an inam village in the Tanjore District, for a declaration that the entry in the Record of Rights, published in the village on June 22, 1932, with reference to the rent payable by the ryots in respect of their holdings cannot be enforced. This publication was made in pursuance of a notice issued by the Sub-Collector of Kumbakonam on June 10, 1932 (Ex. F) and that notice was given in pursuance of an order of the Board of Revenue (Ex. D), dated May 6, 1932. It is this order of the Board of Revenue that is really challenged in the plaint. The order was passed by the Board in the course of proceedings taken under Chap. XI, Madras Estates Land Act, on an application made by the ryots for the preparation of a Record of Rights and for the settlement of rents in the village. The action is not one under s. 173 of the Act and it is not based on any of the grounds specified in cl. 3 of that section. As pointed out in Zamindar of Khalikote v. Beero Pollai (1) at p. 848 the suit is one under the general law and is based on the ground that in passing the order, Ex. D, the Revenue Board acted without jurisdiction and that in settling the rents and proclaiming the same in pursuance of that order, the Sub-Collector was not acting as the Revenue Officer exercising his powers under the Act, but merely as the mouth-piece of the Revenue Board: cf. Sappani Asari v. Collector of Coimbatore (2) and Mahabunnessa Bibi v. Secretary of State (3).

The learned Subordinate Judge made a declaration to the effect that the order of the Sub-Collector, dated June 10, 1932,

(1) 59 M 825 at p. 848; 164 Ind. Cas. 398; A I R 1938 Mad. 531; 71 M L J 118; 44 L W 37; (1936) M W N 705; 9 R M 113 (F B).

(2) 26 M 742; 12 M L J 417.

(3) 53 Q 561; 98 Ind. Cas. 334; A I R 1926 Cal. 1064.

directing the publication of the Record of Rights incorporating the settlement of rent made by the Board of Revenue in its order, dated May 6, 1932, is ultra vires and made without jurisdiction. It is against this decree that one of the landholders has preferred this appeal making the ryots and the other landholders respondents. Objection has been taken to the form of the decree as not corresponding to the prayer in the plaint; but it is much more satisfactory to deal with the real points in controversy between the parties and the objection to the form of the decree is not of much significance. To bring out the grounds on which the validity of the Revenue Board's order has been attacked, it is necessary very briefly to narrate the history of the settlement proceedings. The Sub-Collector of Kumbakonam (who acted as the "Revenue Officer" in this case) passed an order on June 28, 1930, in the following terms:

"Fifty *kalam*s of paddy for one veli of wet land seem to be fair and equitable rent for the village... I therefore declare that a rent of fifty *kalam*s for one veli of wet land may be fixed."

According to the pre-existing rights of the parties, based on the pattas then in force, the landholders claimed that they were entitled to rent at a much higher rate. They accordingly preferred objections to this order of the Revenue Officer under s. 169; and when dealing with the objections, the then Sub-Collector fixed sixty-five *kalam*s per veli of wet land as a fair and equitable rent. This rent was fixed as payable not merely when a single crop was grown but also for both crops together when two crops were grown. The matter went up before the Collector of Tanjore as the "confirming authority." He agreed with the Revenue Officer so far as the fixing of sixty-five *kalam*s per veli was concerned, but he added that the ryot will be liable to pay additional rent for thaladi or second crop cultivation. In para. 11 of his order, he directed the Sub-Collector to complete the rent roll and revise it in accordance with the Sub-Collector's conclusions and the observations contained in the order of the Collector and to submit it for final confirmation. This order of the Collector was passed on August 17, 1931.

It appears from the pleadings that some appeals had been preferred to the Board of Revenue against the Revenue Officer's order but in all probability the appeals were preferred too late. However, there were also three revision petitions to the Board, two by the landholders in October, 1931, and one by some of the ryots in November 1931. When these revision petitions came on before the Board on February 19, 1932, a suggestion was thrown out that the rents might be settled in cash and both parties were asked to show cause at the adjourned hearing why cash rents should not be fixed. The petitions came on finally before Mr. (now Sir Charles) Souter on May 6, 1932. By the order then passed, the Board fixed the landlord's share at eighty-seven *kalam*s per veli instead of sixty-five *kalam*s fixed by the Collector, the main reason being that the proportion of sixty and forty in which according to the custom of the village the crop was divisible between the landholder and the ryot should be worked with reference to the gross yield and not after allowing a deduction for expenses of cultivation. The order next proceeded to deal with the question whether the rent should not be fixed in cash; and holding that that was the proper thing to do, it directed conversion into cash at the average price of Rs. 2-15-0 per kalam (as reported by the Collector) subject to a deduction of fifteen per cent. on account of the distance of the village from the nearest town market. The Sub-Collector was asked to work out money rents on the above basis.

The validity of this order has been challenged in the plaint on several grounds. Three grounds in particular have been pressed before us: (i) that the order is not one passed under s. 172, Estates Land Act, and that if it was intended to be one under s. 172, the Board had no power to interfere in revision at that stage; (ii) that in proceedings under Chap. XI the Board had no power to fix a money rent in respect of a village where only rent in kind had hitherto been in vogue, and (iii) that the Board of Revenue could even under s. 172 only direct a revision and not itself fix the rent. It is unnecessary to refer in detail to the judgment of the lower Court and the views expressed in that judgment on the above points. There has undoubtedly been some uncertainty and conflict of judicial opinion on the interpretation of some of the relevant sections of the Act and the learned Subordinate Judge when he pronounced judgment had not before him the later decision of this Court in Zemindar of Khalikote v. Beero Pollai (1).

Out of the three objections above referred to, we may state that we do not see much force in the first or in the second. It is true that at the time the order of the Board was passed, the Revenue Officer had not completed the settlement in accordance with the directions of the confirming authority nor had the re-publication under cl. 3 of s. 170 been made. But we are not prepared to interpret s. 172 of the Act as giving powers of revision to the Board only after the re-publication under s. 170, cl. 3 had been made. All that s. 172 does is to fix the outer limit of time within which the powers of revision may be exercised, namely "at any time within two years from the date...of re-publication under sub-s. (3) of s. 170".

This does not necessarily imply that the Board has no power of interference before the re-publication. Its powers as an appellate authority under s. 171 can certainly be invoked and exercised independently of the question of confirmation by the Collector or republication under s. 170, cl. 3; under the provisions of s. 174 the orders passed under s. 171 are directed to be incorporated in the settlement record already published under s. 170 (3). Section 172 gives the Board powers of revision both suo motu and on the application of parties. We see nothing either in the language of the section or in the reason of the thing to justify the view that even where the Board is satisfied that the proceedings before the Revenue Officer require to be set right, it must wait till after the procedure under s. 170 has been gone through and cannot interfere at an earlier stage and give necessary directions. It may often be convenient and help to save time to give the directions at the proper stage instead of waiting for the formal completion of the settlement records. Whether, in any particular case, the Board will find it more convenient to adopt the one course or the other is a different matter: but it seems to us that there is no warrant for saying that the Board has no jurisdiction to exercise its revisional powers till after the settlement record has been re-published after confirmation by the Collector.

Similarly, it seems to us that there is nothing in the scheme of Chap. XI to restrict the authorities settling the rent to the system of payment theretofore in vogue. Circumstances are conceivable in which the settlement of a fair and equitable rent can be better accomplished by fixing a rent in money. The provision in s. 178 against the commencement or continuation of proceedings under ss. 30, 38 and 40 of the Act during the pendency of settlement proceedings clearly implies the possibility that what could be done under these three sections might be done as part of the settlement proceedings. Here again it is one thing to say that the Settlement Officer is not bound to carry out the duties imposed upon the Collector under ss. 30, 38 and 40 in independent proceedings, but a different thing to say that the Settlement Officer has no power to do such things even when he thinks it necessary to adopt that course in order to effect a satisfactory settlement of rent. The decision in Ryots of Garabandha, etc. villages v. Zemindar of Parlakimedi (4) and r. 22 of the rules framed by the Local Govt. under the Act clearly assume that in the course of the settlement proceedings steps like those contemplated by ss. 30, 38 and 40 of the Act might be taken.

It remains to deal with the third ground of objection, namely that s. 172 only contemplates the Board directing a revision by the subordinate authority and not the fixing of rent by the Revenue Board itself. That this is the appropriate construction of s. 172 was laid down in Zemindar of Khalikote v. Beero Pollai (1), following Zamindarini of Mandasa v. Ryots of Mandasa Zamindari (5) but it was also laid down in those cases that in certain circumstances a procedure which goes further than merely direct a revision by a subordinate authority might not amount to anything more than an "irregularity". Whether what has happened in any particular case must be regarded as only an irregularity or as something done without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction will depend upon the circumstances of each case. If on the fact of any particular case, what the Board did in addition to what is contemplated by s. 172 amounted to little more than a mere arithmetical calculation or something of that kind, it might well be held that though it was unnecessary there was nothing in the nature of excess of jurisdiction in the exercise of such powers. Where, on the other hand, the Board has proceeded to do something which is really more than a ministerial or arithmetical step and which if it had been directed to be done by the

(4) I L R (1933) Mad. 858; 178 Ind. Cas. 416; A I R 1933 Mad. 381; (1938) 1 M L J 68; 47 L W 181; (1938) M W N 496; 11 R M 451.

(5) 56 M 579; 148 Ind. Cas. 698; A I R 1934 Mad. 231; 65 M L J 423; (1933) M W N 792; 38 L W 353; 6 R M 513.

Revenue Officer would have involved a consideration of a number of matters which were not and could not have been before the Board at the time that it passed such order, it will only be reasonable to hold that so much of the Board's order as goes beyond what is contemplated by s. 172 is done without jurisdiction. Dealing with the order of the Board in the present case in the light of this test, we are of opinion that the Board acted without jurisdiction in so far as it fixed money rents on the basis of a conversion rate of Rs. 2-15-0 per kalam subject to a deduction of 15 per cent. for cartage, etc., charges.

It is a matter of some significance in this case that at an early stage in the proceedings when the matter was before the Revenue Divisional Officer, the landlord opposed the proposal to fix the rent in cash : see Ex. G. para. 2 (b). From that stage till the matter came up before the Board of Revenue, no reference whatever was made to this question of cash rent and the whole procedure adopted by the Revenue Officer and by the confirming authority proceeded on the basis that the rent was to be fixed in kind. The data with reference to which settlement of rent in cash could be made were therefore never investigated and collected. It is true that when the matter was before the Board the parties were given an opportunity to show cause why cash rents should not be fixed ; we are informed that at that stage the ryots objected to the fixing of cash rents. The matter seems to have been argued only as a point of law and the Board of Revenue, so far as one can judge from the terms of Ex. D, seems to have been of the opinion that a settlement of rent under Chap. XI can be only on a cash basis. We are not sure that Chap. XI can be so restricted ; but we should not have thought fit to interfere with the Board's order merely on the ground of this error if, after deciding that the settlement should be on a cash basis, the Board had sent the case back to the Revenue Officer to settle rents on a cash basis after making the necessary investigation. As we have already observed, this is the procedure contemplated by s. 172. The Board seems to have assumed that a mere conversion of the paddy rate fixed by it into money on the basis of the average price of the last ten years would amount to a settlement of rent on a cash basis. With all respect, we do not think that that is what was contemplated by the Legislature as the settlement of rent in cash. If it had at all been present to the mind of the Revenue Officer that the rent payable by the ryots should be fixed in cash, he would have investigated a number of matters relevant to that question. Even in proceedings under s. 40, the average of the last ten years excluding famine years is only one of the factors to be taken into account ; and in proceedings for settlement of rent it must a fortiori be true that the average price of the preceding ten years is not the only factor to be considered. In these circumstances, we are unable to hold that what the Board did in the present case in the matter of fixing cash rent is within the powers conferred upon it by s. 172. If it had thought that it would be proper to fix rents on a cash basis, it must have sent the papers back to the Revenue Officer to make a resettlement on that basis and not merely given him a direction to carry out a simple process of conversion of paddy rent into money rent at a price fixed by the Board itself. We, however, see no objection to the rest of the Board's order on any ground of jurisdiction.

The result is that this appeal must be allowed in part. In modification of the lower Court's decree the order of the Board and the consequent settlement of rent by the Sub-Collector will be declared ultra vires only in so far as they related to the conversion of the paddy rent fixed by the Board into money rent. In the circumstances we direct the parties to bear their respective costs in the appeal.

N.-S.

Appeal partly allowed.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Application No. 3 of 1937

November 7, 1939

RADHA KRISHNA, J.

THAKUR PRASAD SAKSENA AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANT—APPLICANTS

versus

FIRM SADIQ HUSAIN-MEHDI HUSAIN—

PLAINTIFFS—OPPOSITE PARTY

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, r. 8—Suit against unregistered body through one of its members only—Procedure under O. I, r. 8, not followed and decrees passed against that body—Trial held void and illegal.

Where a suit is brought on behalf of or against an association or an unregistered body, then no one member thereof can alone sue or be sued. The suit must be brought by or against all the members thereof. In order that a decree passed in a suit against an unregistered body should be binding, the procedure laid down by O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. C., must be followed. Order I, r. 8 (1) and (2) lays down the conditions upon which a representative suit can be entertained and proceeded with and if the procedure laid down by that rule is not followed, then the result of the suit has no binding effect on those who are not on the record. Baiju Lal Rarbatia v. Bulak Lal Pathak (1), Srinivasa Chariar v. Raghava Chariar (2) and 65 Ind. Cas 259 (3), relied on. [p. 332, col. 1.]

The objection that the procedure under O. I, r. 8, Civil P. O., was not followed, in a suit brought against an association through one of its members only, is not an objection as to non-joinder or misjoinder of parties. The prejudice is obvious in such a case where all the members of an association have been made bound by the decree although they were never either parties to the suit or properly represented by some one else. 136 Ind. Cas. 241 (4) and 125 Ind. Cas. 299 (5), distinguished. [p. 332, col. 2; p. 333, col. 1.]

A suit was brought against All India National Congress which is not a registered body, describing the defendant as All India Congress through one B, Secretary of the exhibition, and a decree was passed against the All India National Congress without carrying into effect the procedure laid down by O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O., to secure the representation of all the members thereof :

Held, that the procedure under O. I, r. 8, not having been followed, the defect in such a case was not mere irregularity but went to the root of the case and the trial was wholly void and illegal and the decree passed against the All India National Congress could not be sustained;

Held, also that as B was not impleaded in his personal capacity and no relief against him personally was claimed, it was not open to the Chief Court to convert the decree passed by the Court below against the All India National Congress into a decree against B personally. [p. 334, col. 1.]

App. for revision of the order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Lucknow, dated October 10, 1936.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Applicants.

Messrs. Ghulam Hasan and S. N. Rafi, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.— This is the defendants' application under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act against the decree passed against them by Saiyid Shaukat Husain, Judge, Court of Small Causes, Lucknow.

The plaintiff opposite-party is described in the plaint as "Firm Sadiq Husain and Mehdi Husain, through Sadiq Husain, son of Husain Ali, proprietor of the firm, 50, Old Nakkhas, City Lucknow." It has been found by the Court below that the firm is not a proper firm but is only described as such and that Sadiq Husain is the sole proprietor of the business. This finding is no longer in dispute.

The facts are that the plaintiff sued the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 for recovery of a sum of Rs. 982-8-0 as hire for the use of 50 tents and 138 kanas alleged to have been taken on hire by them from the plaintiff for the use during the last Congress Session held at Lucknow. The defendant

No. 1 was described in the suit as below :

"All India Congress, through Babu Thakur Prasad Sakseena, Secretary, Swadeshi Exhibition, son of not known, Kaisth, Tirminiganj, City Lucknow."

The Court below decreed the suit against both the defendants holding that it was quite satisfactorily proved that the plaintiff supplied the tents and kanas to the defendants as alleged by him. In the decree also the defendant No. 1 is described as in the plaint.

Thakur Prasad who is described as the Secretary of the Swadeshi Exhibition in the plaint, and Ajudhia Prasad, defendant No. 2, have come up in revision to this Court against the said decree.

On behalf of the applicants their learned Counsel has contended that the suit against the "All India Congress" was not properly framed and could not be decreed against that body as represented by the applicants. Further, it was argued that the finding of the Court below upon the merits of the case was based upon a misreading and misunderstanding of the evidence produced by the defendants and was thus liable to be set aside as perverse.

On behalf of the opposite-party it has been contended that the first point was not raised in the trial Court and no prejudice having resulted to the defendants, the argument should not be entertained in this Court and that the non-observance of the provision of O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O., was a mere irregularity and the decree passed by the Court below cannot be set aside. It was further argued that the decree against the defendant No. 1 should at any rate be maintained.

I have heard the learned Counsel for the parties at great length.

There is no evidence in the case that the All India National Congress which was intended to be sued is a registered body. It consists of numerous members and is a fluctuating body of persons subscribing to the creed of the All India National Congress. Further, there can be no doubt that the intention of the plaintiff was to sue the All India National Congress as a body and not Thakur Prasad in his personal capacity. I have read the plaint carefully. In para. 1 it is stated that Thakur Prasad, Secretary, All India Congress Swadeshi Exhibition, was authorised to act on behalf of the Congress. In para. 4 it is alleged that the plaintiff supplied the goods on April 8, 1936, in pursuance of the order of the Secretary. In para. 8 relief is claimed by the plaintiff against the defendants who are described in the beginning of the plaint. The position seems to have been maintained at the trial in the lower Court and there is no doubt that the lower Court understood the suit to be not against Thakur Prasad personally. In the proceedings the presence of defendant No. 1 is noted as "through Thakur Prasad". In the judgment also Thakur Prasad, who was examined as D. W. No. 1, is described as the "defendant No. 1's representative." There is no doubt, therefore, that the suit as framed was against the All India National Congress, although full description thereof was not given in the plaint, and that Thakur Prasad was not sued in his personal capacity. It is well-settled that where a suit is brought on behalf of or against an association or an unregistered body, then no one member thereof can alone sue or be sued. The suit must be brought by or against all the members thereof. The contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant is that in the present case all the members of the Indian National Congress not being parties, the suit could not proceed against it unless a representative suit was brought and unless permission of the Court was given to one or more members of the All India National Congress to defend the suit. A decree as passed by the Court below would not be binding on any member of the Indian National Congress and in order that it should be binding, the procedure laid down by O. I. r. 8. of the Civil P. O., should have been followed. In India legislation in respect of representative suits was first enacted by s. 30 of the Civil P. O. of 1877, which is now found in O. I. r. 8, of the Civil P. O. (1908). The effect of the enactment is that all persons interested in a suit, if the provisions of the statute relating to the representative suits are followed, are deemed to be the parties to the suit and bound by the result thereof. The statutory provision in question, in my opinion, was enacted not only in the interests of the numerous persons belonging to the same body and having the same interest in the suit but also to avoid the inconvenience of impleading all the persons as parties to the suit. When permission is given to one or more persons belonging to an Association to bring or defend the suit, the Court is required to issue a notice of such suit to all members thereof either by personal service or, where from the number of persons or any other cause such service is not reasonably practicable, by public advertisement. The order also provides that any person on whose behalf or for whose benefit a suit is instituted or defended under sub-r. (1) of r. 8 may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit. Order I, r. 8 (1) and (2) lays down in my opinion the conditions upon which a representative suit can be entertained and proceeded with and if the procedure laid down by that rule is not followed then the result of the suit has no binding effect on those who are not on the record. This view of mine is fully supported by the decisions in Baiju Lal Parbatia v. Bulak Lal Pathuk (I. L. R. 24 Cal. 385) (1), Srinivasa Chariar v. Raghava Chariar (I. L. R. 23 Mad 28) (2), Shiam Lal v. Musammat Lalli and others (I. L. R. 44 Allahabad 231, Full Bench) (3).

In Shiam Lal v. Musammat Lalli, I. L. R. 44 Allahabad 231 (Full Bench) (3) it has been held that :

"Order I, r. 8, of the Civil P. O. (1908) requires that when a plaintiff brings a suit in a representative capacity, he must first obtain the leave of the Court to bring such a suit, and when the leave is granted, the Court shall issue notice that the suit has been instituted. The provisions of the section as to the issue of notice are peremptory and the Court is bound to issue notice as required by the rule."

The same considerations apply to a suit where defendants are sued in a representative capacity. In my opinion it was imperative for the Court below to consider whether permission could be granted to Thakur Prasad to represent all the members of the All India National Congress and then to publish a notice of the institution of such a suit by public advertisement. The procedure of the Court below in the trial of the case was not in accordance with law and the decree as passed by it cannot be allowed to stand.

There is no force in the contention of the opposite party that no prejudice has resulted to the defendants and the decree should not be set aside on account of any irregularity not affecting the merits of the case for the simple reason that they were neither actually parties to the suit nor represented in it according to law.

It has further been contended that no objection as to non-joinder or misjoinder should be raised at this late stage. In my opinion the objection in the present case is not an objection as to non-joinder or misjoinder of parties. In my opinion prejudice is obvious in a case like the present where all the members of an Association have been made bound by the decree although they were never either parties to the suit or properly represented by some one else. It is an elementary principle of law that no one can be made liable by a decree or order unless he was a party to that suit or proceeding in which the decree or order was passed. My attention has been drawn to s. 99 and O. I, r. 3, Civil P. O. Those provisions do not lend any support to the contention that persons not parties to the suit must be held bound by the decree. Strong reliance has been placed upon two decisions, one of this Court reported in Dilawar Husain v. Subhan Khan (8 O. W. N., 722) (4) and the other of the Calcutta High Court reported in Hriday Nath Roy v. Akhil Chandra Roy (A. I. R. 1929 Calcutta 445) (5). None of these cases seems to have any application to the facts of the present case. The objection as to procedure under O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O. not having been followed was raised not on behalf of the persons sought to be represented or by the Association but by the defendants who were sued in their individual capacity.

(1) 24 O 385.

(2) 23 M 28; 7 M L J 281.

(3) 44 A 231; 65 Ind. Cas. 259; 20 A L J 73; A I R 1922 All. 16 (F B).

In Dilawar Husain's case (8 O. W. N., 722) (4) one Subhan Khan, alleging himself to be the mutwalli of a certain piece of waqf property consisting of a Muhammadan grave-yard and a mosque in Mohalla Narahi in the city of Lucknow, sued the defendants for recovery of possession of that portion of the said grave-yard on which the defendant had a shop on the allegation that that defendant had executed a deed of gift of the site of the shop in favour of his son and this he had no right to do. The finding that the land in question was waqf was not contested in the Chief Court which found with regard to the title set up by the appellant, that the appellant had never asserted a hostile title in him as against the plaintiff or the rest of the Muhammadan community and had failed to establish adverse possession. The defendant-appellant had further raised the plea that the suit was not maintainable because the plaintiff was not the mutwalli of the waqf and had not obtained permission of the Court under O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O. to represent and prosecute the suit for the other members of the Muhammadan community. It was held that Subhan Khan was validly appointed mutwalli of the waqf property and this finding was upheld by the Chief Court. On this finding the question whether Subhan Khan was precluded from instituting the suit because he had not obtained the permission of the Court became immaterial. The learned Judges, however, observed that the objection was not fatal to the plaintiff's case in view of the clear terms of s. 99 of the Civil P. O. and that no decree could be reversed or modified on account of any error, defect, or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. The important point to be noticed about this decision is that the objection was raised by the defendants, who were all properly parties to the case and the objection raised the question that members other than Subhan Khan of the Muhammadan community were not properly represented in the suit. It is clear that so far as the defendants-appellants were concerned they were not prejudiced in their defence and the failure to follow the provisions of O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O. reduced itself to a mere irregularity so far as the defendants-appellants were concerned. Subhan Khan was already the plaintiff in the suit, and so far as the defence of the defendants-appellants was concerned what prejudice could result to them by not following the produced laid down by O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O. is difficult to say.

In the present case the decree has been passed against the All India National Congress without carrying into effect the procedure laid down by O. I, r. 8 of the Civil P. O. to secure the representation of all the members thereof. The provisions of O. I, r. 8 not having been followed, no member other than Thakur Prasad of the All India National Congress can be deemed to be parties of the case. However, the decree passed in the Court below is a decree against all the members of the All India National Congress which means that there is a decree against persons who were never actual parties to the suit and who could not be held to be represented in the suit otherwise. In my opinion the defect in such a case is not a mere irregularity but goes to the root of the case. No decree can be passed against a person who is not a party to the case and the objection in this case is, therefore, to the effect that he was not a party to the suit, and if that objection is correct, then the trial is wholly void and illegal.

The case reported in Hriday Nath Roy v. Akhil Chandra Roy and others (A. I. R. 1929 Calcutta, 445) (5) is a case which falls in a line with Dilawar Husain v. Subhan Khan

(4) 8 O W N 722; 136 Ind. Cas. 241; A I R 1931 Oudh 375; Ind. Rul. (1933) Oudh 97.

(5) A I R 1929 Cal. 445; 125 Ind. Cas. 299; 49 O L J 357; Ind. Rul. (1930) Cal. 523.

(8 O. W. N., 722) (4) and needs no further comment. I, therefore, hold that the procedure followed by the Court below was entirely illegal and the decree passed in the suit against the All India National Congress cannot be sustained in law.

The learned Counsel for the applicants further argued that the finding of the Court below was vitiated in law inasmuch as it was based upon a misreading and misunderstanding of the evidence produced in defence. In view of my decision on the previous point, it would be undesirable on my part to express any opinion on this contention.

The learned Counsel for the opposite-party argued that the decree passed by the Court below should be maintained against Thakur Prasad personally. I have shown above that Thakur Prasad was not impleaded in his personal capacity and no relief against him personally was claimed and in that case it is not open to me to convert the decree passed by the Court below against the All India National Congress into a decree against Thakur Prasad personally. I cannot accede to this argument on behalf of the plaintiff opposite-party.

In view of my finding on the first question, the decree passed by the Court below against both the applicants is set aside. The case is sent back to the trial Court with a direction to enter it at its original number in the register of suits and to dispose of it in accordance with law. As regards costs in view of the fact that the plea which has succeeded in this Court was not raised in the trial Court, I order that parties will bear their own costs of this application. The costs of the trial Court already incurred and those to be incurred hereafter will be within the discretion of the trial Court.

s.

Order accordingly.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 710 of 1936

January 13, 1939

BENNET AND VERMA, JJ.

KANHAI SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

BASDEO SAHAI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

AND OTHERS—Pro forma PLAINTIFFS—

RESPONDENTS

Religious endowment—Creation of—Existence of image or idol, if necessary—Essentials to be shown—Offerings to Brahmin residing there, effect of—

Dedication to demon, effect of—Place, attachment of, in execution—Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 18—Villagers accustomed to making offerings for long time at particular "Isthan" situated in a house to rid their cattle of diseases—If a customary easement.

There need not be some image or idol or some dedication in order that the particular "Than" should be considered to be a religious place where the public had a right of worship. No particular act is necessary to signify a dedication. It is enough if the public have been going there and making offerings. The mere fact that these offerings were made to a Brahmin family does not show that it was a case of Brahmin family "carving out a livelihood from these offerings". Such offerings are always handed over to Brahmin Pujaris and the fact that the Pujaris take the offerings does not in any way detract from the right of the persons who make the offerings to continue to do so. Similarly the fact that the place is not connected with a deity but with a demon does not make any difference. The portion of the house in which the "Isthan" is situated is not, therefore, liable to sale in execution of decree. [p. 335, col. 2.]

Where residents of village have been accustomed for a long period of time to make offerings when their cattle are afflicted by disease and those offerings are made at a particular Isthan in a particular room, it amounts to a customary easement within the meaning of s. 18, Easements Act giving the villagers right to continue to make the offering. 180 Ind. Cas. 233 (1), relied on.

S. A. from the decision of the Additional Sub-Judge, Aligarh, dated February 19, 1936.

Mr. B. Malik, for the Appellants.

Mr. K. N. Malaviya, for the Respondents.

Bennet, J.—This is a second appeal by six plaintiffs against a decree of the lower Appellate Court dismissing their suit and the prayer is that the decree of the trial Court by which their suit was partly allowed should be restored. The plaintiffs consist of five Ahirs and one Gaderia, that is, they are all persons whose livelihood is gained by keeping cattle. The plaintiffs asked for a declaration that a certain house and enclosure in the village were not saleable in execution of decree No. 9 of 1933 and that the sale was null and void. The ground for the declaration was that the house and enclosure were appurtenant to the "Than" or "Isthan" of a village deity named Mahikhasur where the plaintiffs and other villagers go to worship. The particular worship alleged was that of making offerings to the Brahmin family who conducted the worship at the platform or "Than" when the cattle of the cattle-owners were afflicted with disease. The defence was that there was no such "Isthan" in the house and that the house was ordinary private property of the Brahmins.

The Brahmin family is as follows :

JAWAHAR—Mst. PARBATI

Mst. Gango

Nandan Singh

The mortgage in question is dated May 27, 1925, executed by Mst. Gango and her son Nandan Singh in favour of Dip Chand who is the father of Basdeo, defendant No. 1, and Basdeo's three sons are defendants Nos. 2 to 4. A decree was obtained on this mortgage and the declaration asked is in regard to this decree. The trial Court found that it was not proved that the house was appurtenant to the "Than" but that the "Than" did exist and it granted a decree in the following terms :

"That it be declared that there is a Than of the village god Mahikhasur in a room of the house in suit and the plaintiff and the other members of the public have a right to go and worship it. The sale of the room containing the Than or of the Than is null and void and cannot affect the right of the plaintiff or the other members of the public to worship at the Than. The sale of the rest of the house in suit and the Gher in suit is valid. The suit in respect of the rest of the house and the Gher is dismissed. The parties will bear their own costs of the suit."

It is this order in decree that we are asked to restore in this appeal. Now the findings of fact of the Court below are as follows : That there was a judgment of February 12, 1904, in a suit filed by one Govind Ram against Mst. Parbati claiming a rateable share in the offerings of the temple and that suit was decreed by the trial Court but dismissed in appeal on the finding that Govind Ram had rival temple and was claiming a share from the temple of Mst. Parbati out of malice. The Court held that this established that Mst. Parbati had a temple in the year 1894. The Court proceeds to find :

"The parties admitted that there is no image of any deity except a raised platform on which people come and put their offerings to crave the good will of the supposed deity in the interest of their suffering cattle in order to cure them. The room containing this platform is, according to the plaintiffs' own evidence, still utilized by the owners for their personal requirements as of sitting and sleeping. So I doubt very much whether this show of the plaintiffs would give them any right in this house except that they as members of the public might have come to give some offerings to Mst. Gango or her son Nandan in interest of their cattle..... I think the plaintiffs failed to prove the dedication of this particular piece of land and the room to anything religious and spiritual..... I have grave hesitation to give to this platform the same sanctity as is due to a temple as a mosque. I rather take it to be a haunt of a speculative man in the spirit of carving out a livelihood in the shape of offerings from certain believers which I think should not and perhaps does not extend to it the sanctity due to a temple or to a mosque. In short, I take this to be the personal property of Jawahar and his descendants...."

The Court also referred to a sale of the house to Indarman in 1935 to pay off the decree of Basdeo. Now the learned Counsel for the respondents cannot show anything on the record to support this finding of an alleged sale which is not mentioned by the trial Court. It would appear, therefore, that in part of the decree of the Court below is based on evidence which is not on the record. The quotations which we have made from the judgment of the Court below indicate that the Court considered that there must be some image or idol or some dedication in order that the particular "Than" should be considered to be a religious place where the public had a right of worship. The fact that the public had been going there and making offerings was found by the lower Appellate Court as a fact but the Court considered that some further findings were necessary in order that the public could have any right to continue to make their offerings. Now the Court itself admits that no particular act is necessary to signify a dedication and that is a point which is also admitted by the learned Counsel for the respondents. The Court below seems to think that because these offerings were made to a Brahmin family therefore it was a case of Brahmin family "carving out a livelihood from these offerings" and this would in some way detract from the right of the persons who made the offerings. Such offerings are always handed over to Brahmin-Pujaris and the fact that the Pujaris take the offerings does not in any way detract from the right of the persons who make the offerings to continue to do so.

A further argument was made by learned Counsel for the respondents, Dr. Malaviya, that this platform was not connected with a deity but with a demon. There is nothing to support this argument in the findings of the Court below as that Court speaks of Mahikhasur as a deity and not as a demon. But even if the point were correct, the case would be very similar to the burning of fire at the Holi. A case recently came before this Bench in which it was held that there was a customary easement of certain residents of the mahalla in a town in Aligarh District to burn the Holi on a piece of ground appurtenant to the house of a party to the suit : Lakshmi Chand v. Moti Lal (1). Such customary easement comes under s. 18, (1) (1938) A L J 1243; 180 Ind. Cas. 233; A I R 1939 All 165; 11 R A 432.

Easements Act. It is true that in the present case there was no specific pleading of s. 18, Easements Act, but the facts proved would come under that section. That is, finding that the plaintiffs as owners of cattle resident in that village have been accustomed for a long period of time to make offerings when their cattle are afflicted by disease and those offerings are made at that particular 'Isthan' in that room does constitute a right of the plaintiffs to continue to make those offerings. For these reasons, we consider that the decree of the trial Court is correct and that the decree of the lower Appellate Court should be set aside. We therefore set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and restore the decree of the trial Court with costs to the plaintiffs throughout.

D.

Order accordingly.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 681 of 1937

September 28, 1938

WORT, AG. C. J. AND MANOHAR LALL, J.

RAM RANBIJAY PRASAD SINGH—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât BACHIA KUARI—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art 145—Applicability to suit for return of deposit with employer as security for good conduct—Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 214—Debtor—Employer with whom money is deposited as security for good conduct, if debtor to estate of deceased employee.

Article 145, Lim. Act, does not apply to a suit by a legal representative of a deceased employee for the return of a sum of money deposited by the deceased with the employer as security for good conduct because in such a case no cause of action arises at the date of deposit and the Limitation Act provides for time running only after the cause of action has arisen.

Where an amount is deposited with the employer by the employee as security for good conduct, the employer is obliged to return that amount when the employee leaves the service or dies and the employer is, therefore, a debtor either to the employee or to his estate within the meaning of s. 214, Succession Act.

A. from the decision of the Additional District Judge, Shahabad, dated June 19, 1937.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and B. P. Sinha, for the Appellant.

Mr. Phulan Prasad Varma, for the Respondent.

Wort, Ag. C. J.—This is an appeal by the defendant arising out of an action in which the legal representative of one Ganga (deceased) sued for the return of a sum of money deposited by Ganga with the defendant, his employer, as security for good conduct. Ganga died in the year 1923. It is clear, therefore, that unless Art. 145, Lim. Act, applied the action was barred by limitation. It may very well be that Art. 145 when speaks of the depositor and pawnee recovering movable property deposited or pawned that may include money or coin. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Asghar Ali Khan v. Kurshed Ali Khan (1) have held that the words "movable property" in Art. 89 was sufficiently wide to cover money. But even assuming that that construction can be placed upon Art. 145, the point is one which seems to be fatal to the plaintiff's case. The period from which limitation runs under Art. 145 is the date of the depositor or pawn. That means to say that, although no cause of action arose in this particular case at the date of the deposit, yet time was running against the plaintiff or his legal representative. That makes the application of Art. 145 impossible as a general principle. Now the Lim. Act provides for time running only after the cause of action has arisen, and I think it may be taken as quite certain that if any other construction than that is to be placed upon a particular Article, it will be clear the Legislature never intended that that Article should apply to the facts of such a case as this.

There is yet another thing which is fatal to the plaintiff's case. Section 214, Succession Act, provides that "no Court shall pass a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt to a person claiming on succession to be entitled to the effects of the deceased person or to any part thereof except on the production of the succession certificate." I have repeated merely the relevant words of that section. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent that the defendant was not the debtor of Ganga. That is an impossible contention. When Ganga left his employment or died (as in this case) the defendant was obliged to return the sum of money deposited with him; in other words, he became the debtor either to Ganga or to his estate. The appeal succeeds and is allowed and the plaintiff's action dismissed with costs throughout.

Manohar Lall, J.—I agree.

S.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 28 I A 227; 24 A 27; 8 Sar. 142; 3 Bom. L. R 576 (P O).

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Appeal No. 21 of 1937

November 20, 1939

THOMAS, C. J. AND ZIA-UL HASAN, J.

Musammât BACHAI—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

HAYAT MOHAMMAD—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 65—Minor granted relief—Awarding of compensation to other party is in discretion of Court—Compensation held could not be awarded.

While it cannot be held that in every case in which relief is granted to a minor, he should be made to return the benefit derived by him from his contract, it cannot also be ruled that in no case can any person who seeks to avoid a contract entered into by him in his minority be made to pay compensation to the other party.

The fact that the purchaser was cognizant of the purchaser's minority at the time of the sale totally disentitles him to claim any compensation. Mohori Bibee v. Dhurmodas Ghose (1), referred to.

A against the decree of Mr. Justice W. Y. Madeley, dated August 30, 1937.

Mr. K. P. Misra, for the Appellant and Applicant.

Mr. H. H. Zaidi, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a defendant's appeal under s. 12(2) of the Oudh Courts Act against a judgment and decree of a learned Judge of this Court sitting singly.

The plaintiff-respondent brought a suit for possession of two adjacent houses Nos. 612 and 613 in the Court of the Munsif, Sultanpur, against the present appellant on the allegation that the houses originally belonged to his father Chhedi who died leaving him (plaintiff) and a wife and two daughters as his legal heirs but that the defendant took possession of the northern portion in October 1922 and of the southern portion in July 1925, in collusion with the plaintiff's mother Musammât Jamni, defendant No. 2 without any right. He, therefore, sued for possession of a 7/16ths share of the houses.

It was found by the trial Court that No. 612 was sold by the plaintiff's mother to the present appellant with the permission of the District Judge who had appointed a guardian for the plaintiff and that No. 613 was sold on August 13, 1925, by the plaintiff, his mother and his two sisters by sale deed Ex. A-16. The plaintiff's minority was to cease according to the certificate of guardianship issued by the District Judge in 1928. The sale of the houses so far as it affected the plaintiff's 7/16ths share was, therefore, held to be void on account of the plaintiff's minority at the time of the sale. Accordingly a decree was given to the plaintiff for possession of a 7/16ths share "in the southern half portion of the house in suit" and for Rs. 86-10-0 as damages instead of Rs. 180 claimed by the plaintiff. Both parties appealed against the trial Court's decree but the appeals were dismissed and the trial Court's decree affirmed. The defendant then appealed to this Court and the main point argued was that compensation should have been awarded to the appellant by the Courts below under s. 65 of the Indian Contract Act and s. 41 of the Specific Relief Act. The learned Judge of this Court who heard the appeal was, however, of opinion, that this was not a fit case in which compensation should be awarded to the vendee in respect of a contract which was void ab initio. The learned Judge, however, granted permission to the defendant to appeal under s. 12(2) of the Oudh Courts Act. Hence the present appeal.

We have heard the learned Counsel for the appellant but see no reason to differ from the opinion of the learned Judge of this Court. It has been found by the Courts below that there was no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the minor at the time of the sale and it was admitted that the defendant-appellant knew that Hayat Mohammad had a certificated guardian. It was argued that the sale was made to raise money for paying earlier mortgages which had been made by the plaintiff's mother for the plaintiff's marriage and that, therefore, the plaintiff who benefited by the sale should be put to terms and made to pay compensation to the appellant before obtaining possession of the property. A large number of cases have been cited on behalf of the parties but as they lay down no more than that, compensation can be awarded against a minor, seeking to avoid a contract in the discretion of the Court if the circumstances so require, they are not of much help to us in deciding the present case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down on the point and while it cannot be held that in every case in which relief is granted to a minor, he should be made to return the benefit derived by him from his contract, it cannot also be ruled that in no case can any person who seeks to avoid a contract entered into by him in his minority be made to pay compensation to the other party. We think, however, that in the present case the fact that the appellant was cognizant of the plaintiff's minority at the time of the sale totally disentitles her to claim any compensation. In Mohori Bibee v. Dhurmodas Ghose, L. R. 30 I A. 114 (1), their Lordships at p. 125, referring to ss. 38 and 41 of the Specific Relief Act remarked as follows:

"These sections, no doubt, do give a discretion to the Court, but the Court of first instance, and subsequently the Appellate Court, in the exercise of such discretion, came to the conclusion that under the circumstances of this case justice did not require them to order the return by the respondent of money advanced to him with full knowledge of his infancy, and their Lordships see no reason for interference with the discretion so exercised."

We may also remark that the plea now raised was not raised by the appellant in the trial Court and no issue was framed on the point.

The appeal has, in our opinion, no force and is dismissed with costs.

S. Appeal dismissed.

(1) 30 I A 114 at p. 125; 20 O 539; 5 Bom. L. R 421; 7 O W N 441; 8 Sar. 374 (P O).

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 1767 of 1936

August 11, 1939

BENNET AND VERMA, JJ.

RAM KUMAR LAL AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAM CHARITTAR LAL AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—

RESPONDENTS

U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), ss. 233 (m), (1), 175—Sale for arrears of revenue—Setting aside of, on ground of fraud—Suit in Civil Court, if barred.

Sub-s. (m) of s. 233, U. P. Land Revenue Act, does not deal with a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue. It deals with claims from collection of revenue, but clearly is not intended to embrace the special case in sub-s. (1). Hence a suit in the Civil Court to set aside a sale for arrears of land revenue on the ground of fraud is not barred.

S. A. from the decision of the Additional Sub-Judge, Azamgarh, dated July 25, 1936.

Messrs. N. P. Asthana, A. P. Pandey and S. C. Asthana, for the Appellants.

Mr. Chaturbhuj Sahai, for the Respondents.

Bennet, J.—This is a second appeal by the defendants against a decree of the lower Appellate Court in favour of the plaintiffs granting the plaintiffs an injunction. The facts are simple. There was a house in the District of Azamgarh which the Collector of Azamgarh sold for arrears of land revenue due from Ram Govind Lal and the house was sold as the house of Ram Govind Lal. The plaintiffs claim that they are separate from Ram Govind Lal and that the house is their property and that they have an enemy, defendant No. 3, Ram Naresh Lal, Mukhtar, and that he by his fraud got this house sold for the arrears of land revenue and that he supplied the money to the purchaser to buy the house and got the house eventually transferred to his brother Ram Kumar Lal. The trial Court dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs appealed and the lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiffs had proved that the entire proceedings from attachment to sale were fraudulent and that the house belonged to the plaintiffs and that there was no bar in law to the suit. In second appeal it is claimed that there was a bar in law arising from the Land Revenue Act (Act III of 1901), s. 233 (1) and (m). These sections provide:

"No person shall institute any suit or other proceeding in the Civil Court with respect to any of the following matters: (1) claims to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue, except on the ground of fraud, under s. 175; (m) claims connected with, or arising out of the collection of revenue (other than claims under s. 183), or any process enforced on account of an arrear of revenue, or on account of any sum which is by this or any other Act realizable as revenue."

It is clear that the provisions of the exception in sub-s. (1) apply to the present case; as this was a claim to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue on the ground of fraud and it has been held that fraud has been proved, sub-s. (m) does not apply to the present case as it does not deal with a suit to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue. It does deal with claims from collection of revenue, but clearly sub-s. (m) is not intended to embrace the special case in sub-s. (1). Turning to s. 175, it provides as follows:

"If no application under s. 173 is made within the time allowed therefor, all claims on the ground of irregularity or mistake in publishing or conducting the sale shall be barred. Nothing herein contained shall bar the institution of a suit in the Civil Court for the purpose of setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud."

There is, therefore, in s. 175 a clear provision that a suit like the present is not barred. No ruling has been shown in which it was held that the Land Revenue Act would bar a suit in the Civil Court to set aside a sale for arrears of land revenue which was found to be fraudulent. For these reasons, we dismiss this second appeal with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal from Appellate Decree No. 194
of 1938.

September 19, 1939

ROWLAND AND CHATTERJI, JJ.
NRIPENDRA NATH CHATTERJI
AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS
versus

ARUN CHANDRA CHATTERJI—
PLAINTIFF AND JITENDRA NATH
CHATTERJI—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENTS
*Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 60—Deposit with banker—Waiver of necessity for demand—Repudiation of customer's right, if waiver—Demand previous to suit, whether necessary—Case falling under
Art. 60—Article, if applies to interest also—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 40, illus. (a) on death of banker liability of his sons to pay sums to customers, whether changed—Banker and customer.*

In the case of a deposit made with the banker, the necessity for a demand may be got rid of by special contract or by waiver. A repudiation by the banker of the customer's right to be paid any particular sum would no doubt be a waiver of any demand in respect of such sum. Hence in a suit by the customer to recover money deposited with the banker, the banker cannot simultaneously repudiate liability to pay this sum and insist that a demand previous to suit was essential to its maintainability. Joachimson v. Swiss Bank Corporation (1), relied on. [p. 340, col. 2.]

Where an amount has been deposited with a banker, the death of the banker does not alter the nature of the liability of his sons to pay that amount. The case falls within illus. (a) to s. 40 of the Contract Act and the liability in respect of this money remains entirely unchanged by the banker's death. [ibid.]

The ordinary rule is that the cause of action for recovery of principal and of interest accruing due on it is a single cause of action and where the claim is a single claim for principal and interest, two periods of limitation are not applicable. Thus in a case falling under Art. 60, Limitation Act, that Article applies to the principal as well as to the interest. 58 Ind. Cas. 639 (6), referred to. Makundi Koer v. Balkishen Das (5), distinguished. [p. 341, col. 1.]

A. from a decision of the Subordinate Judge at Bhagalpur, dated January 21, 1938, modifying a decision of the Munsif at Bhagalpur, dated July 27, 1937.

Mr. R. S. Chatterji, for the Appellants.

Mr. Girindra Nath Mukherji, for the Respondents.

Rowland, J.—This is an appeal by the contesting defendants and arises out of a suit to recover money deposited by the plaintiff with the father of the defendant. The deposit it seems was made with the defendants' father as a banker by entries in a pass-book. It was opened in 1906 and entries in it both of credit and withdrawal were made, the last being dated November 3, 1907. The plaintiff was a nephew of Babu Kirti Chandra Chatterji with whom the money was deposited and it would seem that the sums are of the nature of gifts by Kirti Chandra to the plaintiff. The entries have been found by both Courts to be genuine and the Courts have held that the claim is for money deposited within the meaning of Art. 60 of the Lim. Act. Under this Article the period prescribed is three years from the date of the demand. It is said in the plaint that demands were made from January 1, 1936 onwards and the suit was instituted on July 6, 1936. Babu Kirti Chandra Chatterji died in 1914; and the plaintiff claims the amount of the deposit from his sons on the ground that they are in possession of his assets. Interest is claimed at six per cent. per annum simple, this amount having been entered in the pass-book in connection with the first item of deposit.

One of the objections taken by the defendants was that except with regard to the first item of deposit, there was no agreement to pay interest. Both the Courts have held that the agreement to pay interest was intended to apply to all the items of deposit. This seems a reasonable construction and I find no substance in this particular objection.

The next point taken is that the suit should have been held to be barred by limitation. The nature of the claim was not a deposit but money lent and the Courts should have applied Art. 59 and not Art. 60 of the Schedule. In this connection reference is made to the finding of the Courts below that the plaintiff had not proved any demand for the money on January 1, 1936, or at any date prior to the institution of the suit. Nevertheless it has been held that the suit is maintainable and a decree has been passed. It is said that one criterion to determine whether a sum of money is merely money lent or is a deposit repayable on demand, is to see whether it is money for the recovery of which the plaintiff has a cause of action independently of any demand for repayment. For the English cases on the subject, we were referred to Joachimson v. Swiss Bank Corporation (1) where the subject is examined in some detail. In the head-note it is stated to have been decided that:

"Where money is standing to the credit of a customer on current account with a banker, in the absence of a special agreement a demand by the customer is a necessary ingredient in the cause of action against the banker for money lent". The suit was held to be not maintainable on the ground that no cause of action had accrued to the plaintiffs because no demand was made for payment. In a case from India in Mohammad Akbar Khan v. Atter Singh (2) the distinction between a deposit and a loan was examined by Lord Atkin who said :

(1) (1921) 3 K B 110; 90 L J K B 973; 125 L T 338; 26 Com. Cas. 196; 65 S J 134; 37 T L R 534.

"Was this then a loan or was it a deposit payable on demand? It should be remembered that the two terms are not mutually exclusive. A deposit of money is not confined to a bailment of specific currency to be returned in specie. As in the case of deposit with a banker it does not necessarily involve the creation of a trust, but may involve only the creation of the relation of debtor and creditor, a loan under conditions. The distinction which is perhaps the most obvious is that the deposit not for a fixed term does not seem to impose an immediate obligation on the deposittee to seek out the depositor and re-pay him. He is to keep the money till asked for it. A demand by the depositor would therefore seem to be a normal condition of the obligation of the deposittee to re-pay".

"Therefore it is contended that the plaintiff is entitled to no decree for if this money was in the hands of the defendants as a deposit referred to in Art. 60, no cause of action had accrued and if it is any other kind of debt or loan the period of limitation for institution of the suit was long barred. The objection, it seems to me, is not fatal.

We have been shown two cases one of this Court and one of the Madras High Court in which such an objection has not succeeded. In this Court in Bainath v. Firm Bihari Ram Shah Lal (3) the Madras decision in Guntur Narasimham v. Narayana Rao Garu (4) was followed. The relevant passage which in this Court was cited from the judgment of the Madras case is by way of obiter dictum and the observation is that :

"The making of the demand is entirely dependent upon the volition of the plaintiff and the period of limitation may be indefinitely prolonged and a suit may be instituted without even a demand being made, in which case no question of limitation arises".

The language used may require some qualification in view of the decisions previously cited, to the effect that there must ordinarily be a demand or something that can be deemed equivalent to a demand or take the place of a demand as part of the cause of action. But the present case seems to fall within the concluding words of Lord Atkin in the case of Joachimson v. Swiss Bank Corporation (1) above cited. His Lordship observed :

(2) 17 L 557; 163 Ind. Cas. 454; 1936 O L R 301; 8 R P O 274; A I R 1936 P O 171; 2 B R 588; 44 L W 23; 40 O W N 997; (1936) M W N 660; 17 P L T 513; 38 Bom. L R 739; 63 O L J 541; (1936) A L J 986; 71 M L J 712; 63 I A 279; 38 P L R 1006; 1936 A L R 479 (P O).

(3) A I R 1933 Pat. 701; 147 Ind. Cas. 1094; 6 R P 399.

(4) A I R 1926 Mad. 66; 92 Ind. Cas. 405; 22 L W 592.

"Finally it is perhaps unnecessary to say that the necessity for a demand may be got rid of by special contract or by waiver. A repudiation by a bank of the customer's right to be paid any particular sum would no doubt be a waiver of any demand in respect of such sum."

From this point of view, I am of opinion that the defendants cannot simultaneously repudiate liability to pay this sum and insist that a demand previous to suit was essential to its maintainability.

As to the nature of the deposit or loan this has been found by both the Courts to be a deposit falling within the terms of Art. 60 which includes money of a customer in the hands of his banker so payable and I do not think we can go behind that finding. It is, however, contended that although the money was perhaps a deposit in the hands of Kirti Babu, after his death the same money in the hands of his sons had changed its character, there being between them and the plaintiff a liability of a different nature from that which had existed between their father and the plaintiff. It has not been shown to us in what manner the death of Babu Kirti Chandra could or should be deemed to alter the nature of the liability to pay this sum of money. The case appears to fall within illustration (A) to s. 40 of the Contract Act and the liability in respect of this money to be entirely unchanged by Kirti Babu's death.

Then it is suggested that though it may be held that in respect of the principal money limitation is saved, Art. 60 being applicable, interest is governed by Art. 63 so that the plaintiff is entitled to recover along with the principal only interest for three years last before the institution of the suit. For this reliance is placed on a decision in Makundi Kuer v. Balkishen Das (5). But that was a special case where the depositor had realised out of Court the whole of his principal as well as interest at a certain rate; but with this he was not satisfied. He claimed interest at a higher rate and he brought a suit to recover the difference between the interest which he claimed and the interest which he had been paid. The present case is not by any means on all fours with the facts of that decision.

(5) 3 A 328.

This is more comparable with Narayan Chetty v. Suppiah Chetty (6), in which it was held that where money had been deposited on the understanding that interest was not to be paid out as it accrued but to be added to the principal, Art. 60 would apply to the interest as well as to the principal and that both would be deemed to be deposits payable on demand. The ordinary rule is that the cause of action for recovery of principal and of interest accruing due on it is a single cause of action and where the claim is a single claim for principal and interest, I do not think that two periods of limitation will be applicable. In my view then no part of the claim in respect of interest is time-barred.

In the result, I find no substance in the contentions raised in the appeal. There is a cross-objection to which I must now refer. The Munsif had decreed the claim in full including costs; but the lower Appellate Court was of opinion that as the plaintiff had failed to establish a demand antecedent to the institution of the suit, he should not recover from the defendants his costs of the suit. The result was that the Subordinate Judge modified the first Court's decision by giving a decree for the claim but without costs and directed that the parties should bear their own costs of the appeal. This was a matter within the discretion of the lower Appellate Court with which we do not think we ought to interfere. It was for the plaintiff to give the defendants proper notice of his demand before rushing to Court although for the reasons I have stated this did not have to prove fatal his success in the suit. I would therefore not interfere with the discretion of the lower Appellate Court in withholding the plaintiff's costs from them.

I would dismiss both, the appeal and the cross-appeal, with costs.

Chatterji, J.—I agree.

s.

Appeals dismissed.

(6) 43 M 629; 58 Ind. Cas. 639; 11 L W 418; (1920) M W N 248; 38 M L J 437; A I R 1920 Mad. 983.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Application decided on April 18, 1939

SEN, J.

In the goods of Mst. GOLAB DAYE

Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), s. 263—Defendant dying pending suit—Executors not taking step to get themselves substituted—Letters of administration granted to administrator ad litem—Revocation of—Supplementary grant of probate.

Where during the pendency of a suit on a mortgage the mortgagor dies and no steps are taken by his executors to get themselves substituted although repeatedly asked to do so, they cannot subsequently apply for revocation of the grant of letters of administration made to the administrator ad litem though they can be given a supplementary grant of probate keeping the grant to the administrator ad litem intact. In the goods of Brown (1), relied on.

Mr. N. N. Bose, for Devendra N. Chatterjee and another Mortgagee.

Mr. P. N. Mullick, for the Administrator ad litem.

Mr. S. K. Bose, for the Executors and Executrix.

Order.—This is an application for the revocation of a grant of letters of administration limited for the purpose of representing the deceased in a suit and for grant of probate to the executors named in the will of one Mst. Golab Daye, deceased. The petitioners are the executors named in the will. The application is opposed by the administrator ad litem and the plaintiffs in the suit in which the administrator was appointed. Mst. Golab Daye was the defendant in a mortgage suit instituted by certain persons; she died pending that suit. The plaintiffs in that suit tried to get the heirs and legal representatives of Mst. Golab Daye substituted and a long correspondence ensued between the plaintiffs and the attorney for one of the executors named Bajinath Khettri. Although the executors were asked repeatedly to get themselves substituted in the suit they took no steps. Thereafter an application was made in that suit for the appointment of an administrator ad litem and citations were issued on all the executors. They did not appear and an administrator ad litem was appointed. The executors now apply for a revocation of this grant of letters of administration and also for a grant of probate to them.

The plaintiffs in the mortgage suit object to the revocation of letters of administration and they contend that if the letters are now revoked, it would lead to unnecessary delay; they suggest that this application has been brought for the purposes of delay. In my opinion no case has been made out for revocation of the grant of letters of administration. The executors had ample opportunity of getting themselves represented in the suit. They deliberately refrained from taking any steps in the matter and they cannot now complain because an administrator ad litem has been appointed. The Court may revoke a grant of letters of administration on the ground mentioned in s. 263, Succession Act. In my opinion, no just cause has been shown to exist within the meaning of that section. It seems to me that this application, so far as it relates to the revocation of the grant, has been made for the purpose of harassing the plaintiffs in the mortgage suit and for delay. That part of the application is, therefore, dismissed.

As regards the question whether the petitioners can get probate, it seems to me that there is no reason why they should not be given a supplementary grant of probate keeping the grant to the administrator ad litem intact. I have not been shown any provision in the Succession Act or any Indian authority regarding this matter. Learned Counsel on behalf of the petitioners has referred me to the case in In the goods of Brown (1). There it was held that a supplementary grant may be made in circumstances similar to the present one. I consider that the English practice should be followed in this case. I therefore direct that a caeterorum grant of probate will issue to the applicants. The grant to the administrator ad litem shall remain. The respondents other than the administrator ad litem will get their costs as between attorney and client. So far as the administrator ad litem is concerned, he will get party and party costs. The executors will get their costs of obtaining probate out of the estate.

D. Order accordingly.

(1) (1877) L R 2 P D 455.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Criminal Miscellaneous Application No. 109 of 1939

November 21, 1939

THOMAS, C. J. AND RADHA KRISHNA, J.
THE DISTRICT MAGISTRATE, KHERI COMPLAINANT—APPLICANT

versus

M. HAMID ALI GARDISH—ACCUSED
—OPPOSITE PARTY

Contempt of Court—Writing and publishing article likely to prejudice pending case amounts to contempt of Court—Accused held guilty of contempt but was discharged under s. 3, proviso 1, Contempt of Courts Act (XII of 1926).

The special privilege of the press is a time-worn fallacy, and the sooner the misconception that the press is not accountable to the law is removed the better it will be. No editor has a right to assume the role of investigator or try to prejudice the Court against any person. Writing and publishing an article in a newspaper likely to prejudice the course of justice relating to a pending case amounts to a contempt of Court.

Held, that the article grossly offended against the law of contempt of Court. [The accused was, however, discharged on his tendering unqualified apology, under first proviso to s. 3, Contempt of Courts Act.]

Or. Misc. App. for taking action under Contempt of Court's Act.

The Government Advocate and Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

Mr. Akhtar Husain, for the Opposite Party.

Judgment.—One Brij Lal thekedar on January 28, 1939, filed a complaint under s. 426, I. P. C. for mischief against nine persons in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Officer, Nighasan. It was transferred to the Court of the Tahsildar Magistrate of Nighasan. The learned Magistrate convicted all the nine accused on May 27, 1939.

On April 23, 1939, Hamid Ali Gardish, who is the proprietor, printer and publisher of the newspaper Dost printed the following article in his newspaper:

"Ruin of Tenants.

Our correspondent from Nighasan informs us that Brij Lal, resident of Mausa Nakaiha, a hamlet of Jatpurwa, was a thekedar of Raqam Sewai from the Khairigarh estate. He wanted to realise new kind of items from the tenants of Lakhania village. When they refused to pay them, then false cases have been started against the tenants. Hence the tenants are involved in four separate cases. Mr. Khushwaqt Rai has already written about all this to the District Magistrate.

False reports made at the Police Station,

Dhauraura

The above mentioned Brij Lal on account of enmity makes false reports against the tenants of Lakhania and he also gets his servants to make false reports. It is hoped that the Police Officer of Dhauraura Police Station will be careful of this man."

The accused on May 9, 1939, filed a copy of the article quoted above in their defence. The learned Tahsildar brought this fact to the notice of the District Magistrate who reported the matter to this Court for necessary action.

A notice was issued from this Court against Hamid Ali Gardish to show cause why he should not be convicted for contempt of Court. He has appeared before us with a Counsel and filed the following applica-

LAHORE HIGH COURT

Second Appeal No. 292 of 1939

July 5, 1939

TEK CHAND AND ABDUL RASHID, JJ.

Mst. BASANT KAUR—PLAINTIFF

—APPELLANT

VERSUS

RAM SINGH—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 91, 144—Suit for possession of property on allegation that its sale was sham—Question of limitation, decision of—Allegation found correct—Article applicable.

Where the allegations in the plaint, that the sale was a sham transaction or a mere paper transaction, are correct, a suit for possession of the property based on those allegations must be governed by Art. 144 and not by Art. 91. Therefore the decision of the question of limitation would depend on the decision of the question whether the sale in dispute was a sham transaction. The passing of consideration and the relationship between the parties would be very important matters in arriving at the conclusion as to whether the sale was or was not a sham transaction. 109 Ind. Cas. 54; (1), 30 Ind. Cas. 909 (2), 52 Ind. Cas. 533 (3) and Petherperumal Chetty v. Muniandy Servai (4), relied on. [p. 345, col. 1.]

S. A. from a decree of the District Judge, Ambala, dated January 20, 1939.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Mehr Chand Mahajan and Tek Chand, for the Respondent.

Abdul Rashid, J.—This appeal has arisen out of a suit instituted by Mst. Basant Kaur, widow of Nand Singh, against Sardar Ram Singh, Pleader, for possession of a house and land measuring 1 bigha and 9 biswas situated in the town of Rupar. The allegations of the plaintiff were that her husband Nand Singh had died without any issue in December 1931, and that the house and the land in dispute and the other property belonging to Nand Singh came into her possession. She was a young widow while the defendant was a Pleader practising at Rupar. He contracted an illicit intimacy with her, and represented to her that it would be of great advantage to him professionally, if it were known that he was the owner of the house and the land in dispute. The plaintiff was taken in and entered into a sham transaction, and executed a registered deed on March 25, 1933, transferring the house and the land in dispute to the defendant so that he may pass as the ostensible owner of the house. It was never the intention of the parties that the title in the property should pass to the defendant and the sale-deed was executed by the plaintiff on the assurances given to her that the house would remain her property and would be restored to her whenever she wanted. Later the defendant tion :

"The accused in the aforementioned case begs to tender an unqualified apology for the Article under action and throws himself at the mercy of this Hon'ble Court. I undertake never to commit such an act again and pray to the Hon'ble Court to be pleased to forgive me".

We are of opinion that the Article grossly offends against the law of contempt of Court. It was clearly an attempt to prejudice the mind of the learned Magistrate in regard to the trial of the case pending in his Court under s. 426, I. P. C. The newspaper men do not often realise at the time of writing that they are doing something improper or blameworthy. A journalist has no right to write in the tone the accused has used in the article on matters happening in law Courts. The special privilege of the press is a time-worn fallacy, and the sooner the misconception that the press is not accountable to the law is removed the better it will be. No editor has a right to assume the role of investigator or try to prejudice the Court against any person, writing and publishing an article in a newspaper likely to prejudice the course of justice relating to a pending case amounts to a contempt of Court.

The question for consideration is whether we should act under the first proviso to s. 3 of the Contempt of Courts Act which provides that "the accused may be discharged or the punishment awarded may be remitted on apology being made by it to the satisfaction of the Court" or whether we should compel Hamid Ali Gardish to purge his contempt by payment of a fine or the undergoing of a sentence of imprisonment.

We put a large number of questions to the accused, and he struck us to be a simple man. We are of opinion that he was foolish in writing the said article. He stated before us that he did not realise the seriousness of the offence. The circulation of the newspaper is very small and we are told that the income is about 30 a month.

We accordingly, while convicting Hamid Ali Gardish of contempt of Court with respect to the Court of the Tahsildar Magistrate at Nighasan, discharge him on his apology.

B.

Order accordingly.

became the plaintiff's mukhtar-i-am and got possession of the entire property belonging to her. About nine months before the institution of the present suit, the plaintiff suspected the defendant's intention and asked him to restore the house to her. On his refusal to do so, she cancelled her mukhtar-nama in the defendant's favour. She was, therefore, entitled to possession of the house as the transaction of transfer was a mere paper transaction and was void ab initio.

The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the transaction of sale in his favour was genuine and for valid consideration. He further pleaded that the suit, having been brought more than three years after the execution of the sale-deed, was time-barred and that the plaintiff was estopped from suing because she had been seeing the defendant making improvements and had not objected thereto, and also because, she had admitted in the course of a civil suit, Puran Singh v. Mst. Basant Kaur, that she had sold the house to the defendant for consideration. On these pleadings the trial Court framed the following issues:

- "(1). In the suit barred by time?
- "2. Was the sale in dispute a sham transaction and was effected without consideration and under undue influence?
- "3. (a). Was the plaintiff a pardanashin woman at the time when the sale-deed was executed?
- "3. Is the plaintiff estopped by her conduct from bringing the present suit?
- "4. What improvements has the defendant effected and is he entitled to be compensated on their account?
- "5. Relief."

The trial Court held that the sale dated March 25, 1933, was a sham transaction and that it was a nullity from the very beginning. It further held that as the sale was a sham transaction, it was unnecessary for the plaintiff to have the sale deed set aside within three years under Art. 91, Lim. Act, and that she could institute a suit for possession of the property in dispute under Art. 144 within a period of 12 years from the date when she was dispossessed. It was also held that the plaintiff was not estopped by her conduct from bringing the present suit in spite of the fact that she was not a pardanashin lady. It was found that Rs. 855 had been spent by the defendant in effecting improvements but that he was not entitled to any compensation. The plaintiff was accordingly given a decree for possession of the house in dispute. The defendant preferred an appeal in the Court of the learned District

Judge, Ambala. The judgment of the learned District Judge contains the following observations:

"The lower Court has held inter alia that the sale in favour of the defendant was without consideration. As defendant's appeal is entitled to succeed on points of law it is not necessary for me to go into the question of actual payment of consideration. In my opinion, the plaintiff's suit is liable to dismissal for the following three reasons: (1) It is barred by time. (2) Title passed under s. 54, T. P. Act, even if no consideration passed, (3) Plaintiff is estopped from suing on account of her conduct."

On the three points which, according to the learned District Judge were points of law, the decision was that the suit was barred by time, that title passed to the defendant on March 25, 1933, and that the plaintiff was estopped from suing on account of her conduct. On these findings the defendant's appeal was accepted and the plaintiff's suit dismissed with costs in both Courts. Against this decision the plaintiff has preferred a second appeal to this Court. It was strenuously contended by Mr. Shamair Chand on behalf of the appellant that the lower Appellate Court had erred in deciding the question of limitation without giving any finding as to whether the alleged alienation of the property in dispute was a sham transaction or whether it was merely voidable. The learned Counsel argued that it was essential for the lower Appellate Court to consider the entire evidence and to give a finding whether the defendant had an illicit intimacy with the plaintiff and as to whether the plaintiff had entered into a sham transaction merely to benefit the defendant professionally. The passing of consideration was one of the matters which would be of great importance in determining as to whether it was intended by the parties that title in the house should pass to the defendant on March 25, 1933. In my opinion the above contention has great force and must be given effect to. The question of limitation, in the circumstances of the present case, cannot be decided without giving a finding as to whether the transaction of March 25, 1933, was a sham and void transaction or whether it was merely voidable. It was incumbent on the learned District Judge therefore to go into the entire evidence to determine the various factors which would show that the alleged sale was merely a paper transaction.

It was held in Mohammad Nazir v. Zulaikha (1) that where a deed is ab initio null and void, there is no necessity for a person who considers himself aggrieved thereby to come to Court promptly and have the deed actually cancelled or set aside but where a deed is good but is voidable at the option of the party aggrieved, he must come to Court within three years to have it set aside. A suit for a declaration that a transaction embodied in a particular deed was from its very inception a sham transaction is to be distinguished from a suit for cancellation of the deed and does not fall within the purview of Art. 91, Sch. I, Lim. Act, 1908. In the case reported in Manchha Ram Pranjivandas v. Panu Bhai Lallu Bhai (2) the facts were that a Hindu widow having alienated a property of her husband, the reversioners sued more than three years after the date of alienation to recover possession of the property. It was found as a fact that the alienation was merely a sham transaction. It was held that in these circumstances Art. 91, Lim. Act, had no application as the alienation was unreal and ineffectual. In Sangawa v. Huchangowda (3) it was held that where the sale-deed was a mere paper transaction and inoperative, a suit for possession of the property was not barred, if brought more than three years after the execution of the sale-deed, as the suit for possession would be governed by Art. 144 and not by Art. 91, Lim. Act. In Petherperumal Chetty v. Muniandy Servai (4) it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that if a sale-deed is inoperative, it is unnecessary for the plaintiff to have it set aside as a preliminary to his obtaining possession of the property in dispute. In such cases, the suit was governed not by Art. 91 but by Art. 144, Lim. Act.

(1) 50 A 510; 109 Ind. Cas. 54; A I R 1938 All. 267; 26 A L J 269.

In view of the authorities summarized above, it is perfectly clear that if the allegations in the plaint, that the sale was a sham transaction or a mere paper transaction, are correct, the present suit for possession of the property in dispute must be governed by Art. 144 and not by Art. 91. The trial Court was therefore correct in holding that the decision of the question of limitation would depend on the decision of the question whether the sale in dispute was a sham transaction. The passing of consideration and the relationship between the parties would be very important matters in arriving at the conclusion as to whether the sale was or was not a sham transaction.

(2) 40 B 51; 30 Ind. Cas. 909; A I R 1915 Bom. 242; 17 Bom. L R 698.

(3) 48 B 166; 82 Ind. Cas. 533; A I R 1924 Bom. 174; 25 Bom. L R 1207.

(4) 35 O 551; 35 I A 98; 4 L B R 286; 7 O L J 528; 12 O W N 562 (P O).

The principal argument addressed by Mr. Mahajan on behalf of the respondent was that if the plaint be taken into account as a whole, it merely amounts to this, that the plaintiff was induced to execute the sale-deed by means of fraud and undue influence. The learned Counsel therefore contended that in these circumstances the transaction of sale was not void ab initio but merely voidable and that Art. 91 was applicable to the facts of the present case. I do not find myself in agreement with the contentions raised by the learned Counsel for the respondent. The words in the plaint are perfectly clear. They are to the effect that the transaction is a sham transaction. It is also stated in the plaint that the sale-deed was a mere paper transaction (mehas kaghi bainama). The plaint also recites that the defendant told the plaintiff to give over the house to him merely for the purpose of making a show (barai nam). The allegations in the plaint could hardly be more explicit. The learned Counsel for the respondent could not support the judgment of the learned District Judge on the question of estoppel. He conceded that there was no estoppel but that the jawab dawa of Mst. Basant Kaur in the suit, Puran Singh v. Mst. Basant Kaur, contained an important admission which must be taken into account in finding out the intention of the parties regarding the passing of title.

For the reasons given above, I would accept this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the learned District Judge and remand the case to him for re-hearing and re-decision. The learned District Judge will consider the entire evidence produced by the parties and give a finding on all the issues framed by the trial Court in the light of the observations made above. Court-fee levied on the memorandum of appeal in this Court shall be refunded, and the other costs shall be costs in the cause.

Tek Chand, J.—I agree.

D.

Case remanded.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision No. 466 of 1939

November 3, 1939

ROWLAND, J.

Syed ZAFAR AHSAN

AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

Babu JUGESHWAR BUX ROY

AND ANOTHER—OPPOSITE PARTY

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 145—One party claiming exclusive possession and other joint possession with them—Proceedings under s. 145, if appropriate—Possession—State delivery of possession by Civil Court, whether conclusive proof of present possession—Criminal trial—Revision—Practice.

Proceeding under s. 145, Criminal P. O., can be started in a case in which one party claims exclusive possession while another party claims to be in joint possession along with them as the question in such a case is no less a question of disputed actual possession than if each party claimed exclusive possession of the entire area. 140 Ind. Cas. 903 (1), relied on.

The law is that the Criminal Court ought to hold that if on a given date the plaintiff has been put into possession by the Civil Court then on that date the plaintiff got possession as against the defendant. But where a considerable period elapses between the date of delivery of possession and the date on which possession of the land is disputed, a state delivery of possession cannot be conclusive as to present possession. 113 Ind. Cas. 181 (2), relied on.

As a general practice the High Court will not entertain in the absence of most exceptional circumstances an application in its criminal revisional jurisdiction after the expiry of 60 days from the date of the decision or order impugned. 119 Ind. Cas. 401 (3), relied on.

Or. R. against an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Daltonganj, dated March 30, 1939; a motion against which order was rejected by the Judicial Commissioner of Chotanagpur on June 30, 1939.

Messrs. B. N. Mitter, Ajit Kumar Mitter and G. Muhammad, for the Petitioners.

Sir S. Sultan Ahmad and Messrs. B. C. De, K. K. Banerji and S. S. Sinha, for the Opposite Party.

Order.—This is an application in revision by the second party in a proceeding under s. 145 against an order of the Magistrate declaring possession in favour of the first party. The proceeding related to lands of the Deogaon Estate of which Babu Gopal Bux Roy, first party No. 2, is proprietor. The petitioners Nos. 2 to 7 are persons in whose favour the proprietor had made a grant of a mukarrari lease of eight annas in the estate at a time when neither of the parties were in possession. The proprietor Gopal Bux Roy sued to recover possession on a declaration that the principal defendant of that suit was an imposter. In order to finance this litigation, the mukarrari lease was granted to the members of the second party. The suit failed in the first Court, but on appeal was decreed by this High Court on August 19, 1936, the final order being that Gopal Bux Roy and the present petitioners Nos. 2 to 7 should recover joint possession of the entire Deogaon estate, their shares being one-half and one-half. The lower Court in execution issued on March 12, 1937, a writ of delivery of possession which is said to have been duly executed. The writ was in favour of both parties. The petitioners appointed Managers one Mr. Rashid and then a Mr. Qayum who apparently did not succeed in collecting any rents or exercising any sort of effective possession in the estate. They then on May 15, 1938, appointed a new Manager Mr. Syed Zafar Ahsan who is petitioner No. 1 and who, it is said, began to make collection, the earliest rent receipt purporting to be issued by him being on a date May 27, 1938. The present proceedings started with a report by the Sub-Inspector of Police of P. S. Chatrapur, dated October 7, 1938, as to disputes regarding collection of rents and grazing fees in his elaka and a similar report dated October 24, 1938, from the Sub-Inspector of Police of P. S. Harihargunj. The Magistrate called for written statements from both parties on November 9, 1938. There was some formal amendment to the proceedings on November 21, 1938, and they were transferred for disposal on January 27, 1939, to Mr. P. C. Mazumdar, the Magistrate, who eventually disposed of the proceeding and passed the order now under revision.

The Magistrate has written a long and careful judgment and has dealt with the evidence of possession on both sides. The points taken in revision are that as between parties entitled to joint possession of property, s. 145 is not the appropriate procedure and the Magistrate erred in law in proceeding under that section. Secondly, it is said that when possession was delivered by the Civil Court, it was the duty of the Magistrate to uphold that possession. Other grounds arise out of the Magistrate's appreciation of the evidence in the case which, it is said, has been vitiated by certain errors.

As to the first point, the argument is not well-founded, although certain of the earlier decisions may seem to favour it, it has been negatived by a Division Bench of this Court in Nandkeshwar Prasad Sahi v. Sita Saran Sahi (1). It was there held to be wrong to graft limitations upon the enactments which the Legislature has not placed there, that a case in which one party claims exclusive possession while another party claims to be in joint possession along with them is no less a question of disputed actual possession than if each party claimed exclusive possession of the entire area.

As to the next point, the argument does not seem to be sustainable in face of the decision of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Agni Kumar Das v. Mantazaddin (2) which has been followed in a series of decisions in this Court. The Magistrate has correctly appreciated the law which is that the Criminal Court ought to hold that if on a given date the plaintiff has been put into possession by the Civil Court then on that date the plaintiff got possession as against the defendant. But where a considerable period elapses between the date of delivery of possession and the date on which possession of the land is disputed, a stale delivery of possession cannot be conclusive as to present possession. In this case it is found by the Magistrate that from March 12, 1937 onwards, it was the first party who exercised all the acts of possession in respect of the disputed property and indeed up till May 27, 1938, no overt act of possession appears to have been attempted to be done on behalf of the second party. It was in the circumstances open to the Magistrate to hold, as he has held, that there had been an ouster of the second party. I should add that in the decree which was passed in 1936 Babu Gopal Bux Roy was not the petitioners' judgment-debtor but was a co-plaintiff.

As regards the suggested errors in the reasoning by which the Magistrate has dealt with details of the evidence, it is objected that the Magistrate has referred to the fact that Gopal Bux Roy has got his name entered in Collectorate Register as 16-annas proprietor and has relied on this fact in support of the first party's possession. As the second party claimed possession not in the capacity of a proprietor but of Samukarraridar, the entry in Register D had to be in the name of Gopal Bux Roy in any event and is consistent with the case of either party. The entry was not, therefore, a piece of evidence definitely supporting the case of the first party. Apart from this the criticisms advanced against the Magistrate's reasoning do not seem on examination to be well-founded. This is not an appeal on matters of fact and if it were it is by no means clear that the Magistrate's finding ought to be disturbed.

It is pointed out on behalf of the opposite party that whereas the order of the Magistrate was passed on March 30, 1939, this Court was not moved until August 28, 1939. It has been held in Kelu Patra v. Iswar Parida (3) that as a general practice the High Court will not entertain in the absence of most exceptional circumstances an application in its criminal revisional jurisdiction after the expiry of 60 days from the date of the decision or order impugned.

For these reasons, the application fails and is dismissed. The Rule is discharged.

s. Application dismissed.

(3) 8 Pat. 468; 119 Ind. Cas. 401; A I R 1929 Pat. 404; 30 Cr. L J 1053; Ind. Rul. (1929) Pat. 577; 11 P LT 18.

OUDH CHIEF COURT

Special Bench

Civil Reference No. 3 of 1939

November 23, 1939

THOMBS, C. J., ZIA-UL HASAN AND

HAMILTON, JJ.

Pandit HAR NARAIN LAL—APPLICANT

versus

UDAN SINGH—OPPOSITE PARTY

Stamp Act (II of 1899), s. 2 (5) (b)—Scribe of pro-note signing it with words "money was paid in my presence"—Whether attests it—If makes document bond—Transfer of Property (Act IV of 1882), s. 3.

The mere fact that a person says that the money was paid in his presence does not mean that he becomes an attesting witness, and this cannot per se amount to "attestation."

Where therefore a scribe of a promissory note signs the pro-note by adding the words that "money was paid in my presence," it does not amount to attestation and the document does not thereby become a bond.

O. Ref. made by the Junior Secretary, Board of Revenue, Allahabad.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

(1) 13 P L T 609; 140 Ind. Cas. 909; A I R 1932 Pat. 366; (1932) Cr. Cas. 899; Ind. Rul. (1932) Pat. 35 (2); 34 Cr. L J 115; 12 Pat. 87.
(2) 56 C 290; 113 Ind. Cas. 181; 48 C L J 193; 32 C W N 1173; A I R 1928 Cal. 610; 30 Cr. L J 69 (F B).

Order.—This is a reference by the Board of Revenue under s. 57 of the Stamp Act.

Pandit Harnarain Lal brought a suit on the basis of a promissory note dated August 8, 1934, against Udan Singh and others. The document bears a revenue adhesive stamp of one anna. In the opinion of the Inspector of Stamps the document was a bond within the meaning of s. (2) (5) (b) of the Stamp Act chargeable with a duty of Re. 1 under Art. 15, Sch. I of the Stamp Act. The learned Civil Judge differed from the Inspector and held that the document was only a promissory note, and not a bond.

The scribe of the document is Peare, and he has signed the document in the following words:

"Baqalam Peare wald. Makhdoom Sheikh, Ratanpur Rupiya hamare robroo diya gaya, that is, by the pen of Peare, son of Makhdoom Sheikh of Ratanpur. The money was paid in my presence."

The contention of the learned Assistant Government Advocate is that the scribe plays the part of an attesting witness in regard to the fact of payment by adding the words that "the money was paid in my presence" and that witnessing to the fact of payment by the scribe amounts to attestation of the document.

The word "attestation" is not defined in the Stamp Act, but the word "attested" as inserted in s. 3 of the T. P. Act by the Amending Act (XVII of 1926), in relation to an instrument, means attested by two or more witnesses, each of whom has seen the executant sign or affix his mark to the instrument, or has seen some other person sign the instrument in the presence and by the direction of the executant or has received from the executant a personal acknowledgment of his signature or mark, or of the signature of such other person, and each of whom has signed the instrument in the presence of the executant but it shall not be necessary that more than one of such witnesses shall have been present at the same time, and no particular form of attestation shall be necessary.

There can be no doubt that a scribe can become an attesting witness, but what is said to be an attestation in the present case is merely a statement in writing by the scribe that the money was paid in his presence. The mere fact that a person says that the money was paid in his presence does not mean that he becomes an attesting witness, and this cannot per se amount to "attestation". We are therefore of opinion that the document in question cannot be treated as a bond.

We accordingly reject the reference. Let the papers be returned.

s.

Reference rejected.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Criminal Revision Application No. 166
of 1939

June 17, 1939

NIYOGI, J.

LAXMAN—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT

O. P. Protection of Debtors Act (IV of 1937), ss. 3, 4—"Molestation"—Creditor demanding payment of debt—Debtor becoming angry and bidding him go to Civil Court—Creditor losing temper beating debtor with shoe and leaving the place—Creditor, if can be punished under s. 4.

The terms of the definition of "molestation" given s. 3, O. P. Protection of Debtors Act, indicate that the obstruction or using violence or intimidation to constitute molestation should be accompanied by the intent to cause the debtor to abstain from doing what he has a right to do or to compel him to do what he has a right to abstain from doing. It is evident that the particular intent is a question of fact in every case. If the Court holds that the creditor's intention in obstructing, or using violence to, or intimidating, the debtor is to compel him to pay a debt which he has a right in certain circumstances to abstain from doing, the creditor's act would amount to molestation.

The creditor demanded payment of his debt, from his debtor whereupon the latter became angry and bade him go to Civil Court. The creditor lost his temper and beat the debtor with a shoe and left the place. The creditor was prosecuted for an offence punishable under s. 4 of the C. P. Protection of Debtors Act, 1937, for molesting the debtor for the recovery of a debt owed by him:

Held, that the circumstances in which the creditor used violence did not warrant any assumption that the creditor's intention was to compel him to pay the debt. But on the contrary its effect would presumably be to confirm the debtor's resolve not to pay. Here the creditor did not resort to violence as an instrument to compel the debtor to pay when he was not disposed to pay. It was only a manifestation of the pitch of his passion that was aroused by the debtor's remark that the creditor should look to Civil Court. But the creditor was indeed liable to be punished for assault under the I. P. O. Cr. Rev No. 358 of 1938 explained and distinguished.

Cr. R. App. of the order of the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge, Nagpur, dated January 24, 1939.

Mr. T. J. Kedar, for the Applicant.

Order.—This is an application to revise the order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Nagpur, in Criminal Revision No. 58 of 1938, decided on January 24, 1939. The case involves the question of construction of s. 3 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act, 1937.

The facts are that one Upashya was indebted to the accused Laxman. On January 13, 1938, the accused demanded payment of his debt, whereon Upashya became angry and bade him go to Civil Court. The accused lost his temper and beat Upashya with a shoe and left the place. The accused was prosecuted for an offence punishable under s. 4 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act, 1937, for molesting the debtor for the recovery of a debt owed by him. In a summary trial he was convicted of the offence and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 100.

The accused applied to the Additional Sessions Judge, Nagpur, for revising the order of conviction and sentence on the ground that his assault on the debtor did not constitute an offence punishable under s. 4 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act, 1937. The learned Additional Sessions Judge followed Crown v. Mohamad Khan, Criminal Revision No. 308 dated November 7, 1938, and held "that the object of the intimidation was to make the complainant to pay a debt without forcing the accused to take proceedings against him in a Civil Court, that a threat which would prevent him from taking up a position which the law allows him falls within the mischief of molestation as defined in s. 3 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act; and that the Act does not permit a money-lender by threatening his client to deter the debtor from forcing his creditor to take action against him in a Court of law."

On this view he held that the assault on the debtor amounted to an offence of molestation as defined in s. 3 of that Act.

The situation in the case which came up before this Court in Criminal Revision No. 358 of 1938 was somewhat different. In that case the creditor threatened the debtor while he was going to his office on duty as an Assistant Foreman at the Power House. The threat was made in the vicinity of the place where he worked. The creditor was fined Rs. 100. The Additional Sessions Judge, Nagpur, referred the case under s. 438, Criminal P. O. for the opinion of the High Court as, in his opinion, no debtor could claim a right of not paying his creditor and that therefore the threat to induce the debtor to pay up his debt did not constitute molestation as defined in s. 3 of that Act. The reference was not accepted by this Court and the reason given was that the object of the intimidation was to make the debtor pay a debt without forcing the accused to take proceedings against him in a Civil Court. It was conceded that a debtor could not claim a right that he would not pay his creditor but it was explained that the object of the threat was to prevent a case being brought in the Civil Court which would prevent the debtor from urging pleas in mitigation such as an exorbitant rate of interest and any other pleas which the law would allow him. The rule was propounded that a threat which would prevent a debtor from taking up a position which the law allows him falls within the mischief of molestation as defined in s. 3 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act. To understand the precise meaning of the foregoing expression I have made an analysis which shows that the learned Judge had envisaged the position as follows. The creditor wants to avoid going to Civil Court and the debtor wants to force him to go to it for recovering his debt. The law allows the debtor to force the creditor to go to Civil Court although the debtor has no right to abstain from paying off his debt if he is able to do so. When the creditor threatens the debtor with evil consequences to compel him to pay a debt without recourse to Civil Court, he thereby intends to cause the debtor to do an act which he has a right to abstain from doing.

The material words in s. 3 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act, 1937, are as follows :

"For the purposes of this Act, a person who, with intent to cause another person to abstain from doing or to do any act which he has a right to do or to abstain from doing,

(a) obstructs, or uses violence to, or intimidates, such other person shall be deemed to molest such other person."

The terms of the definition indicate that the obstruction or using violence or intimidation to constitute molestation should be accompanied by the intent to cause the debtor to abstain from doing what he has a right to do or to compel him to do what he has a right to abstain from doing. It is evident that the particular intent is a question of fact in every case. If the Court holds that the creditor's intention in obstructing, or using violence to, or intimidating, the debtor is to compel him to pay a debt which he has a right in certain circumstances to abstain from doing, the creditor's act would amount to molestation. In the present case, the circumstances in which the creditor used violence do not warrant any assumption that the creditor's intention was to compel him to pay the debt. But on the contrary its effect would presumably be to confirm the debtor's resolve not to pay. The trial Magistrate says in para. 5 of his order :

"It has thus been proved that the accused did go to Upashya's house to dun him for recovery of debts, that as the complainant asked him with impunity to have a recourse to the Civil Court, the accused got annoyed and abusing the complainant hit him. It is thus clear that the accused molested the complainant as contemplated under s. 3, O. P. Protection of Debtors Act."

The finding of fact is that the creditor hit the debtor as a result of the annoyance caused to him by the debtor having asked him to go to Civil Court for recovering his debt. The violence done to the debtor was never regarded by the creditor as a means to compel him to pay his debt. I can well imagine a case where, in circumstances such as those proved in the present case, a creditor might use violence to his debtor and ask him to pay up his debt to avoid further violence. That would indeed be a case of clear molestation. But here the creditor did not resort to violence as an instrument to compel the debtor to pay when he was not disposed to pay. It was only a manifestation of the pitch of his passion that was aroused by the debtor's remark that the creditor should look to Civil Court. The violence was not intended to operate on the debtor's mind so as to induce him to pay but it was intended to be a punishment for his impertinence in asking the creditor to go to Civil Court.

The creditor was indeed liable to be punished for assault under the I. P. O. but I cannot persuade myself to concur in the view that his act amounted to an offence under s. 3 of the O. P. Protection of Debtors Act, 1937, in the particular circumstances of the present case. For the foregoing reasons, I set aside the conviction and sentence and direct that the applicant be acquitted. The fine, if recovered, will be refunded to the applicant.

It would be open to the complainant to prosecute the applicant for assault or causing hurt or insult, which are offences punishable under the I. P. O. if he so wishes to do.

D.

Revision allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 630 of 1938

September 11, 1939

ROWLAND AND CHATTERJI JJ.
RAM RAN BIJAYA PRASAD SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL GHANI KHAN AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Custom—Right of burial—Custom to bury dead, when should be decided as existing.

A Court should not decide that a certain local custom exists unless it is satisfied of its reasonableness and its certainty as to extent and application. Where the trial Court finds that the customary right of burial exists over a portion of the disputed plot but is unable to ascertain the limits of that portion, the custom is not established as the extent of land over which the supposed customary right exists is uncertain. Mohidin v. Shivlingappa (1), explained.

A. from the appellate decree of the Sub-Judge, Arrah, dated July 6, 1938.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and B. P. Sinha, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Md. Hasan Jan and Syed Hasan, for the Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the defendant in a representative suit brought under O. I, r. 8, Civil P. O., by the plaintiffs on behalf of all the Muhammadans of Bhojpur Jadeed. The defendant-appellant is the proprietor of the village and the disputed plot bearing survey No. 1303 in khata No. 322 with an area of 7.56 acres stands in the Record of Rights entered as parti kadim gair mazrua malik with trees on it similarly entered. The claim of the plaintiffs was that the plot belonged to them as a Muhammadan graveyard and they prayed to recover exclusive possession of the entire plot by dispossessing the defendant. Alternatively the plaintiffs asked for a declaration of their right by custom or easement to bury their dead in this plot. The Munsif held that the survey entry was correct and the plaintiffs had no right either to the trees or the land; that a market or bazar had been held on the suit land from time immemorial; that there were a few graves, but that the plaintiffs had not adduced instances sufficient to establish any customary right of burying the dead. On these findings he dismissed the whole suit with costs. The Subordinate Judge who heard the appeal has stated the point for decision before him in these terms:

"Whether the plaintiffs have acquired any right by custom to bury the dead in the disputed plot No. 1303 or any portion thereof."

He does not directly state as a point for decision the claim of the plaintiffs to possess the entire plot as a graveyard to the exclusion of the proprietor's right to use it for other purposes; but in his judgment he does not accept the contention which was argued before him that the Record of Rights was incorrect and that the plot was kabristan. He agreed with the finding of the Munsif that the defendant was still using and from time immemorial had used a part of the suit land for holding a market. He accepted the evidence that there were pucca graves at three or four places in the disputed plot and that in the immediate vicinity of each of those pucca graves, burials had been made for many years past till now. He found that

"the user of a portion of the disputed plot by the Musalmans as a graveyard was ancient, exclusive and continuous and that with the owner's knowledge," and concluded that "the plaintiffs have acquired a customary right to bury the dead in a portion of the disputed plot," namely, the area "in and about the graves already existing and as near them as possible." As a result he has given them a declaration of that right. Against this decision the defendant has appealed and the plaintiffs have preferred a cross-objection.

The main points taken in the appeal of the defendant are that no such customary right can in law be acquired in land owned by another; that the facts found do not warrant in law a finding of the existence of such a custom, and that the judgment and decree are vague and incapable of execution for want of a finding as to the situation and dimensions of the portion of the disputed land over which the plaintiffs had established their rights. The lower Court's view that a customary right to bury the dead may exist appears to be supported by Mohidin v. Shivlingappa (1) but the correctness of that decision seems to be doubted by Mookerjee, J. in Gopal Krishna v. Abdu Samad (2). But it is not necessary here to decide whether as an abstract proposition of law such a customary right can be acquired in another's land; for assuming the law to be as stated in the Bombay decision we are of opinion that the appeal must succeed on the second of the grounds above stated. The learned Judges of the Bombay High Court accepted it as a correct statement of the law that

"a Court should not decide that a local custom, such as that set up in this case, exists unless the Court is satisfied of its reasonableness and its certainty as to extent and application."

Now in the present case on the Subordinate Judge's own finding the supposed custom seems lacking in certainty as to extent. All that he finds is that the customary right of burial exists over a portion of the disputed plot. He is unable to ascertain the limits of that portion. He arbitrarily defines the limits as being "in and about the graves already existing." But he loses sight of the fact that within a big plot of 7.56 acres these graves lie in scattered places and not in one continuous block. He proceeded to fix the limits relying on the case in Mohidin v. Shivlingappa (1). There, however, the finding of the Court below was that the right of burial existed "round about the darga in the land in dispute." It was on the basis of that finding that the High Court limited the right to "burying near the darga". This decision does not justify the course adopted by the learned Subordinate Judge in the present case. On the facts as found by him, the extent of land over which the supposed customary right exists is uncertain. That being so, the custom is not established.

It has also been argued before us that the alleged custom is unreasonable as the plaintiffs' own evidence shows that there are four or five other graveyards in the village and the plot claimed is of no less than $7\frac{1}{2}$ acres. Apparently this contention has some force, but it involves several questions of fact which were not raised in the Courts below. Firstly, we do not know the extent of the village. Secondly, we have no idea of the Muhammadan population of the village. Thirdly, the other graveyards may have been intended for the use of the people of adjoining villages also. In the absence of any finding on such question of fact, we cannot pronounce any opinion on the supposed unreasonableness of the custom.

However, the appeal succeeds on the other ground already dealt with. It may be observed that as regards the graves and chabutras actually existing, Mr. Mullick for the appellants conceded that his client is not entitled to interfere with these; but there was no case made out of his having attempted to do so and for any relief regarding them alone, the plaintiffs have no cause of action. The decision of the Subordinate Judge is set aside and that of the Munsif restored. The cross-objection fails and is dismissed. In the circumstances parties will bear their own costs throughout.

(1) 23 B 866; 1 Bom. L R 170.

(2) A I R 1921 Cal. 569; 66 Ind. Cas. 640; 34 O L J 319.

S.

Appeal allowed.

RANGOON HIGH COURT

Civil Miscellaneous Appeal No. 81 of 1938.

May 3, 1939

ROBERTS, C. J. AND MACKENBY, J.

E. M. JOSEPH—APPELLANT

versus

OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE—RESPONDENT

Insolvency—One of beneficiaries of trust becoming insolvent—Trustee paying such money to him as would have been payable to him in ordinary course, instead of to Official Assignee—He should be directed to refund money to Official Assignee.

Where upon one of the beneficiaries of a fund becoming insolvent, the trustee instead of paying to the Official Assignee from time to time such moneys as would have been payable to the insolvent and other beneficiaries in the ordinary course in the case of the insolvent, to the Official Assignee, forms his own notions as to what the proper allowance might be and makes at the expense of the beneficiaries (including, himself) a series of payments of moneys which were in fact due and payable to the Official Assignee in insolvency, to the insolvent, the trustee should be directed to refund to the Official Assignee the money so paid. In re Tyler, Ex parte the Official Receiver (1), distinguished.

C. Misc. A. against the order of the High Court, dated August 18, 1935.

Mr. N. M. Cowasjee, for the Appellant.

Mr. E. C. V. Foucar, for the Respondent.

Roberts, C. J.—This is an appeal from an order of Shaw, J., whereby the trustee of a fund, one E. M. Joseph, the beneficiaries of which were the several sons of J. I. Joseph (deceased), including one A. P. Joseph who has since become insolvent, was directed to pay to the Official Assignee the sum of Rs. 3,097-6-9 or so much of it as might be payable by reason of the order of an Appellate Court which was presently considering an appeal from an order by the learned Insolvency Judge, and whose judgment is contained in the Civil Miscellaneous Application No. 13 of 1938. It appears that the trustee of this fund, instead of handing over from time to time such moneys as would have been payable to the insolvent and other beneficiaries in the ordinary course in the case of the insolvent to the Official Assignee, in forming his own notions as to what the proper allowance might be and in making, at the expense of the beneficiaries (including, of course, himself) a series of payments of moneys which were in fact due and payable to the Official Assignee in insolvency, followed an entirely erroneous idea. The question whether the insolvent should have been permitted to receive the money for maintenance was before the High Court in two cases in July 1935 and in November of the same year, and both applications appear to have been rejected. Nevertheless, the trustee continued to make the payments (very small in amount, only Rs. 18 a week) for the maintenance of the insolvent, his wife and eight children, but nonetheless in clear contravention of the law. And having done so, the position now is that the Official Assignee has applied for this money to be refunded by the appellant and the learned Judge on the original side directed that that should be done but that the order to be drawn up should abide by the decision of the Appellate Court on the insolvency matter. So far as that decision is concerned, it is only necessary to say that the Bench dismissed the application for allowance and directed an allowance under s 75, sub-cl. (2), Rangoon Insolvency Act, of Rs. 50 a month subject to various conditions. It appears from the effect of the judgment that the insolvent was allowed not only Rs. 18 a week but the use of premises which resulted in a loss of Rs. 50 a month, which would otherwise have to be paid as rent to the trust estate. The insolvent's share of this loss would be Rs. 12-8-0. This we are told, has been calculated in the claim together with the Rs. 18 which has been formerly paid by the trustee to the insolvent instead of to the Official Assignee.

We have been referred by Mr. Cowasjee to the case in In re Tyler Ex parte the Official Receiver (1), from which it is clear that an officer of the Court who stands by whilst or who has constructive notice that payments are being made which need not be made by way of premiums in insurance during the pendency of a bankruptcy, cannot afterwards turn round, despite the fact that there will be no answer in law or equity to his claim, and refuse the repayment of those sums by him. The learned Judges in that case all stressed the fact that the Court could not allow one of its officers to make a claim which was founded upon the fact that they were taking undue advantage of one who had acted in ignorance of his right and permitted him to go on doing so and afterwards turning round by means of what Vaughan Williams, L. J. described as a "shabby trick" to try to get some benefit to the creditors thereby.

(1) (1907) 1-K B 865; 76 L J K B 541; 97 L T 30; 11 Manson 73, 51 S J 291; 23 T L R 323.

This case is quite unlike that case. It is a case in which a trustee saw fit, out of motives of high-mindedness, benevolence and great charity, to indulge in the whim of practising those virtues not at his own expense but at the expense of others. That being so, the Official Assignee is clearly right in saying: "If you would be high-minded, benevolent and charitable, you must do so out of your own pocket and not out of the trust estate moneys." That being so, there is no doubt that the order made by the learned Judge on the original side was right and it must be confirmed with costs, Advocate's fee six gold mohurs.

Mackney, J.—I agree.

D. Order confirmed.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Full Bench

In the matter of Federal Court Appeals

Nos. 10, 14 and 17 of 1939

September 26, 1939

HARRIES, O. J., FAZL ALI AND

AGARWALA, J.J.

Babu LACHMESHWAR PRASAD

SHUKUL AND OTHERS—APPELLANTS

versus

Babu GIRDHARI LAL CHAUDHURI

AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS

Federal Court Rules, O. IX, r. 1—High Court, if can, in Federal Court appeals, extend time fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, for depositing printing costs—Amendment of O. XLV, r. 7 in 1920—R. 9 of Privy Council Rules, if gives power to High Court to extend time fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, in Privy Council appeals—"Date of decree," meaning of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 4—Applicability to deposit of costs—General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 10—"Office," if includes office of Court—Deposit made on re-opening of Court after vacation, if within time.

Per Harries, O. J. and Fazl Ali, J., Agarwala, J., dissenting.—What O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules means is that O. XLV, Civil P. O., as amended or modified by any Order in Council and in particular is modified and adapted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, shall govern the procedure in Federal Court appeals. As O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O., has been modified by Order in Council of February 9, 1920, so as to give the Court power to extend time to make a deposit in Privy Council appeals, such power is also given to the Court in relation to Federal Court appeals by reason of O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules. Rule 9 of Order in Council of February 9, 1920, only empowers the Court to extend time when the justice of the case requires it, and such power should be exercised with great caution and only where there are cogent reasons for doing so. In short, it is only where the justice of the case demands that the Court should extend time that such extension should be given. The fact that the appellant who was a karta of the joint family had contracted small-pox which made him unable to deposit the money within period allowed by law is a cogent reason for extending the time. The High Court is not closed during the vacation, and the money can be deposited and, if tendered, will be accepted during vacation. Time, however, may be extended if failure to deposit printing costs is due to the honest impression on the part of the appellant that if the money is deposited on the opening day of the Court, it would be accepted as being within time as this is not an ordinary case of ignorance of the law, but to a large extent mistake committed due to the failure of the Court in making the position clear. [p. 357, col. 2; p. 354, col. 1; p. 359, col. 2.]

Per Agarwala, J.—Neither para. 9 nor any of the other paragraphs of the Order-in-Council of 1920, applies to appeals to the Federal Court and, consequently, the High Court has no power to extend the time prescribed by O. XLV of the Civil P. O., in the case of appeals to the Federal Court. [p. 362, col. 2.]

The phrase "date of the decree" in O. XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. O., means the date which the decree bears or the date upon which judgment was pronounced. The starting point of time therefore in O. XLV, r. 7, is the date which the decree bears and not the date when the decree was actually signed.

Obiter.—The meaning of O. XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. O., as it now stands, is plain. An extension of time may be granted for deposit of printing charges after the expiry of 90 days upon cause being shown, but such extension of time cannot exceed 60 days, and if this further period of 60 days has elapsed, the Court has no power under the rule as it stands to grant further time. The words are, mandatory and limit the discretion of the Court. If the period of 90 days from the date of the decree has expired, the Court can at most grant a further extension of 60 days. Once that period has elapsed, the Court has no power as the rule stands, to grant any further time. Rule 9 of the Privy Council Rules, however, allows the Court either to cancel the certificate or make such other order as the justice of the case demands. The words used in r. 9 are sufficiently wide to give the Court power to extend time for making deposits of printing costs in proper cases in appeals to His Majesty in Council beyond the limits fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. 101 Ind. Cas. 555 (8), 177 Ind. Cas. 188 (9) and 181 Ind. Cas. 378 (10), relied on. [p. 356, cols. 1 & 2.]

[Case-law referred to.]

Per Agarwala, J.—An "application," in s. 4, Lim. Act means an application to the Court to take some step which the Court is empowered to take only on being requested to do so, such as execute a decree, set aside an execution sale, etc. When making a deposit of costs the appellant does not move the Court to do anything. Section 4, therefore, does not apply to deposit of costs. p. 362, col. 2.]

An act directed or allowed to be done or taken in an office is used in s. 10, General Clauses Act in contradistinction to an act directed or allowed to be done or taken in a Court, and "office" does not here include the office of a Court, for, the office of the Court is merely the hand with which the Court performs some of its functions. Hence, the fact that the office of a Court remains open while the Court itself is closed for judicial business will not deprive a litigant of the extended time for doing an act to which s. 10, General Clauses Act, applies. The High Court is closed for ordinary business during the annual vacation. Printing costs deposited on the day the Court re-opens will, therefore, be within time under s. 10. 71 Ind. Cas. 426 (13), relied on, [p. 363, col. 1.]

Mr. T. N. Sahai (in No. 10), Mr. Nitai Chandra Ghosh (in No. 14) and Messrs. S. K. Mitra and P. Jha (in No. 17), for the Appellants.

Messrs. Hasan Jan and P. N. Gour (in No. 10), Mr. T. N. Sahai (in No. 14) and Messrs. B. C. De and A. K. Mitra (in No. 17), for the Respondents.

Harries, C. J.—These are three applications filed by the appellants in the three appeals praying that the amounts of printing costs in connection with these three appeals to the Federal Court be accepted and, if necessary, time for depositing the same be extended. The facts of the three cases differ materially and will be considered later. There was, however, considerable delay in all three cases in making the necessary deposits, and the first point which has to be determined is whether this Court can extend the time fixed by law for depositing these printing costs. If the Court has no such power, then it matters little what the facts of any particular case may be if the deposit has not been made within the period stipulated. The three applications first came before a Bench of this Court, and having regard to the general importance of the question that Bench referred the matter to a larger Bench. These applications accordingly have been heard by this Full Bench. A right of appeal to the Federal Court is given by s. 205, Government of India Act, 1935. That section is in these terms:

"(1) An appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from any judgment, decree or final order of a High Court in British India, if the High Court certifies that the case involves a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of this Act or any Order in Council made thereunder, and it shall be the duty of every High Court in British India to consider in every case whether or not any such question is involved and of its own motion to give or to withhold a certificate accordingly.

"(2) Where such a certificate is given, any party in the case may appeal to the Federal Court on the ground that any such question as aforesaid has been wrongly decided, and on any ground on which that party could have appealed without special leave to His Majesty in Council if no such certificate had been given, and, within the leave of the Federal Court, on any other ground, and no direct appeal shall lie to His Majesty in Council, either with or without special leave."

In all these cases certificates were given by this Court that the cases involved a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Government of India Act, and such is the sole ground of appeal in each case. The Federal Court have drafted rules governing the procedure to be followed in appeals to that Court. Order IX of these rules makes O. XLV, Civil P. O., applicable to appeals to the Federal Court with certain modifications. Order IX is in these terms:

"1. Where a certificate has been given under s. 205 (1) of the Act, the provisions of O. XLV of the Code, as modified and adapted by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, shall apply in relation to appeals to the Federal Court

"2. Subject to the provisions of ss. 4 and 12, Lim. Act, 1908, applications under r. 2 of the said O. XLV, shall be presented within ninety days from the date of the signing of the decree or order appealed from."

The Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, adds a rule No. 17 to O. XLV, Civil P. O., and makes some other slight amendments to that order. This Rule No. 17 which is added to O. XLV, Civil P. O., is in these terms:

"Where a certificate has been given under s. 205 (1), Govt. of India Act, 1935, the provisions of this Order shall apply in relation to appeals to the Federal Court as they apply in relation to appeals to His Majesty in Council and references in this Order to His Majesty in Council and to any Order of His Majesty in Council shall be construed as references to the Federal Court and the rules of the Federal Court:

Provided that

(a) R. 3 of this Order shall have effect as if at the end of sub-r. (1) thereof there were inserted the words 'apart from any question of law as to the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act, 1935, or any Order in Council made thereunder'; (b) where the only ground of appeal stated in the petition is that any question of law as to the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act, 1935, or any Order in Council made thereunder has been wrongly decided, the petition need not pray for such a certificate as is mentioned in r. 3, and the like proceedings shall be had thereon as if such a certificate had been given except that no security shall be required for the costs of the respondent."

The Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, makes only formal amendments to the wording of O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. which deals with time for making deposits of printing costs. The material portion of that rule reads as follows:

"(1) Where the certificate is granted, the applicant shall, within ninety days or such further period not exceeding sixty days, as the Court may, upon cause shown allow from the date of the decree complained of, or within six weeks from the date of the grant of the certificate, whichever is the later date.... (b) deposit the amount required to defray the expense of translating, transcribing, indexing and transmitting to His Majesty in Council a correct copy of the whole record of the suit...."

The words "His Majesty in Council" must be read as Federal Court. In cases where the only ground of appeal taken is that a question of law on the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act has been wrongly decided, the word "certificate" in relation to Federal Court appeals must mean the certificate granted under s. 205 (1), Govt. of India Act. In such cases no certificate such as that contemplated by O. XLV, r. 3, is necessary by reason of proviso (b) of r. 17 which has been added to O. XLV, Civil P. C. by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937. It will be seen from the terms of O. XLV, r. 7 that printing costs in Privy Council appeals had to be deposited within 90 days of the date of the decree or within a further period of 60 days if so allowed by the Court or within six weeks from the date of the certificate whichever was the later date. In all three cases now before the Court, the money was tendered after the expiration of 150 days from the date of the decree and long after the expiration of six weeks from the date of certificate. It has been held repeatedly that "the date of the decree" in this rule means the date when judgment was actually pronounced, because that latter date is the date which the decree bears: see Harendra Lal Roy v. Hari Dasi Debi (1) following a decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Owners of the Ship "Brenhilda" v. British India Steam Navigation Co. (2).

It was contended by the applicants, however, that a different meaning should be given to the phrase "date of the decree" in this rule as applicable to Federal Court appeals. Order IX, r. 2 of the Federal Court Rules deals with applications to this Court in Federal Court matters under O. XLV, r. 2, that is applications similar to applications for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council. In this Rule of the Federal Court Rules it is stated that such applications are to be made within 90 days from the date of the signing of the decree or order appealed from. It was therefore contended that the starting point from which time ran in such applications was the date when the decree was actually signed and not the date upon which the judgment was pronounced. There is a clear difference in the wording of O. XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. C. and O. IX, r. 2 of the Federal Court Rules. The words in O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. C., are, however, clear and it is not open to this Court to place any other construction upon them than that which has been placed by all the Courts in India in the past. The phrase "date of the decree" in O. XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. C. means the date which the decree bears or the date upon which judgment was pronounced. Whether the words "date of signing of the decree" appearing in O. IX, r. 2 of the Federal Court Rules mean something different from the date of the decree is a difficult question; but the point does not arise in this case, and it is therefore unnecessary for me to offer any opinion upon the question. It is sufficient to say that the starting point of time in O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. C., is undoubtedly the date which the decree bears and not the date when the decree was actually signed. As I have previously stated, in all these cases no money was tendered for printing costs within 90 days of the date of the decree, and no application was made in any of the cases to extend the time after the expiration of the 90 days. In fact, more than 60 days had elapsed after the expiration of the period of 90 days from the date of the judgments before any of these applications were made. In these circumstances, has the Court any power further to extend the time for the deposit of such printing costs?

It was contended on behalf of the applicants that the words "within 90 days or such further period not exceeding 60 days as the Court may upon cause shown allow from the date of the decree complained of" are directory and not mandatory. It is said that normally the deposit should be made within such period but the discretion of the Court is not limited, and the period could be extended in proper cases. Order XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. C., was amended by Act XXVI of 1920. Previous to the amendment the deposit for printing costs had to be made within six months from the date of the decree or within six weeks from the date of the grant of certificate whichever was the later date. By the amending Act of 1920 the words "within 90 days or such further period not exceeding 60 days as the Court may upon cause shown allow" were substituted for the words "within six months." Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Burjore v. Bhagana (3) held that the words "within six months" were directory and not mandatory, and the Court could allow further time to deposit printing costs in exceptional cases where there were cogent reasons for so doing. It is

(1) 14 O W N 420; 5 Ind. Cas. 844.

(2) 7 O 547; 8 I A 159; 4 Sar. 236 (P O).

(3) 10 O 557; 11 I A 7; 4 Sar. 498; 8 Ind. Jur. 216 (P O).

argued that the amendment merely amounts to substituting words which are directory only for words which had been previously held to be only directory. In my view the meaning of O. XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. O., as it now stands, is plain. An extension of time may be granted for deposit of printing charges after the expiry of 90 days upon cause being shown, but such extension of time cannot exceed 60 days, and if this further period of 60 days has elapsed, the Court has no power under the rule as it stands to grant further time. The words are, in my view, mandatory and limit the discretion of the Court. If the period of 90 days from the date of the decree has expired, the Court can at most grant a further extension of 60 days. Once that period has elapsed, the Court has no power as the rule stands to grant any further time.

The matter, however, does not rest there as far as appeals to His Majesty in Council are concerned. On February 9, 1920, the date upon which the amendment of O. XLV, r. 7 (1), to which I have referred, took effect, His Majesty in Council issued an order rescinding previous rules, orders and regulations relating to appeals to His Majesty in Council and substituting for them other rules regulating the mode, form and time of such appeals. By the terms of this order in Council of February 9, 1920, all Courts in India are bound to observe the rules therein contained. Rule 9 of this order in Council of February 9, 1920, reads as follows :

"Where an appellant, having obtained a certificate for the admission of appeal, fails to furnish the security or make the deposit required (or apply with due diligence to the Court for an order admitting the appeal), the Court may, on its own motion or on an application in that behalf made by the respondent, cancel the certificate for the admission of the appeal, and may give such directions as to the costs of the appeal and the security entered into by the appellant as the Court shall think fit, or make such further or other order in the premises as, in the opinion of the Court, the justice of the case requires."

In appeals to His Majesty in Council this rule empowers Courts in India to cancel certificates already given in certain cases. It is to be observed that no such power was given to the Courts under O. XLV, Civil P. O. This rule does not compel Courts to cancel certificates in case of failure to make deposits of printing costs. The words used are "may cancel" and not "shall cancel." In such cases if the Court does not cancel the certificate, it may make such other order, as, in the opinion of the Court, the justice of the case requires. It was strongly urged on behalf of the applicants that this rule gives the Court in Privy Council matters a power in proper cases to extend time before making a deposit of printing costs beyond the limit fixed by O. XLV, r. 7 (1) and in my view this contention is well-founded. Rule 9 of the Privy Council Rules allows the Court either to cancel the certificate or make such other order as the justice of the case demands. It appears to me that the framers of this rule contemplated that the justice of the case might require a further extension of time, and that being so, the Court was expressly granted the power to grant such extension in spite of the mandatory words contained in O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. The words used in r. 9 are sufficiently wide to give the Court power to extend time for making deposits of printing costs in proper cases beyond the limits fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. It must be remembered that s. 112, Civil P. O., contemplates a possible conflict between the rules contained in the Code and the rules framed by His Majesty in Council. That section expressly enacts that

"nothing contained in the Code shall be deemed to interfere with any rules made by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and for the time being in force, for the presentation of appeals to His Majesty in Council, or their conduct before the said Judicial Committee."

In other words, if there is a conflict between the rules contained in the Code and the rules issued by His Majesty in Council, the latter will prevail. In my view therefore the Court has power in proper cases in appeals to His Majesty in Council to extend time for making deposits of printing costs beyond the limits fixed by the Code. There has been considerable conflict of judicial opinion upon this point. Benches of this Court in Ramani Ranjan Bilas Upadhyaya v. Durga Dutt (4) and Kamala Kanta Singh v. Bindhumukhi Dassi (5) have held that the Court has no power to extend time for the deposit of printing costs beyond the limits fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. It would appear, however, that the Benches did not consider the effect of r. 9 of the Order-in-Council dated February 9, 1920, and dealt with the matter as if it was entirely governed by the provision of O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. In Govind Narain Singh v. Shamlal Singh (6) Rankin, C. J.

(4) 9 P L T 305; 105 Ind. Cas. 585; A I R 1927 Pat. 330

(5) A I R 1929 Pat. 431; 123 Ind. Cas. 769; Ind. Rul. (1930) Pat. 369.

(6) 39 Q W N 651.

and Ghose, J. of the Calcutta High Court held that O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O., and r. 9 of the Privy Council Rules, 1920, did not give the Court power to extend time beyond the limits defined in O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O., and a similar view was expressed by the Lahore High Court in Munna Lal v. Gajraj Singh (7). On the other hand, the High Courts of Bombay, Madras and Allahabad have taken a different view. In Nilkanth Balwant v. Sachidanand Vidya Narshimha (8) a Full Bench held that the effect of r. 9 of the Order-in-Council, 1920, was to give power to the Court in proper cases to extend the time beyond the limits fixed by the Code. A similar view was expressed by a Madras Full Bench in Mathukumalli Ramayya v. Vuppalapathi Lakshmayya (9) and by a Full Bench of five Judges of the Allahabad High Court in Bishnath Singh v. Court of Wards Estate of Sri Ram Chandra (10). This latter case overruled the earlier Full Bench case in Bahadur Lal v. Judges of the High Court, Allahabad (11) in which it was held, Niamatullah, J., dissenting, that r. 9 of the Order-in-Council of 1920 gave the Court no discretion to extend time beyond the limits fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. I respectfully agree with the views expressed by the learned Judges in the Bombay, Madras and Allahabad Full Bench cases, and I am of opinion that in Privy Council appeals this Court has power in proper cases to extend time for making deposit of printing costs beyond the limits fixed by O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O.

The next question to be determined is whether this power is given to the Courts in proceedings relating to appeals to the Federal Court. As I have stated previously, O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules provides that "the provisions of O. XLV of the Code, as modified and adapted by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, shall apply in relation to appeals to the Federal Court."

The word "Code" is defined in the Federal Court Rules in O. I, r. 2. The definition is as follows :

"In these rules, unless the context otherwise

(7) A I R 1935 Lah. 733; 159 Ind. Cas. 232; 8 R L 363.

(8) 51 B 430; 101 Ind. Cas. 555; A I R 1927 Bom. 217; 29 Bom. L R 352 (F B).

(9) I L R (1938) Mad. 1007; 177 Ind. Cas. 188; A I R 1938 Mad. 796; (1938) M W N 678; 48 L W 35; (1938) 2 M L J 128; 11 R M 276 (F B).

(10) A I R 1939 All. 299; 181 Ind. Cas. 378; I L R (1939) All. 549; (1939) A L J 278; 11 R A 580; 1939 O W N 366; 1939 O L R 291 (F B).

(11) 55 A 432; 143 Ind. Cas. 559; A I R 1933 All. 241; (1933) A L J 207; Ind. Rul. (1933) All. 290.

requires 'Code' means the Civil P. O., 1908, as amended or modified by any order in Council or by or under any Central Act."

Rule 9 of the Order-in-Council of February 9, 1920 does, in my view, modify O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O., because it empowers the Court in proper cases to grant further time to deposit printing costs, though such power is expressly confined within certain limits in O. XLV, r. 7. If O. XLV, r. 7, as modified by r. 9 of the Order-in-Council of February 9, 1920, is to apply to Federal Court appeals, then this Court has power in proper cases to extend the time for depositing printing costs in Federal Court appeals. It has been contended, however, that O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules only contemplates one modification of O. XLV of the Code, that is the modification made by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, and that being so, it is urged that the context requires that the word "Code" appearing in O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules should be read as the Civil P. O., 1908, and not as the Civil P. O., 1908 as amended or modified by any Order-in-Council. In short, it is urged that as one modification only is mentioned, all other modifications of the Code previously made by Orders-in-Council must be disregarded. If other modifications of the Code were contemplated by the framers of the Federal Court Rules, it is contended that it would have been sufficient to say in O. IX, r. 1 that "the provisions of O. XLV of the Code shall apply in relation to appeals to Federal Court" as by the definition of the word "Code" means the Civil P. O., 1908, as amended or modified by any Order-in-Council which would include the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

In my view the word "Code" in O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules must be given the meaning given to that word in the definition contained in the Rules. There is nothing in the terms of O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules which demands that the word "Code" should be given any meaning other than the meaning given in the definition. In my judgment what O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules means is that O. XLV, Civil P. O. as amended or modified by any Order-in-Council and in particular as modified and adapted by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, shall govern the procedure in Federal Court appeals. As

O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O. has been modified by Order-in-Council of February 9, 1920, so as to give the Court power to extend time to make a deposit in Privy Council appeals, such power is also given to the Court in relation to Federal Court appeals by reason of O. IX, r. 1 of the Federal Court Rules. To hold otherwise would be to deprive an appellant to the Federal Court of a right which he undoubtedly has in connection with appeals to His Majesty in Council. It is to be observed that r. 9 of Order-in-Council of February 9, 1920, only empowers the Court to extend time when the justice of the case requires it, and it is clear that this power should only be exercised in exceptional cases. In Burjore v. Bhagana (3) a case on O. XLV, r. 7, Civil P. O., before the amendment of 1920, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that time should not be extended beyond six months unless there were cogent reasons for doing so, and this has been emphasized in the Full Bench cases of Bombay, Madras and Allahabad, to which I have referred. All the Courts which have held that a Court has power to extend the time to make a deposit in Privy Council appeals, have also held that such power should be exercised with great caution and only where there are cogent reasons for doing so. In short, it is only where the justice of the case demands that the Court should extend time that such extension should be given. It will be therefore necessary to consider the particular facts of each of these cases to see whether such cogent reasons exist which demand that the Court should exercise its discretion in favour of the appellants and extend time for making the deposit of printing costs.

Federal Court Appeal No. 10 of 1939.—The facts in the application in Federal Code Appeal No. 10 of 1939 can be shortly stated as follows:—This Court delivered judgment on December 19, 1938, and granted a certificate that the case involved a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Government of India Act. On March 13, 1939, the decree of the High Court was actually signed and on March 27, 1939, the appellants made an application to this Court under O. XLV, r. 2, Civil P. O. On April 12, 1939, notice was served upon the appellants by this Court of the amount of the deposit necessary for printing costs. The appellants did not deposit the money, and on July 31, 1939, the office placed the matter before a Bench for orders. On September 1, 1939, the appellants filed an application in this Court intimating that he was then in a position to pay the money and that time for acceptance of the same should be extended, and this is the application now before the Court. The date of the decree and certificate is December 19, 1938, and the applicants should have deposited this sum within 90 days of December 19, 1938. The 90 days expired on March 28, and no application was made to the Court to extend the time. The further period of 60 days expired on May 27, and no application of any kind was made until September 1, and no explanation has been given for the delay beyond a vague statement that there was difficulty in obtaining the money. The amount involved was Rs. 253-3-0 and in my view, there are no cogent reasons in this case why the Court should exercise its discretion and extend the time. There has been great delay and in my view, the application to extend time for making the deposit should be rejected.

Federal Court Appeal No. 14 of 1939.—In this case judgment of the High Court was delivered on January 23, 1939, and a certificate given under s. 205 (1), Govt. of India Act, 1935. On March 13, 1939, the decree was signed and on April 21, 1939, the appellants filed a petition in this Court under O. XLV, r. 2, Civil P. O. On May 11, 1939, this appeal was consolidated with another appeal (Federal Court Appeal No. 13 of 1939) and an order was made apportioning the costs. On May 11, 1939, the office served an estimate of the printing costs upon the appellants and that estimate was for Rs. 93-3-0. On July 24, 1939, which was the opening day of the Court after the long vacation, this money was tendered but was refused by the Court as the tender was out of time. On July 25, 1939, the appellants filed this application praying for extension of time to deposit the money if such extension was necessary.

According to the appellants, appellant No. 1 contracted small-pox shortly after May 11, 1939, and was seriously ill for a considerable time. Appellant No. 2 who is the son of appellant No. 1 attained majority shortly before May 11, 1939, and it is said that he had to attend on his father and further that he was ignorant of matters connected with the limitation. Further it is said that after the attack of small-pox appellant No. 1 developed a scrotal tumour which incapacitated him for some time. For these reasons it is said that the appellants were unable to come to Patna and instruct lawyers to make the deposit before July 24, 1939; more than 150 (one hundred and fifty) days elapsed from the date of the decree, but, in my view, there are cogent reasons in this case why time should be extended. The facts mentioned by the appellants have been verified by affidavit, and it is to be noted that these facts are not contradicted by the respondents. If appellant No. 1 who was the karta of the family was incapacitated by small-pox, then there was good reason why the money was not paid within the period allowed by law. There seems to be no reason to doubt that appellant No. 2 was too inexperienced to take any steps to make the deposit or to apply for an extension of time. For these reasons I would extend the time for making the deposit and direct that the money tendered on July 24, 1939, be accepted.

Federal Court Appeal No. 17 of 1939.—In this case the judgment of the High Court was delivered on January 17, 1939, and a certificate given under s. 205 (1), Govt. of India Act, 1935. The decree was signed on February 13, 1939, and on May 11, 1939, the appellants filed a petition under O. XLV, r. 2, Civil P. C. The High Court vacation was from May 12, 1939, to July 23, 1939. On May 29, 1939, notice of the amount of printing costs, namely Rs. 210, was served upon the appellants, and on July 24, 1939 (that is, on the opening day of the Court after the vacation) the money was tendered and accepted by the learned Registrar subject to any orders passed by a Bench of the Court. One hundred and fifty days expired on June 16, 1939, that is during the vacation, and it was urged on behalf of the appellants that as the Court was closed, they could not make a deposit until the opening day of the Court.

In my judgment this Court is not closed during the vacation, and the money can be deposited and, if tendered, will be accepted. It will be observed that the notice of the amount of printing costs was actually sent by the office on May 29, 1939, and that was during the vacation. It has been expressly decided in this Court in Jai Kissen v. Baijnath Ram Marwari (12) that a deposit for printing costs may be made when the Court is not sitting but when the office is open. I am satisfied, however, that there has been considerable misunderstanding as to what business the office of this Court transacts during the vacation. In Anand Ram v. Ramghulam Sahu (13) the question arose as to whether appeals could be filed during the vacation, and certain correspondence is referred to in that report from which it is clear that the position with regard to this office during the vacation was far from clear. I am satisfied that there is considerable confusion even to-day, as no orders have been issued as to what the Court will or will not do during the vacation. The appellants in this case state that they were under the impression that if the money was deposited on the opening day of the Court, namely July 24, 1939, it would be accepted as being within time. Such has been the view of a large number of litigants, and they are not entirely to blame for such a view. The matter has not been made clear in the past, and that being so, I am quite prepared to believe that the appellants honestly believed that they could deposit this money on the opening day of the Court. This is not an ordinary case of ignorance of the law, and to a large extent, the mistake committed by the applicants was due to the failure of the Court in making the position clear. That being so, I am prepared to hold that there are cogent reasons in this case for extending the time for making a deposit, and accordingly I would direct the office to accept the deposit which was tendered on July 24, 1939.

For the reasons which I have given, I would therefore refuse to extend the time in Federal Court Appeal No. 10 of 1939 and dismiss the application. I would, however, extend the time in Federal Court Appeals Nos 14 and 17 of 1939 and direct the office to accept the money tendered. In all the circumstances, I would make no order as to costs of these applications.

Fazl Ali, J.—I agree.

Agarwala, J.—I agree to the order proposed. As, however, the reasons for my conclusion differ widely from those of my Lord the Chief Justice, I propose to state them in detail and to analyze the law bearing on the question at issue. The ordinary appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Court is described in s. 205, Govt. of India Act, 1935, and the Federal Legislature has been empowered to enlarge this jurisdiction by s. 206. Section 205 (1) gives a right of appeal to the Federal Court from any judgment, decree or final order of a High Court in British India, if the High Court certifies that the case involves a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the Act or any Order-in-Council made thereunder, and casts upon the High Court the duty to consider, in every case, whether or not such a question is involved, and of its own motion to give or withhold a certificate accordingly. Where a certificate is given, any party in the case may appeal to the Federal Court, (1) on the ground that any question as to the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act or of an Order-in-Council made thereunder has been wrongly decided; (2) on any ground on which that party could have appealed to His Majesty in Council if no such certificate has been given; and (3) with the leave of the Federal Court, on any other ground: [s. 205 (2).]

(12) 8 P L T 779; 103 Ind. Cas. 213; A I R 1927 Pat. 332.

(13) 2 Pat. 264; 71 Ind. Cas. 426; A I R 1923 Pat. 150; 3 P L T 820.

By the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, s. 111-A has been added to the Code and by it ss. 109, 110 and 111 of the Code have been declared to apply to appeals to the Federal Court as they apply in relation to appeals to his Majesty in Council, provided that

(a) so much of the said sections as delimits the cases in which an appeal will lie shall be construed as delimiting the cases in which an appeal will lie without the leave of the Federal Court otherwise than on the ground that a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of the said Act, or any Order-in-Council made thereunder, has been wrongly decided;

(b) in determining under cl. (c) of s. 109 whether the case is a fit one for appeal, and, under s. 110, whether the appeal involves a substantial question of law any question as to the interpretation of the said Act, or any Order-in-Council made thereunder shall be left out of account."

As to the procedure in appeals to the Federal Court, none of the provisions of the Civil P. O. apply to any proceedings in the Federal Court unless expressly incorporated in the Rules of the Federal Court (O. XI, r. 5). The procedure in the Federal Court in relation to appeals from that Court to His Majesty in Council is prescribed by O. XXXII of these Rules which applies the provisions of O. XLV of the Code, with certain modifications. So far as appeals from the High Courts to the Federal Court are concerned, O. IX, r. 1, provides:

"Where a certificate has been given under s. 205 (1) of the Act, the provisions of O. XLV of the Code, as modified and adopted by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, shall apply in relation to appeals to the Federal Court."

The only alteration in O. XLV of the Code effected by the Adaptation of Laws

Order, so far as appeals to the Federal Court are concerned, is the addition of r. 17 which is in these terms:

"17. Where a certificate has been given under s. 205 (1), Govt. of India Act, 1935, the provisions of this Order (i.e. O. XLV of the Code,) shall apply in relation to appeals to the Federal Court as they apply in relation to appeals to His Majesty in Council and reference in this Order to His Majesty in Council and to any Order of His Majesty in Council shall be construed as references to the Federal Court and the rules of the Federal Court."

Provided that:

"(a) Rule 3 of this Order shall have effect as if at the end of sub-r. (1) thereof there were inserted the words apart from any question of law as to the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act, 1935, or any Order-in-Council made thereunder;

(b) where the only ground of appeal stated in the petition is that any question of law as to the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act, 1935, or any Order-in-Council made thereunder has been wrongly decided, the petition need not pray for such a certificate as is mentioned in r. 3, and the like proceedings shall be had thereon as if such a certificate had been given except that no security shall be required for the costs of the respondent."

Rule 2 of O. XLV of the Code provides:

"Whoever desires to appeal to His Majesty in Council shall apply by petition to the Court whose decree is complained of."

Rule 3 (1) requires the petition to, (1) state the grounds of appeal, and (2) pray for a certificate either: (a) that as regards amount or value and nature, the case fulfils the requirements of s. 110, or (b) that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to the Federal Court. Rule 3 (1) is to be read as if, at the end of it, there were inserted the words "apart from any question of law as to the interpretation of the Govt. of India Act, 1935, or any Order-in-Council made thereunder: "[Proviso (a) to r. 17].

And where such a question is the only one to be raised in the appeal, (i) it is not necessary to pray for the certificate referred to in r. 3 (1), and (ii) the appellant is not required to furnish security for the respondent's costs: [Proviso (b) to r. 17].

In cases in which the certificate mentioned in r. 3 (1) is required, and is refused, the petition for leave to appeal must be dismissed: [r. 6]. Where the certificate is granted, the applicant is required to (i) furnish security, and (ii) deposit the amount required for certain expenses: [r. 7 (1).]

The security must be furnished and the deposit made within: (a) 90 days (or such further period, not exceeding 60 days, as the Court may upon cause shown allow) from the date of the decree complained of, (b) or within 6 weeks from the date of the grant of the certificate, whichever is the later date: [r. 7 (1).]

A question has been raised whether "the date of the decree" referred to in r. 7 (1) is the date on which the decree is actually signed or the date which the decree bears. The decrees in these present cases being decrees of the High Court to which the Civil P. O. applies bear date the day on which the judgments were pronounced, as required by O. XX, r. 7 of the Code. It may be contended that if the Federal Court Rules had intended to provide that limitation should run from the date on which the decree was actually signed, they would have said so, as in O. IX, r. 2 which deals with limitation for an application under O. XLV, r. 2, and provides that the period shall run from the date of signing the decree or order appealed from. In the present cases this point is not of any importance because whether the period of limitation for making the deposits required by r. 7 (1) be reckoned from the date which the decrees bear or from the date on which they were signed, the deposits were beyond the period prescribed by that Rule. Nor are we concerned with the alternative period, viz. six weeks from the date of the certificate, as no certificate under r. 3 (1) was required or granted. Section 205 (1), Govt. of India Act, 1935, and O. XLV, r. 17, proviso (b) of the Code, introduced by the Adaptation of Laws Order, having made it quite clear that when the only ground of appeal is that a question of law as to the interpretation of the Act or any Order-in-Council made thereunder has been wrongly decided, the aggrieved party, in such a case, has an unrestricted right of appeal which is not dependent on the grant of a certificate under O. XLV, r. 3.

In all these three cases the only ground of appeal is that a question of law as to the interpretation of the Act has been wrongly decided, and in each case "the date of the decree" is March 13, 1938, which was the date on which judgment was delivered in each of the cases, although in the case of Appeal No. 10 the decree was actually signed on December 19, 1938, in the case of Appeal No. 14 on January 23, 1939, and in the case of Appeal No. 17 on January 17, 1939. In Appeal No. 10 the costs were not tendered until September 1, 1939; in No. 14 the deposit was tendered on July 24, 1939, but refused by the office; and in No. 17 the deposit was tendered on July 24, 1939, and accepted by the office subject to objection. In none of the cases, therefore, has the deposit been made within the 90 days prescribed by

r. 7 (1), or even before the expiry of the further 60 days which the Court might, upon cause shewn, have allowed. The Court's annual vacation was from 12th May to July 22, 1939, and the 23rd was Sunday. During the vacation a Bench of two Judges was sitting to deal with criminal work and other work of an urgent nature. Throughout the vacation the office was open.

Two questions arise for decision: (1) Is this Court empowered to extend the period of limitation beyond the 60 days mentioned in r. 7 (1) and (2)? In the circumstances of these cases should that power be exercised in favour of any of the present appellants? The view taken in this Court, so far as appeals to His Majesty in Council are concerned, is that this Court has no power to extend time beyond the period of 60 days prescribed by r. 7 (1). Jai Kissen v. Baijnath Ram Marwari (12), Kamala Kanta Singh v. Bindhumukhi Dassi (5). The same view was taken in Ram Dhar v. Prag Narain (14), Munna Lal v. Gajraj Singh (7), Poornananthachi v. Gopalaswami Odayar (15) and J. N. Surty v. T. S. Chettyar Firm (16). The contrary view was taken in Nilkant Bulwant v. Sachidanand Vidya Narshimha (8) and in later Full Bench decisions of the Allahabad and Madras High Courts, Bishnath Singh v. Court of Wards Estate of Sri Ram Chandra (10) and Mathukumalli Ramayya v. Vuppalapathi Lakshmayya (9). Prior to 1920 the period prescribed by O. XLV, r. 7, was six months. It was held by the High Courts that the Court had a discretion to extend this period. In 1920 the period was reduced to 90 days and the further period to which the Court might extend the time was expressly limited to 60 days. This Court and the Rangoon Court, and the Allahabad and Madras Courts in their earlier decisions, held in the cases referred to above, that it does not lie within the discretion of the Court to extend the time beyond 60 days. The Bombay High Court, and the High Courts of Allahabad and Madras in their later decisions, take the contrary view. This view is based on para. 9 of an Order-in-Council dated February 9, 1920, which is an Order "for regulating the mode, form and time of appeal to be made from the decisions of any Court of Judicature in India" to His Majesty in Council. It has been held that para. 9 of this Order confers upon the High Courts a discretion to extend the time prescribed by O. XLV, r. 7 (1), Civil P. O. for the furnishing of security or deposit of costs in appeals to the Privy Council.

(14) 44 A 216; 65 Ind. Cas. 249; A I R 1922 All. 43; 20 A L J 13.

(15) 55 M 835; 138 Ind. Cas. 663; A I R 1932 Mad. 484; 62 M L J 685; (1932) M W N 557; 35 I W 679; Ind. Rul. (1932) Mad. 601.

(16) 4 R 265; 98 Ind. Cas. 417; A I R 1927 Rang. 20; 5 Bur. L J 187.

It is now contended that para. 9 also enables the High Courts to extend the time prescribed by O. XLV, for the furnishing of security or deposit of costs in appeals to the Federal Court. This contention is founded on O. IX, r. 1, of the Rules of the Federal Court and the definition of "Code" in O. I, r. 2 of those Rules. "Code" is there defined as "the Civil P. O., 1904, as amended or modified by any Order-in-Council or by or under any Central Act," unless the context otherwise requires. Order IX, r. 1 of the Rules of the Federal Court applies to civil appeals to that Court the provisions of "O. XLV of the Code as modified and adapted by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937." It is argued that the word "Code" in this rule must be read in the sense assigned to it in O. I, r. 2 and that when so read it includes para. 9 of the Order-in-Council dated February 9, 1920. The answer to that argument is that the Adaptation of Laws Order of 1937 is also an Order-in-Council and if all Orders-in-Council were intended to be included in the word "Code" in O. IX, r. 1, the words "as modified and adapted by the Govt. of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937" in that rule are redundant. I am supported in my conclusion that the word "Code" in O. IX, r. 1, is not used in the wider sense in which it is defined in O. I, r. 2, by the following consideration. If para. 9 of the Order-in-Council of 1920 applies to appeals to the Federal Court, then the whole of that Order applies. Now para. 1 of that Order-in-Council provides:

"Applications to the Court for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council shall be made within 90 days of the decree or order to be appealed from, subject to ss. 4, 5 and 12, Lim. Act."

This must be compared with O. IX, r. 2 of the Rules of the Federal Court:

"Subject to the provisions of ss. 4 and 12, Lim. Act, 1908, applications under r. 2 of the said O. XLV, shall be presented within 90 days from the date of the signing of the decree or order appealed from."

If the Order-in-Council of 1920 applies to appeals to the Federal Court it was entirely unnecessary to state in O. IX, r. 2, that ss. 4 and 12, Lim. Act, apply to applications to prefer such appeals, for these sections would apply by reason of para. 1 of the Order-in-Council. Furthermore, while the Order-in-Council expressly applies s. 5, Lim. Act, to appeals to His Majesty in Council, O. IX, r. 2 of the Rules of the Federal Court deliberately omits any reference to that section and also prescribes that the period of limitation shall be "90 days from the date of the signing of the decree or order appealed from" and not, as provided in the Order-in-Council, "90 days of the decree or order to be appealed from" which, by reason of O. XX, r. 7 of the Code, means 90 days from the date on which the judgment was pronounced. I would therefore hold that neither para. 9, nor any of the other paragraphs of the Order-in-Council of 1920 applies to appeals to the Federal Court and, consequently, that this Court has no power to extend the time prescribed by O. XLV of the Code in the case of appeals to the Federal Court.

It remains to consider the question whether, apart altogether from judicial discretion, a litigant has a right to an extension of the prescribed time. In this connection s. 4, Lim. Act, 1908, and s. 10, General Clauses Act, 1897, require consideration. Section 4, Lim. Act, 1908, provides:

"4. Where the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day that the Court re-opens."

The furnishing of security or the depositing of costs is not, in my view, an "application", which means, as I understand the word in this section an application to the Court to take some step which the Court is empowered to take only on being requested to do so, such as execute a decree, set aside an execution sale, etc. When making a deposit of costs the appellant does not move the Court to do anything. Furthermore, it is noticeable that although the Rules of the Federal Court provide that s. 4, Lim. Act, shall apply to the period of 90 days prescribed for an application under O. XLV, r. 2 [see Rules of the Federal Court, O. IX, r. 2] they make no such provision with respect to the action to be taken under r. 7 (1). Section 148 of the Code does not apply because the periods of 90 and 60 days in O. XLVII, r. 7, are fixed by the Code and not by the Court. The relevant portions of s. 10, General Clauses Act, 1897, are as follows:

"10 (1). Where by any Central Act...made after the commencement of this Act, any act...is directed or allowed to be done or taken in any Court or office...within a prescribed period then, if the Court or office is closed...on...the last day of the prescribed period, the act shall be considered as done or taken in due time if it is done or taken on the next day afterwards on which the Court or office is open.

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to any act...to which the Lim. Act, 1877 (now the Act of 1908), applies.

(2) This section applies to all Central Acts..... made on or after January 14, 1887."

As s. 4, Lim. Act, does not, in my view, apply to a deposit of costs, there is nothing in the Lim. Act which applies to the making of such a deposit, and the matter is governed by s. 10, General Clauses Act.

The next question is whether the appellants are entitled to an extension of time under this section. First, with regard to the expression "Court or office." Here, I think, an act directed or allowed to be done or taken in an office is used in this section in contradistinction to an act directed or allowed to be done or taken in a Court, and that "office" does not here include the office of a Court, for, when a litigant is required to do a particular act to further his suit or appeal, it is really in Court that he is required to do it although for the sake of conveyance and to save the time of Judges, it is in fact done in the office of the Court. The office of the Court is merely the hand with which the Court performs some of its functions. If this be so, the fact that the office of a Court remains open while the Court itself is closed for judicial business will not deprive a litigant of the extended time for doing an act to which s. 10, General Clauses Act, applies.

It has been pointed out that in Appeals Nos. 14 and 17 the office of the Court served estimates of costs on the appellants during the vacation and it was suggested that this indicates that the Court was not closed within the meaning of s. 10. As I have stated above, two Judges sit during the vacation to deal with criminal work and other urgent work. They do not necessarily sit every day of the vacation. Usually there is so much criminal work for them to do that no other work is dealt with unless it is really of an urgent nature. In practice, the only civil work which is ordinarily entertained in the vacation consists of applications for stay of execution or sale, and it cannot be overlooked that it is not only those Judges who are not on vacation duty who avail themselves of the vacation but also the majority of Advocates, who are officers of the Court. In these circumstances it seems to me that the Court is closed for ordinary business during the annual vacation. This conclusion is in accordance with the decision of the Taxing Judge of this Court in Anand Ram v. Ramghulam Sahu (13). The facts of that case were as follows: A memorandum of appeal properly stamped in accordance with the then current Court Fees Act was presented to the Assistant Registrar on August 18, 1922, during the vacation. On that date the Registrar, who is the officer whom this Court has appointed to receive memoranda of appeal was not in Patna. An amendment of the Court Fees Act which enhanced the fees payable on memoranda of appeal came into operation on August 24. The Court re-opened, after the vacation, on October 23. The question for decision was whether the presentation to the Assistant Registrar before the amendment was a valid presentation or not. In the course of his judgment, the Taxing Judge observed:

"There are ample authorities to shew that a memorandum of appeal presented during the vacation to the proper officer appointed in that behalf will be a valid presentation although it is open to the appellant to present a memorandum of appeal on the first day of the opening of the Court under the law of limitation if the time fixed for the filing of the same expires during the vacation. This is for the benefit of the litigants. But there is nothing to prevent the presentation of a plaint or memorandum of appeal or during a vacation or even on a Sunday, provided it is presented to a proper officer."

This case decided (1) that although presentation to a proper officer on a dies non is a valid presentation, (2) a presentation on the re-opening day is a presentation within time even when the prescribed period of limitation has expired. This latter proposition proceeds on the view that the Court is "closed," within the meaning of s. 4, Lim. Act, during the vacation, although the vacation Judges attend Court for urgent judicial business. In another case, Jai Kissen v. Baijnath Ram Marwari (12), a Division Bench held that where the Court is not sitting but the office is open, the time for a deposit of the printing costs of a Privy Council appeal cannot be deemed to expire on the next day when the Court actually sits. The learned Judges refer neither to the decision in Anand Ram v. Ramghulam Sahu (13), nor to s. 10, General Clauses Act. Their decision is apparently based on a distinction between the Court and the office of the Court, a distinction, which I have already indicated above, should, in my view, be held not to exist.

In this view of the matter I would hold that in Appeal No. 14 the deposit was tendered in time and was wrongly refused by the office; and that in Appeal No. 17 the deposit was made in time. In each of these appeals the deposit should be accepted. With regard to Appeal No. 10, I would hold that as no deposit was made within the prescribed period, it cannot be accepted as the Court has no power to extend the time beyond the 60 days, which have elapsed.

s. Answer accordingly.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT

Civil Revision Application No. 7 of 1936

September 16, 1938

DAVIS, J. C. AND TYABJI, J.

RAMCHAND KIMATRAI AND OTHERS—

APPLICANTS

versus

UDHALMAL DWARKADAS AND OTHERS—

OPPONENTS

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 12 (ii)—Decree signed and sealed but Court ordering plaintiff to pay deficit court-fee—Plaintiff getting benefit under decree—Revision from such order—High Court can take action under s. 12 (ii) before passing final orders.

Where the plaintiff is ordered to pay the deficit court-fee after the judgment is signed and sealed, the Judge would be acting without jurisdiction, in that after giving judgment, his power to order the deficit court-fee to be paid is gone. But although the plaintiff may have a genuine grievance that he had not the opportunity of being heard and that the Court was functus officio, if he gets benefits from the decree, it is but reasonable that he should pay court-fee upon the benefits so received. Consequently the High Court, in revision from such an order, can before passing final orders, take action under s. 12 (ii), Court Fees Act, 137 Ind. Cas. 855 (1) and 53 Ind. Cas. 435 (3), explained. [p. 365, col. 1.]

O.R. App. from the order of the Joint Sub-Judge, Shikarpur, dated November 7, 1935.

Mr. Sughanlal Hassanand, for the Applicants.

Mr. K. H. Nagrani, for the Opponents.

Mr. Partabrai D. Punwani, Advocate-General, for the Crown.

Davis, J. C.—This is a revision application against the order of the Joint Sub-Judge of Shikarpur, dated November 7, 1935, in which after a compromise decree had been signed and sealed by the Court on October 14, 1935, the Judge ordered deficit court-fee upon Rs. 11,000 to be paid. The applicant in this revision application who is the plaintiff, is aggrieved and says that the Subordinate Judge was functus officio when he passed this order as to the payment of court-fee and while his learned Advocate asks us in revision to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge, he at the same time says that we have no power under s. 12 (ii), Court Fees Act, to remedy the mistake to the detriment of the revenue in the payment of the court-fee which the record before us may show. Now so far as the order of November 7 is concerned, it does appear that this order was made without jurisdiction. The compromise decree was signed and sealed on October 14. Therefore, so far as the Court's power was concerned, that decree, except so far as it is provided by the Civil P. O. that a judgment can be altered or be reviewed, was final, so far as the Court which passed it is concerned. In Kedar Nath v. Maharaja Chandra Mauleshwar Prasad Singh (1), at p. 535, the Court held that where judgment is pronounced and signed and sealed the decree must follow and the Court cannot even direct the preparation of the decree to be stayed until the payment of the deficit court-fee. But that case is not entirely in point. In the case before us the Judge did not order the decree to be postponed till the payment of the deficit court-fee because the decree was signed and sealed before the order of payment was made. It is not therefore necessary for us to decide whether it is not even competent to a Court before a decree has been signed and sealed but after judgment has been pronounced and signed, to order the drawing up of the decree to be postponed, until a deficit court-fee has been paid. But once the decree has been signed and sealed, it appears to us that the Judge of that Court cannot order deficit court-fee to be paid. In the Patna case the learned Judge said :

"After the judgment has been pronounced and it has been signed and sealed, no power is left in the Court to alter it or add to it or subtract anything from it; and the judgment having been pronounced, a decree must be prepared in accordance with it. Section 28, Court Fees Act, in our opinion, does not empower the Court to call upon the parties to pay the deficit court-fee after judgment has been pronounced. It only provides for validating certain acts which would be invalid if a certain document was not properly stamped. We are fortified in the view we take by a Full Bench decision of our own Court in Radhika Raman v. Janki Kuer (2), where it was held that when the High Court dismisses an appeal for whatever cause, it ceases to have seisin of the appeal or case and is powerless to call upon the respondent to pay any deficiency due by him in respect of court-fees payable in the lower Court and consequently has no jurisdiction in such circumstances to restrain the respondent from executing the decree obtained by him. The same view was taken in the Calcutta High Court in Jatra Mohan

(1) 11 Pat 532 at p. 535; 137 Ind. Cas. 855; A I R 1933 Pat. 228; 13 P L T 504; Ind. Rul. (1933) Pat. 159.

(2) A I R 1919 Pat. 9; 51 Ind. Cas. 756; 4 Pat. L J 472 (F B).

Sen v. Secretary of State (3)."

The Calcutta case to which this judgment refers, Jatra Mohan Sen v. Secretary of State (3), was a case where the suit was dismissed and the plaintiff was ordered to pay the deficit court-fee after the judgment was delivered and the Court accepted. without much argument the contention that the Judge acted without jurisdiction, in that after giving judgment, his powers to order the deficit court-fee to be paid, had gone. But we do not think that either of the decisions prevent us before we have passed final orders in revision application either allowing or dismissing it, from taking action under s. 12 (ii), Court Fees Act. We are not concerned with sub-s. (i) to s. 12, Court Fees Act, because that relates to the Courts first accepting a plaint or a memorandum of appeal and has no reference to the alteration of a court-fee by another Court in appeal. Section 12 (i) is as follows :

"Every question relating to valuation for the purpose of determining the amount of any fee chargeable under this chapter on a plaint or memorandum of appeal shall be decided by the Court in which such plaint or memorandum as the case may be, is filed and such decision shall be final as between the parties to the suit."

Sub-section (ii) of s. 12 relates to cases such as this, where the order in a suit has come before a Court of reference or revision as the order in this suit is before us in revision and if then we consider, as we do, that the question as to court-fee has been wrongly decided to the detriment of the revenue, by the lower Court, we consider we have power to require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay such additional fee as would be payable were the question rightly decided. Section 12 (ii) is as follows :

"But whenever any such suit comes before a Court of Appeal, reference or revision, if such Court considers that the said question has been wrongly decided to the detriment of the revenue, it shall require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the question been rightly decided, and the provisions of s. 10, para. 11, shall apply."

The learned Advocate for the applicant says that there has been in fact no decision by the trial Court so as to give this Court jurisdiction under s. 12 (ii), because no specific issue as to the court-fee to be paid was raised and decided in the lower Court. It is clear, however, that when a plaint is admitted, by necessary implication, there is a decision that the right court-fee has been paid and in fact in this case the applicant as plaintiff was ordered to pay an additional tional court-fee on Rs. 2,000 based on his claim as a creditor against the partnership firm. The statement in the memorandum of appeal that the plaintiff only asked for declaration that he was a creditor is incorrect, and of course such a prayer could not stand alone and must be followed by a prayer for some consequential relief, that for instance, an order be passed that the sum found due to him should be paid to him.

A reference to the plaint would show this prayer in fact was not made. The plaintiff sued as legal representative of his father, one Seth Shivaldas, who was a partner with Seth Dwarkadas in a firm, for the settlement of partnership accounts. He also alleged that he was separate from his father and he advanced money by law of loan to the partnership business and he asked for a declaration that he was such a creditor and for a prayer that he should be paid from the partnership assets the money he had lent to the partnership firm. His claim was settled by compromise and it is in relation to this compromise that this question of court-fee has been raised because under the terms of the compromise he was to get 11 survey numbers. He was also to get the balance due under a decree in Suit No. 84 of 1927 and apparently on these two items the Judge has placed the value Rs. 7,000 and Rs. 4,000, respectively. He complains that these values were placed upon these items without his knowledge and without his being heard and after the Court was functus officio. It appears also that in the settlement of the partnership accounts, the applicant was awarded a sum of Rs. 542. On the ground that he had not the opportunity of being heard and on the ground that the Court was functus officio, the applicant may have a genuine grievance, but it appears to us not unreasonable that as the applicant has got the benefit of this compromise decree he should pay the court-fee upon the benefits so received. He has already paid court-fee on Rs. 2,000 as his share on settlement of partnership accounts. This share was settled at only Rs. 542. The balance of the court-fee so paid can therefore be taken into account in his favour when the court-fee payable by him on the other part of his claim as creditor of the partnership valued by the Judge at Rs. 11,000 is settled. He has also paid court-fee on the declaration which, however, he has obtained.

We do not think we should now pass any final order allowing or rejecting this revision application, for if we did, our action might be open to the same objection as in this case is raised, that having allowed or dismissed the revision application we are functus officio and can make no order under sub-s. (ii) to s. 12. That such an argument under the circumstances would be a good argument, we think a matter of some doubt. But we think it better not to make any final order rejecting or allowing the revision application, that is to say, setting aside or refusing to set aside the order of the Judge passed without jurisdiction until proper court-fee has been paid in the suit out of which this revision application arises. The Judge in the trial Court should therefore give notice to the applicant and inquire into and decide as to what proper court-fee is payable and report to us. We shall then decide what proper court-fee is payable, and when this has been paid, we shall then pass final orders on this revision application. The Judge should report as to the court-fee payable within two months. Order accordingly.

D.

Order accordingly.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Second Appeals Nos. 685 and 686 of 1937

April 5, 1939

LOKUR, J.

SURAT BOROUGH MUNICIPALITY—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SARIFA KARUNNISSA AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS

Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act (XVIII of 1925), ss. 104, 105, 203—S. 105, if prescribes limitation—Powers of Municipality acting under ss. 104 and 105, whether governed by Limitation Act (IX of 1908)—Remedy of Municipality by suit under s. 203 time-barred—If can exercise powers under s. 105—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 28—Act bars remedy only by way of suit—Right exists and can be enforced by other remedy—S. 28, if affects right to movable property.

Once a bill is presented with "the least practicable delay" as required by s. 104, sub-a. (1) of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, the right to issue a notice of demand and then to recover the amount by a distress warrant under s. 105 accrues to the Municipality, and that right is not lost by lapse of time. Section 105 does not prescribe any period of limitation, nor does it say, like s. 104, that the distress warrant should be issued with the least practicable delay. The periods of limitation prescribed for filing a suit under the Lim. Act govern the procedure in a Court of law, and the powers of the municipality acting under the provisions of ss. 104 and 105 are not governed by the Lim. Act. The fact that the remedy of the municipality to recover the amount by filing a suit in a Civil Court under s. 203 is time-barred cannot prevent it from exercising the special powers conferred upon it by the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act. [p. 367, col. 2.]

The rule of limitation is a rule of procedure, a branch of the adjective law, and does not either create or extinguish rights, except in the case of acquisition of title to immovable property by prescription under s. 28, Lim. Act. It is only the remedy by way of a suit that is barred, but the right itself continues to exist; and if there is some other remedy by which that right can be enforced, the Lim. Act cannot come in the way. Thus, where the recovery of a debt is barred by lapse of time, the right to the debt is not extinguished, and if the debtor, without being aware of the bar of time pays up, he cannot sue the creditor to refund the money to him on the ground that his claim for recovery of the debt had become time-barred. 145 Ind. Cas 893 (1), relied on. [p. 368, col. 1.]

Section 28, Lim. Act extinguishes only the right to immovable property if the claim to it is not enforced within the period of limitation, but it does not affect the right to movable property.

S. As. from an order of the District Judge Surat, in Appeal No. 78 of 1936.

Mr. N. N. Majmudar, for the Appellant.

Judgment.—These two second appeals arise out of two companion suits, one filed by the wife and the other by the husband, for a refund of the amounts of Municipal taxes said to have been unlawfully recovered by the Surat Borough Municipality under warrants of distress, and paid by them under protest. In appeal No. 685 of 1937 the respondent was sent a bill for Rs. 105-5-8 on August 6, 1934, including Rs. 101-9-8, as arrears from the year 1923. In appeal No. 686 of 1937 the respondent was sent a bill for Rs. 160-14-0 on the same day, including Rs. 150-6-0, for arrears from the year 1924. Both the respondents made applications to the Municipality protesting against the bills, and as distress warrants were issued against them, they paid the amounts under protest, and filed these suits to recover the amounts which were in excess of the amounts due for six years prior to the bills, on the ground that arrears more than six years old were time-barred, and that the Municipality had no right to recover them by distress warrants. The trial Court held that in the case of the house-tax, which was a charge on the house, the period of limitation was twelve years, and in the case of other taxes the period of limitation was only six years. It further held that those amounts of the taxes, for the recovery of which the claim of the Municipality was time-barred, could not be recovered by distress warrants, and gave the plaintiffs in the two suits decrees on that basis. In the suit in appeal No. 686 of 1937, the Municipality was ordered to refund a sum of Rs. 63-12-0 to the plaintiff, while in the suit in appeal No. 685 of 1937, the Municipality was ordered to refund a sum of Rs. 31-11-8 to the plaintiff. Both the decrees were confirmed in appeal by the learned District Judge, and the Municipality has presented these two appeals.

The only question to be decided in these appeals is, whether the Municipality had no power to recover the amounts of taxes, which were time-barred under the Lim. Act, by issuing distress warrants under s. 105, Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, 1925. It is true that a part of the claim of the Municipality would have been time-barred if the Municipality wanted to file a suit to recover it in a Civil Court. But the Municipality is given special powers under s. 105 to recover its dues by issuing distress warrants. Section 104, sub-s. (1) of the Act provides that when any amount, which by or under any provisions of the Act, is declared to be recoverable under Chap. VIII, or is claimable as an amount or instalment on account of any other tax, becomes due, then the Chief Officer shall, with the least practicable delay, cause to be presented to any person liable for the payment thereof, a bill for the sum claimed as due. Sub-s. (2) of s. 104 prescribes the contents of the bill; and sub-s. (3) provides that if the sum for which any bill has been presented, as aforesaid is not paid at the municipal office, or to a person authorized by any rule in that behalf to receive such payments, within fifteen days from the presentation thereof, the Chief Officer may cause to be served upon the person to whom such a bill has been presented, a notice of demand. Section 105, sub-s. (1) of the Act empowers the Municipality to recover the amount by distress and sale of the movable property or the attachment and sale of the immovable property of the defaulter on whom a notice of demand has been served and who does not, within fifteen days from the receipt of such notice, either pay the amount demanded in the notice, or show cause to the satisfaction of the Chief Officer why he should not pay the same. Section 105 does not in any way limit the power of the Chief Officer to recover the amounts of the taxes in respect of which bills and notices of demand have been issued under s. 104, except that before issuing a warrant, he should consult the President.

Both the lower Courts seem to think that as s. 203 of the Act enables the Municipality to file a suit to recover such taxes, and as such suits are governed by the provisions of the Lim. Act, it must be presumed that even the remedy by way of distress warrants under s. 105 is similarly limited. There is no justification for such a view. Section 203 only provides an alternative procedure for the recovery of taxes, as is clear from the marginal note. The section itself says that in lieu of any process of recovery allowed by or under the Act, or in case of failure to realise by such process, the whole or any part of any amount recoverable by the Municipality, it shall be lawful for the Municipality to sue in any Court of competent jurisdiction the person liable to pay the same. The reason for providing this alternative remedy is obvious. No distress warrant can be issued under s. 105 of the Act unless a bill and a notice of demand are served under s. 104. Sub-s. (1) of s. 104 requires that the bill should be presented to the person concerned with the least practicable delay after the amount has become due. If for any reason such bill is not presented, the Chief Officer cannot present a bill after a long delay and pursue the remedies provided by ss. 104 and 105 of the Act. In such cases it will be necessary for the Municipality to have recourse to the alternative remedy of filing a suit in a Civil Court as provided by s. 203. Once a bill is presented with "the least practicable delay" as required by s. 104, sub-s. (1), of the Act, the right to issue a notice of demand and then to recover the amount by a distress warrant under s. 105 accrues to the Municipality, and that right is not lost by lapse of time. Section 105 does not prescribe any period of limitation, nor does it say, like s. 104, that the distress warrant should be issued with the least practicable delay. The periods of limitation prescribed for filing a suit under the Lim. Act govern the procedure in a Court of law, and the powers of the Municipality acting under the provisions of ss. 104 and 105 are not governed by the Lim. Act. The fact that the remedy of the Municipality to recover the amount by filing a suit in a Civil Court is time-barred cannot prevent it from exercising the special powers conferred upon it by the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, 1925.

The rule of limitation is a rule of procedure, a branch of the adjective law, and does not either create or extinguish rights, except in the case of acquisition of title to immovable property by prescription under s. 28, Lim. Act. It is only the remedy by way of a suit that is barred, but the right itself continues to exist; and if there is some other remedy by which that right can be enforced, the Lim. Act cannot come in the way. Thus, where the recovery of a debt is barred by lapse of time, the right to the debt is not extinguished, and if the debtor, without being aware of the bar of time pays up, he cannot sue the creditor to refund the money to him on the ground that his claim for recovery of the debt had become time-barred: Shiam Lal Diwan v. Official Liquidators, U. P. Oil Mills Co., Ltd. (1), at p. 951. On the same principle, although a party has lost his right to file a suit to enforce a stale claim, still his right continues to exist; and if he happens to be a defendant, he can rely upon that right unless it is extinguished by s. 28, Lim. Act. This principle is fully discussed in Gopal Bhaurao v. Shree Jagannath Pandit (2). Section 28, Lim. Act, however, extinguishes only the right to immovable property if the claim to it is not enforced within the period of limitation, but it does not affect the right to movable property. It is therefore clear that, as the defendant Municipality issued the bills in time with the least practicable delay and the recovery was postponed by reason of the applications made by the plaintiffs themselves from time to time, the right of the Municipality to recover the amounts of the bills by distress warrants under s. 105, Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, 1929, is not lost or time-barred. The amounts recovered were really due from the plaintiffs, and, as they have been recovered by the Municipality, the plaintiffs have no right to claim a refund of those amounts. For these reasons I allow the appeals and dismiss both the suits. The respondents in the two appeals shall pay the costs of the appellant throughout and bear their own.

s. Appeals allowed.

(1) 55 A 912 at p. 151; 145 Ind. Cas. 893; A I R 1933 All. 789; (1933) A L J 1203; 6 R A 124 (F B).
(2) 59 B 502; 159 Ind. Cas. 213; A I R 1935 Bom. 326; 37 Bom. L R 471; 8 R B 175.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 19 of 1939

July 18, 1939

DEBAYSHIRB, O. J. AND NASIM ALI, J.
DIGAMBAR PONDÁ AND ANOTHER

—APPELLANTS

versus

SATISH CHANDRA DAS—

RESPONDENT

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 26-G—
Order in proceedings under, appealability.

The Ben. Ten. Act, nowhere provides for an appeal against an order in a proceeding under s. 26-G though there are provisions in other sections of the Act where an appeal has been provided for against other orders. Such an order is not also appealable under s. 96, Civil P. O., because the decree contemplated by s. 96 of the Code is a decree made in a suit. A proceeding under s. 26-G is started by an application and not by a plaint, and consequently the order under s. 26-G cannot be said to be an order in a suit.

A. from appellate order of the District Judge, Midnapore, dated December 17, 1938.

Messrs. Gopendra Nath Das and Sambhu Nath Banerjee, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Rama Prosad Mukherji, Saroja Kumar Maity and Kali Pada Sinha, for the Respondent.

Nasim Ali, J.—This is an appeal against an order of the District Judge of Midnapore, dated December 17, 1938, confirming the order of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court of Midnapore, dated December 3, 1938, in a proceeding under s. 26-G, Ben. Ten. Act. The learned District Judge has dismissed the appeal on the ground that no appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge lay to him. The question for determination in this appeal therefore is whether an appeal to the lower Appellate Court from the order of the Subordinate Judge was competent. Section 26-G (6) is in these terms:

"An application under sub-s. (5) shall be accompanied by a process-fee of the prescribed amount for service of notice on the mortgagee; and the Court or Revenue Officer to whom such an application is made, may, after service of such notice, award to the mortgagor such compensation as appears equitable in respect of the period during which the mortgagee retained possession after the date on which the mortgagor became entitled to be restored to possession and may pass an order restoring the possession of the land mortgaged to the mortgagor and such order shall have the effect of a decree of a Civil Court."

The contention of Mr. Das, on behalf of the appellants, is that the order of the Subordinate Judge is appealable, as sub-s. (6) of s. 26-G definitely states that the order shall have the effect of a decree of a Civil Court. The Ben. Ten. Act, however, nowhere provides for an appeal against an order in a proceeding under s. 26-G though we find provisions in other sections of the Act where an appeal has been provided for against other orders. Mr. Das contended that the order of the Subordinate Judge being a decree of a Civil Court was appealable under s. 96, Civil P. O. The decree contemplated by s. 96 of the Code, however, is a decree made in a suit. A proceeding under s. 26-G is started by an application and not by a plaint, and consequently the order under s. 26-G cannot be said to be an order in a suit. The order complained against therefore was not appealable before the District Judge. The learned District Judge was therefore right in dismissing the appeal. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs, the hearing-fee being assessed at two gold mohurs.

Derbyshire, C. J.—I agree.

D. Appeal dismissed.

ODH CHIEF COURT

First Civil Appeal No. 94 of 1936

October 5, 1939

ZIA-UL HASAN AND RADHA KRISHNA, JJ.
DURGA DAS AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

Musammât HANIFA BEGAM AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS

Muhammâdan Law—Dower—Claim for—Nature of—Simple money decree in dower suit—Subsequent bona fide transfer of property by heirs—If affected by decree—Such transfer during pendency of appeal—S. 52, Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), if applies.

A Muhammadan woman's claim for dower is a simple money claim. A decree for dower obtained by the widow of a Muhammadan against the other heirs even though it may be realisable from the assets of the deceased does not create a charge against those assets unless the decree specifically creates such a charge. [p. 310, col. 2.]

Where therefore subsequent to the passing of a simple money decree in a dower suit but pending appeal the heirs of the deceased Muhammadan mortgage the property of the deceased in their hands, bona fide for value, the mortgage is not affected by such a decree and the decree not having created a charge on the property s. 52, T. P. Act has no application 130 Ind. Cas. 113 (1) and 95 Ind. Cas. 367 (2), relied on, 28 Ind. Cas. 191 (4), distinguished, Syud Basahat Hussain v. Dooli Unand (3), referred to.

F. O. A. against the order of the Civil Judge of Lucknow, dated April 30, 1936.

Mr. Raj Kumar Srivastava, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Mohammad Wasim and Shah Mohammad Hussain Usmani, for the Respondent.

Judgment.—This is a plaintiffs' first appeal arising out of a suit brought by them in the Court of the Civil Judge, Lucknow, for a declaration that the property in suit is liable to be attached and sold in execution of their decree and that the defendants have no right or title to the property.

The property consists of a two-thirds share in a kothi situated in China Bazar, Lucknow. This kothi and some other property was owned by one Hamid Ali Khan, a Shia Muhammadan, who died in September 1918 leaving as his heirs his widow, Kaniz Sughra Begam, his sister Musammât Salimunnissa and his brother Nawab Ali Khan. A dower debt of Rs. 25,000 was due to Kaniz Sughra Begam and as a childless Shia widow, she was entitled to a one-fourth share in the movables and in the materials of the houses left by her husband. She sold both her dower debt and her one-fourth share in the inheritance of her husband to the plaintiffs and some others. The transferees filed two suits against Nawab Ali Khan and Musammât Salimunnissa, one in respect of the dower debt purchased by them, and the other for partition of the one-fourth share of Kaniz Sughra Begam in the property of Hamid Ali Khan. The suit for dower was decreed on May 24, 1922, and though Nawab Ali Khan appealed against the decree, the appeal was dismissed by the Allahabad High Court on May 12, 1926 (Ex. 3). The suit for partition was dismissed by the trial Court but it was eventually decreed by the High Court and the final decree for partition was passed on January 29, 1931 (Ex. 4). On March 5, 1925, Nawab Ali Khan mortgaged a two-thirds share in the site of the kothi in question and a moiety share in the materials to one Nawab Saiyid Ali Khan for Rs. 8,000 (Ex. 9). Nawab Saiyid Ali Khan sued on his mortgage and obtained a preliminary decree on August 7, 1929. The decree was made absolute on March 8, 1930, and on August 6, 1930, Saiyid Ali Khan sold this decree to Chaudhri Mohammad Jamil, who is now represented by the defendants-respondents. Chaudhri Mohammad Jamil put the decree purchased by him in execution and purchased the property himself. Subsequently the plaintiffs-appellants attached the property in suit in execution of their dower decree. The defendants objected under O. XXI, r. 58, Civil P. O. and their objections were allowed. Thereupon the plaintiffs brought the suit which has given rise to this appeal mainly on the grounds that Saiyid Ali Khan and Chaudhri Mohammad Jamil took the transfers with full knowledge of the plaintiffs' claim and the decrees made in their favour and that the transfer made by Nawab Ali Khan in favour of Nawab Saiyid Ali Khan was with the intention of defrauding his creditors particularly the plaintiffs.

The suit was contested by the defendants, the heirs of Chaudhri Mohammad Jamil, and on the defence put up by them, the following issues were framed by the learned Civil Judge.

1. Are the transfers in favour of Nawab Saiyid Ali Khan and Chaudhri Mohammad Jamil invalid having been made during the pendency of the partition and dower suits?

2. Was the transfer made by Nawab Ali Khan made with intent to defraud the plaintiffs or their transferees' claim?

3. Are the defendants or their predecessors-in-interest transferees in good faith and for consideration?

4. Does the order dated May 18, 1935, operate as res judicata between the parties?

5. To what relief are the plaintiffs entitled?

Issue No. 1 was decided by the learned Civil Judge in the negative holding that the doctrine of lis pendens did not apply to the case. The objection on which Issue No. 2 was framed was not pressed before the trial Court so no finding was recorded on that issue. The learned Civil Judge did not also consider it necessary to decide Issue No. 3 as the plaintiffs had given up their plea of the transfer having been made with intent to defraud them. Issue No. 4 was framed on the defendants' plea that if the property in suit be held to have been subject to a charge in favour of the plaintiffs, the order of May 18, 1935, on the defendants' objections under O. XXI, r. 58, Civil P. O. operated as res judicata between the parties; but as the learned trial Judge held that there was no charge over the property, the question involved in the issue did not arise. As a result of the findings arrived at, the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed.

The point that was mostly stressed before us on behalf of the plaintiffs was that the mortgage made by Nawab Ali Khan during the pendency of the plaintiffs' suit was invalid under s. 52 of the T. P. Act. It was, however, conceded that so far as the plaintiffs' suit for partition was concerned, the transfer cannot be impeached by them as it does not affect the decree obtained by them in that suit by reason of property other than the one in dispute now being allotted to them by the decree in the partition suit. The learned Counsel, however, strenuously argued that there was a charge over the property so far as Kaniz Sughra Begam's dower was concerned. We have heard the learned Counsel at length on this point but regret that we are unable to accept his contention. It is, we think, well established that a decree for dower obtained by the widow of a Muhammadan against the other heirs even though it may be realizable from the assets of the deceased does not create a charge against those assets. In Abdul Rahman Khan v. Inayat Bibi (7 O. W. N. 1181) (1) it was held by a Bench of this Court that a Muhammadan woman's claim for dower is a simple money claim and though the decree may be executed against the husband's property, it cannot be charged against any specific portion thereof. Similarly in Mohammad Haibur Rahman v. Saiyid Qasim Husain (95 Ind. Cas. 367) (2) a Bench of the Patna High Court also held that dower ranks as an ordinary unsecured debt and does not create any charge on the property of the husband and that the fact that a money decree has been obtained for it makes no difference.

Mulla in his Principles of Muhammadan Law (11th edition para. 223, p. 223 says:—

"The dower ranks as a debt, and the widow is entitled along with other creditors of her deceased husband, to have it satisfied on his death out of his estate...She is not entitled to any charge on her husband's property though such a charge may be created by agreement".

and further—

"There is no doubt that it is within the competence of a Court to create a charge by its decree for a dower debt so that if such a charge is created and the decree has not been appealed against and has become final, effect will be given to the charge. But though it is not beyond the power of a Court to pass a decree creating a charge, it will not ordinarily do so. The proper decree to make is a simple money decree and no charge is created merely because the decree directs execution by sale of properties mentioned."

In para. 32 (p. 28) the same author says:—

"If the share transferred by an heir is a share in immovable property forming part of the estate of the deceased and the transfer is made during the pendency of a suit by the widow of the deceased for her dower in which a decree is passed creating a charge on the estate for the dower debt, the transferee will take the share of the heir subject to the charge, but if the widow's decree is a simple money decree, the transferee will not be affected."

In the present case the decree obtained by the plaintiffs in the dower suit was a simple money decree creating no charge against any property left by Hamid Ali Khan. The mortgage in favour of Nawab Saiyid Ali Khan cannot therefore be affected by the decree obtained by the plaintiffs in the dower suit.

(1) 7 O W N 1181; 130 Ind. Cas. 113; A I R 1931 Oudh 63; Ind. Rul. (1931) Oudh 129.

(2) 95 Ind. Cas. 367; (1926) Pat. 178; A I R 1926 Pat. 404; 7 P L T 664.

It was contended on behalf of the appellants that the Court below was wrong in not giving a finding on Issue No. 3, namely, whether or not the defendants or their predecessor-in-interest were transferees in good faith and for consideration. We may say that the issue as it stood could very well have been decided in favour of the defendants on the materials on the record as there was nothing to show that the mortgage in question was not in good faith or was not for consideration; but the learned Counsel argued that the evidence on the record showed that at the time of taking the mortgage Nawab Saiyid Ali Khan was fully aware of the plaintiffs having obtained a decree in their suit for dower and that because of this notice, the mortgage must be held to be invalid. The learned Counsel has not, however, been able to satisfy us under what provision of the law it can be held that merely because Saiyid Ali Khan had knowledge of the decree passed in the plaintiffs' favour, the mortgage taken by him was invalid. We have already held that the decree in the dower suit created no charge against any property so that s. 52, T. P. Act has no application and as the plea based on s. 53, T. P. Act was not pressed, we are unable to find how the question of the transferees' knowledge comes in. The plaintiffs' own plaint in the suit for partition shows that the property left by Hamid Ali Khan, movable and immovable, was of the value of about Rs. 90,000 and if in the circumstances Saiyid Ali Khan took a mortgage of a very small portion of the property for Rs. 3,000 with knowledge of the decree in favour of the plaintiffs, the fact cannot go against the bona fides of the transaction. In para. 32 (1) of Mulla's Muhammadan Law it is said

"Any heir may, even before distribution of the estate, transfer his own share and pass a good title to a bona fide transferee for value notwithstanding any debts that might be due from the deceased."

We have already said that the mortgage made by Nawab Ali Khan was a bona fide transaction for value. It cannot therefore be affected by the dower debt due to Kaniz Sughra Begam remaining unpaid. In Syud Bazahat Hassain v. Dooli Chand (L. R. 5 I. A. 211) (3) relied on by the learned Counsel for the appellants himself, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that a creditor of a deceased Muhammadan whether in respect of dower or otherwise cannot follow his estate into the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value to whom it has been alienated by his heir-at-law, whether by sale or mortgage. No doubt it was further held by their Lordships that such an alienee is bound by any decree charging the estate passed in a suit against the heir, pending at the date of alienation but in the present case the decree obtained by the plaintiff did not create any charge against any property.

The case of Mirza Mohammad Sharafut Baha ur v. Shahzadi Wahida Sultan Begam (19 O. W. N. 502) (4) was also relied on in support of the contention that where the widow is in possession of a portion of the estate and the other heirs have possession of the remainder, she can seek to recover her dower by way of an administration suit; but the suit brought by the plaintiffs was a simple suit for recovery of the dower debt and not an administration suit.

Next it was argued that as the execution of the decree for dower was stayed by their Lordships of the Allahabad High Court pending decision of the partition suit, it must be deemed that both the suits were consolidated and those consolidated suits constituted, as it were, an administration suit. We are unable to accept this argument also. We quote the passage from the judgment of the High Court (Ex. 2) on which this argument is based.

"The last point is whether the plaintiffs are entitled to sue for the whole of the dower debt or whether one-fourth should not be deducted. It is admitted that the transferees, i. e. the plaintiffs are in no better position than the widow herself, but no authority has been shown for the proposition that a widow insuring for her dower debt must make a deduction proportionate to the share of her inheritance in her deceased husband's estate. The widow's dower debt ranks with any other debt and must be paid before the balance of the estate can be divided between the heirs. If Mst. Kaniz Sughra gets her whole dower debt in this suit, then she will, of course, obtain less in her capacity as an heir.

There is another appeal pending between the same parties, namely, first appeal No. 465 of 1922 in which Lala Durga Das and others as transferees of the rights of Mst. Kaniz Sughra are claiming her share in the property left by Hamid Ali Khan. Any sum decreed on account of the dower debt of Mst. Kaniz Sughra will have to be adjusted when fixing the amount of the share due to her in the other suit, but there seems to be no justification for reducing the amount of dower claimed for Mst. Kaniz Sughra in the present case."

The above quotation clearly shows that execution of the dower decree was stayed

(3) 5 I A 211; 4 O 402; 3 Sar. 853; 3 Ind. Jur. 121 (P O).

(4) 19 O W N 502; 28 Ind. Cas. 191; 21 O L J 319; A I R 1915 Cal. 655.

by the High Court as it was contended on behalf of the appellant in that case that Mst. Kaniz Sughra was also liable for a portion of the dower debt and as the High Court thought that this point could be taken into account by the trial Court while fixing the amount of her share in the partition suit, execution of the decree for dower was stayed. The High Court did not, in our opinion, mean either to consolidate the two suits or to hold that the suits taken together should be deemed to constitute an administration suit. Had this been the intention, they would not have upheld the trial Court's decree for recovery of Rs. 25,000 in the dower suit.

Lastly it was contended that as the property which was mortgaged by Nawab Ali Khan and which was purchased in auction by Chaudhri Muhammad Jamil consisted of a two-thirds share in the site of the kothi in question and a moiety share only in its materials, their suit should have been decreed in respect of the remaining one-sixth of the materials (plaintiffs having attached a two-thirds share both in the site and in the materials). It appears, however, that though in the first instance only a half share of the materials was sold in execution of the mortgage decree, yet the remaining one-sixth share was subsequently sold and purchased by Chaudhri Muhammad Jamil in satisfaction of his decree on account of the fact that by the partition decree Nawab Ali Khan got a two-thirds share in the materials also. The sale certificate in respect of this share was produced by the defendants in the trial Court but was taken back on account of a mistake on the part of the defendant's Pleader in the Court below. We have allowed it to be filed again in this Court. It thus appears that Chaudhri Muhammad Jamil purchased the entire two-thirds share of Nawab Ali Khan in the materials of the kothi also. Moreover, this point was never raised by the plaintiffs in the trial Court.

The result is that the appeal fails entirely and is dismissed with costs.

a.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR HIGH COURT

Civil Revision No. 485 of 1938

September 5, 1939

GRUBE, J.

In re Mst. FATMABI—APPLICANT

Revision—Court-fees, decision on, adverse to applicant—Revision, if maintainable—Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), ss. 379 (1) (3)—Application for succession certificate—Deposit of amount equal to fee payable under Court Fees Act—Application allowed on condition of furnishing security—Condition not fulfilled—Amount held should be refunded.

Orders about court-fees adverse to an applicant can be the subject of revision, and the same principle would apply where it is found that any clear provision of law has been disregarded.

The applicant applied for a succession certificate and under s. 379 (1) of the Succession Act, deposited Rs. 370 equal to the fee payable under the Court Fees Act. The application was allowed subject to the applicant's furnishing security. This she was unable to do, and papers were ordered to be filed. She then applied for refund of the deposit of Rs. 370 :

Held, that the first condition of s. 379 (3), that the sum should be received under sub-s. (1) was fulfilled and therefore the refund should be granted. Sankara Ayyar v. Nainar Mooppanar (1), not followed.

App. for revision of the order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, Saugor, dated June 16, 1938, in Succession Certificate Case No. 2 of 1937.

Mr. W. B. Pendharkar, for the Applicant.

Order.—The applicant applied for a succession certificate, and under s. 379 (1) of the Indian Succession Act, deposited Rs. 370 equal to the fee payable under the Court Fees Act. The application was allowed subject to the applicant's furnishing security. This she was unable to do, and papers were ordered to be filed. She then applied for refund of the deposit of Rs. 370. The lower Court relying on Sankara Ayyar v. Nainar Mooppanar (1) has found that she is not entitled to refund.

It has been held in this Court that orders about court-fees adverse to an applicant can be the subject of revision, and I think the same principle would apply here if it is found that any clear provision of law has been disregarded. Section 379 (3) seems to me to be perfectly clear in laying down two conditions on the fulfilment of which such a deposit shall be refunded. These are that the sum should be received under sub-s. (1), and secondly, that it should not be expended under sub-s. (2). The first condition is clearly fulfilled, and sub-s. (2) itself says that the expending shall be in the purchase of stamp. There has been no such expending in this case. Sankara Ayyar v. Nainar Mooppanar (1) which dealt with the corresponding section of the old Act is a very short judgment. It simply says that if the order for the grant of a certificate has been made, the sum in deposit becomes at once legally appropriated as duty. The sub-section prescribing refund is not discussed, and there is further distinction in that there the order seems to have been a final one whereas here it is conditional on security being furnished. I hold that the money had to be refunded, and direct that this be done now. No order for costs of this application.

D.

*Revision allowed.ODDH CHIEF COURT

Second Civil Appeal No. 329 of 1937

November 24, 1939

HAMILTON, J.

BACHAN LAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
*versusGOBARDHAN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS*AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTSPresumption—Part of share in village sold—Presumption that corresponding share of vendor's house is also sold, if arises.*

When a part of a share in a village is sold, no presumption arises that similar share of the house of the vendor standing on the share is also sold, though such presumption arises when the whole share is sold and nothing is reserved. 93 Ind. Cas. 287 (1) and 104 Ind. Cas. 155 (2), explained.

S. C. A. against the decree of the Additional Civil Judge of Unao, dated May 13, 1937.

Mr. Hyder Husain, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Wasim, for Respondents Nos. 1 to 3.

Judgment.—This is a second appeal by a defendant against whom a decree was passed and whose appeal was dismissed by the Additional Civil Judge.

The facts as far as they affect this appeal are that one Badlu owned 32 pies in village Narharpur. In 1866 he sold a 16 pies share, that is to say, half of what he owned, to the plaintiffs but distinctly stated that he reserved his residential house. He made other sales of part of his share in which he did not mention the house, but eventually in 1891 he sold a 2 pies share which was all that he had left, to the plaintiffs and in this deed he expressly declared that he was selling the entire residential house. The defendants urged that as in deeds in their favour there was no express mention of the house being excluded as had been done in the deed of 1886, they were entitled to a share in the house. This view found favour in the Courts below, but the suit was nevertheless dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had possession over the whole house. The learned Additional Civil Judge refers to Balram Singh v. Ganga Singh (13 O. L. J. 432) (1) and Krishna Kumari Devi v. Rajendra Bahadur Singh Deo (6 O. W. N. 1150) (2) as supporting his view that when there is no mention in a deed that the sale of a share does not include the sale of a house standing on that share it must be held that the house goes with the share. These authorities hold good in a case where a complete share has been sold and nothing is reserved and, therefore it is presumed that a house standing on this share is also sold. The same presumption does not arise when the whole share is not sold but only a part of it because when only a part of a share is sold, much is reserved; as for instance the balance of the share which is not sold. I know of no authority to the effect that when a person buys part of another person's share in a village the presumption is that he buys a corresponding share in the house of his vendor in the village. I am not, therefore, prepared to hold that because, when a whole share is sold it is presumed that a house on it is sold, one should also hold that when part of a share is sold a similar share in a house in the share must be sold. This being so, there is no force in this appeal which is dismissed with costs.

S.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 13 O L J 432; 93 Ind. Cas. 287; A I R 1936 Oudh 358.

(2) 6 O W N 1150; 104 Ind. Cas. 155; 2 Luck 43; 13 O L J 846; A I R 1927 Oudh 240.

PATNA HIGH COURT

Appeal No. 302 of 1937

February 13, 1939

JAMES AND ROWLAND, J.J.

Musammal DULHIN AND OTHERS—APPELLANTSversusHARIHAR GIR AND OTHERS—JUDGMENT—*DEBTORS AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48—Art. 182, Limitation Act (IX of 1908), should not be invoked in determining starting point for limitation under s. 48—Limitation under s. 48 cannot be extended by amendment of decree.

In construing s. 48, Civil P. C., the Court ought to limit itself to examination of the provisions of the Code itself and not import the provisions of other enactments, more particularly Art. 182, Lim. Act, which by its own terms applies only to the period for execution of a decree or order not provided for by s. 48, Civil P. O. An amendment of a decree does not therefore give a new date for starting a period of limitation if the application for execution is beyond the period of twelve years prescribed by s. 48. The period of twelve years under s. 48 is final and cannot be extended by any amendment of the decree. 60 Ind. Cas. 318 (1), dissented from, 175 Ind. Cas. 558 (8), distinguished, 46 Ind. Cas. 107 (3), 138 Ind. Cas. 93 (4), Ganesh Das v. Vishan Das (5), 151 Ind. Cas. 541 (6) and 45 Ind. Cas. 436 (7), followed. [p. 375, col. 1.]

A. from the original order of the Sub-Judge, Gaya, dated August 16, 1937.

Dr. Sir Sultan Ahmed and Mr. Syed Hasan, for the Appellants.

Sir M. N. Mukherji, Messrs. P. C. Manuk, Sarjoo Prasad, Rai G. S. Prasad, Rai Paras Nath, R. J. Bahadur, G. C. Das and N. K. Prasad II, for the Respondents.

